Topics of the Time.

The action of the Chicago School Board, while it has defenders in the Tribune and of course the Times, whose agricultural editor, Prof. Rodney Welch, was mover of the obnoxious Bible-rejecting resolution, meets a formidable opposition in other directions. Rev. J. W. Bain, of the United Presbyterian church, gave an able argument for the Bible on last Lord's Day, and Arthur Mitchell, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, repeated in Farwell Hall at the request of many citizens a sermon on the same subject. At the close of his address its powerful effect was manifested by the taking of a popular vote, on the motion of Prof. Welch himself, requesting the Board of Education to rescind their resolution.

It is reported the Catholic ladies in Washington with Mrs. Gen. Sherman at their head, are organizing a permanent Catholic Missionary Society with the expectation of making it a national organization. The Indians need sorely enough the ministration of some other class than the whiskey traders, who have hung so long upon them, and the labors of intelligent ladies undertaken in the name of God and humanity will be an untold blessing; but if in the name of Romanism, which subordinates all interests to its own, they can afford to wait for a more unselfish deliverer.

The State election in Ohio takes place this week, and is looked upon in political circles as of the first importance, if the amount of wire-pulling and stumping carried on in the past two months is any indication. Ex-Senator Schurz improved the opportunity to return to the Republican ranks. rency have attracted wide attention, especially his tilt with Wendell Phillips who advocates the paper money. Another peculiarity is the apparent antagonism of the Democracy in different States. In New York it is a "hard money" party; in Pennsylvania and Ohio inflationist; and it is more than rumored that efforts have been made to divide the party on either side of the money question. With what success the telegraph will soon inform us.

—The Herald and Presbyter in an earnest editorial against the growing growing evil of Sabbath desecration advises that the virtue of the laws be applied to check and suppress it. But it must be acknowledged with regret that the regard for the author of civil law and government, on whose authority alone the Sabbath laws were established, is becoming so dim in our courts and official circles that an effort to enforce the statute would have little prospect of success. When the community in general learns that Christians own their Redeemer to be not only Lord of the conscience, but the author of civil government and its head, it will come to regard the Sabbath with other and higher than secular motives.

—Hon. C. J. Hull, a citizen of Chicago, has been doing some practical Christian work among the freedmen that even a missionary society might emulate. The Standard has this account of his philanthropic labors:—At Jacksonville, Florida, he established and supported a school for Freedmen, which still bears the name of the "Hull High School." His next movement was upon Savannah. Here he found large numbers of Freedmen in a most wretched and poverty-stricken condition. He went to work in various ways to instil into their minds an ambition for improvement; he opened and sustained schools; he purchased large tracts of lands adjacent to the city, subdividing them into lots and small farms. These he sold to freedmen, and to whites as well, at low prices, and advanced money to assist in building houses—thus giving homes and making property-owners of the poor outcasts. Six hundred and forty-six buildings have been erected on these lands, with five school-houses and six churches, to all of which latter Mr. Hull has been a liberal contributor. He is also carrying forward a similar enterprise upon the same basis near Baltimore. About sixty houses have been erected there, the purchasers getting them on such easy terms that the poor-

The Testimony of Judge Wm. Strong.

The following extract of a letter from the honorable and pious Judge Strong, who had himself been a Mason, is worthy the perusal of every Christian.

He says: "I shall now enquire why it has always been the fact, so far as I have known, that in every duel that has been fought in this country, the challenger has been a Mason, to-wit: in the murder of Hamilton by Burr; the murder of Dix by Blake; the murder of Jones by Wm. H. Crawford; the murder of ——— by Poindexter; the murder of Dickinson by Jackson; and the challenge and attempt to murder John Randolph by Henry Clay. Now all the above mentioned murderers were, and I believe still are, tenacious votaries of Masonry. Is it, I ask, the monstrous, high-sounding, honorary titles which are lavished upon Masons of the various orders, which makes them principal actors in all duels? And is this the way Masonry teaches to maintain dignity? Or is it the effects of the profane and blasphemous oaths, the wicked perversion of Scripture in their lectures, or the hardened state of the mind to which the votaries of Masonry are brought in its school and influence? As to the great antiquity of the institution, and that the Patriarchs, Prophets and Apostles were Masons, as is pretended by the craft. I venture to affirm, that there never was a man, whether Mason or not, who has examined into its hypocritical pretensions, who ever did believe those vain and almost blasphemous assertions. But I would recommend the candid enquirer after truth to examine Ward's Review of Masonry, in which he most unquestionably proves, by their own standard authors, such as Town, Webb, Dalcho and several others, that the bauble Masonry has not existed in the world over 120 years. Its pretensions to antiquity are therein proved beyond controversy, to be ridiculous fables of folly. The ridiculous story of Enoch and his nine arches, and the miraculous discovery of the Pentateuch, and the manna of Solomon, and the Hirams, the death, burial and discovery, etc., are all alike the foolish fabrications of an idle brain; and the worse than vain parade made in pretense of honoring St. John the Baptist, and St. John the Divine, claiming them to have been patrons of the order, is solemn mockery, as I have said. And more, it is an occasion for revelling, feasting and inebriety, a snare set by the fowler to entice vain young men, who can be duped by their trappings, gewgaws and finery, to amusements of rational society, in order to participate once a month in the scenes and midnight orgies of the lodge-room.

But Masons cry out, Washington was a Mason. True; and equally true is it, that he became an Anti-mason before his death. Witness his farewell address, warning the people to beware of all secret associations under whatever plausible pretext they might be found. And it will be recollected that a correspondence has recently been published, which amounts to the following; In the year 1798, the Rev. Mr. Snyder, residing at Fredricktown, Maryland, sent a pamphlet entitled, "Proofs of a Conspiracy," written by Professor Robinson of Scotland, in which the writer undertook to show that the bloodshed, murders and assassinations of every age, sex and condition, in the French Revolution, must be attributed to secret associations, or the power and influence of Speculative Freemasonry. Mr. Snyder being about to publish some strictures on the society of Masons, sent to Gen. Washington "Robinson's Proofs of Conspiracy," together with his own letter stating his intention of so doing, but at the same time declaring that if Gen. Washington disapproved of his design, he would relinquish the idea of publishing. Washington, in answer, told him to go on and write, that he (Washington,) had not been in a lodge more than once or twice the last thirty years. A variety of other evidence is in existence, and much of it has been given to the public, enough to convince the candid that Washington, at the close of his life, was a decided Anti-mason.

The institution boasts of its charities —its professions in this respect are also hypocritical. I conscientiously affirm, that during the whole term of my acquaintance with the lodges, I do not recollect that the amount of one single dollar was ever appropriated for any charitable purpose whatever. I d most solemnly declare, that I believe the institution to be corrupt and pernicious to morals and dangerous to civil and religious liberty; that the oaths are anti-Christian, and exceedingly profane and blasphemous; the Scriptures are garbled, wrested and perverted in its lectures; that it is one of the greatest pillars and supporters of anti Christ's kingdom in the world; and that it cost the lives of millions of every age, sex, and condition in the French Revolution; that it has been a powerful political machine in elections, that it has also been proved to a demonstration to have been in the State of New York a power behind the law, stronger than the ries, sheriffs, witnesses, and baffling the whole power of government, in shielding the guilty from merited punishment; that it has corrupted the churches, and more especially their pastors and ministers. Believing the institution to be pernicious and dangerous to the morals and to civil and religious liberty, and believing it to be a duty of every person, who has at any time been led into connection with the institution and a participation of its unholy ceremonies, to confess and forsake, and warn the rising generation.

I was induced by the influence of friends to join the lodge, through the vain insinuation that Washington and all the great and good men in all ages of the world were Masons. I offered myself accordingly as a candidate for initiation at Hanover, N. H., the last of the year 1798, or the beginning of 1799. In this I ventured to leap in the dark, not knowing that I must be stripped of my wearing apparel, with a rope placed around my neck, with a sharp pointed instrument of death at my left breast, and in this situation, compelled to repeat after the Master administering the oaths, the same that Morgan has disclosed. I was hurried the same night through the first three degrees to that of Master Mason.

Under all circumstances connected with my being made a Mason, I feel clear in affirming that the oaths are neither legally, morally, nor religiously binding upon me. At Hanover I attended the lodge but a few times afterwards, and once a celebration or anniversary of St. John the Baptist. This celebration I have considered a solemn mockery. Soon after my removal to Woodstock, a lodge was instituted, of which I unavoidably became a member, and was successively elected Secretary and Treasurer of said lodge. Here I reluctantly performed the duties devolving upon me. I found by actual and sad observation in the lodge-room, that it was a school of intemperance and infidelity. I found in every lodge I attended, that stores of almost every kind of liquor were kept, with cheese, crackers or biscuits for refreshment, and that the frequent calling "off from labor to refreshment" had a dangerous tendency upon young men. I have thought it produced habits of intemperance, which were never afterwards overcome, but which were persued even to the destruction of many a Masonic votary.

I will here relate one incident which is still fresh in my memory, though it took place nearly twenty-five years ago. A candidate for initiation was offered by his friend, and while the members were preparing for balloting for his admission, a member rose and objected to the candidate on the ground that he was deistical, or, as he stated, he understood that the candidate had publicly avowed his disbelief in the Scriptures being the inspiration and revelation of God to man; which, he said, he thought was a sufficient reason for excluding the candidate from being sworn upon the Bible, the authenticity and truth of which he had no faith or belief in. Another member of the lodge who had been a Baptist minister, but who had been dismissed from his people, and at that time occasionally preached the doctrines of Universalism, rose in his place and contended against the objection raised. He said he thought his disbelief and want of faith in the authenticity of the Scriptures, was no objection to a member. He said the Bible had passed through thirty or more different translations and that from the circumstances attending its translation, he could not conceive that much credit ought to be attached to it. From this circumstance I thought myself sufficiently excused from further participation in lodge work, and when I heard infidelity boldly advocated in the lodge-room without censure from the lodge, I thought it high time for me to leave it. My moral sensibilities were not so benumbed that I could look quietly on and see the solemn mockery of swearing a man on the Bible, which he did not believe in, and I left the lodge that night forever. The candidate was afterwards, as I understood, admitted a member of the lodge.

In the summer of 1807 a company of counterfeiters, consisting of six or seven, were apprehended and taken on Plymouth mountains and brought by me (while Sheriff), from Plymouth to Woodstock jail, together with their plates and more than thirty thousand dollars of their bills struck off. These counterfeiters were tried by the Supreme Court and sentenced to be whipped, which sentence was carried into effect by me, although their chief engraver and a majority of their company were very zealous Masons. I also found, by conversing with them, that they were atheists and deists. I mention this incident, not that I believe all Masons are atheists and deists, but because I do believe that the schooling of the lodge-room, the profane and blasphemous oaths to which the members are accustomed, and garbling and perversion of the Scriptures in their lectures have a tendency to harden vain young men, to condemn the Christian religion, to blunt their moral sense, and to prepare them to become accomplices in crime. While I was attendant at the lodge-room, I was acquainted with but two or three members who were, or had been, professing ministers of the Gospel, and two of these had been dismissed from their people, and had become dissipated, if not drunken.

And with these views of the subject of Freemasonry, I close my remarks, recommending the perusal of the Rev. Henry Jones' Letters, addressed to the professed followers of Christ, now in connection with the institution of Freemasonry. And feeling myself upon the verge of time and knowing my departure is nigh at hand, I have found it to be an indispensable duty, a duty which I owe to God, to my country and to posterity, to bear my feeble testimony against an institution fraught with so much complicated iniquity; and I most humbly implore those of my former brethren, who may be offended at this public communication of my views, to bear and forbear with me a few days longer, and the grave will soon close upon me, and my name and character will soon be forgotten."

WM STRONG.

(The above was published in a pamphlet in N. H. in 1828, two years after Wm. Morgan's disclosures.)

The Beginning of the Albany Evening Journal.

MR. EDITOR:—Apropos to the recent letter of Thurlow Weed to the N. Y. Herald, which you printed and commented upon, in your issue of August 26th, may be the following facts, which I learned by a brief visit of one day in Albany about that time. I have scrupled about putting them into print, but conclude there can be no harm, and good may come from the publication of them.

While visiting some friends in that city, I stepped into the Journal office at No. 61 State street, and asked the clerk in attendance, if I might look over the old files of the paper, now about forty-five years old. With consent I took down from its place the first volume and looked it over a little while, when I found unmistakable evidence of its original character, as an Anti-masonic journal. So I asked for paper, and copied in pencil the following prospectus, and recommendations of thirty members of the Legislature that year, 1830, reading as follows:—

ALBANY EVENING JOURNAL OF MARCH 22, 1830. VOLUME I. NO. 1.

"A daily paper opposed to Freemasonry, will issue from the press of B. D. Packard & Co. on Monday the 22d of March, inst. 1830. The Journal will labor diligently and faithfully, to vindicate Republican principles, and to defend constitutional liberty. The object of its establishment is to aid on the great work of civil and political reformation, which the people have taken in hand. Its publishers, and their immediate patrons are impelled to this enterprise, by considerations which deeply effect the common interests and the common welfare of the community.

The Journal will aim to be generally interesting and useful, by containing, in addition, to the ordinary news, appropriate literary and scientific selections. It will be published daily, at $8 00 per annum, and semi-weekly, for the country, at $4 00 per annum, payable half-yearly."

Then comes in the following commendation:

"The undersigned members of the Legislature, deeming it of great importance that a daily and semi-weekly paper, devoted to the cause of Anti-masonry should be established at the seat of government, and entertaining perfect confidence in the discretion, zeal, and ability of the publishers and editor of the Albany Evening Journal, earnestly recommend that paper to the prompt and efficient support of all the friends of equal rights, and civil liberty:

Francis Granger,	Seth Eddy,
Timothy Fitch,	Wm. H. Maynard,
Abner Hazelton,	G. W. Boughton,
P. C. Fuller,	Albert H. Tracy,
Titus Goodman, Jr.,	H. F. Mather,
Ezra Sheldon, Jr.,	Squire White,
James Randall,	John Dickson,
Calvin P. Bailey,	John H. Tyler,
Stephen Griswold,	Edmund Hull,
M. Fillmore,	Daniel Ashley,
Robert C. Nicholas,	D. Russell,
S. De Veaux,	R. Wilcox,
Septimus Evans,	Josiah Dunlap,
David Sill,	Samuel Blain,
Luther Chapin,	Stephen Crosby."

Quite an array of public men, to encourage and sustain young Thurlow Weed in his arduous undertaking against the dark institution of those days. Of these names Francis Granger and Millard Fillmore became very prominent in the political world; the latter attaining the Presidential chair in 1849, by the death of President Taylor. Wm. H. Seward had not yet reached a seat in the hall of Legislation as he did afterwards, as a Senator, to represent an "infected," or Anti-masonic district.

In the same paper is found a list of seventy Anti-masonic papers in the whole country, whose names I had not time to copy. But I counted their number by States, giving twenty nine to New York, eighteen to Pennsylvania, six to Massachusetts, four to Vermont, one to Rhode Island, two to New Jersey, eight to Ohio, one to Michigan, and one to Alabama. Among them was the "Anti-masonic Champion," published at Greenwich, Washington Co., N, Y. which I used to read in my boyhood days, and which fed with the Albany Journal in my father's household, to educate myself and five brothers into a permanent hostility to the secret institution.

How many such papers, out-spoken and decided could now be found in our land? Does not Albany need a voice again, to give a note of warning to the young men to beware of the danger of secretism in this age of our world? Please tell us if there are any real faithful papers to testify against the system of iniquity in the whole State of New York, or in New England, and what are their names and location.

I might add something more from the same paper but fear your readers will be wearied. I have in my possession a copy of Gidding's Anti-masonic Almanac for A. D. 1832, also for 1833, in a pretty good state of preservation. In each of these are some account of the Lockport trials before the Hon. Judge Marcy, and Judge Nelson, in June, 1830, and Feb. 1831, for the trial of the abductors of Wm. Morgan. These might be worthy of re-printing for the information of many of the present generation. Some curious testimony was elicited on these trials, showing the cunning of the craft in evading the truth, and covering up iniquity and crime. Where are the young men to step forth in these days as Thurlow Weed did in 1830, and vindicate the cause of truth and justice against the machinations of secretism in the Empire State? Have we now, Mr. Editor, a really free press to discuss all matters that affect the common interests and the common welfare of the community?" Yours; HISTORICUS.

Cheshire, Mass., Sept. 1875.

George Washington and Masonry.

Is the testimony of the great Washington, the father of his country, to be taken for or against Freemasonry? Is it favorable to the self-styled ancient and honorable order, or is it against it? This is a question of considerable moment at the present juncture in American history. The craft has long boasted of the patronage of that great, good citizen, warrior, and statesman of our republic. They have often paraded his name before the public as a witness in favor of the order. The centennial year of our republic is at hand, and almost all asso-are preparing for an exhibition of the evidences of their excellency. Doubtless the craft will be on hand to trot out the best stock they can lay hands on, either in person or by name. In this nick of time it is important that the public should well consider whether they have a right to use the name of our great chieftain or not. Would he speak for them or not? Is there any clue to his sentiments regarding the institution at the time of his departure from this mundane shore? If he had never joined the order nor given expression to his views in relation to it, then, as a matter of course, he could not be claimed as a witness on either side of the case. But he joined the order while he was yet too young to be accepted according to Masonic law. The abstract of his uniting with the order certainly throws the weight of his opinion at that time in its favor. This must be admitted on all hands. Then, too, it is a fact that he took the second degree, and also the third. This proves beyond all dispute that he had not seen anything in the first or second degree that was hideous enough to drive him from the order. We are left to conjecture as to the motive which incited him to go on to the third degree. I have known persons who were so shocked with the first oath that they never returned to take a second. I know a worthy president of a respectable college in Ohio who was not so affected till he had taken the second oath. I know a number of persons who were dissatisfied with each of the oaths they took as fast as they took them, from the "Entered Apprentice to the "Royal Arch," but were induced by persuasions and assurances that the good things were yet to come to go on, contrary to the convictions which arose from the things which they saw and heard. The noble Dr. Nathaniel Colver went on till he had taken a large portion of the oath of the Royal Arch; but when he came to the "right or wrong, murder and treason not excepted," he declined proceeding, whereupon he was gravely informed that he would never leave the room alive unless he took the oath. But, being a stalwart man of courage, he quickly left the room, half naked as he was, and never returned.

But what the motives, wishes, hopes, fears, expectations, or designs of the immortal Washington were in going forward to the degree of Master Mason we know not; but we know that he took the third, or Master's degree. This fact throws his testimony on the side of Masonry at that time. Not only so, but he attended his lodge twice afterward. This throws his testimony on the side of Masonry up to the time, at least, of his second or last entrance into the lodge.

But now the inquiry forces itself upon our minds, Did he never attend lodge but twice after he reached the Master's degree? Another exceedingly important question in the case is, At how late a period in his life was his last attendance in the lodge?

Now, the facts are these: George Washington was born February 22d, 1732; was initiated in lodge No. 4, Fredericksburgh, Virginia, September 1st, 1752; was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, March 3d, 1753; was raised to the degree of Master Mason August 4th, 1753; attended lodge September 1st, 1753, attended lodge for the second and last time January 10th, 1755; died December 14th, 1799. Thus it appears that the great Washington did up all his benevolent and instructive work in the lodge of that "benevolent (?) society" in the space of two years, four months and nine days; and that during the remainder of his life, including a period of forty-four years, eleven months, and four days, he carefully kept his feet outside of the lodge.

Now, how stands the testimony of Washington regarding Freemasonry? Two years inside of the lodge and forty-five outside; two years of his earlier and softer manhood in acceptance and approval against forty-five of his soldier, riper, stronger, wiser manhood, including his dying hour, in rejection and disapproval.

Suppose an individual should join a church at the age of twenty, attend the meetings of the society for two years, and then darken the door of the sanctuary no more during his life-time, including a period of forty-five years. What would be thonght of his Christianity and his affection for the church? Could it be said he bore decided testimony of Christ and died in the triumphs of the Christian faith? Can it be said that Washington bore testimony for Masonry and died in the faith of the order? Three times he attended, not as a spectator, not as a member, but as a piece of raw material to be run through the complicated machinery of the lodge. The fourth time he attended as a member and an observer of the workings of the machine. Perhaps there was no grist to be ground this time. Or if there was, the Judge of all only knows with what impressions Washington left the lodge room this time. Once more he goes as a member and an observer. No hoodwink or cable-tow on his eyes or neck this time, as on the first three occasions of his attendance. This time he was cooked done. He had all the "light from the east" he wished for. He had all the avails of Masonic benevolence he desired. With all his magnanimity he had no disposition longer to engage in building the great "Solomon's Temple." He saw; he considered; he was disgusted; he abandoned forever. He saw that the pretended benevolence of the order was unmixed selfishness; he saw that its pretended antiquity was a lie, for it was only thirty-three years old when he joined. Albert G. Mackey declares that "the essence and identity of Freemasonry is the legend of the temple-builders;" and Washington saw from the very construction of the said legend that it involved absolute impossibilities, and therefore must be a falsehood. He could not assist in building a system which rests wholly on falsehood. He knew from the terms of the oaths he had taken that he would endanger his life if he should expose the wicked system. Therefore he silently abandoned it. In his farewell address, as an affectionate father, he solemnly cautioned the republic against the wiles of secret combinations.—J. K. Alwood in the Telescope.

[Note.—Although Bro. Alwood is generally correct in his facts and judgments, the last sentence must, we think, have been written from erroneous data. Jared Spark's collection of Washington's letters and public documents is generally regarded as accurate. The Farewell Address there quoted has no reference in terms, to "secret" associations. Nor have we found any copy of that celebrated document which has such reference. The excellent article of Judge Strong contains the same mistake. If any reader of this notice has or knows of any copy of the Farewell Address, containing the words "secret associations or combinations," they will confer a favor by informing the Ed. Cynosure.]

Expediency First.

If it be true that the political party which sides most nearly with God and justice is the strongest, the so-called Democratic party must be exceedingly weak.

1. In the dreary days of slavery the party was the main stay and most zealous supporter of the infernal system, and after slavery was overthrown it has systematically opposed every measure of justice to the colored population.

2. In the ttruggle of Popery for power, privileges, and public money, the Democratic party has been its ally, and obtained in return, with slight exceptions, its solid vote.

3. In the struggle of society with the liquor traffic, the Democratic party supports the latter and is supported by it.

4. And now, in the attempt to degrade this nation by an irredeemable currency and by the robbery of its creditors, the Democratic party appears to be once more stepping to the front with and for the unjust side.

In all these cases it has acted and is acting in direct violation of its own principles of equal and uniform justice; principles which it is continually reaffirming, thus practicing a hypocricy which is a very great aggravation of its guilt. It knows the right but does the wrong. It looks one way and rows another.

The Lord says: "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness" (justice); but what of those who hunger and thirst after unrighteousness—who drink up injustice as the ox drinks water, and who are ever ready to sacrifice principle for votes?

We by no means include all Democrats in this condemnation. There are many honest, patriotic and just men in that party; but the party as such has supported the great wrongs we have mentioned, and every one who supports it must share the blame.

Nor do we mean that the Democratic party has no good principles. Its principles are nearly all good, and some of them it has not yet belied; but judging from its conduct in the past, and especially the extraordinary "wheel-about" which it is now performing on the currency question, it is ready at any time to sacrifice any of its principles, even the most boasted and cherished, for place and power.

Neither do we mean that the Republican party is blameless in the great questions wherein the Democratic party took the wrong side. The Whig party, of which the Republican is the successor, tried to be as submissive and subservient to the slave power as its opponent, but it had too much principle and piety in its ranks to be trusted by that monstrous system of injustice.

The Republican party has, in like manner, tried to placate Rome and rum, but for the same reason—namely, that it has too many honest Christian men in its ranks—it is distrusted by both. It comes out now pretty squarely for an honest currency, but there is nothing in its pledges so definite as to hinder it from prolonging the reign of King Rag as long as it sees fit.

The Republican party, with the exception of its history during the war, delights to get on the fence and try to please both sides, and consequently it is essentially divided, whilst the party which allies itself with slavery, Popery, liquor dealers, and irredeemable money has a strong united phalanx to support it through thick and thin.

In this chaotic state, where each party has rendered itself unworthy of the unqualified support of Christian men, what is to be done? The best solution of the difficulty would be for the honest men to come out of both parties and try to elect good men on a good platform. The next best would be to vote irrespective of party, for good, reliable men wherever such are put forward by either party, and ignore all others.

It is indeed possible, though scarcely probable, that some one of the existing parties shall come up to the standard in measures and candidates that will attract the support of all good men.—N. Y. Witness.

The Bible in the Public School.

Resolved, That it is the opinionof the Pennsylvania State Teachers' Association that there should be religious instruction in the schools, and that the Bible should be made the basis of such instruction.

Such was the utterance of the Lancaster Association in 1870. This was a noble testimony—concise, expressive and true.

The Pennsylvania State Teachers' Association met in Wilkesbarre, in August, 1875. This Association rescinded the resolution of 1870, and gives us in its stead the following:

Resolved, That moral instruction should be considered an integral part of the school course from the primary school upward, and that education should be considered a failure when it does not incite to the higher life intellectually and morally, and when it does not lead to good conduct in all the relations of life, and culminate in the establishment of good character.

"How are the mighty fallen, and the weapons of war perished!" This wordy, prolix, ambiguous resolution informs us that the Wilkesbarre Assembly was in favor of "moral instruction," of inciting our children "to the higher life," "of good character" and "good conduct in every relation;" and yet they are going to accomplish all without the Bible. True, they do not affirm this in so many words.

Yet true it is that our 755 000 school children are to be educated in the highest sense without the Bible and consequently without the God of the Bible, in so far as our State Association is concerned. Said Pres. Woodruff in his inaugural—

"We have traditional notions that connect education with religion, and it is difficult for some to see that education, as provided for in our public school system, is secular in its character, and is sustained for secular ends; and that its spirit is violated when it is made the vehicle for religious instruction. The public school is one of the instrumentalities for human elevation. We may assign to it a specific work, and leave religious instruction for the family, the church and the Sabbath-school."

Plainly, then, God has no margin here. Our common schools can get along without him. This, however, is no new doctrine. We find just such an inaugural in the first verse of the 14th Psalm, though not endorsed by the committee appointed to report.

But this gross, sneaking secularism is endorsed by the Wilkesbarre Association, as seen by the report of their Committee, which was pronounced orthodox: "The Committee, to whom was referred the President's inaugural, beg leave to report our most cordial and hearty approval of the sentiments therein expressed."

What an anomaly! What light that Association has given the world! Avaunt all ye old fogies, who believe that God's blessing is essential to the common school, the Wilkesbarre Association is going to do all without the Bible and without God—all that you can do through your devotion to God and acknowledgement of his Word!

As long as we teach morality,—teach that children should obey their teachers, that they should not lie, nor steal, nor kill, nor profane God's name, we are deriving our authority from the Bible, teaching the Decalogue, whether we are honest enough to plainly say so, or sufficiently cowardly to use the gift and yet deny the Giver. And what instruction, derived from school text books, do we propose to give that will not lead us back to God and the Bible, as the great ultimatum?

On what is all correct science predicated? Who but a numskull would make such a stupid blunder as to attempt to teach geography or history without a constant ultimate reference to the authority and power and wisdom that is not even hinted at in the Wilkesbarre State Teachers' Association? We are pained to record the fact that this august Association is a rotrograde movement—a movement in the interests of the enemy of all good; and that too on one of the vital questions of the day. It is another voice of warning. May it be heeded by every lover of our common country! $7,000,000 is too large a sum to be spent annually; 1,400 teachers are too many laborers employed to secularize our common schools, assist infidelity, and embolden Roman Catholicism.— J. Three Score Years of Married Life.

AN INTERESTING OCCASION IN THE HISTORY OF ISAAC PRESTON, ESQ.

At Lockport, Ill, on Monday, Oct. 4th, 1875, there gathered at the residence of Isaac Preston, Esq., an assemblage on such an occasion as probably does not occur once in the history of ten thousand families. The object of the meeting being the celebration of the 60th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Preston.

There were present the three remaining children of the aged couple, viz.: Mr. J. W. Preston, Ex-President of the Board of Trade of Chicago; Mrs. Dr. C. M. Daniels of Elgin, and Mrs. Icabod Codding of Normal, Ill.; several grandchildren and three great-grandchildren; besides a large number of nephews, neices, cousins and very old friends. By two o'clock P. M. a large number of relations and old friends had arrived from different parts of the country, and it being thought best to have some formal organization, Ex-Mayor Gillett of Aurora, was called to the chair, and Geo. H. Daniels of Chicago, appointed secretary.

Dinner being announced Mr. and Mrs. Preston led the way to the Union Hotel, where the company, to the number of about fifty, sat down to a sumptuous dinner prepared by Mr. Stiles for the occasion in a manner in keeping with the excellent reputation of his hotel, and to which the guests did ample justice. Toasts were offered and speeches made appropriate to the occasion. A number of very interesting letters were read from relations and friends at a distance who were unable to attend; and many valuable presents were received from friends both present and absent. Among these were letters from Frank Miller of Warsaw, N. Y., a former business partner of Mr. Preston's; Gen'l Jno. F. Farnsworth of St. Charles; Mrs. W. W. Gunn of Chicago, who is the mother of Mrs. Albert Keep, and who, when a young lady, was a teacher of Mr. Preston's children; Rev. J. B. Preston of Manlius, N. Y.; Col. Sam'l Stone of Chicago; A. B. Safford of Cairo; Mrs. Mary H. Smith of St. Lawrence, N. Y.; Mrs. Julia Crane of Newton, Mass.; Simeon and Jane Whiteley of Racine, Wisconsin, and many others.

The first toast, "The Bride and Groom," was responded to by B. L. T. Bourland of Peoria, a son-in-law of Mr. Preston's. Mr. Eben Beach of Chicago, who was at the table, was the only one present who witnessed the original marriage ceremony in 1815. Mr. Beach was called upon to give some account of it, when he said as he was only five years old at the time he had but an indistinct recollection of that happy event. The second toast, "Our Old Friends: may they all live to enjoy their sixtieth anniversary." Responded to by Rev. Edward Ebbs of Plainfield, Ill., a former pastor of the church in Aurora of which Mr. and Mrs. Preston were members. The third toast was "The children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren," responded to Geo. H. Daniels of Chicago, the oldest grandchild and father of the oldest great-grandchild. Remarks were also made by Mrs. I. Codding, Mr. Preston's youngest daughter, and Mr Deming Preston, a nephew, who said he was proud of being a Preston, and if he lived to celebrate his sixtieth wedding anniversary he would be glad to see all the company present. Mr. Gillett, the chairman, made some very pleasant remarks upon his long acquaintance with the aged couple who were celebrating so extraordinary an event. Mr. J. W. Preston, the only surviving son, thanked the old friends of his father and mother for their consideration in leaving their business and coming long distances as many of them had done to do them honor this day, and he would here extend an invitation to the seventieth anniversary.

Mr. Isaac Preston was then called for. He arose evidently under strong emotion, but after a short pause he said:

Mr. Chairman: You will pardon my weakness, you know it is once a man and twice a child. But I only got up to thank my old and honored friends for their kindness and consideration in coming out at this time and on this occasion, making this renewed demonstration of their unalterable friendship for myself and better half who sits here by me, and I will say farther that it is a source of great satisfaction to me to see here at these tables all our own living children and so many of our grand-children and great-grand-children to join in this unusual celebration. Then I see before and around me a noble band of those tried, true and steadfast friends, men and women who for near the last half century have labored, toiled and suffered and triumphed with me in our united efforts for the promotion of some of the highest interests in connection with our common humanity, and that too when it was worth near the price of a man's life to be known and recognized as a friend and advocate of human freedom. And here again I see some of our present neighbors their hair whitened with the frosts of seventy to eighty winters like "aged hemlocks" standing with us just at the brink of the "river" ready, perhaps, to take the next ferry over. And now, Mr. Chairman and friends, under these circumstances in view of all that has been said by our honored friends that have previously spoken, you will pardon my weakness and I will only repeat the expression of our sincere and heartfelt thanks for this new and unmistakable proof of your friendship and confidence.

In the evening a reception was held at the residence of Mr. Preston, which was largely attended by the friends and neighbors of the family in Lockport and vicinity; Mr. and Mrs. Preston meeting them at the door with a cordial greeting. Some time was spent in social intercourse and after partaking of some light refreshments a very interesting address was delivered by Rev. G. B. Hubbard, former pastor of Mr. and Mrs. Preston for some half a dozen years at Aurora; which was followed by short congratulatory speeches by Mr. Gillett, Rev. Mr. Abernethy, Mr. Oliver Dewey, Deacon Sylvanus Town, and Dr. Wm. Hanley. During the evening the company was serenaded by the Lockport Band, which discoursed some excellent music, and were invited in by J. W. Preston, and partook of the refreshments, after which the party joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne," with great effect, also "Nearer my God to Thee" and other familiar selections.

The exercises closed by a few remarks and a short prayer by Rev. Mr. Storm of Lockport.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

Mr. and Mrs. Preston were both born in 1792; he, in Fairfield, New Jersey, and she, in Granville, N. Y. They were married in Granville October, 4th, 1815, and first settled in Warren county, New York. They removed to Genesee county in 1817 and emigrated to Illinois in 1836. Mrs. Preston made a public profession of religion in her youth; and Mr. Preston some years later. In politics Mr. Preston was originally a Whig, but became an unequivocal Republican twenty-five years before the party was organized. He has for the last forty-nine years been a decided and fearless opponent of all secret oath-bound organizations, believing them to be in their spirit and influence opposed to our republican institutions, and especially so to the administration of our civil jurisprudence, and hostile to the principles of the Christian religion.

Mr. and Mrs. Preston are each in full possession of their mental faculties, and take a lively interest in the events of the day, reading carefully one or more of the Chicago dailies as well as their religious weeklies and magazines regularly, and discussing the social and political subjects of our time with the earnestness of persons in the prime of life. Their physical health is excellent and it is wonderful to see the activity with which they move about among their friends, and with what ease they undertake a journey which persons many years younger would consider a great task.

REV. G. B. HUBBARD'S ADDRESS.

MY DEAR FRIENDS:—Permit me to add my congratulations to those you have already received on this highly interesting occasion. As has been remarked already by yourself and others, it is a very rare thing for a husband and wife to witness the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage. For that reason, if there were no other, it would be eminently fitting that this anniversary should be singled out and made memorable to our thought and in your history by festive observance and thankful recognition of the good hand of God which has been signally manifested in preserving you to each other so long, and in such vigor of life and health.

Sixty years of wedded life, made blessed by uninterrupted affection, and at the end no less happy and no less loving than at the beginning, that is something to thank God for. It is something too, to point to as a demonstration both of the wisdom and goodness of God in ordaining that "a man should leave father and mother and should cleave unto his wife, and that they twain should be one flesh," and that "what God hath joined together, man ought not to put asunder." In these latter days when social theories are afloat which assail, or if they do not assail, make somewhat light of the sanctities and obligations of the marriage relation, it is refreshing to look upon such an instance as this, and observe how the ordinance of God is vindicated in the genuine happiness which has been prolonged without abatement through three-score years of wedded life. It has not been, indeed, always the passional emotion of the earlier union. The glamour of youthful romance has vanished. But the union and the love from which it sprang have been none the less endearing; if anything purer, more unselfish, and more necessary to each. The union has been productive of other ties which have enlarged the sphere of affection and caused fuller development of the emotional nature in its higher and more sacred aspects and relations. And now as this large circle of kindred, with children and children's children to the third and fourth generation gather about you, and you and they can look upon each other with entire affection, and a mutual respect that is conscious of no suspicion of any faltering from a true loyalty to the claims of duty and the demands of right, I cannot but feel that no better and sufficient answer to all questionings and theories of what have been termed advanced social views, is embodied and emphasized to our minds by the scene before us.

I have congratulated you on your prolonged union. I congratulate you also on the measure of health and vigor with which you have reached this anniversary. You, sir, were led incidentally to remark to me, yesterday, that you ascribed your prolonged lives and comfortable health, and faculties unimpaired, to your temperate and regular habits. You but expressed what was in my own mind, and what all who have known you will most heartily endorse as the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. So righteousness and temperance are seen in your case, to go hand in hand with true affection, to prolong life and increase the degree and sum of its happiness. The lesson of temperance is well taught and forcibly taught by the example of lives which are prolonged and made blessed by conscientious subjection to the restraints imposed by the laws of our nature and of God. Lives that are exemplars before God and man of such a lesson, are useful lives in whatever sphere or station they have lived.

You adverted, this afternoon, to another feature of your united lives, which is of interest and a lesson to us who are younger, especially to those who have life's work before them and its demands beginning to press upon their notice. Some here are not far behind you in years, and have shared with you in the experiences and the responsibilities as well as the labors of which you have spoken. What they have witnessed, and what they have realized, but confirms and attests the truth of what I am about to say. Early in life you, sir, became identified with movements in the interest of reform. You found in your wife, doubly beloved because of it, one who earnestly sympathized and co-operated with you in your course. Much of sacrifice, much of reproach and obloquy were met and endured, patiently and cheerfully, in the course you felt called upon to pursue. But you have lived long enough to see some of those movements in the ascendant and to be assured by what you have seen, realized, that manly adherence to earnest convictions and loyalty to the right will win honorable recognition by the world, as well as the answer of a good conscience. The lesson for us is to be followers of those who through faith and patience inherit the promises.

When sixty years ago this bridegroom, in his early manhood took his young bride to his heart and home, she had entered already upon a religious experience, which had found its appropriate expression in a formal profession of faith in Christ. In process of time the husband also believed and became, like the wife, a member of the body of Christ which is his church. Henceforward they became more closely united in sympathy and affection because of their common faith and hope. Now the very peculiarity of their characters and history just adverted to, is assurance to all who have known them that their faith is not mere traditional faith, that their professed experience s the experience of rational and intelligent minds, the result of conscientious and prayerful consideration and examination of the grounds of faith. And now that they have passed beyond the ordinary boundary of prolonged human life, with their faith only confirmed to them by their long experience, we cannot but feel assured that their faith is not vain. May God impress the lesson upon all our hearts.

My friends, you have had much of sunshine in your life journey. Your full proportion, I presume you will confess, has been allotted to you. But your life has had its shadows also. Some of them have been deep and dark. But in passing through them you have found that when Christ came and went under the cloud of human sorrow, he carried with him and left behind him much of the light of heaven. Thus it has come to pass, that to the Christian no path of life is utterly dark, no hardness of experience is beyond the power of endurance, no passage in life's history is utterly forbidding. As the eye, this eye of sense, looks upon it, there are vacancies in thishome circle, as it was once constituted. Peradventure there are invisible presences where the vacancies seem to be. At all events we will trust that as you draw nearer to the border and look over, and pass beyond this present, you may recognize and be greeted by those who have gone before. May God so order it and his grace be so effective, that the circle may be reconstructed over there, link after link being supplied till all is complete.

You are approaching, if not already passing into the border land. Yet we cannot but hope, and it is our earnest wish that your steps may not be hastened; that with even pace and with gentle movement you may pass on your way toward the unseen. If it may be, it is our wish and prayer that you both may continue with us to enjoy God's favor and witness to his faithfulness another decade of years; and that your children and their children may rise up and call you blessed when Encouragement in Christ.

BUTLER, Ind., Oct. 3d., 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

The sermon on Masonry which you have been publishing is hailed with joy by many of the laity of the M. E. church, and although its author may be persecuted for righteousness' sake he may be assured that from many a dwelling far and near shall arise prayer and supplication that the Great Head of the church may endow his faithful followers with wisdom and power from on high, that this once glorious branch of Christ's Zion may be purged from heathen lodge-worship. For the church once, and even now, so zealous for Christ, may no longer be called upon to mourn over a ministry, many of whom are denying the Lord who bought them and assenting while in the lodge to the horrid sentiment that "it is unlawful to pray in the name of Jesus Christ."

Alas, that this should ever be so! How are the mighty fallen and the weapons of war perished? O for a day of fasting and prayer for the ministry of the M. E. church! Perhaps in God's mysterious providence lay delegation may be a means in bringing about this glorious reformation, for

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

Courage, brethren and sisters, "God is not slack concerning his promises." The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner. On whomsoever it shall fall it shall grind him to powder. Christ is king in Zion and therefore let us look forward in faith, nothing wavering, for his kingdom shall tear and break in pieces all other kingdoms and shall stand forever. In righteousness doth he judge and make war. On his vesture and on his thigh the name is written "King of kings and Lord of lords." He will fight this modern anti-Christ with the sword of his mouth, and the armies which are in heaven shall follow him on white horses clothed in fine linen white and clean, for the white linen is the righteousness of the saints. O for a wrestling in prayer, for an importuning before the mercy-seat! "Help Lord, for the godly man ceaseth." O for a rallying around the Cross, that this iniquity may be removed! Awake! Awake! Put on thy strength, O Jerusalem; put on thy beautiful garments, O captive daughter of Zion. Tokens of Zion's triumph cheer us on, we shall yet escape the bondage of the lodge. Already we may say with Whittier's sable bondman:

"We prayed the Lord, he gave us signs
To show we shall be free,
The north wind tells it to the pines,
The wild duck to the sea."

Yours truly, SUSAN EVANS.

The New Temple to the Masonic Baal in New York.

EVANSVILLE, Ind.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

As I do not remember having seen any account in the Cynosure of the dedication of the new Masonic temple of New York, which took place in June, a copy of the following from [illegible] interesting to the readers of the Christian Cynosure:

"The dedication of the new Masonic temple this week marks an epoch in the history of Masonry in New York, and in the United States. This magnificent building has been erected with the primary object of providing a permanent fund for the establishment and maintainance of an asylum for the support of aged and decrepit Freemasons of the State of New York, and the widows and orphans of Masons. It is situated on the north-east corner of Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, and is at once a massive and elegant structure. The main entrance is on 23d Street, and from this a wide and handsome flight of marble steps leads to the second story. The side panels of the stair case are of different colored marbles, and the balustrade is also of polished stone. The first story and basement are set apart for business purposes. All above this will be devoted to the Masonic fraternity except the Grand Lodge room, which when not required by the Grand Lodge, may be used for lectures and public entertainments. This is a handsome room on the second story at the head of the stairway, and is capable of accommodating 1000 persons. On the left of the stairway east are the offices of the Grand Secretary, and a private room for the Grand Master, and at the end of the hall-way are two elaborate gates ornamented with Masonic emblems. On the third story are three large rooms designated according to the style of architecture in which they are ornamented, as the Tuscan, Doric, and Ionic. On the fourth floor are a number of rooms still more elaborately ornamented, and gorgeously fitted up, and on the upper floor of all is the place of assembly for the Knights Templars of the city of New York. In all its essential and detailed arrangements the building is most elaborate, and complete. The substantial has combined with the beautiful, and while a monument to the order for whose interest it has been erected, it is an ornament to the neighborhood and city in whichit stands.

The foundation stone was laid in the summer of 1870, and after scarcely five years labor the building has been completed at a cost of about fifteen hundred thousand dollars.

The erection of such a building affords evidence of the strength and prosperity of Freemasonry in New York. Its existence dates backward to at least the beginning of the eighteenth century, long anterior to the Revolution, and it now numbers, it is supposed, more than 91,000 Masons in this State alone, who have attained the dignity of Master."

Respectfully, WM. TROUP.

Political Organization Endorsed.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

If it is admissible and not asking too much, will you allow me space once more to say "well done" to movements reported in the Cynosure of Sep. 16th, appointing a National Central Committee for "political action."

While I heartily rejoice in the Christian feature, and prayer feature, and the lecture feature of our National Association Opposed to Secret Societies, yet I clearly see the ballot as an instrument as necessary in the hands of the praying man, as the woodman's the plow in the hands of the farmer. To refuse to employ the ballot in a government like ours, and yet hold conventions and prayer-meetings asking God to overthrow this organized iniquity, would be much like asking God to turn the stones on our farms to bread, instead of our plowing and planting and asking God only for sunshine and rain on our labors.

Our enemies and the listless multitude, the masses, expect this of us; they fear nothing less. I am buttonholed and pulled here at home by both political parties, informing me that the opposing candidate for county treasurer is a Freemason; hoping thereby to weaken his chances for election. There are enough, amply enough men that hate the lodge and its satellites, not only here and there, but all over our country, to wield the "balance of power" against secretism at every election, if that element would only unite and make its power felt. A positive demand, on the part of American free men at the ballot-box will go farther into the hearts of the Most Puissant Grand Kings of the lodge, to break them down, than a battallion of lecturers on ample salary without the ballot.

May heaven bless and speed the political organization on a Christian basis, that Christians may have an opportunity to "vote as they pray," "Thy kingdom come." May heaven bless the Christian Cynosure, and its devoted corps of workers.

Lesson for Oct. 24.—The Vine and the Branches.

SCRIPTURE.—John xv. 1-8. Commit 1-8. Primary Verse, 8.

1 I am the true vine and my Father is the husbandman.

2 Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine: no more can ye except ye abide in me.

5 I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing.

6 If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

8 Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit: so shall ye be my disciples.

1.—Our connection with Christ, The Vine, must be something more than a form. The branch must have an actual connection—must penetrate deep into the Vine in order to have life. There is a time coming when even all seeming union with Christ will be sundered, and the "dead branches" will be consumed. Is. v. 24; Mal. iii. 3, 18; Matt. iii. 10-12; vii. 22, 23; xiii. 40-42; xxv. 31-46; 2 Thess. i. 7, 8.

2.—The real proof of a vital union with him is that we bear fruit—much fruit. Not necessarily as much fruit or fruit so large and fair as our neighbor. We need not distress ourselves with such unwise comparisons. The fruit that we are to bear is "the fruit of the Spirit." Unless we bear these we do not "abide" in Christ. Rom. vii. 4; Gal. v. 22, 23; Eph. v. 9; 2 Pet. i. 8; Rev. iii. 1-3.

3.—The judgment against false professors, it will be noticed, is not pronounced by God alone—"men gather them and cast them into the fire." The world knows real devotion from false. Matt. vii. 1, 6; John xiii. 35; xvii. 20, 21; 2 Cor. iii. 2; 1 John iii. 13.

4.—Is the husbandman unkind that "purgeth" the vines—cutting off all waste and useless growth? He is apparently merciless, but really of great mercy. He prunes that the vines may bear. And so affliction comes to us from our Heavenly Father—not undesigned nor vexing us with needless torture. He "purgeth" his vines that they "may bring forth more fruit." Job v. 17; Ps. cxix. 67, 75; xciv. 12; Prov. iii. 11, 12; xiii. 24; Rom. v. 1-5; Heb. xii. 6-11: Jas. i. 12; 1 Pet. v. 6, 7; Rev. iii. 19.

5.—It is to the glory of God that we bear much fruit—not to our own. And it invariably so, that however much men may sneer at the idea of a new spiritual birth, instinctively they recognize the fact that no man can live a true Christian life without divine help. When a bad man suddenly becomes good—an irritable man, a marvel of meekness, and a selfish man, a wonder of self-denial, then men can not help but acknowledge that God has changed the fountains of that man's life, and so they glorify Him who made the change and not him who is changed. v. 8; Matt. v. 16; xii. 35; 1 Cor. vi. 20; x. 31.—*Nat'l S. The Gardener and the Vine.

Visiting a person who was in deep affliction and sorrow, Gotthold was told by the family that he was in the garden. Thither he followed, and found him employed in clearing a vine of its superfluous leaves. After a friendly salute, he inquired what he was doing. "I find," was the reply, "that, owing to the abundant rain, this vine is overgrown with wood and leaves, which prevent the sun from reaching and ripening the grapes. I am therefore pruning part of them away, that it may bring its fruit to maturity." Gotthold rejoined, "And do you find that in this operation the vine rerists and opposes you? If not, why are you displeased that a gracious God should do to you what your vine must not be displeased that you do to it? You prune off the superfluous foliage in order that it may bear the better fruit; and God takes away your temporal blessings and earthly comforts, in order that faith may produce its noble fruits of love, humility, patience, hope and prayer, and these larger and fairer and sweeter than before. When a man has superfluity of all things, and is a total stranger to the cross, the Sun of Righteousness, with its gracious rays, can scarcely reach his heart; and hence his Christianity usually bears only the harsh and acrid fruits of hypocrisy pride, unkindness, and implacability. Let God, therefore, do with you as he will. He will do you no harm. You are now stripping the vine of its leaves; in spring you hoed it, planted layers, pruned the suckers, and bound the branches. My friend, you are yourself a branch on the spiritual Vine, which is the Lord Jesus. God is the Dresser, and he well knows that without his grace and care he can look for on good at your hands. This is the reason why he employs contempt to lay you in the earth, trials to prune, affliction to restrain, and poverty to strip you of your leaves. He intends it all to make his grace sweeter to you, and your heart sweeter to him.—Gotthold's Emblems.

[From the Anti-masonic Christian Herald, 1828.]

The Grand Object of Freemasonry Expressed by Washington.

BY HENRY DANA WARD.

In his reply to the polite address of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, 1792, General Washington says: "The grand object of Masonry is to promote the happiness of the human race." Either General Washington mistook the grand object of Masonry, or Masonry takes a mysterious way for its attainment. With entire respect for the memory of General Washington, we shall find much reason to think he was mistaken.

That an institution whose grand object is to promote the happiness of the human race, should strictly forbid its members to invite their most intimate friends to unite with the institution in the attainment of that grand object, is a mystery inexplicable upon the common principles of philosophy.

The grand object of the Bible Society is to promote the happiness of the human race. Let one article of the constitution forbid any member to invite his friends to unite with the Bible Society in promoting this great object, and all will agree, that in becoming likened to Freemasonry, it departs from the confidence of the friends of the Bible, and diminishes its usefulness.

Suppose, however, that the grand object of Freemasonry is to promote the happiness of the human race, it is remarkable that this society does not seek its object in any specific pursuit, like any other benevolent society; but by its general influence, like Christianity. It does not confine its attention to any particular branch of labor, or to inculcate any single truth of importance, like a society for the promotion of temperance, or a Savings Bank; but with authority assumed to be divine, and an antiquity superior to the Gospel, it professes to teach the true name and reverence of the Most High, and the way to the Grand Lodge above. Freemasonry thus becomes, not the handmaid of religion, like the Missionary Society, but a substitute for religion, acceptable to those who reject divine revelation.

Perhaps General Washington supposed it is the grand object of Freemasonry to promote the happiness of the human race by the practice of benevolence. It is certain that by far the greatest part of the fraternity, with whom we converse, believe this; and do not conceive, that any essential change would be made in the aim of Freemasonry, by striking off all its degrees and mummery at a blow. Sometimes their confidence in the charitable purposes of the institution will hardly allow them to repress their indignation at an effort to show the entire falsity of its claims. They stretch forth their hands with ardour, while their countenance flushes with honest zeal, and repeating the number of benevolent lodges around them, and some illustrious charities which their own eyes have witnessed, they triumphantly declare: "It will take you a long time to persuade us, that such an institution has an evil tendency."

So, too, the burden of the Mason's song is charity; the text of the Mason's discourse is 1 Cor. xiii. 13. "Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." Speak a word of doubt, of distrust, or of condemnation, in the ears of an honest Mason, and, whether he dwell on the green hills of New England, or in the fertile vales of the Ohio, his defense of Freemasonry is constantly the same: "It is a benevolent society; it gives to this poor widow, and to that destitute orphan; if you knew its charities you would respect its claims."

We are not of those who put light for darkness, and darkness for light; we do not refuse its meed of praise to benevolence, nor our admiration to any institution which confers heavenly charity upon the orphan and widow. A society whose efforts are consecrated to God-like charity, partakes of the Deity both in the perfectness, and in the sanctity of its character. The Bible and Missionary, the Sabbath-school, and Tract Societies, send forth their blessings upon the evil and upon the good, upon the just and upon the unjust. The ungrateful heathen, and the hardened offender, the wayward child, and the profligate parent, are freely offered the benefits these societies are constituted to bestow. This is the grace that covers a multitude of sins; and its happy possessors are the children of God. If Freemasonry does, we do not say the same things, but any one thing in the same spirit, or in the same manner, leaving the spirit, or motive, to the most charitable inference; then we will allow its claims to the affections of our countrymen, as a benevolent society, and reverence it as such.

But if, like a Pharisee, it salute those only who salute it, and love those only who love it, Freemasonry is no better than a publican, and is not entitled to praise, or reward. If the institution gives that it may receive again, lends only where it may have occasion to borrow, and bestows its best favors scantily, and not in obedience to heavenly charity, but in obedience to the express conditions of a compact, ratified with an oath, then Freemasonry has not the smallest claim to the perfectness or sanctity of a benevolent institution; it is actuated not by a spirit of love, but by a spirit of selfishness.

For instance; a number of men put a stipulated sum into a common fund, and bind themselves by an oath to prefer each others welfare in business before the welfare of all mankind besides; and bind themselves further, to aid, assist, and befriend any one of the brotherhood, his widow and orphans, who may be, in the course of events, brought into trouble, or reduced to want.

After a time one of the contracting parties becomes poor, or dies and leaves a dependent family behind. Now the fraternity, upon the representation of some one of the brethren acquainted with the circumstances bestir themselves. Charity is lauded, while they examine the state of the funds; and, if so much is found in the treasury, they vote ten dollars to the relief of the poor family, or even twenty, if the case is urgent. Is this charity, dear reader? or is it a debt? Justice demands the strict fulfillment of the compact. Charity does not begin until the terms of the compact have been satisfied, and its conditions faithfully fulfilled, and money given to its brethren by a society so organized, cannot in any sense be called a charity; it is a debt.

We have societies of this kind existing in the land, but obliged to fulfill the conditions of the compact by the laws of our country, and not by an unlawful oath: need we add that they are much more faithful in discharging their legal obligations than Freemasonry is in discharging the obligations of the oaths. These are mutual insurance companies against losses by fire and otherwise. For a small bonus paid in, the society obligates itself to secure the property of the applicant against losses for a term of more or less years, according to the constitution of the society. At length a loss is suffered, and the sufferer comes, not begging for the fulfillment of the contract according to the oath; but, as a freeman should come, demanding his right under guaranty of the laws of his country. And who besides Freemasonry would boast of the fulfillment of this contract as an act of charity? The most it can be called, is a debt promptly paid.

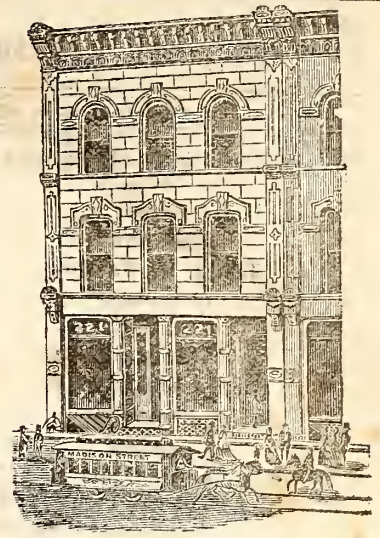
But this provision for the wants of its members is not the grand object of the society; it is only incidental. If provision against misfortune were the grand object, one degree would secure it, as well as forty-three, and one oath as well as forty oaths. The society does not heap up degrees and oaths for emptiness. The grand object lies beneath them, and this care for the comfort of its members is a mere branch of the concern; as meeting and feasting and having public funerals, are also branches to cover and conceal the grand object itself.

We have carefully sought the grand object of Freemasonry in the field of benevolence, and we do not find it. It gives, in discharge of its solemn obligations, both money to the living, and funerals to the dead; but its grand object is neither to support the poor, nor to bury the dead. Freemasonry is social, and prayerful, and Bibical; but its grand object is neither sociability, nor prayer, nor reading of the Scriptures. All these it uses as means to accomplish its grand object. The grand object itself is not found; and when it is, a great secret will be discovered.

Masonic.

Past Grand Master Hawley on the Chicago Custom-House Farce.

From the report of the Grand Lodge of Illinois for 1874. the following is taken; in connection with a few remarks on the editorial pages, it will be of considerable interest:



On the 24th of June, assisted by R. W. George E. Lounsbury, D. G. M., R. W. Joseph Robbins, S. G. W., and the Masons of this and sister jurisdictions, I laid the corner stone of the new Custom-House and Post-Office building in this city.

It was an occasion of universal interest, not only to the craft of this and adjoining States, but also to the public at large, especially to the citizens of Chicago which was made manifest by their presence in numbers unsurpassed by any similar event of our time. In view of the national character of the building, the magnitude, and the completeness of the arrangements on the part of the United States officials, as well as the craft of this city, I may be pardoned for adverting to the event somewhat more fully than is customary in an official report. Especially is this proper, since the opportunity was seized upon by the enemies of Freemasonry, and, to a great extent, by the press of this city, to misrepresent the action and intentions of the Masonic fraternity, thereby creating, in the minds of those outside the institution and unwarrantable prejudice towards a society that never seeks, in any manner, to foist its ancient and universally respected ceremonies before the public unless especially invited to do so; but notwithstanding this well known characteristic of our society, the misrepresentations were carried to such an extent that many, even of the craft, were led to believe that the dignity and honor of our ancient institution had been, or would be compromised by yielding to the importunities of a few fanatical bigots who may be well informed on other subjects, but whose ignorance and misconception of the designs and claims of Freemasonry is entitled to pity; yet, in the face of this, they have the affrontery to assume the role of the three men of Hooley Street, and represent themselves as "we, the people," by anticipating the occasion by a year to display their venom by forwarding to the authorities at Washington remonstrances against the Masons being permitted to perform these ceremonies. Notwithstanding this action, the National government, through its proper officers, without any solicitation on the part of the Masonic fraternity, formally invited the Grand Master of Masons of this State to lay the corner-stone of this national edifice, thereby recognizing the antiquity of our Masonic institution, perpetuating the customs pertaining thereto, and acknowledging the appropriateness of its ceremonies. This invitation was accepted in the same courteous spirit in which it was given, and I desire to bear testimony to the fact that the Masonic fraternity, throughout the entire affair, were treated with the utmost consideration and respect by the representatives of the National Government, and that they did not at any time or in any manner interfere with or seek to make any change in the ceremonies of the occasion as prepared by M. W. Bro. Cregier, who represented the Grand Master in arranging the same. Neither was this programme thus prepared changed in any particular, except so far as to invite that distinguished gentleman and jurist, Hon. Henry W. Blodgett, Judge of the United States Court, to represent the National Government, and take such part in the ceremonies as the Grand Master assigned and originally intended should have been performed by the President of the United States.

This somewhat lengthy statement is not intended as a reply to those fanatical busy-bodies who have sought to make themselves conspicuous, but to correct any misapprehensions the Masons of this and other grand jurisdictions have touching the same, and to show you that the dignity and honor of our noble institution, represented in the State of Illinois are as unsullied as when the invitation, politely and considerately tendered by the United States authorities was accepted by your Grand Master.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to the Treasurer, H. L. KELLOGG 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—J. Blanchard.
DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
AUDITORS.—C. R. Hagerty and Edward Hildreth.
PRESIDENT OF THE LAST NATIONAL CONVENTION.—Rev. D. R. Kerr, D. D., of Pittsburgh.

The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer, and drafts or P. O. orders made payable to him. The general correspondence, inquiries, etc., should be directed to the Corresponding Secretary.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

HISTORY OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; The Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, Conditions of the Carpenter Donation with Engraving of building to be donated by Mr. Carpenter; Tables showing the number of Pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of Secret Societies, Tabular view of Local, County State and National Conventions, and list of organizations Auxiliary to the National Christian Association; Brief opinions of Eminent Men on Secret Societies, and Testimonies of Religious Bodies against them. This book will be found invaluable by all who wish to know the character of this reform and how they may do the most to further its objects. It should be in the hands of every Anti-mason. Price post paid, 25 cents each, $1,50 per doz; 25 copies or more by express at 8 cents each.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY OCT. 14, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States

THE CHICAGO SCHOOLS MADE UNSECTARIAN.

The Bible in or out of schools is but one limb of the greatest question of the age or of any age on this globe. The question is that moved eighteen centuries ago between a Nazarene peasant and his tempter, viz., which of the two should be the recognized head of law and morals in this world. Satan would cheerfully relinquish everything to Christ but this. "All will I give thee if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

For thirty-four years, a few words have been daily read from the Bible in opening the Chicago schools, and the children have said the Lord's prayer. For years, priest, infidel, and religious worldling have been moving to squelch that little service, and the reason is because that little service recognizes Christ as rightful Lord and King, and that he yet "must reign" here. In a night that service is wiped out of the Chicago schools, and, with it, all recognition of any God of law and morals! The Chicago schools are now as "godless" as the priests of Rome call them, or could wish. There was one Catholic in the Board which thus cast Christ out of the public teaching of Chicago as head and moral standard. One Methodist and one Baptist were on the Board. The Baptist dodged the vote and the Methodist voted the expulsion. Five Germans were in the Board and all voted to rid the schools of the recognition of Christ as law-giver and the Bible as moral law! "Herod and Pilate friends!" We shall see whether Christ will stay where Herod and Pilate put him, i. e., in the sepulchre of oblivion and rejection, and how the swarms of Chicago children will learn to reverence law when they have decapitated law of its God, so far as Chicago popular education is concerned. Without claiming to be prophets, we predict that the vote of that Board excluding an authorative Christ by excluding the Bible from the Chicago schools, will yet write its history in human blood, read by the flames of Chicago dwellings. Godless schools are seminaries of cut-throats and incendiaries; and Chicago is now Paris, so far as her schools are concerned. Priestism and its twin, infidelity, rule them.

And see how this Bible exclusion is received. We clip from the Chicago Tribune: "Several clergymen have publicly acquiesced in the propriety of the action of the Board, among whom are the Rev. Clinton Locke, of Grace church, Prof. Swing, the Rev. Robert Collyer, the Rev. C. L. Thompson of the Fifth Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Dr. D. Fallows of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church. Some of these have preached discourses in favor of omitting the Bible exercises in the public schools." And Rev. W. W. Patton, D. D., Congregationalist, we are told, reaffirms his doctrine that the Bible is rightly cast out of the schools, while the Jewish Rabbi preached exultingly over the fall of the hated Nazarene from recognition in the schools.

Patton's argument is, "Reading the Bible in law-supported schools wrongs Jew and Papist tax-payers who are thus made to support with their money the Bible and Christ whom they hate." Well and good. This has the appearance of democracy and justice. But this argument applied must sweep from our constitution, laws, courts, and hospitals, Sabbath-recognition, oaths, chaplains, thanks-givings, everything, in short, to which Jew and atheist taxpayers object to and hate! This argument will simply un-Christianize and heathenize the United States.

But the one grand argument is that Christ and the Bible are sectarian. We answer this at large elsewhere in this number.

—The Chicago Presbytery at its meeting last week discussed at length, the action of the School Board in casting out the Bible and passed resolutions depreciating that action, beginning:

WHEREAS, The Bible has proved itself in all history to be the fountain of these elements of republican life; therefore,

Resolved, That it is the right of government as a means of its own permanence and well-being to recognize the Bible in the public schools as the standard of morals and law; that it is an erroneous policy to degrade such a book by its expulsion from the schools, it being the best friend of those qualities which make a good American citizen; while making of good citizens is the very object of the schools.

THE TRUE DOCTRINE OF CHURCH AND STATE.

It is impossible for civil government long to exist without a recognition of God as the source of its power over men. Pagan governments are mere brute force; and force without justice is not government, but oppression.

There are three possible relations of the civil power to worship and religion.

1st. To enforce and regulate it by law. "This," say the Pennsylvania Judges in the Girard Will case, "can make hypocrites but not Christians."

2d. It can recognize all religions, putting them on the level before the law. But this is false and insulting. False, because the true God is not on the level with false gods; nor is truth on the level with lies. And it is insulting the Almighty to put him on the level with idols and counterfeiters.

3d. The only way at once possible and proper is simply to recognize the true God and Christianity, leaving worship and conscience free.

To elucidate this point, we give below extracts from a sermon on the subject, preached in some fifteen churches in Illinois and Iowa, and always, so far as known, accepted and approved by the congregation. It is not presumptuous therefore to think that its doctrine is the one on which intelligent American Christians are likely to settle down and embrace:

THE RELATION OF CIVIL GOVERNMENT TO CHRIST.

While here on earth the Saviour simply required men to CONFESS him; and promised those who did so to confess them at his second coming before his Father and the holy angels. (Matt. x. 32; Rev. iii. 5.) And this is all he asks of men or nations now: not to coerce, fight for, or persecute for him, but only to "confess" him.

The true relation of civil government to Christ then is simple confession, no more, no less. The Saviour needed no jails, or sheriffs, much less thumb-screws, racks, or other implements of torture. He asked no aid from the civil arm; usurped no civil functions, nor interfered with any. He refused even to be a judge of estates; fled from those who would make him a king; recognized civil government by paying the tribute; inculcated obedience to magistrates; and rebuked none for holding office, but only for misconduct in office. Though he claimed to be a king, approved of his disciples calling him Master and Lord; and said he had all power in earth as well as in heaven, yet he said his kingdom was not of this world, else would his servants fight.

Thus Christianity in the body politic is like air in the human lungs, constraining nothing, coercing, crushing nothing, colliding with nothing, suffering itself to be expelled even at will; yet not only essential to vitality, but is itself the very principle of life.

But it is objected that national recognition of Christianity will re-inaugurate "church and state," and bring back persecution for conscience' sake. The answer is: The U. S. Constitution forbids the establishment of church and state, or compulsory worship, and no enlightened American will even consent to alter or repeal that fundamental law.

But if we recognize Christianity by reading the Bible in the national schools and repeating the Lord's prayer, Jews and atheists, it is said, will have a right to complain. The answer is: What right? All will still be free to every act but crime. The Jew in his synagogue; the Mormon is his temple; the Chinaman in his Joss-house, and the atheist in his club. So long as they do not molest their neighbors, or practice crime and call it religion, each is, and of right ought to be, free to worship or not worship as they please. But if some monster mother, whose god is a crocodile, should undertake to make a Ganges of our Mississippi, by tossing her infant to her deity, must our Constitution shield child-murder because it is her religion? If not, then in one case at least, it must discriminate between true and false religion, and recognize the true and reject the false; and this is all that is done when the Bible is read in schools. It is simply saying that Christianity is, and heathenism is not religion.

But the objection oftenest made is, that Christianity is a sect, and Christianity "sectarian;" in the words of the Chicago Tribune, "nothing but morality plus a creed." The answer is: Christianity is not sectarian; nor is Christ a sectary; nor is the infinite and Eternal God, whom Christ has brought within the horizon of mortals and perfectly represents, a partizan divinity! Mars, Jupiter, Apollo, all the gods of the old mythology were sectarians, each in his petty realm. The rabble gods of the Chinaman; the saint-gods of the convent and the nunnery; the familiar-spirit gods of the Circle and the Mormon endowment; the "lords many and gods many" of the nations,—these all all ARE sectarian; and also those Christians, if there be such, who would exclude from salvation all whom they cannot convince. Let these be sectarians.

But truth is not sectarian. The Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount, the Lord's Prayer, these are not sectarian. The measureless and Eternal God, whose presence fills the universe which he has made,—he is no sectary. Neither is the blessed Saviour, who is "The brightness of his glory and the express image of his person," a sectarian. He was neither Pharisee, nor Sadducee, nor Essene. He may have worn the lineaments of a Jew, but he was neither Jew nor Greek, Barbarian or Scythian. In the words of another, "He stands above the limitations of age, school, sect, nation and race; and, without the suspicion of vanity, could stand up and call on all men to forsake all things and follow him." And the angels proclaimed his mission as it was and is to be; not peace to a party and good will to a sect, but "Peace on EARTH and good will to MEN."

No: The word sect means something cut from or divided. But if Christianity is a sect, where and what is the universal religion from which it is cut off? Shall we seek that universal religion in the jugglings of priests, the palterings of the circle, the lodge or the pagoda? or shall we kneel amid the herd of sceptics and seek rest to our soul amid the jargon of their negations, while each lifts up his voice on high and proclaims, not what he does believe, but what he does not? If the two all-embracing principles on which the whole Bible is built, viz., supreme love to God and equal love to man; if these be proved sectarian, then must we indeed lie down in death with Pilate's question murmuring on our lips: "Where and what is truth?" But blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, He is the truth, wide as our whole race for which he died, and vast as Eternity to which he withdrew. And for wretched mortals whom he has made and redeemed to brand him as a sectary and his religion as sectarian; and on this false and wicked pretense, to cast out his Bible from our schools, and his ideas from our well-springs of character and thought, is like moles and bats sectarianizing the sun, by whose all-embracing, all-vivifying power their chickering indictment is made possible.

NOTES.

—Special attention is called to the announcement of Past Master Ronayne for the Peoria meeting. The proposition is an excellent one and should have the co-operation of the scores of seceders in this State. Brethren Hart, Chittenden, Middlekauff, Graham, Bartlett and others, you hear the call; do not fail to meet it.

—An interesting report of the work in Fulton county, O., from the General Agent is of necessity postponed till our next number. Bro. Stoddard proposes attending the State meetings in Indiana and Michigan this week and next, and the progress of the reform will be early reported.

—We reluctantly and for good reasons postpone till next week any considerable notice of the meeting of the American Board of Foreign Missions which held its anniversary in Farwell Hall last week, and also of the Illinois Grand Lodge meeting. The former meeting was attended by thousands from all parts of the country, and was full of interesting speeches and discussions. The Masons allowed their proceedings more publicity than usual and of course must expect some notice from their opponents.

—Hon. J. B. Walker lately adressed the students of Wheaton college on the subject of Books and Libraries. His extended acquaintance with authors and their works made the ground work of an entertaining and profitable lecture. Mr. Walker has arranged to give the use of a large portion of his valuable library to the students at Wheaton.

—The United Presbyterian synod of Illinois voted at its late meeting to send a delegate to the next anniversary of the National Christian Association, and to take up a collection for the aid of that society in its various churches and to recommend its organ, the Christian Cynosure, in its congregations.

—The report of the Grand Master of Masons of Illinois to his Grand Lodge does not concern an event so long ago as to be without considerable interest. The Masons at the time, it will be remembered, said nothing about their defeat and the fraud they finally practiced to get the entire ceremony into their hands, and appeared to be a body of men of too noble and dignified a character to be moved by the popular opposition their arrogance aroused; but this scolding report banishes all such notions of them. The points of this report can be better appreciated by referring to the history of the affair as it appeared in the daily press at the time. Rankin, the superintending architect, and "Blessed Charity" Cregier got up the affair from the beginning for a grand Masonic display, and both are well known Masons. They put Judge Blodgett forward to break the storm of popular feeling against them, and for no other reason, but in reality made him play a fool's part in the Masonic ceremony.

—The many speech of Pres. Grant published last week deserves only commendation except for the advice that common school education should be unmixed with any "sectarian, pagan, or atheistical bias," followed by the explanation, "leave the matter of religion to the family," etc., from which we understand that Pres. Grant regards the Bible as sectarian and approves such performances as the Chicago School Board carries on for political influence. A sufficient answer to this erroneous idea is found in the editorial on "Church and State," which maintains a theory elaborated with anxious thought and believed not only to be consonant with the great undercurrent of honest conscience throughout the country, but also with the Word and Spirit of Jesus Christ.

—Noticing the recent use of his name in connection with the Presidency by the press Mr. Charles Francis Adams has written the following to the Brooklyn Times:

I cannot but be deeply moved by the voluntary expressions of esteem which I occasionally find in newspapers in reference to myself. I trust they may not have the effect of turning my head or making me think of myself better than I ought to think. With regard to the suggestion made in the article to which you called my attention, I can say it would be very agreeable to me to undertake the work, but I have, I fear, already on my hands quite as much as I can hope to accomplish during my term of life—approaching so near the three-score and ten prescribed as the limit of usefulness as I do. I shall have to make haste or run great risk of leaving matters in confusion. It is for this reason that I have been perhaps too indifferent to the wishes of many who have desired to have me called again into public life. I see nothing there just now which promises happy results within a short time. I am steadily releasing myself from the responsibility, if not of writing history, at least of putting out of reach of accident the valuable materials for writing it which have been placed in my hands, or which I have myself gathered in my own career. I doubt whether I could be made more useful to the world in any other way. Excuse me for this egotism, and believe me, etc.

—H. W. Beecher has returned to Brooklyn, and announces his intentions through his misnamed "Christian Union." This paper is to take a "new departure" with such contributors as Dr. Edward Beecher, Thomas K. Beecher, Mrs. H. W. Beecher, Harriet Beecher Stowe, etc., with Henry Ward Beecher as editor-in-chief, who proposes to make it "a parish, parallel with Plymouth church." The Advance has found some straws in the editorials of the first number under the new order which point thus:

The Christian Union in its reconstructed state will advocate the "truths held in common by all the great sects of Christendom," [Which are they?] will seek a sympathetic union of Christians not "the phantom of organic unity", "will recognize no doctrine as fundamental, unless it is indispensable to the formation of Christian character;" will interpret the Scripture, "not alone by the laws of language, but by the experience of the church and by all the disclosures of Providence in human society[!]"; will "include in Christianity," science, political economy, and politics; will avoid controversy as far as possible; and will endeavor to promote all good things. The editor's statement contains the following peculiar utterance: "A high ideal of human life and society, enforced by a cold and severe criticism which disdains all human weaknesses and infirmities, is less vulgar than ribald scoffing, but is none the less tyrannic and Satanic." The remark is at least noticeable and will warrant further examination, as will other points in the statement. Another leading editorial contains several statements of the following type: "Probably a more ignorant and unsound body of theologians than the twelve apostles never attempted to preach." "Compared with the worst theological relapses of honest men in our time the offenses of John (Baptist) and the apostles were of unspeakable magnitude." These and other statements, which we have not space to quote, indicate a freer, not to say looser doctrinal basis, than has hitherto been avowed by the paper or its editor.

News of the Week.

The City.

The epizootic is attacking the horses of the city in a mild form.——The Exposition closed last Saturday. It has been so uniformly successful for three years in every point of view that it is proposed to make it permanent.——Work has recommenced on the new Custom-House.——A consignment of tea of 150 car loads of tea is arriving here via the Pacific railroad.——The railroad war of last year is likely to be renewed by the action of Com. Vanderbilt in securing the control of the Mich. Central railroad and the running of fast passenger trains on the Pittsburgh and Penn'a line. The Erie road has arranged for a through short line with the Baltimore and Ohio and will reduce fare to get a business.

General.

The horse disease is quite general in New England and west to Ohio. It has not so severe a form as three years ago.——Boss Tweed has been served with another indictment with an additional million dollars bail.——Westervelt, who has been tried in Philadelphia for complicity in the Ross abduction case has been sentenced to seven years close confinement.——The new postal cards are being issued at the rate of more than 1,000,000 per day.——Moody and Sankey are to begin meetings during this month in Brooklyn. A good place to begin, for beside other well known occurences, a squad of officers who were making a whiskey siezure there the other day were mobbed by a crowd of roughs and driven off.

Foreign.

Accounts are received of recent terrible disaster and damage by floods in the south of France, the result of the heaviest and most protracted rainstorms ever known in that portion of Europe. Besides the loss of life, the estimate of the annihilation of property, reaches several million of dollars. A cable dispatch also tells of severe rains and overflows and destruction of property in England.——It is reported that the cholera has broken out again in Western Asia.——The Romish party having a majority of two or three in the Bavarian Parliament are making efforts to compel the ministry to resign.

Notices.

PAST MASTER E. R NAYNE, of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, will hold himself in readiness to lecture and publicly work the degrees of Masonry wherever his services may be needed. A fair compensation and traveling expenses is all that is required. Address him at the office of this paper.

Ex-Masons in Illinois, Attention.

The undersigned is anxious to meet all seceding Masons in Illinois at the annual meeting of the State Association, to be held in Peoria, November, 9 h, and 10 h. He is desirous of opening a lodge of Masons in the forenoon of the 9th, and posting up in the ritual and work of the first and third degrees especially with the view of publicly working these degrees at the Convention. Will all seceding Masons in the State and adjoining States please "take due notice hereof and govern themselves accordingly"

EDMOND RONAYNE,
Past Master Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, Ill

Illinois.

The Convention of the Illinois State Christian Association will be held in the Congregational church, Peoria, Ill., commencing on Tuesday, Nov. 9th, and ending on the night of the 10th. Arrangements are being made for a large and successful meeting, so far as able speakers, popular expositions of the lodge and the hospitality of citizens can further that end.

Michigan State Meeting.

The friends in Michigan will take notice that their State Executive committee have appointed the first anniversary of their association to be held in Ypsilanti, Washtenaw county, October 27–29. Ypsilanti is easily reached from all parts of the State, being located on the Michigan Central railroad thirty miles from Detroit. Arrangements are being made for a good representation of good speakers and for a setting into activity the organization already affected. Let every reformer in the State make it a business to attend if possible and roll on the ball.

Chautauqua County, N. Y.

The semi-annual meeting of the Chautauqua Co., N. Y. Association opposed to secret societies will be held at Fredonia, 19th and 20th of Oct., commencing at 1 o'clock P. M., 19th. All who are opposed to having the church of Christ and our government ruled by secret cliques and clans, are especially invited to attend, male and female. Our State agent, J. L. Barlow, has promised to be with us, God willing. Other able speakers will address the convention, and by the blessing of God it shall be a glorious success.

J. B. NESBEL, Cor. Sec'y.

Butler Co., Pa.

A county Christian Convention opposed to secret orders will be held at the Court-House, in Butler, Pa. the evenings of October 19th, and 20th, 1875, beginning at 7 o'clock each evening. Revs. J. E. Dodds, J. H. Timmons, S. Alexander, John Smith, S. Patterson, C. F. Hawley and Prof. Sloane are expected to speak, and an organization will be effected.

The State Association of Pennsylvania has appointed a convention in Mercer, Mercer county, on Dec. 7th, 1875.

Evening Song.

FROM THE GERMAN OF CLAUDIUS

The silent moon is risen,
The golden star-fires glisten
  In heaven serene and bright;
The forest sleeps in shadow,
And slowly off the meadow
  A mist is curling, silver-white.

The veil of night is closing
Around a world reposing
  In calm and holy trust;
It seems like one still chamber
Where weary hearts remember
  No more the sorrows of the dust.

Behold the full moon beaming!
So round and fair 'tis gleaming,
  Yet half is hid from sight.
So, oft, on earth, deceive us
Things that now seem so grievous
  Because the half is veiled in night.

We, poor, frail mortals groping,
Half fearing and half hoping,
  In darkness seek our way,
Our airy cobwebs spinning,
With erring and with sinning,
  Far from the mark we stray.

Thy saving health, O grant us,
Lord, that we ne'er may vaunt us
  In vain and fleeting show;
But childlike and confiding,
Follow thy gentle guiding,
  And in thy paths with gladness go.

When Death comes to release us
With kindly hand, and frees us
  Ere life's a weary load;
Then, when earth's ties we sever,
Take us to thee forever,
  Thou kind, thou true, thou gracious God!

The night's cool breath is creeping;
Brothers, in God's good keeping,
  Your weary eyelids close.
His grace from ill defend us,
And peaceful slumber send us,
And soothe our poor, sick neighbor's woes!

The Worth of a Soul.

A soul? What is it? At what shall we value it? God has given us no data from which nor rule by which to estimate its value. But he has not left us altogether without a witness. From what he has done for it and will do we can see something of the price fixed on it.

When he created it he formed it in his own image. He made it not after the likeness of angels that excel in strength, nor of any of the thrones or dominions or powers of the world on high—none of these, in his repute, were fit to be the father of the human soul. But himself was the grand model after which he fashioned it. His own ineffable essence was the form after which he created it; his own marvelous attributes the form after which he fashioned its attributes. Now consider what it is for a being to be created, in essence and excellencies, after the image of the great God—of him who fills immensity and inhabits eternity, who stretches out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing; whose glory no eye can see and live; from the insupportable splendor of whose Epiphany, when he shall come forth, the heavens and the earth shall dissipate into smoke, shall vanish into nothing, shall flee away and "no place be found for them." Consider, I say, what it is to be created in the image of this great God, and remember that great as God is, infinitely great, past finding out, still the human soul in its pristine lustre was the perfect picture, the daguerreotype likeness of its great Maker. His own uncreated excellencies were the mold in which he formed and fashioned the attributes of the human spirit, and the die he used to stamp it with.

But as if he had not yet given sufficient emphasis to the testimony which he bore to its value; as if he could never weary of working for his last and dearest of the works of his hand, see what a glorious world he has built to accommodate it, in this its first and and humblest state of being, for but a day—a great, green, goodly world, a world of hills and valleys, and plains, of mountains and rivers, and floods, of minerals and vegetables and animals; a world of singing birds and waving fields, and lowing herds, and nibbling flocks, and verdant vales and babbling brooks, and roaring, plunging waterfalls; a world of oil, of olive and honey, of figs, and dates, and pomegranates; a world whose stones are iron; and out of whose mountains one may dig brass, where one may eat bread without scarceness and not lack anything in it, and where the outgoings of ehe morning and the evening rejoict over us with an uninterrupted and a sempiternal joy; and all this just as the birth place and the cradle of the nascent soul, and just for a day; all this magnificence and splendor and beauty, piled up, heap upon heap, as with the gorgeous and prodigal hand of the Eternal, in order that man might be accommodated for an hour, a short hour, as befits him, who wears the high image of his God.

And then look, too, at the casket which he has formed to hold the jewel—these bodies of ours, fearfully and wonderfully made. Look at that knowledge of wise invention whereby he has formed and fitted together these vessels and viscera and vesicles, these sinews and limbs, and ligaments, these muscles and tissues, and tendons, these ganglions and glands and granulations, but there is no exhaustion to this argument; there can be no utterance given by human tongue, to the fulness of the testimony which God hath borne to the value of the soul. But why do we speak of value set upon the soul in its primeval and unfallen excellency? Look at the goodly price fixed on it now even in its ruin. It has fallen far and foully from the high glories of its Eden home. It is only the mere wreck of what it was, a splendid temple fallen into utter decay. But even in its fall it is a great price at which he estimates it. I cannot understand, and therefore I cannot declare the value he fixes on it even now. I am most entirely unable to comprehend the length and the breadth, and the height, and the depth, of his love for it; but I know that it is a love stronger than death, that it is a jealousy crueller than the grave, that the coals of it are coals of fire that hath a most vehement flame: I do not know what this love is, but I know that it is a fire of ardor, which many waters cannot quench, nor the floods drown; that it far transcends the love of a mother for the darling idol babe she dotes on; and transcends the uncalculating, the all-confiding, and the wonderful love of woman for the arm she leans on; that earth hath nothing equal or like it at all; that it is an infinite, eternal and unchangeable love.

I do not know, and I am sure I shall never be able to know, how much he loves; but this I know, that he grudges not the choicest treasure in the universe to save it. The Father so loves it as to give his own, his only, his well-beloved Son to humiliation and shame, and pain and death to deliver it; the Son so loves it that he is willing to breast and brave the whole brunt and burden of Almighty wrath that it might be spared; the Holy Spirit so loves it that he is willing to take up his abode in it, and put up with many a wrong, and many a sore indignity, that he may save it from sin and woe, and win it back again to holiness and God; and angels so love it that thrill after thrill of holy joy flashes like the electric pulses through all their shining ranks as the news is borne home to heaven that another and another soul is saved.

I cannot tell aright the worth of the soul. I am not able to grapple with this great idea, it is too high for me. But know its value to be such that all heaven, on the one hand, and all hell on the other, are stirred and excited, and that there is carrying on between them a keen and deadly contest for who shall have the prized possession. I know that the devil and all his legions have been watching and working and warring, by day and night, for these six thousand years that they may wrest it away everlastingly from its allegiance to its God. I know that God the Father, and Christ the Saviour, and the Holy Spirit, the Sanctifier—the Triune Jehovah Sabbaoth does from his high throne make bear his arm of salvation; that he musters his angels and marshals his cherubim, and yokes his chariots, and bids them forth to watch over the heirs of salvation, to defend them from the wiles of the devil, to lead them in the good and right way, to minister to their necessities, to console them in their sorrows, to help them on their journeys to their heavenly home.

Said I not well that it is a goodly value at which the soul is valued?—Dr. Davidson.

The Wife.

Only let a woman be sure she is precious to her husband—not useful, not valuable, not conveniently simple, but lovely and beloved; let her be the recipient of his polite and hearty attentions, let her feel that her cares and love are noticed, appreciated and returned; let her opinion be asked, her approval sought, and her judgment respected in matters of which she is cognizant; in short, let her only be loved, honored and cherished, in fulfillment of the marriage vow, and she will be to her husband, her children and society, a well-spring of happiness. She will bear pain, and toil and anxiety, for her husband's love to her is a tower and a fortress. Shielded and sheltered therein, and adversity will have lost its sting. She may suffer, but sympathy will dull the edge of sorrow. A house with love in it—and, by love I mean love expressed in words, and deeds, for I have not one spark of faith in love that never crops out—it is to a house as a person to a machine, one is life, the other mechanism—the unloved woman may have bread just as light, a house just as tidy as the other, but the latter has a spring of beauty about her, a joyousness, a penetrating and pervading brightness to which the former is an entire stranger. The deep happiness of her heart shines out in her face. She gleams over. It is airy, graceful and warm welcoming with her presence; she is full of devices and plots, and sweet surprises for husband and family. She has never done with the romance and poetry of life. She herself is a lyric poem setting herself to all pure and gracious melodies. Humble house-hold ways and duties have for her a golden significance. The prize makes her calling high, and the end sanctifies the means.

"Love is Heaven, and Heaven is love."—Sel.

The Druids of Ireland.

Among the mysteries which darkly loom out of the antiquity of ancient Ireland, the origin and office of the Druids are most mysterious. Yet the mention of pre-Christian Ireland at once suggests the mystic figure of the Druids veiled in the shadows of a thousand dim traditions, and surrounded by the lurid light of legends born of the awe and superstitious fancies of the past. Not only in Ireland, but in Celtic Britain and Gaul, was the Druid a prominent feature of society. Sixty years after the birth of our Saviour the Roman Pliny speaks of the Druids of Britain as famous among their brethren for their skill in the arts of magic and the darker sorts of scientific wisdom. He could not speak of the Druids of Ireland for the simple reason that neither Roman conquest nor, to any considerable degree, Roman knowledge extended to this country. The British Druids, we are told, had their principal seat in the island of Anglesea, and spent their time chiefly in the cultivation and exercise of their magical arts. Whence came the beginning of their knowledge no one knows. Some say it was founded on half-forgotten fragments of the doctrines of the Greek Pythagoras; others that it had an origin more ancient and arose with the wise men of the distant and fabulous East. Whatever may have been the origin of their doctrines and rites, when they first appear to us we find them famous for their learning and magic, and exercising an extremely powerful influence on people among whom they dwelt. With a reverence for nature, which has become one of their traditional characteristics, they considered it unlawful, in the celebration of their rites, to shut out from the view of the worshiper the works of the Deity whom he worshiped by the use of temples "made with hands." The oak was especially sacred in their eyes, and under its shadow they performed their mysteries and paid their gloomy tribute of adoration to the "unknown God." This tree they regarded in its beauty, in its strength, and its magnificent manifestation of the prolific power of nature, as a symbol of Deity. For the mistletoe they had also a particular regard. One of their most solemn ceremonies was that of cutting it down from the oak around which it clung.

The oak was regarded as the favorite tree of the divinity Tutanes, who appears to have been the same as the Phoenician god Baal, or the sun, worshiped under so many different names by the various pagan nations of antiquity. When the period of winter solstice arrived, the ancients, accompanied by their priests, the Druids, sallied forth with great pomp and rejoicings to gather the mistletoe which grew upon its trunk and wide-spread branches, which, in addition to the glorious reverence with which it was regarded, was believed to possess great curative powers. When the oak was reached on which the mistletoe grew, two white bulls were bound to the tree, and the chief Druid, clothed in white (the emblem of purity), ascended, and, with a golden knife, cut the sacred plant, which was caught by another priest in the folds of his robe. The bulls were then sacrificed, and various festivities followed. The mistletoe thus gathered was divided into small portions and distributed among the people, who hung up the sprays over the entrances to their dwellings, as a propitiation and shelter to the sylvan deities during the season of frost and cold. These rites in connection with the mistletoe were retained throughout the Roman dominion in Britain and Ireland, and also for a long period under the sovereignty of the Jutes, Saxons, and Angles.

Among the Irish Druids the "sepulchral yew" was the most sacred of trees. They had a particular regard for the oak, but they reverenced the yew. Its somber and self-contained aspect seemed fittingly to mark it as the emblem of a deity who to them was a being of isolation and gloom. The mountain ash or roan-tree, was also esteemed sacred, and was used in many of their ceremonies. Among these was a trial by ordeal. In order to test the innocence of an accused woman (this particular kind of ordeal seems to have been confined to women), she was obliged to lick an adz of bronze which had been heated in a fire made of roan-tree or black-thorn. It is unnecessary to say that the superstition in favor of blackthorn still survives though it may not be so generally known that the roan-tree is still the object of a regard more reverential. In some parts of Ireland it is the custom for cautious housewives to encircle their churns with branches of the plant, as a protection against the malignancy of witch and fairy; and for the purpose of helping the quantity and quality of their butter.

"Of the religious belief of the Druids," says a recent writer, "we have no distinct knowledge. We know from the places selected by them for the celebration of their rites, and from their adoption as sacred emblems of certain trees and plants, that their regard for the manifestations of nature must have taken in some sort the form of worship, whether of nature itself or of something beyond it; and we know that this something they endeavored to propitiate by sacrifices, some say by the sacrifice of human beings. Of this, however, as far at least as regards the Irish Druids, there is no particle of evidence. That they did sacrifice, however, is certain. The Crommlechs or Druid's altars, so frequent through out the country, are evidence of this."

There was poetry as well as mystery in the doctrines of the Druids. They appreciated the bright as well as the dark side of things, and the very gloominess of their rites would seem to indicate their reverence for a deity, who to them was veiled in darkness.

Fire was an element which would seem to have been held especially sacred by the Druids. Of the reason of this we are not absolutely certain. It may have been because it was originally drawn from the sun, the husband, so to speak, of productive nature, and the most glorious representative of the Deity, who was the author of all things. It is stated, but it seems incorrectly, that the ancient Irish, like the Persians, were sun-worshipers.

Among their other qualifications, the Druids professed to have the gift of prophecy. A story is told of King Dathi, the last pagan monarch of Ireland, bearing a singular resemblance to one related by Shakespeare of Macbeth. Entering the royal chamber one morning, a Druid saluted Dathi as king of Alba (Scotland.) "I am not king of Alba," said the king, "why call me so?" "But you shall be," said the Druid; "you will invade the country and take possession of it, and not only will you be king of Alba, but of Britain and Gaul." Conquest being thus so confidently suggested, the king arose and consulted his counselors, telling them what the Druid had said. An expedition was at once set on foot for the invasion of the countries named, which, we are informed, he overran and conquered; but, in the height of his triumph, he was killed by lightning at the foot of the Alps. How like the story of Macbeth and the witches, who at first had hailed him as "king that shall be," but against whom afterwards he had such good reason to exclaim:

"Those juggling fiends—
That palter us in a double sense,
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope."

The Druids did not immediately disappear with the introduction of Christianity. Mention of them is made as existing in isolated parts of the country long after St. Columbkill, who flourished in the latter part of the sixth century. To this day they have left, in a thousand popular practices and superstitions, traces of their power. Closely identified with the pre-Christian past of Ireland. they are yet so intangible to the eye of the historian that they appear little more than the outlines of grave and solemn figures—half veiled in mystery and gloom—and almost as awful to the vague conceptions of our imagination as the shadowy apparitions seen by the affrighted peasant on the German mountains.—Forney's Press.

Little Dog Tray.

BY A. S. FISK.

Ah! very polite was little dog Tray,
Yet somehow he managed to have his own way
In spite of his bows, and giving his paw,
The daintiest bits were conveyed to his maw.

Mrs. Pussy worked hard to provide for her kits,
So of course she was glad of some milk and small bits;
But Tray to the saucer would quietly slip
And lapping the milk, leave them scarcely a sip.

One chill day in autumn Sir Tray coming in Found Puss and her kittens, all cosy and trim,
Curled up on the hearth rug in front of the fire,
To share in their comfort was now his desire.

Said little dog Tray to pussy cat Mew,
"How do you, madam; how do you do?"
Said pussy cat Mew to little dog Tray,
"I do the best, sir, when you keep away."

Result of a Little Seed.

Gertrude was reading an interesting book on missions that she had borrowed from the Sunday-school library, when her little sister Josie came and asked to look at the pictures. Gertrude very obligingly showed her several pictures, and told her a great deal that was interesting about missions and missionaries and how much good they did.

"Sister, could I do any thing for missions?"

"Yes, Josie, you can pray for their success, and you can give what little money you may have, to help support them," answered Gertrude.

"But would my money do any good?"

"Certainly, if God should bless it," was the reply. "Christ blessed a few loaves and fishes, and they sufficed to feed a great multitude; and, besides, there were twelve basketfuls left."

"But, then, sister," observed the thoughtful little girl, "I would give so very little."

"That would make no difference, should God choose to bless it. I was reading, just the other day, of a lady who was preparing and finding a box to send to a missionary in India, when a child brought her one cent. She took the cent, bought a tract for it, and put the tract in the box. That very tract was afterwards given to a chief in Burmah, and led him to Christ. Being converted, the chief told the story of his great happiness and his new God to all his friends. Many of them also believed and cast away their idols. A church was built there, and a missionary was sent there to preach. The consequence was that fifteen hundred persons were converted to Christianity; all through the influence of that little tract, which cost just one cent."

"Then I will give every cent I get to the mission cause," said little Josie. —Kind Words.

Jenny and her Master.

A gentleman who has never owned any other horses than those he raised himself, and who seems to appreciate their proud and tender natures, so swift to resent an injury, yet so responsive to kindness, tells some incidents about his little bay mare, Jenny, a "high-strung," nervous creature, who, under rough treatment, would probably have turned out vicious, if not unmanageable. She is very quick in her resentments, and will not bear a touch of the whip, even from him, fond as she is of him. She has never been struck but three or four times in her life, and then did something to revenge herself, and would even now, though very old, overturn or run away with the person who should inflict such an outrage upon her. The only smart blow she ever received was from a physician, who borrowed her to go a few miles, and, wishing to seem in desperate haste, while passing the house of a rival doctor, gave her a cut, whereupon she whirled quick as lightening, dumped him into the mud, and then stood and surveyed him. "It seemed to be no viciousness," said Jenny's master, "but she was simply indignant at a blow; she took it as an insult."

One curious thing he tells about her is, that she will never draw a hay-cart; neither will her colt. Nobby. On no account will either of them move; no coaxing or arguing will induce them, and, of course, blows are out of the question. The family are divided in opinion as to the reason, some insisting that something about the cart frightens the animals, while the others assert that, being used to a carriage, they feel above it; for why should not Jenny and Nobby have their false pride as well as human beings?

Once Jenny received a terrible injury in consequence of being frightened and running away, the shaft of the wagon penetrating her flesh to such a depth that force was required to draw it out. She suffered agonies from the fearful wound, and by the time that had been carefully treated, and was showing symptoms of healing, she seemed like one on the verge of brain fever. She could not sleep, and her great, piteous eyes were turned appealingly for help. Just at this crisis, when everybody said that she must be killed, to put her out of her misery and save her from a lingering death, her master quietly laid her head over his shoulder, and began to soothe her; and almost immediately the poor, worn-out creature dropped asleep, and when she awoke was visibly calmed and refreshed. Thenceforward that man went out daily, and sat there in the stall by her side, and supported her heavy head on his shoulder to let her sleep, and so continued to do so until the crisis was past and she began to recover.—Our Dumb Animals.

Postage Stamps.

In printing postage stamps steel plates are used on which 200 stamps are engraved. Two men cover them with the colored inks and pass them to a man and girl, who print them with large rolling hand-presses. After the sheets upon which the two hundred stamps are engraved have dried sufficiently they are sent into another room to be gummed. The gum used for this purpose is a peculiar composition, made of the powder of dried potatoes and other vegetables mixed with water, which is better than any other kind, for instance, gum arabic, which cracks the paper badly. The paper is also of a peculiar texture, somewhat similar to that used for bank notes. After having been again dried, on little racks, which are fanned about an hour, they are put between sheets of paste-board and pressed in hydraulic presses, capable of applying a weight of 200 tons. If a single stamp is torn or mutilated, the whole sheet is burned. About 500,000 are burned every week from this cause. For the past twenty years not a single sheet has been lost, such care is taken in counting them. During the process of manufacturing the sheets are counted eleven times.

—The Freemasons of West Virginia have been distinguished by being selected by some of their ring in office to lay the corner-stone of the new Capitol at Wheeling.

—An Indiana friend sends us an instance of the power of secretism in courts where even the almost omnipotent rail-road had to yield. It occurred in this way as our correspondent says: "During the strike of the locomotive engineers in Ohio and Indiana a year or two ago, the striker freely resorted to the destruction of life and property. One of the strikeres at the Union depot, Indianapolis, discharged his pistol at a volunteer engineer, and wounded him. The assassin was immediately grabbed by a policeman who stood behind him in the crowd. Was he punished? Not much. The power of a wealthy rail-road corporation was unable to cope successfully with secretism. A packed jury, and a mock trial in our criminal court defeated the ends of justice. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is probably the most thoroughly secret society among the trades organizations.

The Wesleyan adds another to the long column of lodge deceptions under the mask of charity: "We are well acquainted with a family in this city, whose son joined the Masons, and after some years was taken sick, and was much expense to his parents. But he assured them that they would get the expenses of his sickness all back. They all thought the Anti-masonic statement that Masonry was not as charitable as a saving's bank, (because it pays back all paid in with interest,) was a hard saying. The young man died. The Masons asked to take charge of the funeral. They bought the coffin, ordered the carriages, and attended in a body. It made an impression on the neighborhood. So many carriages, and such a fine coffin! The charity was sublime! A few days later and the gentlemen of the craft sent in a bill of nearly two hundred dollars to the bereaved family, to pay for coffin and carriages. Other cases in this city and elsewhere, which have come to our knowledge, we defer for want of space. But that a Masonic lodge can show any great charity with lodge-funds, is an exploded absurdity, which Masons would do themselves credit to acknowledge."

—The Anti-masons of Guthrie county, Iowa, deserve mention as having been first in that State with an American ticket for county offices. The action of Cerro Gordo county was mentioned a week or two since, but the friends there were not the first, we find, with their ticket.

THIRD OR MASTER MASON'S DEGREE.

OPENING CEREMONIES.

Worshipful Master:—(one rap) Brother Senior Warden, will you be off or from?

Senior Warden:—From.

Worshipful Master:—From what and to what?

Senior Warden:—From the degree of a Fellow Craft to that of a Master Mason.

Worshipful Master:—Are all present Master Masons?

Senior Warden:—All present are Master Masons, Worshipful. (Should there be any Fellow Crafts present they are politely requested to retire, which they do as in opening a lodge of Fellow Crafts.)

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Warden, as a further evidence you will cause the brothers Senior and Junior Deacons to approach the West, receive from them the pass, cause them to proceed upon your right and left, collect the pass from the brethren and convey it to the East.

The Deacons approach the Senior Warden's station, as in the second degree, whisper into his ear the pass of a Master Mason, which is Tubal-Cain; they then go through the same performance exactly as they did in collecting the pass of a Fellow Craft and the Master makes the same response as before.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Warden, are you a Master Mason?

Senior Warden:—I am.

Worshipful Master:—What makes you a Master Mason?

Senior Warden:—My obligation.

Worshipful Master:—Where were you made a Master Mason?

Senior Warden:—In a regularly constituted lodge of Master Masons.

Worshipful Master:—What number constitutes a lodge of Master Masons?

Senior Warden:—Three or more.

Worshipful Master:—When of three only, of whom do they consist?

Senior Warden:—Of the Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens.

Worshipful Master:—The Junior Warden's station?

Senior Warden:—In the South, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(two raps) Brother Junior Warden, the Senior Warden's station?

Junior Warden:—In the West, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Warden, the Worshipful Master's station?

Senior Warden:—In the East, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—Why in the East?

Senior Warden:—As the sun rises in the East, etc., etc.

Here follows the exact language in every particular used in the second degree with the exception that of course the lodge is declared open in form on the third degree. The sign made at this part of the ceremony is the due-guard and sign of a Master Mason as represented by the figure.

Due-guard Master Mason.

The due-guard of a Master Mason is made by holding out both hands in front of the body and on a line with the lower button of the vest, with fingers extended and palms turned downward. This is in allusion to the manner of holding the hands while taking the Master Mason's obligation; "Both hands resting on the Holy Bible, square and compass," etc.

Now drop the left hand carelessly and draw the right across the body, fingers still extended and palm downward. See Fig. This is the penal sign and is in allusion to the penalty of the obligations of a Master Mason, "Having my body severed in twain, my bowels taken from thence," etc. See Master Mason's obligation, page . The Senior Deacon in arranging the altar lifts both points of the compass above the square.

Penal Sign, Master Mason.

The Worshipful Master gives three raps in this degree, the Senior Warden three, and the Junior Warden three, when the lodge is declared open and the members seated in the usual manner.

ADMISSION OF VISITING BRETHREN.

Should any strange brethren desire to visit the lodge now is the usual and indeed the proper time for them to do so. The stranger approaches the ante-room door and hands the tyler a card or slip of paper on which is written his name, the name and number of his lodge and the town or village where located; as for instance should I desire to visit a strange lodge I should hand the tyler a card inscribed as follows: Edmond Ronayne, Keystone lodge, No. 639, Chicago. The tyler gives this card to the Junior Deacon, and the latter having obtained permission to approach the East, hands it to the Worshipful Master who appoints a committee of two, usually a Past Master and some newly made Master Mason, to repair into the preparation or committee room where the brother is strictly and searchingly examined as to whether he is a Master Mason. The examination always takes place as follows: The committee procure a Bible, square and compass and they with the visiting brother, placing their right hands on the Bible repeat the following oath, called by Masons the TEST OATH.

I, John Smith, I, H. Duval, I, E. Ronayne, of my own free-will and accord do hereby and hereon most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear that I have been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice, passed to the degree of Fellow Craft and raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason in a regularly constituted lodge of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons and that I am not under the sentence of suspension or expulsion and know of no just reason why I should be, so help me God.

Having taken the "test oath" the committee and visitor resume their seats and the examination is proceeded with and is conducted as the senior member of the committee sees fit, but the usual method is for the visiting brother to be examined in the leeture of the 1st section of each degree as given on pages . Being satisfied that the brother is a Master Mason they return into the lodge, approach the altar, make the due-guard and sign of the degree and report:

Committee:—Worshipful Master, your committee have examined brother E. Ronayne of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, and find him a Master Mason. They then take their seats.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will retire and introduce brother E. Ronayne.

The Senior Deacon takes his rod retires into the ante-room and brother E. Ronayne having put on a white apron he is conducted into the lodge and before the altar by the Senior Deacon who says:

Senior Deacon:—Worshipful Master, I have the pleasure of introducing to you brother E. Ronayne of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago. The Worshipful Master rises to his feet, gives three raps to call up the entire lodge and says:

Worshipful Master:—Brother E. Ronayne, I have the pleasure of introducing to you the officers and members of—Lodge, No. —, together with our visiting brethren. Hope you will make yourself at home while with us and will visit us again whenever convenient.

The lodge is then seated and the visitor is conducted by the Senior Deacon to his seat. Should the visitor be a Past Master or Grand officer he is invited to take a seat in the East either to the right or left of the Worshipful Master.

The meeting of a lodge of Masons is called by the craft a "communication" and is of two kinds, "regular" and "special." A "regular communication" is that prescribed by the by-laws, as for instance the "regular communications" of Keystone Lodge No. 639, were held since Oct., 1871, on the 1st and 3rd Wednesdays of each and every month, while a "special communication" could be called at any time by order of the Worshipful Master. All the ordinary business of a lodge is transacted at a "regular," such as receiving petitions, balloting for candidates for degrees and membership etc., while only that particular business for which the lodge is specially called can be transacted at a "special." In order to render this exposure complete in every particular and be a reliable guide to the uninitiated, I shall give here the correct mode of keeping the Record or Minute book and of conducting the usual business of a lodge. It being a "regular communication," and of course the lodge being opened in the Master Mason's degree the Worshipful Master says:

Brother Secretary, this being a "regular communication," the first business in order will be reading the minutes of our last "regular communication." The Secretary then reads the minutes as follows:

Minutes.	Regular communication of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons held in their Hall, No. 62 and 64, N. Clark St., Chicago, July 2nd, 1873, A. L. 5873.
Officers present.	E. Ronayne, Worshipful Master; Morris Pflaum, Senior Warden pro tem; Oscar Eckvall, Junior Warden; Fred Becker, Treasurer; Wm. Aiken, Secretary; S. M. Samuelson, Senior Deacon; H. S. Anderson, Junior Deacon; and James Anderson, tyler pro tem.
Members present.	Brothers Prince, Cronin, Loehr, Burkhard, Ross, Morbeck and W. Bro. Dixon.
Vistors present.	See Lodge Register (a book kept in the ante-room.)
	The lodge was opened in form in the first, second, and third degrees in Masonry.
	The minutes of the last "regular communication" of June 4th and of the "special" of June 11th, were read and declared approved.
Petitions.	A petition in form was read from Rev. Septimus Jones, for initiation. He comes recommended by brothers Ronayne, Dixon and Prince. The petition was received and referred to a committee consisting of brothers Anderson, Loehr, and Ross.
Committees.	The committee oppointed on the petition of Mr. Nicolaby for initiation reported favorable, whereupon the committee was discharged and ballot ordered.
	Also the committee on the application of Mr. Wood, reported unfavorable, the report was received, the committee discharged and ballot ordered.

Balloting. And the ballot being spread on the application of Mr. Nicolaby and being found clear, he was declared duly elected to receive the Entered Apprentice degree as conferred in this lodge. The ballot was also spread on the application of brother Schriber for advancement to the 2nd degree and being found clear, he was declared duly elected to receive the Fellow Craft degree to be conferred in this lodge.

The ballot was also spread on the application of Mr. Wood for the degrees and being found not clear he was declared rejected.

Communications. Communications were read from the various sister lodges announcing the receipt of petitions for degrees and membership, all of which were received and placed on file

New Business. A bill of thirty dollars for rent of hall during the month ending May 31st. was received from Germania Lodge. Also a bill of twenty dollars from Bro. D. Lally for services as tyler from March 1st to June 1st inclusive; both of which were referred to the Finance Committee.

Work. The lodge now dispensed with labor on the third degree and resumed on the first for work, and Mr. Andrew Nicolaby being in waiting and having satisfactorily answered the usual constitutional questions, he was duly prepared, presented and regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice. He also received the benefit of the lecture and paid the usual fee of $15. Bro. Schriber, an Entered Apprentice of this lodge was then examined in the ritual of that degree and retired. See page—.

The lodge now dispensed with labor on the first degree and resumed on the second and Bro. Schriber being in waiting was duly prepared, presented and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. He also received the benefit of a lecture and paid the usual fee of $15.

The lodge now dispensed with labor on the second degree and resumed on the third, and there being no farther business the lodge was closed in form on the third, second and first degrees of Masonry.

WILLIAM AIKEN, Sec'y.

Receipts,	Rev. S. Jones' petition,	$5.00
"	Bro. A. Nicolaby's initiation	$15.00
"	Bro. Schriber's second degree,	15.00
	Total	35.00

Approved, EMMOND RONAYNE, W. M., Aug., 6, 1873, A.L 5873.

Worshipful Master:—Brethren, you have heard the minutes of our "regular communication" of July 2nd. Are there any alterations or amendments? (He pauses for a few seconds.) If not they shall be declared approved as read. (Another short pause.) They are so declared, brother Secretary. (one rap.)

SECOND ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—(Reading and referring petitions.) Are there any petitions on your table, brother Secretary? The Secretary rising to his feet says, I have two petitions, Worshipful, [or one as the case may be] as follows:

FORM OF PETITION.

HALL OF KEYSTONE LODGE, NO. 639, A. F. & A. M.

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, A. F. & A. M:

The petition of the subscriber represents that having long entertained a favorable opinion of your ancient Institution, he is desirous, if found worthy, of being admitted a member thereof; and if admitted, he promises a cheerful compliance with all the ancient usages and customs of the Fraternity. He has not petitioned an other Lodge for the degrees in Masonry.

Recommended by Brothers M. Pflaum. Ben F. Prince. O. Eckvall. — His place of Business is 168 Randolph st. " Place of residence is 68 Fourth Ave " Age is 34 years. " Occupation, Merchant.

MORRIS DAVID.

The other is the petition in form of Mr. J. C. Wickers who comes regularly recommended by Bro's Ronayne, Anderson and Becker; his place of business is corner of Fourth St. and Milwaukee Ave.; occupation that of a tailor; age, 27 years. The usual fee of five dollars accompanies each of these petitions.

Worshipful Master:—Brethren, you have heard the petitions of Mr. Morris David and Mr. Wickers; what is your pleasure with them?

Bro. Samuelson:—Worshipful Master, I move that the petitions be received and committees appointed.

Worshipful Master:—If there are no objections that will be taken as the sense of the lodge, and I will appoint on the petition of Mr. David, Bro's Cronin, Burkhard and Ross; and on that of Mr. Wickers, Bro's Becker, Loehr and Dixon.

THIRD ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—(Reports of committee on candidates. Brother Secretary, are there any reports on your desk?

Secretary:—The committee on the petition of Rev. Septimus Jones consisting of Bro's Loehr, Anderson and Ross, have all reported favorable, (the report must always be in writing); handing the petition to the Worshipful Master.

Worshipful Master:—Brethren you have heard the report of yonr committee on the application of Rev. Mr. Jones to be made a Mason; what is your pleasure with it?

Bro. Becker:—I move that the report be received, the committee discharged and ballot ordered.

Worshipful Master:—If there are no objections that shall be taken as the sense of the lodge.

FOURTH ORDER OE BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—Report of standing committee.

Secretary:—There are none, Worshipful.

FIFTH ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—(balloting.) Any balloting on your desk, brother Secretary?

Secretary:—The ballot is due on the petition of Mr. Jones for initiation, and on the application of Bro. Schriber for advancement to the third degree and of Bro. Nicolaby to the second degree.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, prepare the ballot box. Brethren, you are now about to cast your ballot on the petition of the Rev. Septimus Jones for initiation. He comes recommended by Bro's Ronayne, Dixon and Prince. The committee, consisting of Bro's Anderson, Loehr and Ross, have all reported favorable. His age is forty years; his occupation is minister of the Gospel; his residence is No. 1001 —— street. The white ball elects and the black rejects, look well to your ballots and make no mistake.

The Senior Deacon having prepared the ballot box, which is a small box about eight inches long and five or six inches wide having two drawers in it, the front one having a slide in the end of it which he raises up exposing to view the black and white balls mixed and from which a small hopper leads into the other drawer through which the ball is passed. He opens the rear drawer (next the handle) which he presents to the Worshipful Master, showing him that it is quite empty and into which the Worshipful Master drops his ball through the hopper above described. The Senior Deacon then passes the box around the hall, presenting it to each member who puts his hand in through the slide, lifts his ball and drops it in through the little hopper, and having thus gone the entire round of the lodge the Worshipful Master asks, "Have all the brethren voted? if so I declare the ballot closed. Bro. Senior Deacon, you will display the ballot for inspection." The Senior Deacon now takes the ballot box first to the Junior Warden in the South and then to the Senior Warden in the West, each of whom examines the second compartment to see if any black balls are cast, and lastly he presents it to the Worshipful Master, who before he examines it, gives one rap with his gavel and enquires as follows:

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Junior Warden, how do you find the ballot inthe South?

Junior Warden:—(there being no black balls) Clear in the South, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—And how in the West, brother Senior Warden?

Senior Warden:—Clear in the West, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(examining the ballot box) And clear in the East. I therefore declare the Rev. Mr. Jones duly elected to receive the Entered Apprentice degree as conferred in this lodge

One black ball is enough to cause the rejection of a candidate in any or all of the degrees or even for membership; and hence should a black ball appear in the box of course the response in each case would be "not clear," and the Master would declare the candidate rejected. Another mode of balloting is for the Senior Deacon, after presenting the box to the Worshipful Master to place it on the altar and each brother according to rank stepping in front of the altar and making the due-guard and sign of Master Mason deposits his ballot as above described and retires to his seat. It is a "landmark" that every member present must vote on the admission of a candidate whether for degrees or membership.

The same routine is gone through with in the case of Bro's Schriber and Nicolaby, and no black balls appearing the former is declared duly elected to receive the third degree and the latter the second.

SIXTH ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—(reading communications) Bro. Secretary are there any communications on your table?

The Secretary now reads all communications from sister lodges announcing the names of those who have been proposed in each lodge for initiation or membership since the last "regular" and the Worshipful Master enquires: Brethren, you have heard the communications from the various sister lodges; what is your pleasure with them? (pausing for a few seconds) If there are no objections they shall be received and placed on file and the rejections entered on the Black List.

Should there be any further communications, such as letters or circulars from the Grand Secretary, dispensations from the Grand Master etc., etc., they are now read and always ordered, received and placed on file.

SEVENTH ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—Unfinished business.

Secretary:—There is none, Worshipful.

EIGTH ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—New business.

Secretary:—There is none.

NINTH ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Worshipful Master:—Work is next in order.

CHAPTER III.

INITIATION FIRST OR ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE.

It is a well established fact amounting to a "landmark" that "no man or body of men can make innovations in the body of Masonry," notwithstanding this, however, many important changes have been made in the ritual of all the degrees especially since the time of Capt. Wm. Morgan's celebrated exposure in 1826, the object being as stated by Masonic authors "to rid the institution of as much 'Morganry' as possible." The following pages therefore will contain the amended and correct work or as it is technically termed "the standard work."

The lodge being opened in the third degree it must be reduced down to the first for initiation which is done as follows:

[Contenued next Week.]

Religious Intelligence.

—There are 520 vacant churches in the Southern Presbyterian church. There are 203 preachers, who are either superannuated, or are professors, teachers, or without charge. The whole number of churches is 1,797, and the whole number of preachers, including licentiates, is 1,084. Consequently 881 preachers do about all the pastorial work done for the church.

—It is said that $350,000 is expended in New York city alone by churches for music, one paying as high as $15,000. In the exigences of missionary boards, and the large and numerous fields for Christian benevolence, such expenditures seem not only extravagant but sinful. It seems to prove that these churches have not yet all learned the sweetest, noblest lessons of the Christian life, self-denial for the good of others.

—The Old Catholics purpose to make their separation from Ultramontanism complete by abolishing the rule requiring celebacy of the priests.

—Rev. Joseph, Travis for years a conference superintendent in the Free Methodist church in Illinois and Iowa, is soon to become pastor of the church of that denomination in Albion, N. Y.

—Mr. Garter, who labors among London thieves, burglars and pickpockets, has gathered a church of eighteen hundred members from these outcasts of society. His wife instructs sixteen hundred mothers, meeting four hundred at a time, who, without her labors would receive no instruction at all.

—Rev. Newman Hall, of London, many will regret to learn, has become so broken down in health that he has been compelled under medical advice to take up his residence in Switzerland. He was able, however, to lay, on Tuesday, the 28th ult., the crowning stone on the tower which has been erected by his new church, Surrey Chapel, in honer of the lamented Lincoln, and the emancipation of the slaves in the United States.

—Rev Thomas Ryder, a Baptist pastor of Nottingham, England, traveling for his health in this country, was found dead in his bed on Thursday morning last at the residence of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, in Hartford, Conn., where he was visiting.

—The committee of eighty Chicago laymen appointed on the ways and means to secure a revival of religion here has decided to hold a daily union prayer-meeting in Farwell Hall in which all the churches and pastors are requested to participate, with a view to awaken the religious element of the city to activity and duty in the cause of Christ as a first step.

—A Christian native, one of the returned students from America, is now at the head of the educational department in Japan. This gives new strength to missionaries in that country.

—The Boston Ministerial Association, at a recent meeting, adopted the following resolution in relation to Sabbath observance during the Centennial Exposition: "That in our judgment the buildings of the Exhibition should be closed on the holy day of rest; that the most creditable exhibition which we can make to our foreign guests is the Christian Sabbath, to whose general observance we owe so much of our grandeur and prosperity; and that to open the buildings of the Exhibition on the sacred day, and thus to invite the multitudes from the neighboring towns and cities, would constitute an insolence and iniquity sadly discordant with gratitude to Almighty God which the season should inspire."

Home and Health Hints.

Death in the Dishcloth.

A lady says in the Rural World that during this month and next, when some of you are sure to be down with typhoid fever; when neighbors are neglecting their own work to nurse you; when doctors are hunting in cellars and old drains for the cause, let me whisper in your ear—look to your dishcloths. If they be black and stiff and smell like a "boneyard," it is enough—throw them in the fire, and henceforth and forever wash your dishes with cloths that are white, cloths that you can see through, and see if you ever have that disease again. There are sometimes other causes, but I have smelled a whole houseful of fever in one "dish-rag." I had some neighbors once—clever, good sort of folks; one fall four of them were sick at one time with typhoid fever. The doctors ordered the vinegar barrels whitewashed, and threw about forty cents worth of carbolic acid in the swill-pail and departed. I went into the kitchen to make gruel—I needed a dishcloth and looked about and looked about and found several, and such "rags!" I burned them all, and called the daughter of the house to get me a dishcloth. She looked round on the tables; "Why," said she, "there was about a dozen here this morning;" and she looked in the woodbox and on the mantelpiece, and felt in the dark corner of the cupboard. "Well," I said, "I saw some old, black, rotten rags lying round and I burned them, for there is death in such dishcloths as those, and you must never use such again." I "took turns" at nursing that family four weeks, and I believe those dirty dishcloths were the cause of all that hard work.

Rural Beauty.—If I have no coaches and horses I can at least hang a tracery of vine-leaves along my porch, so exquisite and delicate that no sculptor can match it; if I have no conservatory with its wonders, yet the sun and I together can build a tangled coppice of some blooming things in my door-yard, of which every tiny leaflet shall be a miracle. Nay, I can make my home, however small it may be, so complete in its simplicity, so fitted to its offices, so governed by neatness, so embowered by wealth of leaves and flowers, that no riches in the world can add to it without damaging its rural grace, and my gardeners—sunshine, frost and showers are their names—shall work for me with no crusty reluctance, but with an abandon and a zeal that ask only gratitude for it.—Donald G. Mitchell.

It is said that lining the walls, ceiling, and windows of a cellar with four or five thicknesses of old newspapers, pasted on with strong size, will prevent roots and other articles stored therein from freezing.

A section of wire-cloth, graded from No. 20 to No. 30, is the best material to strike matches upon.

Two cords of hard wood are about equal in heatgiving qualities to one ton of bituminous coal.

If the sink spout freezes, insert a piece of lead pipe, into which pour boiling water through a funnel. Keep the pipe constantly pressed against the ice.

When you buy a new lamp chimney, put it in a vessel of cold water, set it on a stove and let it boil. You can never break that chimney unless you throw a flat-iron at it; and won't even then if you miss it.

To Prevent Tin Rusting —Rub fresh lard over every part of the dish, and then put it in a hot oven and heat it thoroughly. Thus treated, any tinware may be used in water constantly and remain bright and free from rust indefinitely.

Farm and Garden.

How to Build a Hen House:—We will not try to name all the requisites for chickens as to food, but consider the not less important features of health. These are fresh air, a medium temperature, and cleanly habitation. To secure these we give our plan for a house as follows: Take sills 4x6 inches fourteen feet long for a house twelve feet in length, allowing the sills to project one foot beyond the walls of the building, and for end sills same size by ten feet in length. On this erect a frame six feet high; cover the walls with inch boards, and the north side of the roof with shingles or matched flooring, and for the south side of the roof, which may be made a little less than the north side by being made a little steeper, take strips one inch by three and groove them on each side near one edge with a groove sufficient to receive the edge of eight by ten glass, which can be bought cheap by the box, and one box (fifty feet) is enough for one house, which will only cost about $3.50 or $4. The strips one inch by three form the rafters, and the glass, which should lap one-quarter or half inch, on the roof. This gives at the same time light, heat, and dryness, three essential properties for a good hen-house. The roosts should be made on the north side. The remaining requisites, fresh air and cleanliness, are secured by arranging for raising or lowering the whole house by levers. In cold weather it should set on the ground, and when the weather is warmer raise it to secure a current of air under it, and thus dry the ground.—Journal of Agriculture.

The use of the roller in fall on winter wheat is almost injurious. It smooths the ground, leaving no ridges to protect the plant through winter, and by packing the surface the soil is more apt to freeze and thaw out the plant. The roller may do good by making the soil moister after sowing; but considering how much more frequently it is injurious, it is safe to say that the indiscriminate use of the roller makes that impliment quite as much a damage as a benefit to American farmers. It breaks lumps, but a farmer whose fields are well drained need never have lumpy soil It is sometimes used to press stones into the ground on newly-seeded meadows; but the better way is to pick the stones off. Almost all its other uses can be better served by the cultivate and smoothing harrow. If I were to use a roller on wheat land it should be before sowing, to pack the ground as much as possible, and then drill in the grain to make the surface loose and rough.

An inexpensiue, durable method fo painting old buildings is as follows: First give them a coat of crude petroleum, which is the oil as it comes from the wells, and which can be procured for $4 or $5 per barrel. Then mix one pound of "metallic paint," which is brown or red hematite iron and finely ground, to one quart of linseed oil, and apply this over the petroleum coat. The petroleum sinks into the wood, and makes a ground-work for the iron and oil paint. The color of the iron paint is a dark red-dish brown, and is not at all disagreeable; it is very durable, and is fire-proof.

It is said that charcoal will fatten fowls, and at the same time give the meat improved tenderness and flavor. Pulverize and mix with the food. A turkey requires about a gill a day.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING OCT. 2 1875, FROM.

THE PROSPECT FOR CLUBS:—Our readers manifest considerable enthusiasm as the harvest time for the Cynosure approaches. We have not yet received our first CLUB OF TEN. But it is to come soon we think. One friend in St. Lawrence county, New York, writes that he is going to try to get one. Another in Iowa writes; "We are now doing all we can for the Cynosure, and as times improve we shall do more." Another says that after threshing, which is not yet done, there will be money forthcoming for the Cynosure from him. One friend who sends the Cynosure to a number of persons at his own expense, writes; "I intend getting up a new batch of names shortly." Another reader writes that money is scarce but that he feels that the cause advocated by the Cynosure is the cause of God, and truth, and he wants to help sustain it. Another from Michigan writes: "There is no telling you how we like the Cynosure. Our renewals each year speak for it." A reader in Wisconsin writes: "Our cause is rising." and his statement is backed by a cash remittance. A lady sends a new subscription, and writes: "I worked and prayed in earnest to get this subscription."

From the above and similar statements which we daily receive through the mail, are we not justified in talking about ENTHUSIASM; and a substantial kind of enthusiasm which has work and prayers behind it and before it? Do not fear that single new subscriptions and small clubs will not be welcome but strike boldly, earnestly, and perseveringly for a club of ten and we think you will get it.

Who will send the first club of ten subscribers?

The Quarterly Cynosure report due October, first, was by some means forgotten, but you may expect it next week.

C & N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thonsand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minncapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloc, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

Topics of the Time.

Dr. Hartzel, a presiding elder from New Orleans, made a speech full of warning in the Rock River Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church on the relations of that denomination to the freedmen. The religious bodies at the North operate to evangelize the South under disadvantages proportioned to the importance of the field to be won for Christ. First is the sectional hatred yet glowing hot in many parts of the South. The work of evangelization is of course rendered difficult, sometimes impracticable, where the Stars and Stripes are not respected. Health-seekers, or those whose work has proved unsatisfactory at home crowd themselves into places where Christian zeal should be the sole motive. More than all perhaps the growing influence of Rome is to be dreaded. Long processions, regalia, pomp, mystery are meshes of Satan's net cast over the ignorant freedmen while his superstition holds him wondering. The work is great and demands the best efforts of our churches. If any but the highest motive should have place, the fact that the future of the country depends in a measure upon the evangelization and education of these million citizens, should arouse the nation to zeal and self-sacrifice in this broad field.

The lodge display over the new State Capitol at Wheeling, West Virginia, though doubtless keenly enjoyed by aproned participants will not altogether advance its glory and fame among outsiders. How, the United Presbyterian tells us: "The Masons—by what authority we cannot conjecture—had the occasion in charge, and there was a full display of fantastics such as they alone can exhibit. A ministerial Mason made the dedicatory prayer, and a "Worthy Grand Master" the address. This latter performance may be creditable to Masons, but would reflect severely on the intelligence of children in a Sabbath-school. To be told by a "Master" who is both "Worthy" and "Grand" that rees were felled in Lebanon and floated 'around by sea to Joshua, is rather startling; and to be informed that Masonry was patronized by the Johns of the New Testament, and has been a helpmate to the Christian church, is as striking as a revelation. The whole country is humiliated by such superstition and travesty."

The elections of last week have without doubt decided one question if no more: the brand of foolishness has been put upon inflation. Let its advocates turn as heartily to redeeming the character of the nation on an honest financial basis as they have labored to fill their own pockets with irredeemable promises to pay. A practical illustration of this paper money zeal was found lately in an Indiana city where a "friend of the people" worked with a will to get together a "greenback club," but found his labor tumbled to ruins by the simple announcement that a city bank proposed to reduce its circulation one hundred thousand dollars, to be rid of paying taxes on that amount lying idle in its vaults.

The Red Cloud Investigating Commission, appointed to try the charges brought by Prof. Marsh on the conduct of Indian affairs has completed its work and submitted its long report and eight hundred pages of evidence. The charges of Prof. Marsh are sustained in full only as regards the agent Saville, whose place can be filled with a better man. Swindling has been found in pork and flour contracts but not in beef; and though sweeping changes are recommended in the Indian management ex-Secretary Delano is let off easy, probably out of that conventional respect usually shown to the departad. The management of the Interior department has not left a sweet odor in the vacated office and the President finds for a wonder that the office must seek the man. Ex-Governor Dennison of Ohio has refused the honor, so has Ex-Senator Pratt, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, to whom it has been offered. Chandler of Michigan is to have the same privilege if reports are true. The low esteem in which worthy men hold the office was expressed by one gentleman in this way: The present administration will continue but a year longer, and to assume control of that very peculiar department might, in its present state, lose a man his reputation, while the time is so short that he could not hold it long enough to make one. To such contempt has a cabinet office been degraded before our nation has completed her first century!

Our Foreign Letter.

LONDON, SEPT. 23, 1875.

It takes at least a month to do (as tourists say) this city, and it is perhaps presumption for one who has been here less than a week to say anything about it. I will endeavor, therefore, to write about what it has been my privilege to see without attempting to describe fully any of the many interesting places here.

Citizens of Chicago are apt to think their city is hard to beat as a railroad center or a commercial city. No doubt it is, for London has the start by many years, but it will be many more years in the ordinary course of human events before Chicago catches up. The vastness of the railway communication that centers here may be inferred from the fact that there are over one hundred stations in the eight miles square including the city. It is a very common thing to have one track pass over another, and in one place just outside the city, there are three tracts passing within a hundred feet of the same place one above another. This is not as wonderful as it would be if the cars were as high as those in America. The streets are crowded with vehicles all day long, and, I almost believe, all night long, for the sounds of the wheels comes up to our fourth story window continually. The noise is very much like that of the Niagara at a distance.

In speaking of the places or things in London, one must make very free use of the superlative degree. There is the largest bank in the world, the largest museum in the world, the largest organ, the largest crystal palace (near London) and many other largest things. The bank covers a space of three square acres, and in walking around it it looks more like a stone wall than a building, for there is not a single window in sight. The museum is a vast collection of stuffed animals, shells, minerals, fossils, mummies, and other antiquities, books, pictures, historical documents, autographs of great men, etc., etc. Persons who are not specially interested in any branch of science cannot fail to enjoy the collection of shells, of precious stones, of ancient books and autographs. Among the precious-stones we found nearly if not all mentioned in the Bible, such as the agate, beryl, diamond, topaz, etc. Among the books ancient texts of the Bible in different languages held an important place. Among the autographs were letters of Luther, Erasmus, Calvin, Melancthon, Knox, Shakespeare, Johnson, Addison, Cromwell, kings and queens of England and other nations, Napoleon Bonaparte, Wellington, Nelson, and our own Washington and Franklin. Of course there were many others of equal importance which escaped my notice or memory.

Of all the important documents the one I was most anxious to see was Magna Charta, and I found it but did not have time to read it; in fact, to do justice to the museum, several days should be devoted to it. The organ which some claim to be the largest in the world is in the Royal Albert Hall near which is the memorial monument erected to the late Prince Consort. This monument is the most beautiful I have yet seen.

Crystal Palace is easily reached by railroads which take passengers to the very door. There is probably not another room in the world as large as this, and roof and walls are made entirely of glass and iron. The iron frame work is so slender that from a short distance it is hardly visible, and the palace seems more like the "baseless fabric of a vision" than a reality. The grounds around the building are laid out and kept with the greatest taste and care. Fountains, walks, and lawns with flower beds, and beds of foliage plants in all varieties of shape and color delight the eye. Inside the prospect is hardly less pleasing. There are several large basins with gold fish swimming in them and blue, crimson, pink and white water lilies with their large, bright green leaves floating on the surface. Then there are fountains, ferns, statues and pictures in endless variety. There are also numerous restaurants and shops of fancy ware, all displaying their goods so as to add to the general effect. One can spend a day most delightfully in this place, for when the eye grows weary the ear is entertained by the best of music.

Westminister Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral are sure to be visited by travelers. In the first are the graves and monuments of kings, poets and statesmen whose names are familiar to all. Probably no grave attracts more attention than one over which is a stone slab which has as a part of the inscription the words, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold." Under it sleeps David Livingstone, the first dissenter buried there. St. Paul's contains the remains of the Duke of Wellington, Admiral Nelson and a number distinguished artists. From the upper gallery, 300 feet above the floor, a fine view of the city may be had on a clear day, and through a hole in the floor the interior of the cathedral is seen with the people like pigmies walking about. In London tower there is a small room in which a case containing the crown jewels and regalia valued at 4,000 pounds or over $20,000. Guides in fantastic dresses conduct visitors through the whole tower in parties of fifteen or twenty and constantly crowd on each other, so great is the number of visitors. My time forbids a description of the armories and prisons with their historic reminiscences.

Last Sabbath we heard the great Spurgeon. We Americans must confess that he is a great man, and after his excellent Scriptural sermon I could not but call him "good" in the sense that the word is used. The more the regret that his position on the tobacco question is what it is. His tabernacle seats 5,000 and is crowded every Sabbath. The floor and two galleries running around the whole building were completely filled and the singing from this vast crowd with just one man to lead is congregational singing indeed.

Secret Societies.

A correspondent, alluding especially to the "Patrons of Husbandry," calls their association "the organized moral force of the country." This puts the question just where we wish to meet it; and we will take it for granted that the ends sought to be attained are both reasonable and desirable.

It may be necessary to state that the office of a Christian teacher is not, in our view, understood by those who would devote themselves to making moralists. The teaching of worldly wisdom, an essential of which is strict morality, is the province of another sort of person. The duty and the privilege of Christian teachers is to cry aloud and spare not, unceasingly, by word and example, communicating their faith to those around them in a sin-bearing, sin-consuming Saviour, whose demand is, "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing!"

We have, therefore, nothing to say upon such a matter as this, except to those who have measurably accepted and shown a willingness to respond to this first entreaty. Only such can understand the true source of power for right acting; and the impotence of human organization which thus seeks to yoke them more closely with unbelievers to attain ends which separation only can insure.

They will reason with themselves, Why should we think to combat more successfully with any form of evil, by partially relying on the sanctity of our promise and the support of fallible men like ourselves, rather than by whole-hearted reliance upon our Redeemer! and what real strength will they impart to the cause of truth, who leave Him out of their calculations and plans who is the Truth itself?

We do not wish to treat this matter as one of those which Paul characterizes as lawful, but not expedient. It seems to us entirely unlawful for the Christian. God demands the whole heart.

It is our glorious privilege to give up all, that we may receive all. Wherever in the conduct of our lives a moral principle is involved, yea, even when we eat and drink, all is to be done to the glory of God, and with no other reliance than upon him who, if he be anything to us, must be the Life of our life every moment. Christianity is not engrafted upon morality, but it includes and supercedes it. We have no remedy for sin and uncleanness for ourselves or others, but the Fountain set open in the house of David. The beauty of Divine charity has eclipsed, in our view, all the prudential arrangements of men; and we long to represent the Christ life in his members, as bearing, believing, and hoping all things; seeking not its own, but the things of others, at the cost, if need be, of unlimited self-sacrifice and never-failing love.

"If ye love your brethren only, what thank have ye?"

We may resume this subject at another time, but now wish to reiterate our expression, that our remarks have no bearing on the propriety of those connecting themselves with secret societies who have not given their hearts to the Lord; yet these might be influenced profitably by a respect for the opinion of the society with which they stand connected.—Chris. Worker (Friends).

The Revival we Need.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

The departure of the veteran Finney to his rest and the return of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to their native shores both call up to men's minds at once the word revival. The ascending Elijah of Oberlin, leaving his mantle to the returning Elisha, has entered upon his heavenly joys; and not the least of these joys must be his discovery of many souls in heaven whom his labors brought thither. That one successful "revivalist" has gone, and that another one, accompanied by his singing associate, has come to us, is very certain, but it is not absolutely certain that a general and powerful awakening is to come with him. To human eye it looks probable. Good men and women are looking, longing, and earnestly praying for a new pentecost. But what kind of revival is most needed? What graces and forces of the Christian church need most to be revived, what weak points need most to be strengthened, what broken walls require to be rebuilt? God knows best, and his ways are higher than our ways. But there are some things that we mortals can see, and, seeing them, can strive to secure them.

It is very certain that one thing which sensible men ought not to strive after is a mere outbreak of spasmodic excitement, kindled by artificial methods. All religious awakenings must be attended with some degree of excitement. Peter and John made no small stir in Jerusalem, as brother Moody has made no small stir in London. But the excitement was an incident, not an end. When the noise of the thunder and the rain had passed away, the blessings of the spiritual shower remain. Good men should neither seek after popular excitement nor be afraid of it if it comes. The spiritual result is what should be aimed at, whether God shall order it in silence or amid violent demonstrations of popular feeling.

There were some methods employed by the late President Finney in the days of his grandest success which were copied after the apostolic models and which can not be easily improved. He preached God's Word, clear through, and without flinching. Never muffling the sword of the Spirit, he made it cut to the very marrow. Sometimes he indulged in extravagant phrases, and often rung changes upon the word "hell" until the oft-reiteration somewhat cheapened its effect on the conscience. These were small blemishes upon a glorious work. Finney's great aim was to make every hearer feel that he was a sinner against a holy God; that sin was exceedingly heinous and justly damnable; that sin should be abandoned straightway, and the sinner should turn immediately unto God, who would abundantly pardon him, through Jesus Christ as a complete Saviour. It was no scrimped and shallow Gospel that our American Boanerge preached; but a thorough depravity to be fled from and a thorough holiness of heart and life to be striven for. He put his plow in deep, clear under men's secret motives, and it often made ripping work. The conviction of personal guilt produced by the Holy Spirit under Finney's powerful preaching was usually very acute and pungent. The conversions to a better life bore, usually, an impression as clean-cut as the stamp of a die on a new dollar from the mint. Men of intellect and culture were reached by his trenchant arguments. Skeptics were revolutionized. The standard of daily life which he held up was a high and pure and manly and noble one. It demanded stern self-denial, and proved its love of Jesus Christ by keeping his commandments.

As a subordinate agency to the preaching of the Word, Mr. Finney employed the "anxious seat," and the inquiry meeting, very much as Mr. Moody employed the inquiry meeting in Great Britain. The two-fold object was spiritual direction in order to immediate decision for Christ. Conversion was set forth not as an end, but only as the starting point of a true and righteous life, with heaven's perfection as its goal. It is not to be wondered at that such methods wrought glorious results. Many of the best men and women of the last quarter of a century, who have led in Christian effort and in moral reforms, were the shining products of Charles G. Finney's powerful ministry.

We have outlined some of the chief characteristics of the preaching and the methods employed in the great revivals from 1820 to 1840, because we believe that those same features deserve to be employed again. Substantially, they have their foundations in God's Word and in the necessities of human nature, which are always the same. We need now more thorough study of God's Word; and, what is far more important still, a thorough keeping of God's law. That law is no more obsolete than is the precious atoning blood of Calvary. The pulpit of our day needs to give greater emphasis to the guilt of sin and its inevitable retributions. A sinner needs to know just what he now is before he is likely to seek to become better. Of a certain sort of mushy sentimentalism we have had enough and too much. May God teach all his teachers how to teach dying souls the only way to Life.

The revival we need is not only a revival of sounder scriptural preaching, but a revival of true Christian living. We have had quite a surfeit of the religion which luxuriates in the devout favors of the prayer-meeting and the camp-ground, which sings sweet hymns and applauds sweet sermons, and then goes straight off to its money-grasping and its pleasure-seeking and its panderings to self and sin. God forbid that we speak lightly of true spiritual emotion! But the Christianity which Christ demands is something deeper than a song or a sermon or a sacrament. It is the holy and the humble imitation of himself.

The revival, then, which we need is a revival of the religion which keeps God's commandments; which tells the truth and sticks to its promises; which pays twenty shillings to the pound; which cares more for a good character than a fine coat; which votes at the ballot-box in the same direction that it prays; which denies ungodly lusts and which can be trusted in every stress of temptation. A revival which will sweeten our homes and chasten our press and purify our politics and cleanse our business and commerce from roguery and rottenness, would be a boon from heaven. A revival which will bring not only a Bible knowledge but a Bible conscience to all is what the land is dying for. The world's sorest want to-day is more Christ-like men and women. The preaching it needs is more sermons in shoes.

If our honored and beloved countrymen, Moody and Sankey, have come to us freighted with such messages and aims and holy purposes, then may God give them an abundant entrance everywhere and a mighty success. The field is ripe and ready for their sickles. The Divine Spirit will surely attend them. God's true people will welcome them with prayers and eager sympathy. Scoffers may sneer and devils may rage; but the word of Jehovah will grow mightily and prevail. To prepare for such a revival, let us be putting away sin from our hearts and be seeking an inflow of the Spirit of Jesus.—Independent.

Supposing all the great points of atheism were formed into a kind of creed, I would fain ask whether it would not require infinitely greater measure of faith than any set of articles which they so violently oppose.—Addison.

It is only in exalted moments that we remain faithful witnesses to the divine moods of nature. Only in certain conditions do we interpret her voices aright, or read and retain her lessons as we ought.

Secret Temperance Societies.

"A friend of ours once had a somewhat remarkable experience. Learning that a friend of his was in a fair way to be ruined by the extravagance of his wife, he concluded, as he was intimate with the family, that it was his duty to expostulate with her upon the follies into which he supposed she had thoughtlessly fallen. So he began by remarking that as the times were hard, business dull, and people were generally retrenching, it had appeared to him that the style in which she was— "Stop," screamed the lady in a rage, "if the style in which I live injures anybody, it is my own household, and if you don't like to see it, there is the door and you can leave."

An experience not wholly dissimilar has been ours. For a considerable time it has been apparent to us that some of our secret temperance societies were losing ground on account of the costliness of their machinery and the extravagance into which some of their lodges had fallen. Their membership was declining, the average connection being less than two years, and when those who had left them were asked why it was, the usual answer we found to be, "O, they cost too much money, and the money, when obtained, goes in suppers and music, in fancy lodge-rooms and bespangled regalia, and not in the work of saving men and fighting rum." Not only that, but it had come to our knowledge that our principal temperance order was threatened with organized resistance. We had been asked to co-operate with several proposed opposition combinations, some to work secretly and some openly, basing their hopes of success on antagonism to those features which were making our old societies burdensome and unpopular. We declined all participation, saying that, in our opinion, we already had too many temperance organizations, and that it would be better to try to reform and utilize those we had, than attempt the establishment of new ones. All the communications we had received were in confidence, and of course we could not give them publicity; but seeing the character of the movement they betoken, we deemed it right to say something to our secret societies by way of warning of their peril. Accordingly we prepared two or three articles advising them to get rid of their three thousand dollar lodge-rooms, of their masquerade balls, installation suppers and expensive entertainments, of all useless salaried officials, and other worthless organs, incumbrances by which their treasuries were being exhausted and their members burdened, and to confine their operations strictly and legitimately to the temperance work for which they were instituted. By the most of their members our advice appears to have been well received, and many of them took occasion to thank us for our candor and true friendliness. But by others, who were either unable to discriminate intelligently, or for some other reason were led to infer that our criticisms upon the abuses that had crept into their organizations, meant opposition to those organizations, it was not so received. From some we received sharp and complaining letters, and we are told that people in this city, and possibly there are others like them elsewhere, have been making themselves busy in going among our temperance organizations, and saying that "The Living Issue is opposed to secret temperance societies, is making war on them," etc.

Those things, however, did not greatly disturb us. We had done our duty, as we understood it, and there we were willing to let the matter rest, be the consequences what they might. —The Living Issue, New York.

Lutheranism vs. Lodge.

DEFENSE OF REV. A. S. BARTHOLOMEW OF LIMA, O., BEFORE HIS SYNOD.

"Woe to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light they practice it, because it is in the power of their hand. And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage. Therefore, thus saith the Lord, behold against this family do I devise an evil, from which ye shall not remove your necks, neither shall ye go haughtily: for this time is evil!" Micah ii. 1-3.

"Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." Isa. lviii. 1.

"Lo this, we have searched it, so it is; hear it, and know thou it for thy good!" Job. v. 27.

Touching my position over against secret societyism, consistent practice therewith, and testimonies unto truth growing out of the same, I am this day arraigned before the Evan. Lutheran Dist. Synod of Ohio (Council district) by the Rev. Messrs. G. W. Mechling, President of the same, and Daniel Worley, self-acting prosecuting attorney, on the grave charge of slander against the dead and against this synodical body; so very grave and pressing that it is judged intensely urgent to meet in hasty extra session at great expense to the church, at a time when men should forget petty, personal bickerings, when Evan. Lutheran pastors should be among their respective flocks . . . and when, as is patent, it could be presupposed that there would not be a general attendance, and that a few, specially interested, sufficient to form a quorum, could, in the absence of perhaps more sober-minded, as accusors, judges and executioners, be sole arbiters in the case, and thus have it in hand ad libitum, to thwart justice and carry their point to meet their own private ends. .

I do hereby solemnly protest; and such libelous charges of "slander" upon my good name and character I do most positively and emphatically deny! To wit:

THE CHARGES.

1. I charge Rev. A. S. Bartholomew with conduct unbecoming a Christian minister, in resisting by threats of civil authorities, made to the secretary of the Synod, the due course of discipline in the slanders of which he was evidently guilty before the whole ministerium against the memory of our diseased brother, Rev. J. L. Stierwalt, by demanding the suppression in the minutes of his retraction of the same, whereby he places himself in the relation he occupied before this retraction was made.

2. I charge Rev. A. S. Bartholomew with malicious slander against our Synod and his brethren in the ministerium, in the prepartory sermon preached at Lewisburg, Ohio, and in the publication of that sermon in the Lutheran Standard upon a conference with the editor of that paper, with comments designed to misrepresent the Synod and his brethren before the church; and

3. I charge Rev. A. S. Bartholomew with conduct which makes him unworthy of honorable membership in our Synod or any other ecclesiastical body, by his dishonorably joining his influence with the avowed enemies of our Synod and the pastors and congregations composing it, to destroy the Synod's good name and influence.

I have made these charges after mature and prayerful consideration and believe before God they are true and I believe I can establish them by indubitable proof before the ministerium at the proper time. DANIEL WORLEY.

I hereby notify you that these charges will be heard before the ministerium of the District Synod of Ohio, at a special meeting of said Synod, to be held in the English Lutheran church, in Columbus, Ohio, (Rev. Peters, pastor), commencing Dec. 23d, 1873, at 9 o'clock A. M. Your Bro. in Christ, G. W. MECHLING, Pres. of Dist. Synod of O.

I deny these charges of slander as a whole and in all their details. . .

I. There was an underhanded movement in my Lima congregation, to undermine me in the affection of my people, and in the confidence of the brethren of Synod as fit pastor for the Lima charge. This, notwithstanding his friendly professions to my face and similar statements in his letters afterwards to Synod, to the contrary, was secretly countenanced and furthered by Mr. G. W. Overmyer. In the light of after developements we saw fit to term this underground move, together with the subsequent openly defiant revolt, led by the same man, on the same grounds, and for the same purpose, as the conspiracy entered into by Mr. Overmyer. He was in communication with the former Missionary President. To farther his purpose he sought behind my back to impress upon the latter the conviction that the weal of the charge demanded a change of ministers. Through him he sought to spread this impression among the members of the Synod. He succeeded; and said Missionary President assisted in spreading this impression among the members of the Synod. Thus it came that the two names were coupled together as coinciding in the conviction, that the welfare of the congregation demanded my removal. This was the object sought by the conspirators, and the spreading of this impression at their instigation was a furthering of the conspiracy! That the former Missionary President, at the instigation of Mr. Overmyer, did spread such report among the members of the Synod, not to mention many particulars, is herewith attested by the following affidavit:

At a meeting of the District Synod of Ohio in Goshen, Elkhart Co., Ind., Aug. 4th to 9th, A. D. 1870, a ministerial brother said to me in a conversation on missionary work, "Lima does not need any mission money." I asked for what reason. He said, "If Bro. Bartholomew leaves Lima and they get another man in his place, they will be able to support him themselves." I asked him, "Why will they be able to support another man any sooner than Bro. Bartholomew." He said, "If he leaves then the disaffected members who do nothing towards supporting him will come back and by their support make up the difference." I asked, "Who are those disaffected members?" He answered, "Theo Roush and H. Boose." I asked, "Who said so?" He answered, "Geo. Overmyer." I enquired, "Who told you?" To this question he gave no answer but asked me whether I did not think Rev. Bartholomew ought to leave Lima. My reply was, "No, I do not think so; but on the other hand think he is the very man we need in Lima, and I believe he has done for Lima what very few men would or could have done."

When the mission meeting of the Synod was held, the Missionary President said in substance the following: If Rev. Bartholomew would leave Lima and they would get the right man there, they would need no assistance from the Synod. Pastor Bartholomew at once arose to his feet, in his place, and demanded of him, "Who said so?" Pastor Stierwalt replied, "Your principal member." "What principal member?" He replied, "Bro. Overmyer." Pastor emphatically said, "George Overmyer is not the Lima congregation. He is but one man and has but one vote;" and sat down.

G. W. Umburgh.

State of Ohio, Anglaize Co. } S. S.

Personally came before me, Mayor of Criderville, Rev. G. W. Umburgh and acknowledged that he did sign and seal the above instrument of writing. In witness whereof I herewith set my hand and official seal this 20th day of December, A. D. 1873. M. Swarts.

I, Samuel Boose of Lima, Allen Co., Ohio, was duly elected by the Lima charge of the Lutheran church, as delegate to attend the meeting of the Synod in Goshen, Ind'a in August, 1870. On my way to my lodging after service one evening I came to the corner of a vacant lot. A few of us stopped there and I leaned against the fence. When there I heard a conversation between Bro. Stierwalt and some others. When I heard the words, pastor Barthelomew and, Lima charge, I paid close attention to all that was said. I heard Stierwalt say that if there was a change of pastors at Lima, Synod would not need any more mission money there. He was asked who said so and replied, that Geo. Overmyer told him so. He then said, "If Rev. Bartholomew would leave Lima then Theo. Roush and Jacob Boose would come back to church again and the pastor's salary could be raised without the help of the Synod. Just then Stiervalt looked around and saw me standing there. He at once turned right around and walked off in a hurry with another man. During the meeting of the Synod I slept one night with Bro. Brugel at the house of Mr. Keip. After we went to bed Bro. Brugel asked me how matters stood in Lima and how our congregation liked pastor Bartholomew. I told him that our pastor was liked very well, that he was a good preacher and faithful, and I had nothing against him. He then asked me if a change of pastors would not be good in Lima so there might be German preaching also? I told him that we had tried the German and English together, that pastor Niminacha had preached for us in both languages and that we could not get along together.

I told him that we were unwilling to try it again. He said I was told that a change of pastors in Lima would be good for the charge. I asked him, "Who told you so?" He said, "Bro. Stierwalt told me so." I inquired, "Who told Stierwalt so?" and in reply he said, "Mr. Overmyer was his authority and he is a member of the council." I told him that Bro. Bartholomew had done his duty and that we would stand by him. I also told him that there was good satisfaction in our congregation with pastor Bartholomew as far as I knew.

We had other talks but it was about Synod matters. When the matter came up in the Synod about giving mission aid to the Lima charge another year, Bro. Stierwalt said something about the people at Lima wanting a change of pastors. He was asked immediately by pastor Bartholomew who in the Lima congregation spoke about a change and Stierwalt replied, "Your principal man, Mr. Overmyer." Pastor B. said, "Overmyer is not the Lima congregation; he is but one man and has but one vote." Samuel Boose.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence by Samuel Boose, this 13th day of December, A. D., 1873.

H. S. Prophet, Notary Public, Allen Co., O.

Because of his leading activity in this underhanded movement, the Elida congregation refused to confirm the election of Mr. Overmyer as delegate to the Synod. He demanded an official statement of the reasons for this refusal. This the congregation gave and afterwards had printed in the form of a circular for local purposes. The second specification in this document has been given. In this item the name of the former Missionary President is connected with that of Mr. Overmyer for reasons, and in the sense of the explanations herein before given. The Elida congregation, however, still expressed its willingness to confirm the appointment of Mr. Overmyer as delegate, provided he would sign the following guarantee:

"Resolved, That the election of Bro. G. W. Overmyer be confirmed, provided he gives St. John's Evan. Lutheran congregation a written guarantee that he will represent us according to the spirit and intent of the doctrinal principles of our Synod, in their application, as set forth by our Synod and the General Council on the secret society question, and stand up for our pastor, in the pastoral relation, as he stands up for our pure faith, as confessed in the symbols of our church."

The self-evident object of this guarantee was to guard against the influence of the leader of the insubordination, at the Synod, to the detriment of the pastor and congregation in their position and understanding of the General Council utterances touching secret societies. But Mr. Overmyer felt outraged and refused to sign this pledge, and took an appeal from it to this body.

In the course of the investigation of this matter, the answer of the Elida congregation to Mr. Overmyer comes to the notice of your prosecuting attorney, Daniel Worley, and he seizes upon it to bring charges against me for "maliciously slandering the dead!"

I stated that this was not my private individual paper, but the official document of the Elida congregation, but this did not release me. I protested against any intention on our part to cast reflections on the departed, but this would not suffice. I must sign a retraction formulated by your prosecuting attorney. Overawed by this high-handed charge, and with good will for the departed and sensitive regard for the feelings of his survivors, I complied.

However, upon cool reflection, after my return home, and convinced that this retraction committed me before the public of wilful slander, I proceeded to lay an injunction upon the publication of the same in the present year's minutes; and would have served it, had not your secretary agreed to withhold it upon my pledge that I would answer to the charge at the next annual convention of this body at Germantown, Ohio.

Notices.

PAST MASTER E. RONAYNE, of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, will hold himself in readiness to lecture and publicly work the degrees of Masonry wherever his services may be needed. A fair compensation and traveling expenses is all that is required. Address him at the office of this paper.

Ex-Masons in Illinois, Attention.

The undersigned is anxious to meet all seceding Masons in Illinois at the annual meeting of the State Association, to be held in Peoria, November, 9th, and 10th. He is desirous of opening a lodge of Masons in the forenoon of the 9th, and posting up in the ritual and work of the first and third degrees especially with the view of publicly working these degrees at the Convention. Will all seceding Masons in the State and adjoining States please "take due notice hereof and govern themselves accordingly."

EDMOND RONAYNE,
Past Master Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, Ill.

Illinois.

The Convention of the Illinois State Christian Association will be held in the Congregational church, Peoria, Ill., commencing on Tuesday, Nov. 9th, and ending on the night of the 10th. Arrangements are being made for a large and successful meeting, so far as able speakers, popular expositions of the lodge and the hospitality of citizens can further that end.

Michigan State Meeting.

The friends in Michigan will take notice that their State Executive committee have appointed the first anniversary of their association to be held in Ypsilanti, Washtenaw county, October 27–29. Ypsilanti is easily reached from all parts of the State, being located on the Michigan Central railroad thirty miles from Detroit. Arrangements are being made for a good representation of good speakers and for a setting into activity the organization already affected. Let every reformer in the State make it a business to attend if possible and roll on the ball.

Bradford Co., Pa.

The Bradford County Anti-Secret Society Association, will hold its next annual meeting at the Wesleyan Methodist church, in Vought Hollow on the 22nd and 23rd of October next, commencing at 10 A. M. on Friday. Revs. E. W. Wheeler, a seceding Mason, J. W. Raynor, State Agent, and H. Lounsbury are expected to be present and address the convention.

New Hampshire.

A convention is called to organize an association in New Hampshire to meet in Lake Village, Belknap county, near the center of the State and on the Boston, Concord and Montreal railroad, the seventh station north of Concord. The convention will be held in the Baptist church November 23d and 24th.

To Southern Pennsylvanians.

Christians and patriots of Southern Pennsylvania, we now call you to muster for organization. Rev. J. W. Raynor has requested us to appeal to you to organize an association to aid in pushing the greatest reform the world has yet beheld. He, as State Agent, is ready to assist you. The time has come for systematic work. The State of Pennsylvania has several strong and promising societies. There is no good reason why it should not have others. "In union there is strength." Organization, drill and system are as necessary for success in the moral world as in the physical. You must learn how to load, aim and fire powerful moral guns which can throw the heaviest steel-pointed arguments. We must demolish every fortress garrisoned by the devil's imps, if we would preserve our civil and religious liberty. We will have to organize some day; then why delay it?

It is not necessary for us to remind you of all the good that will come from organization. It will bring us money and men; it will enable us to act to the greatest advantage; it will show that we are in earnest and mean business; it will encourage others to start societies, and it will cheer the heart of every honest man "in the known world," who hears of it. Organization is the greatest need of our cause. No reform ever made great progress until it was thoroughly systematized. Every additional organization and every step towards perfect system are additional guarantees that we will advance to victory. Remember, too, thousands of dissatisfied tax payers are on the lookout for true and honorable friends to show them how to make life more tolerable.

Our York County Court-house and our halls, churches and school-houses are in the hands of the great Masonic ring. Will you please write immediately, using envelopes instead of postal cards, giving your ideas on the subject, and stating whether a suitable meeting place can be procured in your locality, and state also what advantages your place possesses for a series of meetings and a convention. Please write at once, and address your letters plainly to E. J. Chalfant, York, Pa.

Reform News.

From the General Agent.

A GOOD WORK IN NORTH-WESTERN OHIO.

WEST UNITY, Williams Co., O., Oct. 7th, 1875.

DEAR BRO. K.:—Cheering reports from this quarter may be of interest and serve to encourage others who are toiling for the better day. I reached Delta, Fulton Co., on Tuesday 4:55 P. M., Sept. 28th, where Bro. Whitaker was in waiting to convey me fourteen miles across the country to the town of Metamora. Reaching the place at about 7:30 P. M., we found a good audience in waiting and after being introduced to two or three of the brethren I proceeded to the work of the evening. Of the lecture I have nothing to say, as others would doubtless be more competent and impartial judges than myself, but of the audience I may say they seemed deeply interested and remained for two hours and then retired in good order. Expressions of deep interest in our cause and assurances of kindest regards for its workers were very cheering and encouraging to me.

The day following Bro. W. took me to Morey's Corners, where I made the acquaintance of Brn. Jones, Schooley and other friends, and spoke in the ball room of a hotel in the place, as no church or other more convenient room could be secured. The attendance was good and much interest apparent. At the close of my lecture Bro. Pratt of Baker's Corners, volunteered the statement that he had been connected with the lodge, and that what I had said was correct, and in proof of his confidence and sincerity he offered to give $50 in gold for the affidavit of any respectable Mason denying what I had said. Of course no one accepted the liberal offer.

From Morey's Corners Bro. Jones conveyed me to Spring Hill, where we found the U. B. chapel about half full despite the rain and mud which made it extremely difficult for people to assemble as this is a country appointment. A member of the craft here also voluntarily, but unintentionally in this instance, rendered good service to our cause, saying that I had misrepresented their craft by saying that Christ was excluded to make room for the Jews. He said the first thing he was taught in Masonry was that no Jew could ever be a Mason. This of course was too transparent to serve as a blind even, and he, seeing his blunder, fled from the house muttering as he went. There was a Jew present, who confirmed what I had said and manifested his appreciation of our work by dropping a quarter in the hat to help defray expenses.

Bro. Jones accompanied me to Wauseon, where on Friday evening I spoke, according to arrangement, in the M. E. church. There was a show in town and some one speaking on the street, but still we had a fair audience. Either fortunately or unfortunately, I was so unfortunate as not to render satisfaction to the craftsmen present, who succeeded in showing their disapprobation by having the house closed on Saturday evening. The house had been fairly engaged and bills posted throughout the county. Friends gathered from a distance, some, as I was told, having come fourteen miles, to find the door locked against free speech and contrary to a positive agreement with Bro. John Miller. You can easily understand what would be the effect of such an occurrence; more, probably, was accomplished for our cause than could have been done by a dozen speeches under ordinary circumstances. The very best men in the M. E. church declared that it was an outrage and have set about hunting up the matter with a will.

On Sabbath it was my privilege to attend a quarterly-meeting of the United Brethren at Olive Branch and preach to a full house. It was a time of refreshing and many glad hearts were lifted to God in thanksgiving and praise.

These previous occurrences had prepared the way for Past Master Ronayne, whose arrival on Monday at 4:40 P. M. gave new and special interest to the movement. Of what followed you will be duly informed by others, but I will simply say that P. M. Ronayne threw the doors of the lodge wide open, and gave such a truthful and undeniable exposition of Freemasonry that the craft were perfectly confounded and silenced, while our friends were confirmed and their opposition intensified, and every decent man or woman who witnessed the exposure was led to loathe and abhor this "image of the beast" as never before. What the effect will be on the M. E. church of Wauseon remains to be seen; but I was told that one member said, "I will never submit to another Masonic preacher," and another, in his anxiety and bewilderment said, "What can we do? Our preacher is a Mason and so are nearly all the M. E. preachers!" So the work goes on under God to victory. J. P. Stoddard.

THE INDIANA STATE CONVENTION.

Marion, Ind., Oct. 14th, 1875.

Dear K.:—I reached here last evening just as the convention assembled for its evening's work. Everything, so far as I can learn, is moving off harmoniously and strong. Some thirty counties are represented and all appear strong in the Lord and in the hope of victory. White's Hall, 40x100, was well filled by a very intelligent appearing audience, in which the element of Friends was very conspicuous. Hon. Daniel Hill, editor of the Christian Worker, made the speech of the evening, in which he took high ground against the whole net-work of secret orders from Freemasonry down to grangerism and Good Templars. He read from the Friend's book of discipline and from Finney and others, fully sustaining his positions by arguments and riveting them in the memory of his audience by very appropriate and sometimes very witty anecdotes.

Bro. Kiggins is here with his "empty sleeve" on the one side; but with his arm on the other up to the elbow in the work. Dr. S. L. Cook has been driving the craft to the wall and his speech on Tuesday evening will not soon be forgotten, or its effect wiped out in this community. Others are here whose voices are ringing out in the conflict and who came bringing their sheaves with them; but for the names of the seventy delegates you must wait for the Secretary's report.

To-day is the business day of the meeting and I will forward report in due time. Best of all, God is with us.

J. P. Stoddard.

Election in Bremer County, Iowa.

Waverly, Iowa, Oct. 12, 1875.

To-day is "election day," and a more stirring one I never saw. By the efforts of Anti-masons, candidates for the most important offices were nominated at the primary election, excepting sheriff. But an Anti-mason was nominated by a people's convention, and to-day our representative will be elected with very little opposition; and others with opposition will contest very closely. Masonry is freely mentioned around the polls, and indications are that one year more will see the people thoroughly awake on the subject.

One of our English county papers and the German paper speak freely on Masonry, and have worked faithfully for success in the cause. All the result of a little over a year's work in Bremer, Co. I will send the result of the election as soon as I can. Yours,

P. Woodring.

LATER! VICTORY!!

Oct. 14th, 1875.

Dear Cynosure:—The election returns show that every candidate on the county ticket we have worked for and who are free from secrecy, is elected. There's a God in Israel yet. Yours,

P. Woodring.

Notes by the Way.—From the Illinois Agent.

Oak Hill, Ill., Oct., 1875.

Leaving Wheaton Sept. 23d, I reached Princeton, the home of Lovejoy and the scene of his long and successful labors as a minister before he entered political life. He was a true reformer and a decided Anti-mason; but alas! his church now contains many of the secret orders and does not permit discussion of this subject. In all that large village, I could not find one man who dared to express sympathy with us. The Noble Grand of the Odd-fellows, who is a Jew, fully agreed with me in what I said of the exclusion of Christ from the lodge. He said he gloried in it, and with profane oaths scoffed at the name of Jesus and all who believe in him. Such is one of the teachers of lodge morality in in Princeton. I here met a sister missionary (Mrs. Winship), whom I had not seen since we parted in Africa twelve years ago. It was indeed pleasant to talk over the trials and sorrows of former years in that land of darkness.

From thence I came to Wyanet, where the lodge rules by the aid of the ministers, and no place could be found to speak. Near here is Bureau, where I preached on the Sabbath in the Wesleyan church, and lectured twice; and one night in a neighboring school house. My last evening at Bureau was disturbed by a rowdy element, much to the chagrin of the faithful, warm-hearted friends of the cause. I here enjoyed the hospitality of Rev. W. Whitten and Bro. J. Bradley, who, with their excellent wives, are faithfully battling against all iniquity.

From thence I went to Elmwood, and after making arrangements to lecture, I went to Farmington, Fulton Co., and spoke twice in the basement of the Congregational church to small but attentive audiences. Dea. Birge, Bro. P. P. Chapman and others are worthy of all honor for their faithfulness amid abounding opposition.

At Elmwood, Oct. 4th, we had an excellent meeting in Smith's Hall with the attendance and sympathy of the pastors of the Congregational, Presbyterian and U. B. churches. Dr. Marsh is here doing a good work. I was told here by a leading member of the Congregational church that this agitation was doing very great harm and that they "wished to be let alone." I told him that his request was the same the devils made to Christ, and he remarked they "wished to be let alone, if they were with the devil." Poor man! poor people! "Woe unto them when I shall forsake them," saith the Lord. The pastor of the M. E. church is a prominent Mason, and it is said that through his influence his leading members have joined the lodge. "Woe unto them that call evil good and good evil, that put light for darkness and darkness for light!"

From thence I came to Brimfield, where I spoke last night. To-night I am appointed to speak at Oak Hill and next night at Brimfield and from thence as Providence shall direct.

Yours for the Lord,

H. H. Hinman.

Past Master Ronayne in Noble Co., Ind.—Great Enthusiasm of the People.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Seldom has it been my privilege to record anything that created such a tempest of excitement as did the exposition of the first and third degrees o that gigantic fraud called Freemasonry, at this place on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Sept. 27th and 28th, by Mr. Edmond Ronayne of your city.

The first evening Mr. R. gave the origin and history of this so-called divine institution, and clearly exhibited its anti-Christian, anti-republican and anti-social character, and with a view to our enlightenment placed Masonry on exhibition by initiating a candidate into the Entered Apprentice degree, hoodwinked, cable-towed and attired in a costume that would cause the cheeks of the most devoted worshiper at the shrine of Freemasonry to tingle with shame at the bare thought of having the public see him in it; to say nothing of the degrading spectacle he would present to his wife and family were they permitted to see him thus attired and paraded before his brethren of the lodge.

When the candidate emerged from the ante-room Mr. Ronayne introduced him to the audience as Rev. Septimus Jones, and as he knelt for the first prayer, Mr. R. stepped to the front of the platform and pointing his finger at the candidate told the audience in tones of withering sarcasm to behold the sublime spectacle of a minister of Christ's Gospel seeking more light from Masonic luminaries. Never shall I forget the look of loathing contempt that overspread the countenances of men and women, mingled with audible denunciations of the minister who would thus degrade himself and disgrace his sacred calling by wallowing in the filth and slime of speculative Freemasonry.

During the first evening but few members of the dark kingdom were present as their lodge met that night to denude, cable-tow, hoodwink, and worse than rob some poor deluded creature of his money. But small as was their number it soon grew beautifully less, as one by one they left the hall, being unable to withstand the terrible excoriation their already doomed order was receiving at the hands of Mr. Ronayne.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Ronayne opened the lodge in the third degree before a densely packed audience, a goodly number of Masons and Odd-fellows being present. A candidate was duly initiated into that degree amidst frequent expressions of disgust from many in the audience, to think that men would degrade themselves so much as to go through such pagan ceremonies and then call the institution divine.

The killing of Hiram Abiff was successfully rendered, which elicited from the audience the oft-repeated exclamation of "shame, shame," upon the man, especially a minister of the Gospel, who would be a partaker in such heathenish and degrading ceremonies.

Mr. Ronayne is a host within himself and has given Freemasonry a blow in this county from the effects of which it will not soon recover. So mote it be.

On Wednesday he went to Kendallville, where he lectured on that and the following evenings. I am informed that reports will be furnished the Cynosure from Kendallville and Albion in a short time.

Mr. James McConnell of this place accompanied Mr. Ronayne in his rounds in this county, and rendered invaluable service in exposing this giant fraud. Mr. McConnell is an active, efficient and zealous worker in this great reform, and in a quiet way is dealing heavy blows to Freemasonry and kindred organizations. Yours truly,

P. Humphreys.

Jottings from the New York Field.

Dear K.—This time I must give you much in little, which is what I suppose you heartily wish I would do all the time. Well then, a thing or two about MICHIGAN.

While yet in Chicago. I received a line from Cornelius Quick, Esq., President of the Michigan State Association, asking me to stop on my way East, and scatter a little Anti-masonic light. This I was forward to do, and accordingly reached his hospitable home near Weston station, Lenawee Co., on the 8th of September, Bro. Quick commanded me to say nothing about him in the Cynosure. Out of deference to to his wishes, therefore, I will only just say, what I would have said but for his interdiction, I strongly suspect that he is the "right man in the right place," and I devoutly wish we had a great many more like him. He put me at work the night following my arrival, in the Christian church six miles away, and kept me at it every night for one week. Friday and Saturday I spoke at Baker's Corners in the M. E. church. The last evening the lodge was well represented, and its members showed themselves gentlemen, or at least their lodge training, by carefully guarding their jewels. Bro. Quick overheard one of the craft speaking of my labors on this wise: "I respect this man more than any other one they have had here, because he did not go into things he knew nothing about"! Now, as I had uncapped the lodge, given their oaths, stripped a candidate, slain and raised Hiram Abiff, etc., this confession and commendation was a little funny, to say the least of it, and in view of the fact that the other lecturers were brethren Baird, Rathbun and Levington.

At the close of my last lecture at this place a member of the church gave me this statement: "My grandfather who died here made this statement to several gentlemen as well as to myself, before his death, 'I was a member of a Masonic lodge which had a brother who had offended the lodge by his indiscretions. He found it out and for a long time stayed away through fear. After a time the members began to speak to him, saying, Come, Bro., come to the lodge. That old affair of yours is all in the past and it will seem like old times to have you among us again. Come. At length he was prevailed on to enter the lodge-room again. No sooner was he inside the door than a cap was thrown over his head, and I was ordered to step forward and cut his throat; this I refused to do. Another was called upon, who immediately came forward and obeyed the barbarous command.'"

How many such deeds have been done the Great Day alone can reveal. That his dying grandparent did make this statement is known to many in that place. Whether true or not, God knows. My informant believed it.

On Sabbath, the 12th, in the evening I preached in the school-house at Weston from Gal. i. 8; which, by the by, is a capital Anti-masonic text. On Monday and Tuesday I lectured in the U. B. church in the town of Ogden, in the same county, and finished up my Michigan work on Wednesday evening in the Baptist church near Weston. As to

THAT MORENCI AFFAIR.

I learned enough by a visit to the place to fasten more firmly on my mind the conviction that a foul murder was committed, and that until "Whispering Charley" is positively brought forward alive, that conviction will remain in my mind as well as in that of others who are citizens of that place and vicinity. There can be no excuse for the refusal to submit the affair to a legal investigation. The whole affair is a lasting disgrace to the people who permitted the matter to pass off as it did. A terrorism rests on the minds of the people and few dare to speak their real convictions until they know with whom they are conversing. The mangled, butchered body I was told was identified as that of "Whispering Charley" by several persons. I hope to know more about this before long, when I may return to the subject again.

HOME WORK.

I reached Syracuse on the 21st, made the necessary arrangments for my family and on Saturday the 25th, started for Varick, Seneca Co., where the Baptist church was engaged for me to lecture; the five trustees having given their consent. But when I reached the place on Monday evening the sexton, a granger, refused to open the audience room and so I was compelled to retire to a low basement which before I closed was crowded to repletion, making it difficult to speak or even to breathe. Here the lodge power overawed and humbled the church. How long, oh Lord, how long shall that anti-Christ rule in thy courts! The lodge gained nothing however, by this move. Impressions were made on the works of the enemy which can never be repaired. I spoke here three nights and on Thursday evening spoke in a school-house to a large audience. Right in front of me sat a respectable looking, elderly gentleman, a Mason, who upon my closing asked me if I hadn't something to say about the grange. "Oh, yes sir,' said I, "the grange is one of the late born pups of the old she-wolf. Its fathers were Masons and Odd-fellows who as I had reason to believe knew very little more, if as much, about agriculture as a young brindled bull I had a short time ago passed on the street. That like Masonry, it was a heathen religion, a humbug, an insult and a swindle on the farmers and those of their wives, and sisters and daughters who were made to represent Mesdames Flora, Ceres and Pomona, the most licentious and obscene of the heathen goddesses." The old gentleman looked somewhat amused, appeared perfectly satisfied with my answer, took his hat and disappeared amid the laughter and applause of that part of the audience which did not belong to the grange, which is very strong in this section.

During my lecture in the basement of the Romulus Baptist church, I was honored with a new name. A Major Sutton rose and took up the cudgel for the imperilled crafts. He said he did not know but he might be related to the speaker, as his mother was a Barlow, etc., then pointing to me he said, "We have heard that the was coming and now we have seen him," with more to the same effect, touching no point I had made and winding up with a story the moral of which was, that Great Mogul though I was, and his cousin, I might yet be a thief. What defenders Masonry has, to be sure!

Allow me here to present my thanks to Harvey Baldridge, Esq., his excellent wife and family for such kindnessess as the worn lecturer knows so well how to prize. May God reward them.

J. L. Barlow.

Lecture at Bremer, Iowa.

Being urged to come to the above named place, I induced brother Adam Smith to accompany me to lecture on "Masonry in Politics."

After driving 24 miles in a drizzling rain, we arrived in the immediate neighborhood of the place of meeting and made inquiry as to the place, meeting, etc., but the people seemed to be at once turned to "know nothings" and could not give us any light on the subject. We at last found where the brother lived to whom we had been recommended, and after putting up our team and getting acquainted, we walked to the school-house—quite a good-sized one—where we found a good number gathered, but all in a confusion. But a word called them to order and soon they were ready to hear, when Bro. Smith with his never-ceasing good humor, soon had them laughing and cheering. He spoke about one hour and such a dressing that he put upon the "ancient and honorable" institution would have been a credit to an older head in the lecture business. He will go here and then there; from the furthest extreme of solemnity to the other of the ridiculous, and all the time spiced with the most comic comparisons and illustrations. I have yet to see the person who can go away displeased, or if displeased, their humor, produced by hearty laughing, over-balances their ill-feeling.

Your correspondent then spoke for about one and a half hours on the oaths of Masonry, and their interference with the execution of law and the corrupting, blighting influence of them in our courts and upon our officers. A most deep, earnest feeling pervaded the audience throughout, and a good impression was made. Bro. Smith then closed with another speech full of telling blows in his humorous way, and the audience dispersed with the best of feeling, wanting us to come again, which we may do at some future time.

Friday and Saturday next we initiate a candidate at Horton, Bremer Co., where I gave a couple of lectures a short time ago.

Yours,

P. Woodring.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Anti-masonry is gaining ground around here. A wealthy man named David Gehman, in Hosensack, Lehigh Co, Pa., has a hall for public worship and he is willing to give it free for an anti-secret society lecture.

I am publisher of a German weekly paper with a circulation of over 1,300. I published your platform in last week's paper. I am a member of the Mennonite community, and our whole community is opposed to any kind of secret societies. Our rules forbid to join the grangers, or a secret temperance society.

Yours truly,

J. G. Stauffer.

Brother Faurot's Removal to the South.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Dear Brother:—I write to say, I am on the eve of a removal to the State of Mississippi, whither my people send us to inaugurate a school among the Freedmen. So when my present subscription is out, please let it rest for the present, as we know not yet our address or ability to continue. Please also drop my name from the list of lecturers as my time will be wholly employed in our enterprize. We leave here in two weeks.

I have the satisfaction of learning that my feeble efforts here against secrecy have produced some effect. I am told the grange has not had an addition since I came. Their hall is a sad and lonesome looking thing. I gave a few lectures in the adjoining town of Greenbush, apparently, at least, to quite a lively effect. I rejoice to learn that Bro. Springstein is put in the field and hope he may be well sustained.

Yours with ardent hopes and good wishes for the cause. R. Faurot.

From the Far South-west.

Socorro, New Mexico, Sep. 21, '75.

My Dear Bro:—My subscription to the Cynosure is ended, I know. I would gladly renew, but my funds don't allow at present. I wish I could spare the $2.00, but I have not got them, nor do I know when I will get them, as I am trying hard to get a parsonage built and have no outside help whatever. Moreover, I was cheated out of $50.00 by a drunken Romanist who has a saw-mill, and that made me poorer still.

I bid you God-speed in your work of reform. I trust you may live to see your desire accomplished, that secrecy may be abolished as was slavery; that the glorious Gospel of Jesus may be the only society. I give very little for a faith that must be supported by a society of some kind. If a Christian has not sufficient faith in Christ to trust his all in Him, he had better tell Christ so and resign his profession as a Christian and cling to his chosen society, whether Masonry, Odd-fellowship, or any other ship. Here we have Popery on one side and Masonry creeping in on the other, and withall a missionary has his hands full indeed. I often give thrusts at Masonry from the pulpit, trying to keep the young out of its snares. There are so few English-speaking people in this county that it is hard to get subscribers for any paper, and you know how far prejudice goes on such an outspoken paper as the Cynosure. But we might have hope in the future. The Lord alone shall reign. Let darkness forever flee from the great Gospel light.

Accept, dear brother, of my well wishes. It is all I can offer just now. It behooves us to be watchful, and pray, and labor, and then our work shall not be in vain in the Lord.

Your humble brother,

M. Matthieson,
M. E. Missionary.

OUR MAIL.

Moses Varney, Osage Agency, Iowa, writes:

"I felt very sorry to see in the last number of the Cynosure that I received, that Bro. Hankins had been compelled to resigd for want of support in Iowa. I have felt very much encouraged during the past year with the prospect that when I should leave this wilderness of savages (Indian Ter.) and go back to Iowa I should find the Lord's work against the works of darkness more prosperous than when I left, but it appears that money is their most attractive god, and I am sorry it is so. My health is failing here so I must leave, but hope to be able to stir up some of the brethren to more earnest work."

Benj. M. Spaulding, South Albany, Vt., writes:

"My paper is read by many, and I think it has a good influence. There some active Anti-masons here in Northern Vermont, but people are generally at ease on the subject."

John Pike, Frycburgh, Me., writes:

"I like the Cynosure very much. I like it for its likeness to the star near the North Pole, by which sailors steer, deriving its light from the great light, the sun, as I think your moral Cynosure derives its light on all moral questions from the Sun of Righteousness that it may go forth until all the dark cells of secret societies are lighted up and the curse removed from the church and state. We are in the midst of secretism. If I were a young man I would buckle on the armor of God and go into the field and fight with God as I did in the anti-slavery and temperance campaigns; but I am in my eighty-third year and must soon throw off my harness."

Sam'l Fletcher, Geneva, Ill., writes:

"I think very much of your paper and do not know that I could do without it. Geneva is a hot-bed of Masonry."

Benj. Rohrer, Canton, Ill., writes:

"I saw a few weeks ago in the Cynosure that there was a prospect of there being a lecture against Freemasonry in Farmington, Yates City and Peoria. Could you let be known through the paper or some other way, when they will be? I would try and attend, and at Farmington I could take a load up as it is only seven miles from my place. I will try and do something for the Publishing House and get you a few subscribers some time this fall."

For a meeting in Peoria, see notices. We shall endeavor to let Bro. R. know in regard to other places.

Lesson for Oct. 31.—Friends and Foes of Jesus.

SCRIPTURE.—John xv. 11-19; Commit 11-19. Primary Verse, 12.

11 These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.

12 This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13 Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you.

15 Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you.

16 Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

17 These things I command you that ye love one another.

18 If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.

19 If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."—Jas. iv. 4.

TOPIC.—The Love of Christ.

S. Rom. 8: 28-39. From his Love nothing can Separate.

1.—What sort of joy is that which is set before the Christian? The highest human felicity cannot express it. It is not the joy of earth, but the joy of Christ himself—"that my joy might remain in you." Luke i. 78, 79; John xiv. 27; Rom. viii. 6; xiv. 17; Phil. iv. 7; Col. iii. 15.

2.—It is a remarkable fact that in this last interview of Christ with his disciples, his command to them was not; "Continue to love me and love me more," but: "Love ye one another as I have loved you." And this is the test of our love to God. "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" xiii. 34. 35; Eph. v. 2; 1 Thess. iv. 9; 1 Pet. iv. 8; 1 John iii. 14-17, 23; iv. 7, 10, 20, 21; v. i.

3.—See what a progression there is for those that love God—"servants" "friends," "sons," "HEIRS." "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he doth appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." John i. 12; Rom. viii. 15, 18; 2 Cor. iv. 17; Gal. iii. 26; Eph. i. 3-6; 1 John iii. 1, 2; Rev. xxi. 7.

4.—"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you." The wonder of God's love is—that it was manifested towards his enemies. "Herein," indeed, "is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." Deut. vii. 6-8; Rom. v. 7, 8, 10; 1 Pet. iii. 18; 1 John iii. 16; iv; 9, 10.

5.—Christ left to his disciples from the world a legacy of hate. Has his religion and the world become so near alike that all antagonism has ceased between them? We trow not. We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, and they will never cease their warfare. In some way or other a Christian, if he be faithful, will be apt to find out what is meant by the "world's hate" Luke xiv. 27; John xv. 19-21; xvi. 33; xvii. 14; Eph. vi. 11-13; 1 Thess. iii. 3, 4; 2 Tim. iii. 12; Rev. vii. 14.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

The Friendship of God and the World's Enmity.

The spirit of the world is forever altering, impalpable; forever eluding, in fresh forms, your attempts to seize it. In the days of Noah, the spirit of the world was violence. In Elijah's day it was idolatry. In the day of Christ it was power, concentrated and condensed in the government of Rome. In ours, perhaps, it is the love of money. It enters in different proportions into different bosoms; it is found in a different form in contiguous towns, in the fashionable watering-places, and in the commercial city; it is this thing at Athens and another in Corinth. This is the spirit of the world, a thing in my heart and yours to be struggled against, not so much in the case of others as in the silent battle done within our own souls.—Robertson.

There is no greater mistake, as regards the true manner of impression on the world, than that we impress it as being homogeneous with it. If in our dress we show the same extravagance, if our amusements are theirs without a distinction, if we follow after their shows, copy their manners, bury ourselves in their worldly objects, emulate their fashions, what are we different from them? It seems quite plausible to fancy the great honor we shall put on religion when we are able to set it on a footing with all most worldly things, and show that we can be Christians in that plausible way. This we call a liberal piety. No, it is not conformity that we want, it is not being able to beat the world in its own way; but it is to stand apart from it, and produce the impression of a separated life; this it is and this only that yields any proper sense of the true Christian power. It is not the being popular that makes one a help to religion; no holy man was ever a truly popular character. Even Christ himself, bringing the Divine beauty into the world, profoundly disturbed the quiet of men by his very perfections. All really bad men, adhering to their sin, hated him, and their animosity was finally raised to such a pitch that they crucified him. And what does he say, turning to his disciples, but this very thing, "The servant is not greater than his Lord: if they have persecuted me, they will persecute you. I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." There is no just mode of life, no true holiness or fruit of holy living, if we do not carry the conviction, by our self-denial, our sobriety in the matter of show, and our withholding from all that indicates being under the world, that we are in a life separated to God.—Bushnell.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to the Treasurer, H. L. KELLOGG 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—J. Blanchard.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITORS.—C. R. Hagerty and Edward Hildreth.

The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer, and drafts or P. O. orders made payable to him. The general correspondence, inquiries, etc., should be directed to the Corresponding Secretary.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

HISTORY OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; The Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, Conditions of the Carpenter Donation with Engraving of building to be donated by Mr. Carpenter; Tables showing the number of Pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of Secret Societies, Tabular view of Local, County State and National Conventions, and list of organizations Auxiliary to the National Christian Association; Brief opinions of Eminent Men on Secret Societies, and Testimonies of Religious Bodies against them. This book will be found invaluable by all who wish to know the character of this reform and how they may do the most to further its objects. It should be in the hands of every Anti mason. Price post paid, 25 cents each, $1,50 per doz; 25 copies or more by express at 8 cents each.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY OCT. 21, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

THE PEORIA MEETING, NOVEMBER 9th AND 10th.

Beloved Friends:—This august convention draws nigh. It is to set the ark, the captive ark of God, square before Dagon in one of his own cities and see "who is the Lord," and which the impious idol. "The God that answereth by fire, let him be God; and all the people answered, It is well spoken."

Hon. J. B. Walker, if alive and able as he now is, will be present and preside. And those who have read his "Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation," will have an opportunity of hearing clear, distinct utterances from a mind which is teaching nations. Dr. Jonathan Edwards and Mr. William Reynolds have promised to attend, and Dr. Edwards has been requested to open the deliberations with prayer and utter to us words of welcome. Let Farmington, whose woods still remember the echoes of songs and abolition speeches, be represented in force. Where is old father Wilson, whose son was knocked down by ruffians when we were egged in Peoria court-house, for uttering the truths which taught Lincoln to say, "If slavery isn't wrong, then nothing's wrong!" Where are Birge and Thomas who stood shoulder to shoulder by the ark which has saved us as a nation. Elmwood and Yates City then were not, but they now are, and have men who have memories and hopes, Dr. Marsh and his calm, good pastor, and the badgered and hounded Robinson of Yates City. Come in God's name and the country's; and if father Chapman, like good old Simeon, can totter into the temple which Mr. Stevens and his trustees have hospitably opened to us, let us show him the Peoria Dagon with but his stumps left. Let us see whether the lodge, the Dagon of this fair land, shall put Jesus Christ aside, his Bible from our schools, his oath from our courts, his Sabbath from our railroads; and continue to make aliens of our citizens by a foreign allegiance and put a padlock on the lips of every husband and father in his own home and toward his own wife and children! Come! praying as you come and believing as you pray, that the angels of light who are with us, are more than the angels of darkness which be with them! Come to the Peoria meeting!

JOSEPH DUGDALE AND THE FRIEND QUAKERS.

This gentleman with his beloved Ruth, has, after the manner of Friends, completed his tour as a traveling minister through Illinois, and gone home to Mt. Pleasant, Iowa. In his circuit he aided in the formation of a "Friend's Yearly Meeting" at Hennepin, and visited and preached among the Friends in this city, who were hospitably received by the Methodists, who gave up to them their fine audience-room in the old Clark street block. From Chicago, Mr. Dugdale visited Wheaton and addressed a chapel full of people at the College in place of the regular Thursday night church prayer-meeting, which was given up to Mr. Dugdale by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Taylor. He was followed in a few earnest words of endorsement by the Hon. and Rev. J. B. Walker, who is teaching in the College.

This friend Dugdale deserves more than a passing notice. He belongs to that rare and wonderful class of minds which may be considered as the blossoming and fruit of the system of Geo. Fox; Quietists, but not Mystics; led by the Spirit, yet adhering to the Word; passive in their testimony, yet active in carrying out their principles; they were and are at once the most dreamy and the most practical of men. Joseph Sturge, John Bright, the two Gurneys, Samuel and John, with their sister, the celebrated Elizabeth Fry, the good angel of prisons and the peer of Lucretia Mott and the Grimke girls,—these belong to a casket of humanity sanctified, in which Joseph Dugdale counts one, and of whom the Lord has said, "They shall be mine in the day when I make up my jewels."

We knew Mr. Dugdale some forty years ago. He was then a young Hicksite Quaker preacher who had a small store and farm at Green Plains near Xenia, Ohio. Garrison, who was a sort of bugle of God, had sounded the divine summons for the slaves, "Let my people go;" and without endorsing his errors, thousands of us echoed his call, Dugdale among the number. A Hicksite by birth and connexion, yet believing and trusting in Christ as his divine Saviour, he stood square up by his representative "least" brother, the slave. He preached; he testified; he ran off fugitives; he forewent slave products; he engineered an under-ground railroad for slaves toward Canada, and never lost a passenger; and when his sect, which like the others was at that time largely made up of religious worldlings, came down on him to crush him, he would not be crushed but with his "meeting," held on to their church property and plied their anti-slavery work.

Glory to God, there are no slaves now in America for friend Dugdale to un off. Salmon P. Chase, late Chief Justice of the United States; Hon. Samuel Lewis, then superintendent of schools, and the gentlemanly Judge King, and rough, old Tom Morris then United State's Senator, and the last of the true Democrats, who all slept with us on Joseph Dugdale's threshing floor at Green Plains, where we had only houses enough to hold the women abolitionists,—these are all gone over the silent river; but this Joseph Dugdale who called that convention, blithe as the autumn singing bird, is still flitting over the country, filling it with the music of his conversation, and teaching truth by precept and example. His whole Quaker creed condensed is: "There is a Spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." This is his doctrine of the Spirit. His heart is happy, his lip eloquent, and his home delightful; and children and grandchildren rise up and call him blessed.

An agent recently told us, If one only gets a good start it is easy enough to obtain a club. Again we ask, Are you doing all you can, all you ought to do, towards the support of the Cynosure?

SHORT HORN CATTLE.—A. J. DUNLAP, ESQ.

Mice can never be fed into mammoths, to borrow a thought from the eccentric Virginian Weems, though feasted on the manna of heaven. Nor can Pharaoh's "lean kine," in their scrub descendants, be turned into "Durhams," a sub-species of cattle, named, like the Jerseys, from the place of their origin in England. Allen in his "American Cattle" asserts, (not proves) that these cattle are a natural, not artificial breed. We do not think so. Every deer, elk, buffalo or antelope is a reproduction of every other, varying only in sex, size, etc. Not so with the short-horns. Their color is like that of Jacob's cattle and that certainly was produced by artificial means. They are white, roan, grizzled and red; and some of the proudest short-horn aristocrats of Kentucky, are not ashamed of their pedigree springing from Henry Clay's "wonderful old yellow cow." And, like men, they are so changed and altered by their breeding, that they vary like the fashions of dress. Yet, though there have been such things as pure-bred Durhams with black muzzles, they have been red or white, or red and white from the twilight which precedes their history. Dun, brindle, yellow and brown are never short-horns, but correspond in the bovine to Goldsmith's "ours of low degree" in the canine race.

Still the Durhams are a composite or made-up race variegated by breeding as tame geese and barn pigeons drop their wild, unvarying uniform when they come into the keeping of men, so that each may know his own; which would be impossible if, as in wood-pigeons or the orchard turtle-doves, one picture would answer for each individual of the whole flock. Yet it may be that the Short-horns, like the Devons, which are as like each other as buffalo or wild geese, had once their original type. But whether they did or did not once form a species as distinct from other cattle, as owls or swallows among birds; if they were not originally the "royal family" of cattle, they have been made so, as bees make queens. Their calm, dignified port, afar from friskiness; their large, honest eyes; their gentle dispositions; their backs, straight as a carpenter's level; their beautiful, rounded proportions; but, above all, that hidden law of their natures which will make much more flesh than other cattle from the same food, or milk either, if they are milkers; that law is the law of the Short-horn's nature, however it has originated. Food digested in the stomach of a steer will not produce milk; nor will a wild wolf fatten, however full fed. His nose will still be peaked and his form lank.

But whether these cattle are, or are not, a distinct sub-race of cattle, the law that like produces its like, has put them at the head of horned and hoofed animals; and though other breeds have had their hour of eclat, they seem likely never to be superceded or eclipsed. And if so, careful, upright breeders of these cattle are public benefactors. And though, like gold, they sometimes bring extravagant premiums, and so fluctuate in their price; still they are at the head of their kind as gold is of metals. Nor are the high prices which they bring, gambling prices. If the milk consumed by a well kept Short-horn calf at six months, were measured and sold, the amount is astonishing. The risk, too, of losses is vast. Diseases hate the fat, as the gods were said to envy the happy. And the farmer who begins life with a small or no capital; who tightens his barn to keep out the cold and crams his mows to bar out hunger; who improves his taste and critical judgment by study and practice, till the farm-yards of counties and States reflect the images of his herd, is filling the land with beautiful pictures whose shape is given and their colors laid on by nature; and if, as Byron has it, then the breeder of Short horn cattle is the professor of a fine art, whose productions are not hung up on damp walls and in cloistered galleries, but which live and move among men, giving "milk for babes" and "strong meat" for men; which lighten the hard work of agriculture, by imparting a pleasure above the market value of the animals, and thus benefits and blesses the art which feeds the human race.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever,"

The man who has been setting for this picture is Mr. A. J. Dunlap of Galesburgh, Ill. He has, of course, hundreds of peers in short-horn breeding; but I select him because I know his history, and often call to view his herd. His father, who bred crosses from the early Kentucky importations, gave his son an enthusiasm for fine cattle; and he is one of those children who climb on their father's shoulders and look over their heads. He has made pure-bred Short-horns his specialty for fifteen or twenty years. Beginning as a common farmer on a piece of prairie land, he has earned the success he has won. He has bought and brought into his herd ten animals for which he paid the following prices: $2000, $2000, $1750, $1050, $1000, $800, $700, $700 and $600. The aggregate cost of these ten cattle is eleven thousand three hundred dollars; and they have paid their purchase money and given their owner a satisfactory margin and a beautiful herd of cattle. Whoever calls at his farm near Galesburgh, to view his stock, will meet an agreeable reception, and pass through a gallery of living paintings where nature is the artist and good taste the guide.

THE ILLINOIS GRAND LODGE.

This body met in McCormick Hall, Chicago, from the 5th to the 7th inst. Its meetings are secret and have been in previous years almost unnoticed by the press, which showed a justifiable degree of self-respect in the matter. The lodge has, it seems, found its supercilliousness unprofitable, because unpopular, and has allowed a statement of the proceedings under Masonic supervision to go to the printer. Among the items thus presented, several that appear of interest in showing the numerical force or influence of the lodge and its recognition of opposing movements are worth reviewing.

The total membership of the order in this State is reported at 39,956, of which 2,508 were raised to the third degree in the past year, 1,413 took demits, 1,064 were suspended and expelled, 969 applicants were rejected and the whole increase from the reports is 768; but in the Grand Lodge report of 1874 the total membership is given as 39,632, making the increase only 324. A further comparison with the report of 1874 shows a decrease of 232 in the number of Master Masons made, 333 less initiations, 105 fewer demitted and 106 more expelled or suspended.

An effort was made to repeal article xxi. of the by-laws as a conciliatory measure toward non-affiliating members, but was overwhelmingly voted down.

Joseph Robbins, Deputy Grand Master, brought up the proposition to assist in building the Washington monument and secured an appropriation of $1,000 to thus perpetuate the glory of Masonry and bind the order more firmly to the good name of Washington, if a falsehood and pretense can be supposed to accomplish such an end. On the next day the lodge listened to an eloquent appeal from its Grand Chaplain, W. H. Scott, for the establishment of a permanent charity under the supervision of the lodge, to wit, an orphan asylum. The project was opposed by Deputy and District Grand Masters and would probably have been tabled but for the cleverness of "Blessed Charity" Cregier who had it put over till next year.

Of course but a small portion of the proceedings appear in the daily press, but enough to show that the lodge has not yet reached the end of its "rough road." May its members become aware of the fearful end of that way, and seek another, even of truth and holiness, whose end is peace forever.

DEAR FRIENDS, Are you at work to increase the circulation of the Cynosure? Or are you postponing the work for a more favorable time? Is the weather rainy? If your health is good and you are well protected against the dampness, even rainy weather is very good for canvassing purposes. People are usually home on such days with time to attend to you. The Cynosure is issued each week promptly and we hope our readers will be as prompt and constant in soliciting subscriptions. Do not sit at home at a time when you should be out soliciting subscriptions. Our first club of ten has not yet arrived but we hope that half a dozen will be here very soon. Friends in Batavia New York think they can secure one hundred subscriptions in that vicinity with faithful canvassing. We do not doubt it. There are many other places where large lists of subscribers ought to take the place of the one, two or three names which we now have. Have you worked faithfully? We thank you and say PERSEVERE. If you cannot do more, can you find some one who will?

NOTES.

—On Thursday last Bro. Stoddard telegraphed for Mr. Ronayne of this city to attend the Indiana State meeting. His expositions are becoming not only exceedingly popular, but seem to make thorough work with the lodge, which finds its covering snatched away and its hideous deformities exposed.

—The pamphlet discussing the relation of the lodge to religion and government by brethren Martin and Inman of the Michigan Wesleyan conference, noticed a short time since, may be had by addressing Rev. H. D. Inman, Coldwater, Mich., for 15c. per copy; $1.50 per doz.

—The late arrival of an eastern train last Saturday morning, while it delayed our brother Stratton of the Wesleyan on his journey to General Conference, gave us the unalloyed pleasure of a day's visit with him while sharing our editorial labors. If the Cynosure is brighter than usual this week it must be due, in part, at least, to his cheerful presence. Bro. Stratton is Secretary of the General Conference of the Wesleyan church which commenced its quadriennial session yesterday at Sycamore, Ill.

—On the same day also we received a call from Bro. Lemley of the Golden Censer, Rockford, Ill., in this city on business connected with his paper. The Censer has been enlarged and improved within a few months, and a list of over eleven thousand tells eloquently of its popularity as a religious journal. Bro. L. is trying to secure a visit and lecture against the lodge intrenched at Rockford from Bro. Stratton. The Lord bless the effort.

—The North Ohio Conference, the United Brethren in Christ, met recently in Waterloo, Ind., Bishop Weaver presiding. The following excellent resolution on one of the distinctive features of the denomination was passed:

"WHEREAS, we, as a church, believe that secretism is evil in its nature and tendency; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That we will continue to enforce our disciplinary measures prohibiting its existence in our church.

2. That we will lend a helping hand to the National Christian Association Opposed to Secret Societies in its opposition to this prolific source of evil."

Our club rates are favorable for such Bible classes who desire a good weekly paper containing the Sabbath School lesson.

—Bro. Hampe wishes to correct an error which crept into the open letter to the General Conference of the Evangelical Association in the Cynosure of Sept. 30th, page 4, second column, in the line which says "it teaches man to worship" read man-worship.

—Friend Hiram Preston of Lincklaen, N. Y., writes for information regarding the candidates on the tickets in that State, if they are unconnected with the lodge. Mr. Seward, candidate for Secretary of State on the Republican ticket, is not connected with the lodge in any way. Of the other nominees we have no definite knowledge.

—The sermon of Rev. James Williams lately published in the Cynosure is receiving deserved commendation from our readers. Bro. Williams left the lodge while living in Clear Lake, Cerro Gordo county. It is a remarkable feature of his case and a matter of sincere rejoicing that all the ministers of his district in Dakota sympathize with him in his outspoken position. His sermon is now in pamphlet form and ready for wide circulation; price 10 cts. post paid, or $4.00 per hundred.

—Bro. Hankins writes that the Anti-masonic ticket in Cerro Gordo county, Iowa, was defeated in the county, though it had a majority in several townships and received several hundred votes. Though not achieving the success of their neighbors of Bremer county, the friends of Clear Lake and Mason City should be greatly encouraged by the evident power of the reform in the arena of politics.

See our club rates on sixteenth page. Clubs of ten $15.00 or $1.50 each; clubs of five $8.75 or $1.75 each.

The Peoria Meeting.

To the Friends of Reform in Illinois:

Two things are needed on our part to make our Peoria Convention a success, viz: A large attendance of our friends, and subscriptions sufficient to employ a State lecturer for another year. In order to accomplish these desired results, please so far as possible, do two things:

FIRST.

Please have the notice of the meeting read in the churches of your town; printed in the County papers, and endeavor to attend yourself or have some one from your locality do so.

SECOND.

Please send as soon as possible to H. L. Kellogg, Treasurer of the State Association, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., a subscription for the coming year, and be careful to state in your subscription the time when you wish to pay it. These subscriptions will be used to pay a State lecturer and to pay the expenses of our Convention. If we do our duty God will prosper our cause for it is his.

J. B. WALKER, Pres't.
I. R. B. Arnold, Sec'y.

What is the prospect for a club of ten from your locality?

News of the Week.

The Country.

The elections of Tuesday last were all Republican majorities and against inflation. Ohio elected Hayes by some 4000 majority and both branches of the legislature are Republican. Iowa returns a large Republican majority, put by some at 30,000 Nebraska stands on the same side with 10,000 majority. Local elections in New Jersey are strongly Republican.——Reports received by the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, regarding the cotton crop, are upon the whole encouraging. Although there was an over-abundance of rain in Louisiana, the returns will fully equal those of last year. Mississippi cotton will be a little short of the product of the preceding year, but the yield in Lower Arkansas will be large. In South Carolina and Georgia the crop is estimated at four fifths of an average one; but Tennessee and Alabama will have an unusually heavy crop. Rot and rain have damaged the crop in parts of Alabama. In Mississippi alone is there any trouble in obtaining hands to pick cotton, and this s owing to the oppressive and murderous attitude of the whites.——A colored woman was lynched in Mississippi last week and her brother-in-law shot by the mob for the supposed poisoning of a white doctor who was afterward reported alive and well.——A large portion of the Agricultural building on the Centennial grounds fell last week and seriously injured ten workmen.

Foreign.

The Epoca of Madrid, in an article explaining the action of the Government in refusing to entertain the proposition of the Papal Nuncio for an enforcement of the Concordat of 1851, states that the articles of that document must be modified because they cannot be executed. In other words, the people have become too enlightened to submit to the former hierarchical tyranny.——A war has arisen in Africa between the wild natives and the little republic of Liberia. Five engagements have taken place at Cape Palmas between large forces of natives and Liberian troops, in all of which the Liberians were victorious, inflicting great slaughter on their enemies.——A special telegram from Berlin says that, under the pressure of the great powers, Turkey is diminishing her troops on the Servian frontier, and Servia is demobilizing her forces.

The Home Circle.

Chastening.

O, thou, whose sacred feet have trod
The thorny path of woe,
Forbid that I should slight the rod
Or faint beneath the blow.

My spirit to its chastening stroke
I meekly would resign,
Nor murmur at the heaviest yoke
That tells me I am thine.

Give me the spirit of thy trust,
To suffer as a son,—
To say, though lying in the dust
My Father's will be done!

I know that trial works for ends
Too high for sense to trace,—
That oft in dark attire he sends
Some embassy of grace.

May none depart till I have gained
The blessing which it bears,
And learned, though late, I entertained
An angel unawares.

So shall I bless the hour that sent
The mercy of the rod,
And build an altar by the tent
Where I have met with God.

Dumb Bells.

"When I was managing a cotton mill," said Mr. J——, "the girls in the weaving-room used to complain that they could not make the bobbin-boys hear them call for more bobbins. I finally bought several bells, and for a time they worked well. No matter if the boy was at the other end of the room, the bell made itself heard above the clatter of the looms, and the girl was supplied with full bobbins.

But by-and-by the girls began to complain that the boys were getting careless about the bells, that they did not pay attention, and they were hindered worse than before. The boys answered they did not hear the bells, the girls did not half ring them any more. I charged them both to be careful; but things kept growing worse, till finally the overseer came one day and said there would soon be a pitched battle between the weavers and bobbin-boys if something was not done.

"So I went up to the room and took position by one of the looms. When the bobbin-boy was not very far away I rang the bell, but he paid no attention. I studied over the cause a little, nd it flashed upon me. A great deal of oil is used about the machinery, the girls' hands were greasy, the bell-metal porous, and often snatching up the bells by the metal instead of the handle, they had become filled with grease, and would give scarcely more sound than a wooden bell.

"I made a strong solution of sulphurate acid, stood the bell in it awhile, and after they were cleansed and returned to the weaving-room there was peace again between the boys and girls."

But those dumb bells furnished a text for many reflections to me. I thought, to how many people has the once clear, decisive voice of conscience become a dull sound. When Mrs. A. asked me to take a dollar chance in an easy chair that somebody had given to a church, and I asked her wherein lay the difference between venturing a dollar there and in any gambling saloon, she told me that she was once just so prudish; but she had thought and prayed over the subject a great deal, and had received light. "The good end justified the wrong means!"

When I asked Mr. B.——, the liquor-seller, how he dared to deal in the accursed stuff that made widows and orphans, and filled hell with victims, he coolly answered, "Well, to be frank with you, I did have a great many qualms of conscience at first, but I reasoned on the subject, and did not allow myself to be guided by any morbid sentimentality, and as I never sell but to men of means and good pay, who could and would get it somewhere else, I concluded I might as well sell it and get the profit as well as any one else, and my conscience never disturbs me now at all on the subject." His dumb bell was saturated with whiskey —perhaps I ought rather to say—muffled with greenbacks.

Miss C——reminded me again of the dumb bells when she told me a few days ago, "When I first joined the church I didn't care to dance any more; I really was so squeamish as to think dancing and card-playing were inconsistent with a profession of Christ. But after a little I fell in with many other church members who enjoyed these amusements, and theater and circus-going, just as much as ever, and I concluded I had been overnice and self-conceited in my ability to judge as to the propriety of the matter. I concluded if I set myself up as too good to do what other Christians did, I might be a stumbling-block, and in that way fail to be, as Paul says, 'all things to all men, that I might win some,' or something to that effect. And the more I do as the rest do, the more I am convinced that my later conclusion was the better one."

"My poor young lady," thought I, "what a very dumb bell yours is—soaked in pleasure and self seeking!"

Origin of Foreign Missions.

Though foreign missionary organizations have been in existence for over two centuries and a half, and though missionary operations have been actively carried on ever since the days when the little church at Antioch, in Syria, sent Paul and Barnabas on the first mission to the heathen, Protestant missions, in their present form have only existed from about the beginning of the present century. The Moravians were forerunners and pioneers in this work. In 1733 two of their number went to Greenland; in 1771 a mission was established in Labrador, which is sustained to the present day; and even prior to that time, in 1701, the society for the propagation of the Gospel was founded in the church of England, under the fostering care of the English bishops. But its energies were mainly, if not exclusively, confined to labors among the English colonists. And it was not until 1793 that missions, on any extended scale, to the heathen were undertaken. Then it was, despite much open opposition, and more lukewarmness, indifference, and moral inertia, that William Carey succeeded in awakening an interest in foreign missions, which resulted in the organization of the Baptist Missionary Society. Two years later (1795) the London Missionary Society was organized by Rowland Hill and others, and in the following year sent a company of twenty-nine missionaries to the South Sea Islands. Five years later (1800) the Church Missionary Society (Church of England) and the Wesleyan Society (Methodist) were organized. For this, as for many other humane, philanthropic, and religious enterprises, this country is indebted to the motherland. Not until 1810 was the first missionary organization in the United States founded—the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Thus we are justified in saying that modern Protestant missions are all the growth of the past seventy five or eighty years.—Harper's Magazine.

Rich and Poor.

How incredibly men exaggerate the distinctions of outward condition! The prosperous are prone to feel as if they are of a different race from the destitute. But to the possessor of heaven and earth, to whom the treasure of all worlds belong, how petty must be the highest magnificence and affluence! Does the Infinite Spirit select as his special abode the palace with its splendid saloons, rich tapestries, loaded tables, and blazing lamps? Does he fly from the hut, with its ragged walls and earthen floor, its cry of half-famished childhood, its wearing cares and ill-requited toil? On the contrary, if God has chosen a spot on earth, is it not the humble dwelling of patient, unrepining, trustful, virtuous poverty? From the dwellings of the downcast, from the stern discipline of narrow circumstances, how many of earth's noblest spirits have grown up! Voices which have shaken nations have in infancy not seldom asked alms. Men of genius, whose works have filled the earth with light, have owed their training to the kindness of strangers, and their early life has been a forlorn struggle for bare existence. But why enlarge upon what countless biographies of the greatest saints, scholars, poets, statesmen, philanthropists, attest? Bring it to a supreme proof. When God sent his Beloved Son into the world, did he summon architects and artists to rear for him a splendid palace? May we not still learn a lesson of divine wisdom from the manger at Bethlehem? We celebrate this incident of the birth of Jesus in our churches Poets sing of it. Painters illustrate it. But do we recall it when we meet the beggar in the streets, or pass the hovel with its patched windows, leaking roof and smoky walls?—Channing's Perfect Life.

Fashions Starve Missions.

Rev. O. Wilbur of Vineland, N. J., sends to the Baptist Weekly some sensible though tson the cost of extravagance in dress and living to missionary, societies on the reasonable ground that a simpler, holier, more self-denying life wouldturn to better uses the money so often wasted on pride:

We have ample pecuniary resources for supplying every one of our missionary stations in the wide world, with the money, necessary for their greatest efficiency, in promoting the kingdom of Christ in this apostate world.

Ten, if not a hundred fold, more money is expended by the members of our churches to support "Fashionable Life," (the tendency of which is, to grieve the Holy Spirit and tone down the piety of our membership), than all that is contributed by us, to send abroad the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, to the perishing millions of our fellow men.

Take an item or two, as an illustration: The custom house entries, in our ports, show that the artificial flowers. ported annually for the adornment of the heads of the ladies in our land, amount to some seven or eight millions of dollars. The cost to the consumers is, at least, double that sum.

Now, with the most moderate estimate, the sisters in our Baptist churches pay more than half a million of dollars for this adornment of the head, to say nothing of the "costly attire," worn in violation of the plain injunction of the Scriptures. (See 1 Tim. ii. 9–10 and 1 Peter ii. 3, 4.) Now, with all the revivals and large additions to the churches, our piety, I think, must be very deficient, or at a very low ebb, if we cannot raise for our foreign missions, so much money as is expended by the ladies in our churches for this personal adornment.

Fred. Douglass' Escape.

In his lecture on "Reminiscences of Slavery and Anti-slavery," Mr. Douglass gives the following rehersal of his own escape: "While slavery existed, I had good reasons for not telling the story of my escape from bondage, and now that the great trial is over, I do not know any good reason why I should not tell it. People generally imagined that it was a marvelous recital, but it is one of the most simple and commonplace stories that could be given. I was owned in Talbot county, on the eastern shore of Maryland, in 1835, and a few years after that time made my escape. I had been sent up to Baltimore by my master to a brother of his for safe keeping, but it was a strange movement to send me sixty miles nearer my liberty. When I determined on escaping, I looked about for a proper means to accomplish my purpose. At that time great vigilance was exercised by the authorities. Everybody was strictly watched, and if a slave were found outside the limits of his master's plantation, he would be liable to show by what right he was out of place. I was put to work in a ship-yard, and commenced to learn the business of ship-carpentering and caulking. Here I had frequent intercourse with sailors, and in them I thought I discovered a feeling of sympathy and kindness. Although the difficulties and obstacles against escape were apparently insurmountable, I conceived an idea that I could secure my release by dressing in sailor's clothing and making a surreptitious retreat. But I had no papers by which I could pass from place to place. Fortunately, I met with a man named Stanley, who lived in Baltimore, and who was free. He resembled me in stature, and from him I obtained a suit of sailor's clothes, and his protection papers, and in this apparel, provided with the necessary articles, I, in September, 1838, secured my liberty. I got Isaac Rhodes to take my bundle, and, by arrangement. after the train started he threw it in, and I ran after and jumped on the car. If compelled to buy a ticket, it would have been necessary to undergo the most rigid examination, and all description in the papers must correspond exactly with the marks on my person. Accordingly, the scheme was carried on, and I soon arrived at Wilmington.

Here I met Frederick Skein, for whom I had worked, but I was so perfectly disguised that he did not know me. In a few moments the train from Philadelphia, bound south, arrived, and on this was Capt. McGowan, of the Revenue Cutter, of Baltimore, whom I had known intimately, and who also had been acquainted with me, but he too, had failed to recognize me. When the conductor came through the train he rudely called on all the passengers for tickets, but when he came to me, instead of speaking in an arrogant manner, told me kindly that he supposed I had my free papers. I responded in the negative, but his surprise was great, and his indignation not apparent, when I told him that my only pass was an American Eagle. Looking upon it, he stated that I was all right, and with this assurance I came through to Philadelphia, and proceeded to New York. I got there at two o'clock, and strayed about and slept in the streets until morning. I did not know that I had a friend there, but on the next morning I met Isaac Dixon, at whose house I had lived in Baltimore, and he referred me to David Ruggles, a philanthropist and generous-minded citizen. While in the city, where I remained several days, I visited the Tombs, and there I saw Isaac Hopper, who, for the great offense of assisting 'Tom,' a well-known character, in making his escape, was undergoing trial."

Mr. Douglass kept this story secret a long time, because the conductor who allowed him to pass from Baltimore to Philadelphia would have been responsible to his master for the pecuniary extent of the loss sustained, and because he did not want to expose his friend Stanley, and because he did not want slave-holders to know that slaves had any methods of escape. His freedom, he said, was honorably purchased by British gold, $750 having been paid for him by a friend of his in England, and the negotiations having been conducted by the Hon. Wm. Meredith, of Philadelphia.

Why Some People are Poor.

Silver spoons are used to scrape kettles.

Coffee, tea, pepper, and spices are left to stand open and lose their strength.

Potatoes in the cellar grow, and the sprouts are not removed until the potatoes become worthless.

Brooms are never hung up and are soon spoiled.

Nice handled knives are thrown into the water.

The flour is sifted in a wasteful manner, and the bread-pan is left with the dough sticking to it.

Clothes are left on the line to whip to pieces in the wind.

Tubs and barrels are left in the sun to dry and fall apart.

Dried fruits are not taken care of in season and become wormy.

Rags, string, and paper are thrown into the fire.

Pork spoils for want of salt, and beef because the brine wants scalding.

Bits of meat, vegetables, bread, and cold puddings are thrown away, when they might be warmed, steamed, and served as good as new.—Cottage Hearth.

Merry Workers.

Tell me what the mill doth say,
Clatter, clatter, night and day,
When we sleep and when we wake,
Clatter, clatter it doth make,
Never idle, never still,
What a worker is the mill.

Hearken what the rill doth say,
As it journeys every day:
Sweet as skylark on the wing,
Ripple, ripple, it doth sing,
Never idle, never still,
What a worker is the rill.

Listen to the honey bee,
As it dances merrily
To the little fairies' drum,
Humming, drumming, drumming, drum,
Never idle, never still,
Humming, drumming, drum it will.

Like the mill, the rill and bee.
I would never idle be,
What says cock-a-doodle-doo?
Up, there's work enough for you.
If I work, then, with a will,
It will be but playing still;
Ever merry, never weary,
It will be but playing still.

What the Animals Thought.

Little Bessie is a bright-eyed little girl about six years old. She lives in one of our largest cities in the Winter, but in the summer-time she goes to the country, where she runs wild over the fields, plucking the daisies and the buttercups, and making garlands of the clover, and the wild flowers. In the Winter-time she likes to walk out with her papa in the beautiful streets of the great city, and see the shop-windows filled with the pretty Paris dolls, and wonderful toys. Altogether, she is a very happy little girl.

Bessie has a little friend named Stella, a few years older than herself, with whom she spends many a happy hour. One day she invited Stella to spend a week with her in her country home. What a pleasant time they had at the old farm, watching the men make the hay, the women in the dairy making butter and cheese; and visiting the different animals in the pasture and barnyard. There were all kinds of animals on the farm, as you will presently hear.

One bright afternoon in the Autumn these two little girls started off together all alone, to visit another little friend, Julie, at a neighbor's house. They were neatly dressed, and hand in hand went off as happy as two kittens.

They had got a part of the way down the road, when it was so dusty that they thought it would be better to go over the green fields by a shorter cut. So they climbed through the bars of a fence very carefully, and were delighted to find themselves in the green field.

After they had walked for a little while in the meadows, they saw a funny sight. All the animals of the farm were running toward them, and soon overtook them. The little girls were quite frightened at this, and started to run as fast as they could; but it was no use, for the animals ran a great deal faster than they could.

So, tired with running, they sat down on the grass, to see what would happen.

"Don't let's be afraid," said Bessie; "I don't believe they mean to hurt us, for they are good animals."

Such a noise as they all made, talking in their funny way. "Quack! Quack!" said the duck, "Mo-ow," said the cow, 'Ba-ah," said the sheep, "Cock-a doo-dle-doo," said the rooster, all talking at once.

"Oh, dear, Stella, what do they all mean, I wonder!"

"I don't know," said Bessie; "I never heard such a noise before."

Presently a white dove flew over from the barn. "Coo-oo," said he; and then a peacock strutted along, and gave a loud screech.

"Oh," said Stella, "how funny! Why. I heard some one talking, and such a funny voice, too; listen Bessie!" and the two little girls were very still, and then they understood what the animals said.

'Ba-ah," said the old sheep; "mighty fine indeed those girls are, dressed up in a sacque made from my wools, and stockings on, and flannels, all from my warm coat which was cut off last year."

"Mo-ow," answered the cow, "and those shoes were made out of my calf that was killed last year."

"Bow-wow," said the dog, "those shoestrings were made out of my brother's hide."

"Pis-h-sh," said the peacock, "Stella's got one of my feathers in her hat."

"Hiss-i-ss," replied the old white goose, "that sacque is trimmed with my feathers."

"Neigh-gh," cried the horse, switching his tail around, "what would they do, if they hadn't an old horse's bones to make those fine buttons from."

"Coo-oo-o," chimed in the dove, "that little girl has got the white wing of my poor sister in her hat."

Both the children burst out laughing when they heard that, for by this time they saw that the animals did not intend to harm them, and they enjoyed the joke very much.

"Ho! ho!" said a little grey squirrel, "the little monkeys laugh at us, do they," and he curled his bushy tail over his back, "what would they do, indeed, if they had not a squirrel's fur to line their cloaks with."

"Go back to your hole," said an old goat very indignantly, "they haven't got on any fur cloaks in Summer-time; but if they hadn't killed my poor kid they would have no nice gloves to wear?"

"They are all robbers," said the rooster, as he strutted about, "if they had anything on them belonging to my family, I would take it away from them!"

"They are robbers," said an old hen, with a cluck! cluck! "Each one of you take what belongs to you, my friends."

"You're right," said the sheep, and all the animals chimed in "Yes, you're right!"

"Bow-wow! Cluck-cluck! Ba-ah! Mo-ow! Pish-sh! Cock-a-doodle-doo-do!" and amidst all the noise the animals surrounded the girls.

The dove plucked out the white feather from Bessie's hat, the peacock took back her feather, the sheep bit off the stockings and woolen sacques, the dog untied the shoe-strings, the cow took the shoes in her mouth, the horse pulled off all the bone buttons. Such a plight as they were in!

"Well!" said Stella, "I have got my straw hat on; that didn't come from any animals."

"Yes," said Bessie, "I have my gold ring on, too."

Then the animals all laughed in their funny way, and the old sheep said "Ba-ah! little girls, now run home and tell your mothers that they can't dress you up fine without the aid of all the poor animals; and whenever you meet any of us, always be polite, and say, Good friend, I am indebted to you for something, and I will never let any one harm you."

With that the animals all laid down the things they had taken off, and ran away together. The little girls laughed at the fun, and soon dressed themselves and ran off to pay the visit they had started to make.—Baptist Weekly.

The Company Plan.

Did you ever notice what an amiable, pleasant feeling steals over you when you are visiting on your "good behaviour?"—how willing you are to overlook anything that interferes with your comfort?—how anxious to please, and how ready to take an interest in anything that is going on? At these times your face lights up, your voice grows sweet and cheerful, your very movements become graceful. "What pleasant persons these friends are!" you say to yourself; and they very naturally consider you quite winning and delightful. So far, so good. It is just as it should be.

Of course, when you go home you will take all your pleasant ways with you. If these friends who have known you but a little while, and who care for you merely as friends, have power to brighten and sweeten you, certainly when you return to your own relatives, who love you so much more, you'll be sweeter and brighter than ever.

Is it so? Perhaps it is. But if, by chance, it should be—if, for instance, you chose to let yourself be sour or indifferent at home, thinking any tone of voice, any glum look, any careless word good enough for "the folks"—I'm sorry for you, that's all. You lose a great deal of comfort, and you miss a great opportunity to make others happy. But it is never to late too improve. Suppose you try the company plan. Be polite, sunny and charming at home. Commence to-morrow—no, to-day. The home life is only a visit, after all, for no family can remain together always.—Ex.

A good conscience is better than two witnesses. It melts thy sorrows as the sun does the ice. It is a spring when thou art thirsty, a staff when thou art faint, a shelter when the sun strikes thee, a pillow in death.

Religious Intelligence.

—Growing religious interest is reported in several towns in Maine, and in one or two places conversions have occurred Revival meetings have been held at Durham, West Gardiner and Vassalboro' by the Society of Friends.

—An exchange says, "It appears that almost any sect can secure a representation in short order by a little effort among the colored Southerners. Witness the Reformed Episcopalians: The first convocation of their colored churches in South Carolina showed seven congregations and 688 members." How important that this advantage should be used by Evangelical Christians before the errors of Rome take root!

—The Telescope notices powerful religious awakenings in Southern Indiana attending meetings held by the Young Men's Christian Association. In New Albany and Seymour there have been some 200 or 300 conversions. At Franklin and Aurora there were about the same numbers. At Brownstown there were about 300 conversions in two weeks. At Cochrans Schoolhouse and Pleasant Grove there were some fifty or sixty conversions. They are conducted with the reading of Scripture and with prayer. The seekers of religion are called forward to be prayed for, and are talked with on the subject of their souls' salvation. Loud cries of "amen" are quite common, and even from Presbyterians. The churches of at least some parts of that region have been in a very formal, backslidden condition. Freemasonry has been doing its utmost to dry up the life-blood of Christianity in that region of country.

—The Women's International Christian Association met in Pittsburgh last week. Mr. Lamson of Boston, was elected President, and Mrs. John H. Winters of Dayton, Ohio, Vice-president. An address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Felix R Brunot, the retiring president. Mr. A. G. Byers of Columbus, Ohio, delivered the opening address. There was a very full representation from the United States and foreign countries.

—Rev. R. T. Cross of Hamilton, N. Y., has issued the first number of The Christian Fellowship, as the organ of local church news of the Congregational churches, of central southern New York. Bro. C's church in Hamilton is looking for a revival of Christian love and labor.

—The first biennial conference of the United States Evangelical Alliance is to be held in Pittsburgh from the 26th to 29th of the present month. The programme for the meeting is a varied and large one in its range of topics and speakers.

—It having been discovered at the meeting of the Illinois conference of the Wesleyan Methodist church lately in session that there might be misapprehension in the terms of section 22 of the discipline of the church relating to secret societies, the General Conference was petitioned to so change the wording as to forever prevent any misunderstanding of the position of the church as forbidding any connection with the lodge.

—Some confusion has resulted in the arrangements with Mr. Moody whether he shall speak first in Philadelphia or Brooklyn. Committees from both these cities met last week and agreed finally that the meetings should begin in Brooklyn on the 24th and to continue one month. Moody is holding meetings in his native town Northfield, Connecticut this week.

HAND BOOK OF FREEMASONRY.

By EDMOND RONAYNE,

ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE Continued.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Warden, it is my order that we now dispense with labor on the third degree and resume on the first for work; this you will communicate to the Junior Warden in the South and he to the brethren, that all having due notice thereof may govern themselves accordingly.

Senior Warden:—(one rap) Brother Junior Warden it is the order of the Worshipful Master that we now dispense with labor on the third degree and resume on the first for work. This you will communicate to the brethren, etc.

Junior Warden:—(three raps) Brethren it is the order of the Worshipful Master communicated to me by way of the West that we now dispense with labor, etc., etc.

All make the due-guard and sign of an Entered Apprentice; the Senior Deacon arranges the altar, the lodge is declared open on that degree and the brethren are then all seated.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will retire and ascertain what work there is in waiting.

The Senior Deacon taking his rod and having made the usual sign at the altar retires to the ante-room where he finds the "Rev. Septimus Jones" waiting to receive his first degree. He re-enters the lodge to the altar, makes the sign and announces, "Worshipful Master, I find in waiting the Rev. Septimus Jones to receive the Entered Apprentice degree."

Worshipful Master:—(rising) Brethren, the "Rev. Septimus Jones" is in waiting to receive the first degree in Freemasonry; he has been balloted for and duly elected, and if there are no objections we shall proceed to confer the degree upon him. (waiting a second or two to see if any objects) There being none it is so ordered. Brother Secretary, you will retire and propound the usual questions and collect the usual fee. Brother Junior Deacon, you will take with you the Stewards, retire, prepare and present "Rev. Septimus Jones" for the first degree in Masonry.

(The Secretary, two stewards and Junior Deacon, approach the altar, make the sign together and retire to the "preparation room.") Brother Senior Deacon, you will cross the hall, take charge of the door and attend to all alarms.

The "Rev. Septimus Jones" is ushered into the "preparation room" where he finds the officers above named, when the Secretary propounds to him the following questions:

Mr. Jones, do you seriously declare upon your honor before these gentlemen, that unbiassed by friends and uninfluenced by mercenary motives you freely and voluntarily offer yourself a candidate for the mysteries of Freemasonry?—I do.

Do you seriously declare upon your honor before these gentlemen that you are prompted to solicit the privileges of Masonry by a favorable opinion conceived of the institution, a desire of knowledge and a sincere wish of being serviceable to your fellow creatures?—I do.

Do you seriously declare upon your honor before these gentlemen that you will cheerfully conform to all the ancient established usages and customs of the fraternity?—I do.

Do you believe in a Supreme Being, the Creator and Governor of the universe?—I do.

Have you at any time applied to any lodge of Free and Accepted Masons for initiation?—I have not.

The foregoing questions being proposed and answered the Secretary retires into the lodge, approaches the altar as usual, makes the sign and reports:—

Worshipful Master, the usual questions have been satisfactorily answered; the first four being answered in the affirmative and the fifth in the negative, and the usual fee has been collected.

The Junior Deacon then proceeds with the assistance of the stewards to "prepare" the candidate for initiation, which is done in the following manner: He takes off his coat, vest, pants, boots, stockings, drawers, neck tie, collar, in fact everything except his shirt. He is then handed a pair of drawers (always furnished by the lodge) which he puts on. All the studs, sleeve-buttons, etc., are taken off his shirt and any iron buttons in his inside shirt are cut out, in fact everything of a metallic kind is taken away; the left leg of the drawers is rolled above the knee so as to make the left knee bare; the left sleeve of his shirt is raised above the elbow so as to make the left arm bare, and the left breast of the shirt is tucked back so as to make his left breast bare. A slipper is put on his right foot, a hoodwink is tightly fastened over his eyes and a blue rope called a cable-tow is put once round his neck and he is then duly and truly prepared to be made a Mason.

The Junior Deacon now leads him to the door communicating with the lodge-room and telling him to close his fist, takes him by the hand and with his (candidate's) knuckles gives three distinct knocks upon the door.

Senior Deacon:—(rising) Worshipful Master, there is an alarm at the door of the preparation-room.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will attend the alarm and report the cause.

The Senior Deacon with his rod approaches the door gives three loud and distinct knocks like those given outside, opens the door and enquires:

Senior Deacon:—Who comes here?

Junior Deacon:—"Rev. Septimus Jones," who has long been in darkness and now seeks to be brought to light and to receive a part in the rights and benefits of this worshipful lodge erected to God and dedicated to the Saints John, as all brothers and fellows have done before.

Senior Deacon:—Mr. Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Mr. Jones:—It is.

Senior Deacon:—Brother Junior Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified.

Junior Deacon:—He is.

Senior Deacon:—Is he duly and truly prepared?

Junior Deacon:—He is.

Senior Deacon:—Is he of lawful age and properly vouched for?

Junior Deacon:—He is.

Senior Deacon:—Who vouches for this?

Junior Deacon:—A brother.

Senior Deacon:—By what further rights and benefits does he expect to gain admission?

Junior Deacon:—By that of being a man, free-born, of good report and coming well recommended.

Senior Deacon:—It is well. Mr. Jones you will wait with patience until the Worshipful Master is informed of your request and his answer returned.

The door is then closed, the Senior Deacon returns to the altar gives one rap on the floor with his rod and reports:

Senior Deacon:—Worshipful Master, the alarm is caused by Rev. Septimus Jones, who has long been in darkness and now seeks to be brought to light and to receive a part in the rights, and benefits of this worshipful lodge, erected to God and dedicated to the Saints John as all brothers and fellows have done before.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, is this of his own free-will and accord?

Senior Deacon:—It is.

Worshipful Master:—Is the candidate worthy and well qualified, duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master;—Is he of lawful age and properly vouched for?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master:—Who vouches for this?

Senior Deacon:—A brother.

Worshipful Master:—By what further rights and benefits does he expect to gain admission?

Senior Deacon:—By that of being a man, free-born, of good report, and coming well recommended.

Worshipful Master:—It is well. And since the candidate comes endowed with all these necessary qualifications, it is my order that he enter this lodge in the name of the Lord and be received in due form.

The Senior Deacon returns to the door which he immediately opens and says, "Mr. Jones, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you enter this lodge in the name of the Lord and be received in due form." The candidate is then conducted into the lodge-room and halted about six or eight feet from the door where he is addressed and received as follows by the Senior Deacon:—Mr. Jones, on your first admission into a lodge of Masons, it becomes my duty to receive you upon the point of a sharp instrument pressing your naked left breast [here he presses the point of the compass against the left breast of the candidate] the moral of which is to teach you that as this is an instrument of torture in the flesh so should the recollection thereof be to your mind and conscience, should you ever presume to reveal any of the secrets of Freemasonry unlawfully.

The Senior Deacon then passes the compass to the Steward and taking the candidate by the right arm conducts him a little further inward and towards the center of the lodge where he is halted, the Junior Deacon in the meantime retiring to his proper place and the stewards marching behind the candidate. The Senior Deacon then addresses the latter as follows: "Mr. Jones, as no man should ever enter upon any great or important undertaking without first imploring the blessing of Deity, you will therefore kneel where you now stand and attend prayer."

The Master then raps up the lodge, removes his hat, and repeats the following

PRAYER.

Vouchsafe thine aid, Almighty Father of the universe, to this our present convention, and grant that this candidate for Masonry may so dedicate and devote his life to thy service that he may become a true and faithful brother among us. Endue him with a competency of thy divine wisdom that by the aid of the pure principles of our order he may be better enabled to display the beauties of holiness to the honor of thy holy name. Amen.

Brethren answer, So mote it be.

The Master resuming his hat, approaches the candidate, still kneeling, and placing his right hand on his head, asks:

Worshipful Master:—In all cases of danger and difficulty in whom do you put your trust?

Candidate:—In God.

Worshipful Master:—Give me your right hand, your trust being in God your faith is well founded; arise, follow your conductor and fear no danger. [The candidate rises to his feet.] The Master then retires to his seat in the East and the lodge is seated.

The Senior Deacon again taking the candidate by the right arm conducts him slowly once around the lodge-room, and as he passes the stations of the Master and Wardens each of these officers gives one loud rap with his gavel, the Junior Warden giving the first one, and as the candidate is blindfolded these raps very often startle him considerably. He is then halted in front of the Junior Warden's station, the Deacon giving one rap with his rod on the floor and the same dialogue occurs as at the door; the Junior Warden finishing by saying, "You will conduct the candidate to the Senior Warden in the West for his examination." Being led in front of that officer the Deacon again gives one rap and the "same questions are asked and like answers returned as at the door." The Senior Warden directs him to be conducted to the Worshipful Master in the East for his examination, and the following dialogue takes plaee, similar in every respect to that whieh took plaee before the Wardens:

Worshipful Master:—Who comes here?

Senior Deacon:—"Rev. Septimus Jones," who has long been in darkness and now seeks to be brought to light, and to reeeive a part in the rights and benefits of this worshipful lodge, erected to God and dedicated to the Saints John as all brothers and fellows have done before.

Worshipful Master:—Mr. Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified, duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master:—Is he of lawful age and properly vouch ed for?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

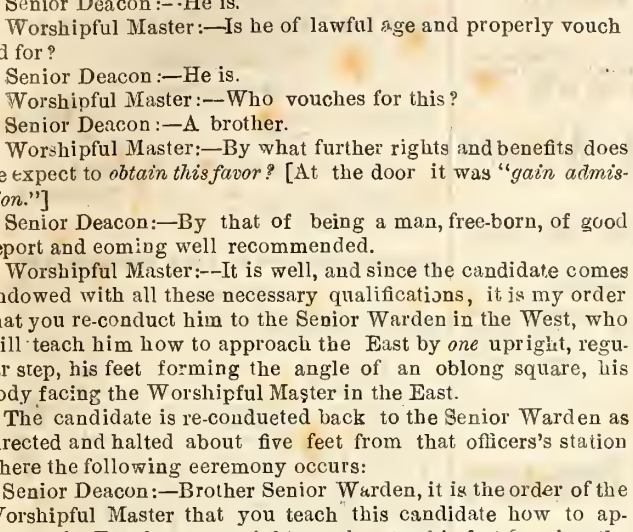
Worshipful Master:—Who vouches for this?

Senior Deacon:—A brother.

Worshipful Master:—By what further rights and benefits does he expect to obtain this favor? [At the door it was "gain admission."]

Senior Deacon:—By that of being a man, free-born, of good report and eoming well recommended.

Worshipful Master:—It is well, and since the candidate comes endowed with all these necessary qualifications, it is my order that you re-conduct him to the Senior Warden in the West, who will teach him how to approach the East by one upright, regular step, his feet forming the angle of an oblong square, his body facing the Worshipful Master in the East.



The candidate is re-conducted back to the Senior Warden as directed and halted about five feet from that officers's station where the following eeremony occurs:

Senior Deacon:—Brother Senior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you teach this candidate how to approaeh the East by one upright, regular step, his feet forming the angle of an oblong square, his body erect, facing the Worshipful Master in the East.

Senior Warden:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will face the candidate to the East. (the candidate is faced about.) "Mr. Jones" you will now take one advance step with your left foot (the naked one) and bring the heel of your right foot to the hollow of the left. Stand erect. In order, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—Mr. Jones, you are now standing before the altar of Freemasonry for the first time, but before proceeding any further in these solemn ceremonies, it becomes my duty as Worshipful Master of this lodge to inform you that it is necessary for you to take upon yourself a solemn oath or obligation pertaining to this degree. It is one such as we have all taken, and I assure you, upon the honor of a man and a Mason, that in this obligation there is nothing that can conflict with any of those exalted duties you may owe to God, your country, your neighbor, your family, or yourself. In your advaneement thus far you have repeatedly assured us it was of your own free-will and accord: if you are still of the same mind and satisfied with the assuranee I have just given you, you will advance to the altar (he is led to the altar by his guide, the Senior Deacon, and kneel upon your naked left knee, your right (knee) forming a square, your left hand supporting the Holy Bible, square and compass, your right resting thereon (the Senior Deacon places him in these different positions) in whieh due form you will say "I" with your name in full and repeat after me.

At the word "thereon" the Master gives three raps, calling all the brethren to their feet, who arrange themselves in two ranks on either side of the altar from East to West, approaches the candidate and the rest of the words are repeated.

OBLIGATION.

I "Septimus Jones," of my own free-will and aceord in the presence of Almighty God and this worshipful lodge erected to him and dedicated to the Holy Saints John, do hereby and hereon (here the Master places his right hand on that of the candidate) most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear that I will always hail, ever conceal, and never reveal any of the secret arts, parts, or points of the hidden mysteries of ancient Freemasonry, which have been heretofore, may at this time, or shall at any future period be communicated to me as such, to any person or persons whomsoever, except it be to a true and lawful brother Mason or within a regularly constituted lodge of Masons, and neither unto him or unto them until by striet trial, due examination, or legal information I shall have found him or them as lawfully entitled to the same as I am myself. I furthermore solemnly promise and swear that I will not write, print, paint, stamp, stain, eut, carve, mark or engrave them, or eause the same to be done upon anything moveable or immoveable, capable of receiving the least impression of a word, syllable, letter, or character whereby the same may become legible or intelligible to myself or to any person under the whole eanopy of heaven, and the secrets of Freemasonry be thereby unlawfully obtained through my unworthiness. To all of this I most solemnly and sineerely promise and swear with a firm and steadfast resolution to keep and perform the same without any equivoeation, mental reservation, or secret evasion of mind whatever, binding myself under no less a penalty than that of having my throat cut aeross, my tongue torn out by its roots and buried in the rough sands of the sea at low water mark where the tide ebbs and flows twiee in twenty-four hours, should I ever knowingly or willingly violate this my solemn oath or obligation as an Entered Apprentice Mason. So help me God and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same.

Bro. Jones, in token of your sincerity and to make this obligation more binding you will disengage your hands and kiss the Holy Bible, which is now open before you. [The Deacon removes the candidate's hands and he kisses the Bible.]

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will now release the brother from the cable-tow as he is bound to us by an obligation, a tie stronger than human hands can impose.

The Senior Deacon removes the rope from around the candidate's neek and throws it aside. The Master resumes his hat, steps back a few paces and asks the candidate:

Worshipful Master:—"Bro. Jones," in your present condition what do you most desire?

Candidate:—(prompted by Senior Deacon) Light in Masonry.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon and brethren, stretch forth your hands and assist me in bringing this brother from darkness to light in Masonry.

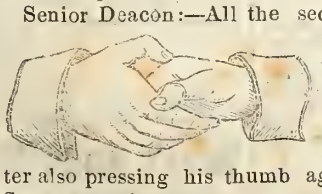
Here all the brethren assemble around the altar, placing themselves in two rows extending from the altar towards the East, the stewards with their rods standing one at the end of each row, having their rods crossed over the Master's head. All being arranged the Master says:

Worshipful Master:—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth; and the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and God said, Let there be light, and there was light!" And now in humble commemoration of which ancient event, I Masonically say, Let there be light, (here the hoodwink is quickly removed by the Senior Deacon, who is standing behind the candidate, and the Master and all the brethren make the due-guard. See fig.) and there is light.

Worshipful Master:—(approaching the altar, proceeds) My brother, on being brought to light in Masonry you behold before you the THREE GREAT LIGHTS in Masonry by the aid of the three lesser lights. The three great lights in Masonry are the HOLY BIBLE, SQUARE and COMPASS. The Holy Bible is given to us as the rule and guide of our faith; the square, to square our actions, and the compass to circumscribe our desires and keep our passions within due bounds towards all mankind and more especially toward our brethren in Freemasonry. The three lesser lights are three burning tapers placed in a triangular form near the altar, representing the sun, moon and Master of the lodge, and are thus explained: As the sun rules the day and the moon governs the night, so should the Worshipful Master endeavor to rule and govern his lodge with equal regularity.

The Master then steps back a few paces and facing the altar makes the step, due-guard and sign of an Entered Apprentiee; (See fig.) the Senior Deacon at the same time addressing the candidate, says, "Bro. Jones, you now behold the Worshipful Master approaching you from the East on the step, under the due-guard and sign of an Entered Apprentice."

Worshipful Master:—"Bro. Jones" an Entered Apprentice steps off one step with the left foot (again makes the step) bringing the heel of the right to the hollow of the left, and is called the first step in Freemasonry. This is the dueguard (makes the due-guard. See page) and alludes to the position in which your hands were placed while taking your obligation; this is the sign (makes the sign. See page) and alludes to the penalty of your obligation wherein you have sworn that sooner than violate any portion thereof you would suffer your throat to be cut across, your tongue torn out by the roots, etc. These signs are given together and are used as a salute to the Worshipful Master upon entering or retiring from a lodge of Entered Apprentices. The Master then approaches the altar and continues:



Worshipful Master:—And now in token of friendship and brotherly love I have the pleasure of presenting you with my right hand, and with it the grip and word of an Entered Apprentice Mason, but as you are yet uninstructed the brother Senior Deacon will answer for you.

Worshipful Master:—(taking the candidate by right hand) I hail.

Senior Deacon:—I conceal.

Worshipful Master:—What do you conceal?

Senior Deacon:—All the secrets of Masons in Masonry to which this token alludes (here the Senior Deacon presses the top of the candidate's thumb against the first knuckle-joint of the Master's first finger, the Master also pressing his thumb against the candidate's knuckle See page)

Farm and Garden.

Saving Potatoes from Frost.—It will do no harm to try the following plan of saving late potatoes:

If it should turn cold and your sweet or Irish potatoes are in danger of injury from frost, have the vines cut off reasonably close, and spread a light cover of straw over the rows. If desirable, the straw may removed and left between the rows for use again. In this way potatoes and many other things ean be proteeted from frost, and be kept growing almost until the beginning of Winter, at very little either of trouble or expense. As many crops are very late this season, farmers should take advantage of such means as the above, and put their wits to work to guard against damage by frost in every way they can think of.

Selling Corn.—Sell no corn in the ear; have all you sell shelled. A hand-shelling machine will answer if your crop is a small one; if large, get one to be worked by a horse-power. Neither will cost a great deal, and we are very certain, that the cob, if crushed, steamed and fed to your cattle will be worth more to you in a single Winter than the price of a corn-sheller, whether you get a small or large one. We believe there is one-third as much nutriment in a bushel of cobs as there is in a bushel of grain, and we do know that cows or oxen fed upon three pecks of the steamed or erushed cobs, in addition to the usual quantity of hay or tops of fodder, will keep fat. Then why haul your cobs to market to be given away? It costs as much to carry a bushel of cobs to market as it does a bushel of corn. Shell your corn, leave your cobs at home to nourish your cattle, and through them your land; and where you now send one bushel of corn, you will be able to transport two for the same money.

All draining and the making of walks should be done in the Fall, if possible. If lawns are prepared and the seeds sown before the middle of September, by the first of June the following Spring, the grass will need mowing, and by the middle of June the lawn will be perfect. If the lawn is prepared in the Spring the work should be done very early, for it is of the utmost importance to give grass seed the benefit of autumn and spring rains. Many persons neglect making lawns until late in the Spring, and then resort to sodding, while if they had sown seed in the Spring, they would have secured a better lawn, almost or quite as early, and at less than quarter the expense. As a lawn will last a life-time, if properly made, let the work be done thoroughly. The ground must be well pulverized to a good depth, and care must be had in leveling, so that the surface will be entirely even and remain so. Sometimes when the surface is raised by using heavy material in one place and light in another, in a year or two it is much disfigured by unequal settling. Never strew manure over the lawn for a dressing. It is alike foolish and disagreeable.

Our fences are valued at one thousand eight hundred millions of dollars, and it costs ninety eight million of dollars to keep them in repairs. Illinois has two million dollars invested in fences, sixty per cent. of which are boards, post and rail, and forty per cent. wire and hedges. These fences cost one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars annually for repairs.

Home and Health Hints.

Small Waists and Consumption.

The mania for small waists has been the premature death of thousands upon thousands of the fairest and most promising young ladies, before they had time to learn the dangers they were inviting by following the examples of those who teach by their practice that they prefer conformity to the requirements of perverted taste to the exemption from the penalties of being out of shape, in the sense of those who exercise no judgment in regard to this important matter. Favored, as many robust women are, with a fine organization in other respects, they can live out a long life in comparative health and comfort; but they are few compared to the vast number who fall short and die before they have attained all they might have had on earth. The first or topmost rib on either side, just under the collar bone, is short, thin and sharp on its inner curvature. It has no motion, being a brace between the dorsal column and the breast-bone. It is immovable for the purpose of protecting large arteries and veins belonging to the arms on either side of the neck. In cases where the chest has been manipulated till the lungs cannot expand downwards they are forced up above that rib. Rising and falling above and below that rib level, the lobe chafes and frets against the resisting curvature. It is inflamed at last, and the organ becomes diseased.

If that chafing is not relieved, but in each respiration the serous covering of the lung is irritated continually, the inflamation is apt to extend quite into the body of the organ, increased and intensified by exciting emotions, laborious pursuits, or unfavorable exposures. Finally, the mucous lining of the air-cells within the lung sympathizes, and becomes inflamed also. In this condition we may trace the commencement of pulmonary consumption. It would be denominated sporadic, and widely different from pulmonary diseases by inheritance. Consumption is not only developed by tight lacing, but caused in many cases, where the original conformation of the individual was favorable for a comparative long life, is beyond question. Medications cannot stay the onward march of disorganization when ulcerations eat the tissues. Once destroyed they can never be reproduced. Therefore, if prevention is better than cure, less expensive, and always more agreeable, why not profit by these suggestions? No compression of the base of the chests of men being induced by tight dressing, a chafing of the upper surface of the lung rarely occurs with them. Great men, giants in any department of busy life—those who make the world conscious of their influence—those who quicken thought, revolutionize public sentiment, and leave the impression of their genius in the history of the age in which they flourish, were not the sons of gaunt mothers whose waists resemble the middle of an hour glass.—J. V. C. Smith's "Ways of Women."

Coal Oil Lamp Explosions.

All explosions of coal oil lamps are caused by the vapor or gas that collects in the space above the oil. When full of oil, of course a lamp contains no gas, but immediately on lighting the lamp consumption of oil begins, soon leaving a space for gas, which commences to form as soon as the lamp warms up, and after burning a short time sufficient gas will accumulate to produce an explosion. The gas in a lamp will explode only when ignited. In this respect it is like gunpowder. Cheap or inferior oil is always the most dangerous. The flame is communicated to the gas in the following manner: The wick tube in all lamp burners is made larger than the wick which is to pass through it. It would not do to have the wick work tightly in the burner; on the contrary it is essential that it move up and down with perfect ease. In this way it is unavoidable that space in the tube is left along the sides of the wick sufficient for flame from the burner to pass down into the lamp and explode the gas.

Many things may occur to cause the flame to pass down the wick and explode the lamp:

First—A lamp may be standing on a table or mantle, and a slight puff of air from the open window, or the sudden opening of a door, causes an explosion.

Second—A lamp may be taken up quickly from a table or mantle and instantly explode.

Third—A lamp is taken in an entry where there is a draft, or out of doors, and an explosion ensues.

Fourth—A lighted lamp is taken up a flight of stairs, or is raised quickly to place it on the mantle, resulting in an explosion. In all these cases the mischief is done by the air movement—either by suddenly checking the draft or forcing air down the chimney against the flame.

Fifth—Blowing down the chimney to extinguish the light is a frequent cause of explosion.

Sixth—Lamp explosions have been caused by using a chimney broken off at the top, or one that has a piece broken out, whereby the draft is rendered variable and the flame unsteady.

Seventh—Sometimes a thoughtless person puts a small sized wick in a large burner, thus leaving considerable spaces in the tube along the edges of the wick.

Eighth—An old burner with its air drafts clogged up, which rightfully should be thrown away, is sometimes continued in use, and the final result is an explosion.

A Rare Opportunity

JASON C. BARTHLOMEW of Ely, Linn Co., Iowa, has four mules which he wishes to dispose of on reasonable terms to aid in securing the CARPENTER DONATION. The mules are young; brown color, above average size, three of them broken to the harness, and the other to the halter. They will be sold for cash or for good interest-bearing notes.

Any person wishing to aid in the anti-secrecy reform can render valuable assistance to the cause by securing a purchaser Will not Bros. Dorcas, David Platner and others in that part of Iowa give special attention to this matter and write Brother Bartholomew at Ely, Iowa or to the subscriber at the Cynosure office.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distributirn of Tracts HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every otherdollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year endiug July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratnitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they conld have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosure Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20 cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimited number of his tract addressed "To THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." It is an excelent tract, bearing the printed endorsement of Executive Committee of the National Christian Association1 He has furnished the public over 150.000 pages of these tracts during the past year.

Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—"The Storm Gathering;" "Abdnction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abdnction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actnally Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

C&N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California,

Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

Topics of the Time.

As an important result of President Grant's visit to Utah, it is reported that he has received such an insight into the political workings of Mormonism as to convince him that no person holding to that abominable system is fit for any office of profit or trust under the government. All Mormons therefore, whether polygamists or not, are to be removed from all offices held under the present administration; and in this respect the decent people of the country will give Gen. Grant any number of terms. On the execution of this decision we may expect a general howl from the religionists of various names who are liable to be classed in their political capacity with the Mormon church; and so-called liberals will lament a retrograde to those days of England when papists and Jews were shut out of government positions. The President's decision rests, it seems, not on the fact of the violation of the law against polygamy, but on the Mormon system itself, which, like popery and the lodge, intrudes its own obligations upon the allegiance of the citizen with an imaginary stronger bond. The courts of Utah have weakened before the power of the Endowment House, just as on every side they are bent to the will of the lodge; and Brigham Young and the butcher of Mountain Meadows are as secure under the shelter of their system as Jeff. Davis or Vanderpool were under Freemasonry. Germany and Gladstone are teaching us that the same danger lurks in the Romish system. The decision of the President shows a quickening of a like loyality with theirs. And whoever is called to lead the nation through its next quadrennial, God grant it may be a man who shall not swerve from a straightforward course against disloyalty though under the garb of benevolence or religion.

Notwithstanding the firm protest of the defendant, the conceited prosecuting attorney of Brooklyn has erased the criminal suit of H. W. Beecher vs. F. D. Moulton for perjury. More than a year ago Mr. Beecher went before a justice and solemnly swore by that Almighty God whom he professes to serve, and whose anger he dreads, that Theodore Tilton had committed perjury in his sworn statement, and soon after followed with a charge against Moulton. These men were put under bonds to appear and defend themselves or be blasted in character. Both have personally and by their attorneys tried to bring this trial to an issue, but failed, first with Winslow, and then with Britton, and the latter has with Beecher's consent, which he was forward to give, dropped one at least from the docket. This, in theory puts Moulton in the place of a criminal under charge with no way of clearing himself if innocent; practically it is Beecher saying, I perjured myself in entering the suit, for succeeding events prove the charge groundless, not worth a trial. The result of the great scandal court, on which he claims his innocence, proved nothing of the sort, and the charge against Moulton remains uneffected by it. What other conclusion is left but that Beecher backs down from his oath, of which he seems to have no more regard than a Freemason?

The Chicago press is spreading local politics over a page or two of each daily until it is thin and tasteless. The fight is over the county offices, but has tapered off to the office of treasurer, for which the Republicans are running a German brewer, and the Democrats, bummers, gamblers and thieves, under the broad title of Opposition, have made forced acceptance of Mr. Hesing, the German "boss," the Bill Tweed of Chicago; and an independent candidate is dividing the chances with the latter. The election music is pitched on this key: Hesing owns the infidel German daily, the Staats Zeitung, and is losing money. He is in debt and wants the county treasury to get himself out with. The new court house is to be built at a cost of millions, and somebody must handle the money. Hesing would like the privilege because he is in need of money and with the aid of party rings can get fifty or sixty thousand dollars out of it in commissions, interest and various perquisites. Rome of old and New York may furnish a parallel to such brazen knavery. The boldness of the plan is its virtue with the crowd that supports it. They live by such wit and have their thief-heroes. But the contemplation of such degradation stalking in open day and reaching its hands into every taxpayers' pocket is enough to shock listless churches into humiliation and prayer. This deluge of sin and lust may tear through a channel where the healing waters of salvation may flow.

A Devout Papist's Dream.

BY S. H. RANDALL.

I dreamed of Pins number nine,
  Onr conscience in the Vatican,
Onr Lord, infallible, divine,
  Who deals damnation unto man.

I saw "God's Partner" clap his hands
  And bless his rising Western throne;
Upreared on Freedom's careless land,
  Now thick with Papal fealty sown.

A goodly vision meets his gaze,
  Adoring millions call him "Lord";
Unhindered, loud, they chant his praise;
  And civil laws onr strength record.

There tops our cross a costly spire,
  Hard by a lusty father feasts;
And here, preserved from lay desire,
  Are holy nnns for holy priests.

There goes a maiden to confess (?)
  And here is an indnlgence sold,
While, where yon priest-led columns press,
  Rome's solid patronage is told.

Now takes the priest the party's gage
  That wonld his phalanxes enlist;
And now aglow with holy rage,
  O'er cowering cancns shakes his fist.

There politicians kneel and cross;
  Then take their platform, priest-revised,
And pocket to damn'd freedom's loss,
  A bill that's holy, been baptized.

There wields a priest onr good old blade
  Of excommnnication, woe
Against the Romish renegade,
  Who fights not common schools, our foe.

But see! by sprinkling fortified
  Against th' approach of intellect,
A school that's tangnt by Papist's tried,
  Who for their pnpils facts correct!

They feed our lambs a pions sauce
  Of learning, antidoted well
By paternoster, psalm and cross,
  And beads, and charms, and saints, and hell.

For this, andacious faith demands
  Snpport from state, our foe avowed;
And 'gainst yon schools that taint these lands
  Her falt'ring friends doth lash alond.

Now quick the sacred toe to smell
  They come, the knights of "Forty Rod;"
They smell, they kiss, and plight they well
  Obedience to terrestrial god.

Here fled my dream; but first gave birth,
  To thonght 'twas mercy trne and great,
By bnrning rebels here on earth,
  Their sonls to hell to acclimate.

He cannot be in earnest who professes to preach the Gospel but has no word of condemnation for that which conflicts with it. The theory has, indeed, some plausibility to easy-going people, that if only the truth is positively proclaimed, it will take root and render error harmless, so that pointing out the latter and warning against it will be unnecessary. But the theory is false. Corn will grow, indeed, even if there are some weeds in the field. But no thoughtful person would say that the farmer should only plant his corn and let the weeds alone. Error is always dangerous. It may choke the truth in the soul, so that the saving power of the Gospel is not experienced, while the power of error is exerted unto destruction. Those who earnestly seek to save souls by preaching the Gospel cannot be indifferent when its enemies strive to render it powerless by pre-occupying the ground with error. They will "reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine," trouble or no trouble.—Lutheran Standard.

President Finney's Conversion.

BY REV. GEO. CLARK.

A great life was "finished" when Pres. Finney died. Not great as the world reckons, but as God measures men. Knowledge, talent, wealth and power are great, but their true use—a true life is greater than all. It was no accident that fitted him for his work and called him to it, "but by the grace of God he was what he was." Like the Baptist, reared in the Judean wilds, he passed his early life away from the conventionalisms of old and crystalized society, having in childhood removed with his parents from Connecticut to the opening wilderness of north-western New York. And when at eighteen, thirsting for knowledge, he returned to his native State to fit for its renowned College, he carried with him that freedom of thought which is the inheritance of the self-reliant hunter and pioneer. That this mental habit of doing his own thinking, helped in after years to sift scholastic methods, dogmas and philosophies, installed in the high place of Gospel truth, can hardly be doubted. But with his remarkable penetration, generalizing and analytical power, with a memory that held as with "hooks of steel" whatever problems were appointed him, induced his teacher to tell him that he could easily master in two years the entire four year's course of Yale, and thus save two of time and expense. Whether this was wise advice or not, dependent on his own earnings, he changed his plan but pursued his studies, sustaining himself meanwhile by teaching.

Returning at length to the new settlements, he entered a law office in Adams, Jefferson county and applied himself to master the fundamental principles of all law; whence it derived its authority and sanctions. Obliged to go behind all human compacts, back to the source of all authority, government and law, to the "Creator and Lord of all," he purchased a Bible, which till then he had never studied, never owned, and placed it beside Blackstone and other law books on his table, and studied it without a thought of the shame that afterwards, under a deep sense of personal responsibility to its Author, led him to hide it. Such was the rapidity with which he mastered the science of law and its interpretation in judicial decisions, that his teachers soon set him to prepare their cases for court; and when he appeared at "the bar," though timid, exceeding sensitive and agitated, so that he could not read a law precedent—the letters all appearing blurred—he was soon able to contend successfully with old and eminent lawyers.

The fitness and necessity of authority, government and law, under the teaching of the Holy Spirit, began to develop more fully his personal responsibility to God. Conscience was aroused, guilt great beyond comprehension, with a "fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation," filled his soul with agony inexpressible. Yet "the fear of men" like a demon possessed him. He read his Bible, but with office door locked, hiding it in his drawer at the sound of approaching steps. He knelt to pray, but rose to stop the key-hole lest some human eye should detect evidence of the guilt and remorse he acknowledged to himself and to God. Justice required open confession for the open wrong of a whole life. Refusal and concealment were new and double wrong, worse and worse.

This secret became his tormentor. It shut him out from sympathy with God and man and surrounded him with "consuming fire." It haunted his dreams and thundered with the voice of eternal law, "The wages of sin is death." It barred out hope and summoned despair to its aid. He must submit to the righteousness of a personal God. A client sought to retain him for an important suit. "I can't attend to your case; I have a more important one to attend to," was his answer. "What case more important?" inquired his client. "The case between God and my own soul," was the sad reply. He dared delay the settlement of that case no longer. In the early morning, he took his way to the depths of the forest, there to settle it or to die and sink to the doom he felt he deserved. He needed, he longed for forgiveness; but hardly dared ask or hope for it, though he knew Christ had died to give it. He knelt by a fallen tree, then looked around and listened. Alarmed at the rustling of leaves he sprang to his feet. It was only one of the little denizens of the wood seeking his morning meal. But God was there. Ashamed, he cast himself on the ground and confessed all, and consecrated soul and body and all he possessed to God; accepting his entire will and Christ as his "Sacrifice," "Lord and Master," "Advocate" and "all in all;" begging for his sake to be saved, especially from "the fear of men;" assured that hell was his doom unless this request was granted. He was heard, and rose from the earth a new man; new, in a "willing mind;" new, in self loathing and real grief for the entire alienation of his heart and life from God and his government; new, in the heart-trust and loving acquaintance with a personal Saviour. He was thoroughly "converted," "born again to the Spirit." He who had fitted and called a "Saul of Tarsus" fitted and called him to this work. Always a leader among the young people he closed his office and went from house to house to win them to Christ.

A "Master Mason" and a "bright Mason," he had committed to memory every unwritten word of the first three degrees. He says, "I was completely converted from Masonry to Christ and could have no fellowship with any of the proceedings of the lodge. Its oaths appeared to me to be monstrously profane and barbarous." He went to the lodge and requested a discharge. They used every device to retain him, appointing him orator for their next grand public celebration, but in vain. The scales had fallen from his eyes, and he saw it as a "cage of unclean birds." Christ was expelled from its ritual and worship; and he would not stay, and thus publicly profess to fellowship what his soul abhorred. They gave him his discharge.

From that day to his death he regarded the "system" of Freemasonry as "anti-Christian," "an imposition on the ignorant;" "its claims to antiquity a falsehood," "its boasts of benevolence a sham;" "its lodge-money a fraud on candidates;" "the profanity of its oaths awful;" "its religion deism;" "its use of the Word and names of God sacrilege;" "its spirit toward those who leave and expose it vindicative;" and as "dangerous to the State and every way injurious to the church of Christ." And in the book he wrote and gave to the "Western Book and Tract Society," under the pledge "always to sell at cost," "he being dead yet speaketh."

Oberlin, Oct. 18.

A Home Duty Suggested.

BY PRES. I. L. KEPHART, WESTERN COLLEGE, IOWA.

An honest difference of opinion may exist as to the propriety of excluding persons from church-membership because they belong to secret societies; but I take it that all who intelligently comprehend the subject must and can but admit that the great tendency of secret organizations is evil—anti-republican and anti-Christian. Of course, the more far-seeing members of secret organizations, true to their secret vows, denounce the church that excludes secrecy members from her communion. This they do because the interests of their society demand it. Other members of these organizations, because they in the most limited degree comprehend the workings of secrecy and see no harm in it, cling to the lodge and oppose all who oppose it. Still others, not members of any secret order, having no correct conception of the extent to which secret orders may be and are brought to aid dishonesty and thwart the ends of justice, see no harm in it, and consequently favor rather than oppose such organizations.

Now, there is no propriety in attempting to show those who intelligently comprehend the workings of secrecy the evil of such organizations. This they already understand; and they are active members of these organizations because they know their power and wish to avail themselves of it for the advancement of their selfish purposes. For such there is no hope, and it is idle to waste words on them. The work of the opponents of secretism lies with the other classes—with those who, as yet, fail to comprehend the evil of these organizations, most especially with the boys and young men of the land. And in laboring with these the object should be to impart instruction on this great subject—to present the truth rather than awaken prejudice. The man who is made an opponent merely through its prejudices will cease to be such as soon as his prejudices subside. But he who by the clear presentation of the truth is convinced that there is a great moral principle involved, a principle whose roots strike deeper down into the very foundation of society, will remain an opposer of that system just as long as his love of liberty, country, God, and right continues. And in the presentation of the truth on this subject care should be taken. It is one thing to present the truth, and another thing to present it so it will convince. Many of the ardent advocates of the anti-secrecy cause are doing more harm than good, simply because instead of presenting the truth on this subject in a clear, convincing manner they only deal in harsh epithets, and spend their time in heaping abuse upon these orders. They should remember that persecution often makes a cause strong, and that the same Bible which says, "Cry aloud and spare not," also says, "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves." We must appeal to the better judgment of those whom we reprove on this subject, if we would win and convince them and have them remain convinced.

Again: Some allow their zeal on this subject to get so far the better of their judgment that they spend much time abroad, attending conventions and lecturing, to the great neglect of the home territory. Their own vineyard is not kept, and their sons, instead of clinging to the anti-secrecy church of their fathers, seek and obtain membership in a church three-fourths or more of whose ministers are Masons. If my influence on this subject is not sufficient to establish my own children in the anti-secrecy faith, how can I hope to convince strangers? The evil should be met on all sides by earnest, persistent opposition intelligently directed—such opposition as is the result of an intelligent comprehension of the giant wrong in all its bearings. Then will its advocates tremble, and the honest of all classes hear and be convinced.

Already the better class of persons are becoming awake to the evil tendencies of secret organizations. The workings of the Knights of the Golden Circle, Ku-Kluxism, and White Leagueism have all told terribly in this country within the last few years; and their story is one long train of rebellion, anarchy and human blood. Jesuitism has smitten the Old World with the rod of religious intolerance; and the stake and guillotine have heaped up their dead as mementoes of the power and wickedness of secrecy.

But the advocates of Masonry say it is a humane and charitable institution, free from all these abuses. Let us see. I will not go back to the abduction of Morgan and the mysterious disappearance of Masonic offenders. I will only give a little of my own experience. In the year 1866, in an eastern town, a brother minister, a Master Mason, approached me on the subject of Masonry, and commenced to urge me to join. Among the many advantages of being a Mason, mentioned by him, was the following: He said: "In the town where I once lived a high-standing Mason was guilty of seduction. The affair created great excitement; and the question came up in the lodge, 'What shall we do to save the reputation of our brother?' It was arranged that the leading men of the lodge should make it convenient to be around the leading business houses and places of frequent resort in the town, for a day or two, and whenever the conversation turned on the seduction case, as it was sure to do, the members of the lodge should take occasion to remark that they were certain the girl had perjured herself, and that Mr. A. was innocent. We all did so, and in a few days nobody believed Mr. A. was guilty, and he stood as high as ever. But we knew he was guilty."

Another minister of a sister denomination, while I was holding a temporary membership in that church, approached me in this way: "If you will join our conference and take certain steps, you will be all right. We have an inner ring in our conference, and when a man is in that ring once he is all right. You can easily get into that ring. In our lodge the usual fee for becoming a Master Mason is twenty-five dollars, but itinerants are admitted free; so it will cost you nothing." A certain man approached a presiding elder in this way: "My brother is an itinerant in a New York conference, an efficient preacher in good standing; but he wishes to come West. What can you do for him if he comes to your conference?" "Is he a Mason?" was the significant inquiry. "If he is, chances are good; but if not, I can give him no encouragement." And this presiding elder was a Mason. A young minister whose father is radically and conscientiously opposed to secrecy, joined the Masons. His father heard of it and wrote to him, inquiring if what he had heard was so. The son replied, positively denying that he had joined. The father said, "Now I know that my son has been slandered, for I am sure Charley would not write a lie to his father." But the fact is, he had joined the Masons, his denial to the contrary notwithstanding.

Now, I ask, Is not an institution which constrains ministers of the Gospel to act so, or develops in ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ such a spirit of deception, prevarication and partiality, a dangerous and wicked institution? "If they do such things in the green tree what will they do in the dry?" In this western country the power of Masonry is so great and so brazen in asserting its power that it has almost passed into a proverb, that even the man who has right on his side need not hope for justice in our courts unless he is a Mason; while on the other hand the criminal, if he is a Mason, need fear no prosecution. The jury will either acquit or fail to agree. Masonry's controlling influence in political conventions and in legislatures is such that an opponent of Masonry cannot receive a position of trust, unless it be by the Masons of one section becoming pitted against the Masons of an adjoining section in local quarrel. That its power is exerted in the direction of the best interests of Masons, and to the neglect or injury of those who are not Masons, is becoming every day more apparent to all. Such is the spirit of secretism; and it only requires a little discernment to enable any one to see that its prominent features are selfish, dangerous and wicked.—Religious Telescope.

The Pope and the Jesuits.

During the reign of Pius IX. the governing power of the Curia Romana has been transferred to the Jesuits. The theory is that the Curia is an organization of the various congregations of ministerial departments for submitting their views to and receiving their orders from the Pope. But in practice the action of the Curia has come to be the action of the Jesuit. This action shapes itself diversely in different countries; for example in Spain it openly espouses the cause of Don Carlos, while in England it takes a totally different line. The modern power of the Jesuits dates from the year 1848, when they persuaded the Pope, during the popular movements of that time, that they and they alone were his friends. Their claim that none but themselves appreciated his genius and piety, had its natural effect. Their first important step was to fill the nunciatures, or legations, and the bishoprics everywhere, with persons subject to Jesuit influence. The consequence of this was the dismissal of every official suspected of a taint of liberalism. The Jesuits who saw the Pope daily for a long period and moulded his mind to their ends, were Father Bresciani and Father Piccirillo. Their influence led to the proclamation of the Immaculate Conception and the Syllabus, to the Vatican Council and its declaration of the Pope's infallibility. To strengthen their hold these men brought to Rome and published just below the Vatican, their organ, the Civilta Cattolica.

By degrees all the surroundings of the Pope became more and more Jesuitical, each episcopal vacancy as it occurred being filled by a prelate with Jesuit tendencies. These things so annoyed the cardinals that they nominated Patrizi Cardinal Vicar of Rome, on purpose that he might have the daily opportunity of seeing the Pope and influencing his administration. In the College of Cardinals itself opposition to the Jesuits was declared, and Cardinal d'Andres went to Naples and there published a protest which greatly irritated the Pope. He was allured back to Rome by the promise that if he would remain quiet nothing would be said of his indiscretion; but his first interview with the Pope was so stormy that the Cardinal took to his bed and shortly died, it was said, from the effects of his contumacy! Cardinal Barrili, warned by this event, said, "I will keep my opinions to myself."

The Council was subjected to a complete system of Jesuit espionage, and upon every prelate of eminence some Jesuit agent was fastened. Jesuit influence has equally affected all the recent sittings of the consistory and the nominations of bishops. Many of the English bishops sent the strongest possible remonstrance to the Pope against the elevation of Manning to the cardinalate, and the election was secured by the Jesuit influence, so that Manning is pledged to do all in his power to bring about their ends. The Jesuits are thus de facto the Catholic church, since the white Pope, Pius IX., is but the instrument of the black Pope, Father Beckx. Whenever the Jesuits are attacked, precisely the same results will follow that Bismarck began to experience three years ago, when he commenced his anti-Jesuit campaign. These considerations are important for the statesmen in those countries in which the inevitable contest has begun or is about to begin. It is doubtful whether, if the Pope died to-moroow, an Ultramontaine or a Jesuit successor would follow. Cardinal Franchi, with Jesuit tendencies, believes that he would be elected. The Jesuits have led Manning to believe that he has the best chance. Should a new batch of Cardinals be created, the Jesuit influence will then so decidedly predominate that the election of a Jesuit Pope will be inevitable and that will be the beginning of the end. Should any other than an Italian be elected, an open schism of the non-Jesuit Italian Cardinals is not an improbable event. In that case a fierce domestic war in every household professedly Catholic would ensue. The Jesuits declare that they look with hope to England. Sincere and humble Christians of all persuasions also look to England, hoping to find her, as heretofore, the champion of intellectual, moral, and religious life and light.—The London Hour.

Lutheranism vs. Lodge.

DEFENSE OF REV. A. S. BARTHOLOMEW OF LIMA, O., BEFORE HIS SYNOD.

In accordance with this pledge I am here; and in refutation of the charge and justification of my only available means for staying a retraction that was well meant, but would bring odium upon myself and the lie to facts, I am charged with staying the proper course of discipline, etc.

I do therefore deny that there is any untruth, or malicious reflection on the memory of the dead in the aforementioned document of the Elida congregation, or that I did aught in the matter that merits even a rebuke, save the signing of the retraction connected therewith; and do therefore protest against this charge, as a whole and in all its parts, as uncalled for and unwarranted. And I do protest against the calling of the Synod in extra session on such grounds, and for the consideration of such charges, as without sense and extravagant.

It grieves me that this matter has been thus brought up in connection with the name of the departed. No reflection against his memory was intended at the time. The charge was against Mr. Overmyer. The document does not read: The conspiracy of Mr. Overmyer and Rev. Stierwalt or between Overmyer and Stierwalt; but his (Overmyer's) conspiracy to drive me from my pastoral charge, entered into with Bro. Stierwalt. The document does not aver that Rev. Stierwalt entered into this conspiracy, of, or with Mr. Overmyer, but that Mr. Overmyer entered into it.

That Rev. G. L. Stierwalt endorsed this conspiracy, as such, is not there stated, and I herewith reiterate my disclaimer of any intention on our part to make any such assertion in that document. In this sense we meant no reflection against the dead. But since we are made to cast reflection in spite of our disclaimer, I would simply confess that we do not justify the departed in whatever part he took in the matter; and if there be a reflection upon his memory because of the association of his name with that of Mr. Overmyer, we do not wish to be misunderstood as a malicious reflection. Our desire is, that the dead may rest in peace. Our controversy is not with the dead, but with the living.

3. The occasion of the conspiracy in my charge as it broke out in open revolt and come to the notice of this body was my public renunciation on Sunday before Good Friday, A. D. 1872, of Odd-fellowship, and confession as to the anti-Christianity of this and all kindred orders, and solemn declaration from henceforth to oppose sin in this as well as all other forms.

This was brought to the notice of the Synod by Mr. Overmyer himself in his letter to the President, and was by the latter submitted in this Synodical document to the fourth committee, at the session of Synod at Janesville, Aug., A. D. 1872.

The obstinate persistence in and tenacious strength of this conspiracy against God's word and office in the congregation, lay in the firm conviction of the opposition that they were standing by the confessional position of this Synod with regard to secret societyism, and in their consequent fond assurance of obtaining aid and comfort on this account in this their godless course, from this body.

This was likewise expressed in the aforementioned letter of Mr. Overmyer to the President, and submitted to the committee, to wit:

"When we left the joint Synod I knew it would not meet with the approbation of father; yet I took an active part in this section of the country to get all of the original Lima Charge into the Gen'l Council. I am now in full sympathy with the General Council because I think she is strongly Lutheran, and because her views on the four points met my full approbation. We have seven or eight secret society men in our congregation. Bro. Bartholomew was an active Odd-fellow. Not one member of the congregation that I ever heard of made any objections to secret societies. I supposed we had, after bidding adieu to our life-long brethren in the joint Synod, made a sacrifice commensurate with the great good we expected to bring about, i.e., the elevation of our churchly standard, infusing new life into the church. We felt so. Some few of our people objected to the responsive service; yet to-day I think none object to the service, while some still object to the advantage taken over them in its introduction.

I know of but one family that would prefer the joint Synod. We thought the four points were a myth so far as our congregation was concerned. We felt secure in the General Council against any further quarrels in Synod after the separation that took place in Lima. But not so. On Sunday preceding Good Friday, Bro. Bartholomew preached a sermon upon a free text: them, The Cross. The sermon was excellent. After he finished his manuscript he paused and said that he had been an Odd-fellow; but had now renounced them; that all secret societies were sinful and wicked and opposed to Christ; that hereafter he would with all his power and on all occasions oppose everything opposed to Christ.

This at once presented to me the secret society question. I said but little about it for a few days. On Easter Sunday the Lord's Supper was to be celebrated. The more I looked upon the unfortunate introduction of this vexed question and heard the bitter denunciation of it, the more the old joint Synod feelings caused by reading Prof. Loy's kind thrusts in the Standard was aroused. After talking the matter over with some who were secret society men, and some who were not. I at once determined to meet the issue then and not drag it along as the Synod did sixteen years."

I had before this, in various sermons alluded to secret societyism and preached against it in a general way. However, now I came, with Nathan to David, and said: Thou art the man!

On the night of Good Friday, March 29th, 1872, Mr, Overmyer desired me to cease all such preaching. However, when I objected: "Why, Bro. Overmyer, you surely cannot desire me to keep silent to the heathenish abominations of such horrors as the Hari Kari, Red Men, Druids, &c." He said to public testimony against such orders he had no objection; but I should keep still in public as to Masons and Odd-fellows. And upon my refusal to sign a pledge to bind myself with regard to these two orders, he defiantly declared: "I'll lead out a party against you and divide this congregation!" On this same night he held out the offer to me of a fine charge and $1,200 salary, to ascertain whether I would not be inclined to accept. I understood it as an attempt thus to get me away, and replied that my call was here, and that $10,000 would not at present tempt me away from my charge. He afterwards when I put this at him in the joint vestry, appealed to high heaven that this was not so; but when pressed, acknowledged its truth, and named the charge.

The appeal for change of pastors as occasioned by the offense, taken at my testimony against secret societies, and as based upon the supposition that Synod favored their views on this subject was the gist of the aforesaid letter to the President in the hands of the fourth committee. Mr. Overmyer says, "If Synod will now assist us in getting a minister, all right; but if not, then some other Synod will be applied to. I trust this will not be permitted."

Concerning all of which there is not a single word either in the report of the President, or of the fourth Committee, or in the minutes of Synod! The life question involved, upon which the controversy hangs and about which all revolved is totally ignored, and the subject of secret societies as the bone of contention, not even so much as hinted at! And all this is most carefully and designedly suppressed from publication in the printed synodical documents! Thus, then, was the point at issue evaded, viz.: the dispute as to the position of Synod in regard to secret societyism, as maintained by this body, in accordance with the utterances of the General Council on the subject at Pittsburgh.

In accordance with my understanding of Synod's position as defined by their utterances, I testified against the Masonic and Odd-fellow's orders sa being antagonistic to God's word, and the symbols of our church. In accordance, however, with Mr. Overmyer's understanding of Synod's position on the subject, as set forth in the self-same utterances; as coinciding with the motives that prompted him in his opposition to joint Synod and predilection for the council, and in argument with the universal conviction that toleration and defence of secret societyism was the source of trouble in the English District which resulted in rupture at Lima; the secret society faction in the Lima congregation maintained that this Synod favored and protected secret orders, such as Masons and Odd-fellows. Thus then, there were two diametrically opposed constructions put upon these Council utterances concerning secret strife.

This was brought to the notice of the President in the letter of G. W. Overmyer, and by him submitted to Synod at Zanesville, in August, 1672, and this body sinfully refrained from undeceiving or correcting either party in their conflicting constructions of said utterances, and lamentable variances fomented by prolonged clashing convictions, as to the position of Synod.

Disappointed in my confident expectation of comfort from this body, and left standing alone with my positive declaration, made in the strength of good faith in Synod's confession to these council utterances, that Synod would bear me out in my testimony against secret orders, and harassed by prolonged and activity of the opposition at home, I proceeded to Akron, in November, 1872, to lay my cause, with documentary evidence, before the President of the General Council (and also to satisfy the conscience of one of my members) to ascertain the true construction to be put upon these utterances, and to obtain comfort and advice in the case.

Your prosecuting attorney, however, to whom I there made known my intention dissuaded me from my purpose, and advised me to go home and admonish the opposition further, and if they would not hear, after proper discipline, to excommunicate the entire faction. He said, "Our records are all right." I replied, "There are among them many who are misled and I thought of only disciplining the leaders." To this he rejoined, "Put them under discipline. Make them feel it."

At another time I asked your prosecuting attorney whether Synod would stand by me in my Lima troubles. He replied, "Synod is for the protection of her pastors." I returned home somewhat comforted. But to Mr. Overmyer's expostulations against my position and course, your prosecuting attorney advised an appeal to Synod, and said: "Take an appeal. Demand the entry of the appeal upon the minutes, give notice of the appeal to the President of Synod, and ask for an investigation." "Alas," he said, "how Zion is wounded at the hands of her own professed friends! May the good Lord soon again send peace and prosperity." Thus giving covert aid to his friend and brother against the congregation.

The Board of Bishops of the United Brethren in Christ gave a while since the following statement of the efficacy of their church rule against the lodge:

"Our disciplinary rule is not only a standing testimony against organized secretism, but has, we believe, saved many of our members, and perhaps others, from being drawn away by their corrupting influences. We ask our people to be true to themselves, their church, and their God, and have no fellowship with Belial."

Notices.

PAST MASTER E. RONAYNE, of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, will hold himself in readiness to lecture and publicly work the degrees of Masonry wherever his services may be needed. A fair compensation and traveling expenses is all that is required. Address him at the office of this paper.

Ex-Masons in Illinois, Attention.

The undersigned is anxious to meet all seceding Masons in Illinois at the annual meeting of the State Association, to be held in Peoria, November, 9th, and 10th. He is desirous of opening a lodge of Masons in the forenoon of the 9th, and posting up in the ritual and work of the first and third degrees especially with the view of publicly working these degrees at the Convention. Will all seceding Masons in the State and adjoining States please "take due notice hereof and govern themselves accordingly."

EDMOND RONAYNE,
Past Master Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, Ill.

Illinois.

The Convention of the Illinois State Christian Association will be held in the Congregational church, Peoria, Ill., commencing on Tuesday, Nov. 9th, and ending on the night of the 10th. Arrangements are being made for a large and successful meeting, so far as able speakers, popular expositions of the lodge and the hospitality of citizens can further that end.

New Hampshire.

A convention is called to organize an association in New Hampshire to meet in Lake Village, Belknap county, nea, the center of the State and on the Boston, Concord and Montreal railroad, the seventh station north of Concord. The convention will be held in the Baptist church November 23d and 24th.

Reform News.

The Indiana Meeting.—A Cheering Report.

Oct. 20th, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The friends, no doubt, in Indiana and elsewhere are waiting anxiously to hear from our State convention regarding those annual gatherings as indices of the growth of the work, and yet they do not represent one-tenth part of the real numerical strength of sentiment against secretism. Owing to the scoundrelism of the lodge power in controlling the press, but a small part of the people know anything of our meetings. On my way home many active, zealous friends of our reform were surprised to find that I was returning from a State Convention. Not a single paper in the State, as far as known, except the State Journal (and that in the briefest manner), made any mention of the meeting; and yet our third annual meeting has taken place, whose light and influence will radiate, and in spite of the efforts to keep it in the dark, thousands will receive the moral light of that meeting.

The convention met on the evening of the 12th inst. at White's Hall, Marion, Grant Co., Ind., and continued in session till the evening of the 14th. The meeting was called to order by Dr. S. L. Cook, Vice-president for the N. C. A. for Indiana. Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. Milton Wright not being present, addresses were made by Rev. J. T. Kiggins and Dr. Cook. Lodge men did a good deal of squirming as they usually do when J. T. Kiggins comes down with his thundering arguments and Cook gets to telling them why people are afraid of them.

The following day much business was transacted, in a prompt and harmonious manner, to which an agreeable variety was given by short speeches from various persons and beautiful songs by Rev. Mr. Fields.

In the evening the hall, seating five hundred, was filled and the arrival of Rev. Daniel Hill of the Christian Worker was greeted with much gladness. His address came down on that field of intense listeners like the soft, love-making rays of the moon. Not one who heard it went away without being better. The arrival of J. P. Stoddard, although somewhat delayed, was greeted by every one who knows his industry and power. "I am here for work" was all the preparation he needed. The harness which fits him so well and in which he expects to die was immediately adjusted and for an hour he poured forth his arguments in a torrent of eloquence.

The whole meeting was characterized by Christian fellowship and adherence to the cause of truth. No meeting has ever been held which so deeply impressed the community in that part of the State or which will reach so many other communities. One hundred and two regular delegates, besides many volunteers, were in attendance, each of whom will carry home some memento of the State Convention, some new truth to use in the cause of truth. And here let me renew my suggestion to the delegates and friends to write a brief statement for their county papers thus reaching public eye and widening the influence of a good cause.

This synopsis of the meeting would be incomplete without mention of another important event. In answer to a telegram Edmond Ronayne came and worked the first three degrees of Masonry as it is worked in the lodges, in the presence of seven hundred persons. The death-like stillness of the audience attested the interest with which they regarded the scene. Mr. Ronayne is master of his work; he is simply sublime. His record for integrity and strict uprightness gives, and will give, a moral power to his work wherever he goes. The friends of the cause should secure his services wherever practicable, for to let the world see the deformity of the institution is to give it its death-blow. With the hope that every friend of reform will devote more and more efforts to its success, I must close this brief notice of one of the best meetings yet held in this State.

S. L. COOK.

THE GENERAL AGENT'S LETTER.

LIBER, Ind., Oct. 16, 1875.

The Indiana State Anti-secrecy Anniversary for 1875 is numbered with the past, and all things considered it was the grandest success of any convention yet held in the State. Perfect unanimity prevailed in all the councils and deliberations of the body, the seeming ambition of each member being to do all he could himself and to help every other worker in our common cause. Bro. Kiggins was continued in the State lecture work, and three assistants endorsed as co-workers, viz., Samuel Miller, S. L. Cook, and Rev. C. F. Wiggins. The convention adjourned on Thursday evening, but as arrangements had been made and an announcement given that P. M. Ronayne would initiate a candidate in the third degree of Masonry on Friday evening many of the friends from abroad remained to witness this occular demonstration by a master workman of what they had only seen by the revelations of others.

The Cary Hall was filled at an early hour by a very intelligent audience, whose anticipation were on "tip-toe," and who remained for three and a half hours, preserving, with a few exceptions, good order until the last. The craft is reported to have been largely represented, and I am informed that the owner said his hall was never before so full. To say the Masons were disturbed and the friends delighted would be useless. It is sufficient to say that Past Master Ronayne dealt faithfully and truly with the "widow's son," as he always does.

J. P. STODDARD.

Northern Illinois.—The McHenry Co. Meeting and Nominations.

The McHenry County Christian Association convened at the Court-House, Woodstock, on Thursday, Oct. 14th, at 10 A. M. On account of the rain, and because of other important meetings appointed at the same time, the attendance was small, but embraced the faithful friends of the cause from the different parts of the county. It was called to order by the President and opened with prayer by Rev. I. A. Hart. Mr. P. C. Teeple of Marengo was chosen President for the ensuing year, and Rev. W. O. Hart of Woodstock, Secretary. Vice-presidents were chosen for each of the several townships. The committee on resolutions reported through Rev. I. A. Hart a very able series, which, after discussion, were adopted. The committee on the nomination of county officers reported in favor of nominations, which was adopted. Marengo was chosen as the next place of meeting to be held at the call of the Executive committee. Linus Chittendon Esq., was chosen delegate to the State Convention at Peoria, and Rev. I. A. Hart alternate. The convention was on the whole a success, and though not large it was like Gideon's army, every man expected to conquer.

Yours for the right,

H. H. HINMAN.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Annual meeting of the McHenry Co. Association opposed to secret societies was convened in the Court-House at Woodstock, Oct. 14th, 1875, at 10 A. M. P. C. Teeple of Marengo was elected President, W. O. Hart, Secretary, and L. Chittenden, Treasurer. Twelve Vice-presidents from as many towns were chosen. Geo. H. Garrison of Greenwood, was nominated for County Treasurer, and John Brink of Algonquin for Surveyor.

Resolutions expressing the sentiment of the convention were adopted as follows:

WHEREAS, we believe it to be a certainty, beyond any reasonable doubt, that societies or orders imposing obligations of perpetual secrecy respecting matters whose extent and character are unknown to the candidate at the time of taking the obligation, are of an enslaving, vicious, and dangerous tendency, producing guile, dissimulation and lies; and

WHEREAS, such societies abound at the present time in our country beyond all former examples; and

WHEREAS, defrauding rings and defalcations, and the impunity of great criminals, and the dependence of justice upon lynch law, and official and general corruption keep equal pace in their increase with these dark orders; therefore

Resolved; That we regard this vast increase of secretism as the very fountain and occasion of the increasing and alarming corruption.

Resolved; That such societies are destructive of social and civil equality on which republican liberty essentially depends.

Resolved; That these societies inculcate partiality toward the members of their fraternities to such an extent as to constitute a disqualification for civil office.

Resolved; That it is the duty of all friends of liberty and justice to inform themselves of the internal character of these secret orders, especially their obligations—since their secrets are fully and faithfully revealed—and to watch them with the eternal vigilance which is ever the price of safety to liberty.

Resolved; That it is the duty of all good citizens to disapprove of secret orders in a free republic, which is based upon the doctrine that all men are created equal, and to wield both the truth and the ballot against them.

Resolved; That it is the duty of the State to withdraw all charters from societies that are not so open as to be amenable to public sentiment.

Resolved; That membership in a secret order should be allowed as cause for peremptory challenge of jurors by parties who are not members of such orders.

Resolved; That while our Government continues, as now under the control of the invisible empire of Freemasonry and its progeny, it is idle to talk of justice or civil service reform. While this incubus remains a pure administration is impossible, right and justice can never control our courts, merit can never be the rule of preferment. Until the ax is laid at the root of this Upas all talk of political parties about reform, if not hypocritical, is mere empty verbiage.

Much of the success of the convention is due to the indefatigable labors of Mr. Chittenden, who, despite the infirmities of age, traveled in all kinds of weather stirring up the people of the county, and making arrangements for the meeting.

Rev. I. A. Hart, Rev. H. H. Hinman, and Rev. P. Elzea were present and assisted. W. O. HART, Secy.

Temperance.

The American Evangelists.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

DEAR SIR:—We read with interest all your notices of that wonderful work of reviving in Great Britain and Ireland effected by the instrumentality of Messrs. Moody and Sankey.

Can you tell us if there is any truth in the statement made by a journalist, writing to one of the papers on this continent, a few months ago, to the effect that these co-workers could find no success in their efforts at evangelistic labors in Europe, until they held a meeting in a "Masonic lodge?" He avers, that ever after this meeting in the temple of the "Prince of the power of the air," they were the most popular laborers in the vineyard. Have they any connection with that fraternity, against whose existence you have raised your protest?

It caused us all joy to hear their curt advice to the clergymen as to the way they were most likely to banish drunkenness from the land: "Banish the vile stuff from your own tables." Would they be likely to give the same advice to the churches in America, in regard to those soul-destroying snares of hell, secret lodges? "Banish all their spawn from your churches."

We were glad to see Mr. Varley, the great revivalist from London, England, taken severely to task by his confreres of a secret temperance organization to which he then belonged, because he had affirmed in truth that "He did object to their lodge excluding Christ, that they might include in one brotherhood the whole human family, for the purpose of destroying the use of strong drink." It seemed to me that the severe strictures then passed on him, in his absence, at that meeting, were the greatest honor done him in connection with his labors on this side the Atlantic.

It is the most painful thing about the Moody-Sankey revival, that all men have united in praising the men and their work, and that there has hardly been a ripple on their sea since they emerged from that Masonic hall in England to give us the faintest hope that they had escaped that awful warning of the Master, "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you."

Let us hope that there is some satisfactory way of explaining the apparent anamoly. Are we on the borders of that blessed time "when there shall be nothing to hurt or destroy" in all God's holy mountain? Or have these men been fearfully wanting in their duty in reproving sin in one of its vilest aspects in high places? If so, it is not too late to repent. Let them come out fully on this point and let us know their sentiments on Satan's masterpiece in these last days. If they cannot do so, and in the most faithful and God-fearing manner, we shall be sorry to see any notice whatever, either of the men or their labors, in the columns of the Christian Cynosure.

I am sure it shall afford all your readers the utmost joy to know that they are in no way implicated in the folly of secretism, though this public disclosure should render them less popular with the craft who have never yet heard them say "lodge." I am yours truly,

A CONSTANT READER.

NOTE.—Mr. Moody is opposed to all secret societies; we do not know that he ever belonged to any. Of Mr. Sankey we cannot speak positively, but if our own interpretation of his character from personal appearance and manners is correct he is far enough from any connection with them also. We do not regard the report spoken of as reliable. There is a public hall in London we believe known as Freemason's Hall, and there may be others of the same name in other cities of England. They are for public use, and what connection with the order they have other than in name we are not informed. It is held to be a conquest for Christ when a saloon or dance hall is turned into a room for prayer and true spiritual worship. It will be a day of thanksgiving when the lodges are changed from temples of Baal to meeting places for the children of the only true and living God.—ED.

Let Christians Read and Ponder.

In making a computation of the money expended by the members of the M. E. church for Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship, I was startled at its magnitude. Our M. E. church in the United States numbers 2,100,000 members. Taking the average from the number of Masons and Odd-fellows belonging to the six churches here in Rochester, N. Y., there are say thirty secret society men for 1,200 members; this counts up in the whole church 52,500 secret society men, Odd-fellows and Freemasons, to say nothing of the grangers, etc. The cost of degrees on an average would count up more than $20 each, or the enormous sum of $1,050,000 paid out the first year of initiation for degrees only. Other expenses necessarily occur, such as for regalia, jewelry, etc. Can we be guiltless for this outlay of the Lord's money? Are the ministry, multitudes of whom are secret society men, whose influence preponderates in favor of secrecy, not greatly responsible? They receive the bribe of a free pass into the Christless craft and take its blasphemous oaths, and say, "We are free from the blood of all men." If we add an average of four dollars per Mason for the regalia, etc., we have the first year $208,000, added to $1,050,000, equals $1,258,000 the first year. Even if no more money was paid in afterwards, there would be the annual interest on the above sum lost every year; this would amount to $88,060. But there are besides the yearly dues, averaging at least $4 more, making another $88,060 annual cost of these societies, or $166,120 added to $1,258,000, equal in all $1,424,120 after the first year. Can Methodists consent to this and be blameless? WOODRUFF POST.

OUR MAIL.

Thos. Butler, Shoalsboro, Ind., writes: "I cannot do anything in getting subscribers here for the want of a lecturer to open the eyes of the people."

We hope friends in localities where lectures are delivered will improve the opportunity and try to secure a large list of subscribers at a time when the subject is fresh in the minds of the people. But in this work as in all work for Christ and his cause, it is well to be instant in season and out of season.

Jason B. Wells, DeRuyter, N. Y., writes:

"I am hard up for money but I feel that the cause advocated by the Cynosure is the cause of God and truth, therefore I want to help sustain it."

A friend from Norwalk orders the Cynosure to be sent to his son "as he is inclined to secret societies."

Are there not some more sons, young men inclined to secret societies to whom others can profitably send the Cynosure?

A friend in Warren, Ill., writes that the Cynosure "is a welcome visitor. I cannot do without it. I am standing in front of the battle in this place; the only woman that dares to say a word against the secret workings of iniquity. They roped my husband in and then my only two sons, and I feel it deeply. Thanks be to God, my husband has left them, and now I am laboring to save my two sons."

Philemon Cromwell, Ithaca, O., writes:

"I have been reading your paper ever since it has been published, and I am not tired of it yet. I want to be a reader of it as long as I live. I am in my seventy-third year."

Asa Haskins, Thompson, Iowa, writes to the Cynosure:

"I became acquainted with you when you were not more than six weeks old, when you were but a little bit of a fellow, and have stood by you in youth up to mature years. I don't want you to forsake me in my old age."

The Cynosure will do all it can to keep its old friends and supporters.

S. Walker, Bellefountain, Wis., writes:

"I have kept your paper going all the time. I will do all I can for you in the reform."

Carey Walker, Greene, Ind., writes:

"I will try and get up a club between this and the holidays."

Rev. C. W. Witt, writes us that two of our last year's subscribers are dead. Death should always admonish us to work, for the night is coming.

Henry Fry, Grant City, Mo., writes:

"I expect to take your paper as long as I live."

Life subscribers are very desirable.

G. H. Mabbott, Rutland, Wis., writes:

"I want to say that when I saw the first convention advertised for Aurora, Ill., (in 1867) I felt thankful that the Lord was putting it in the hearts of people to oppose the works of darkness, and I have been trying to aid you in your efforts. I took the first issue of your paper and have read it ever since, and while I live I intend to be one in your ranks to overthrow these abominations."

C. Conkling, Norwalk, Ohio, writes:

"Allow me to suggest that in printing another edition of Exposition of the Grange, it should bear the impress of the National Christian Association. The better sort of people ask on what authority is this? Is it not a catch-penny affair? What is the source of the information? Who revealed the secret grange? Again, the evidence of the murder of Morgan should be tabulated, brought in a narrow and compact form, so that upon it those who now become Masons can be charged with complicity in the murder. Masonry is very strong in this county and there is warm work to be done."

When the N. C. A. secure their publishing house their impress will be upon their publications. We have the endorsements of the Grange Exposition by two grangers, one a reliable Master of a grange, but have been requested to withhold them for the present. Will such of our readers as know this exposition of the grange to be correct be so kind as to write out their endorsement for publication and forward it to us? We like your idea about tabulating the evidence in the Morgan case. Can you do this? We will be glad to publish it.

Wm. Sherman, Deer River, N. Y., writes:

"I should like to see secretism go down."

Home and Health Hints.

MOTHERS.—Many a discouraged mother folds her tired hands at night, and feels as if she had, after all, done nothing, although she has not spent an idle moment since she arose. Is it nothing that your little helpless children have had some one to come to with all their childish griefs and joys? Is it nothing that your husband feels "safe" when he is away to his business, because your careful hand directs everything at home? Is it nothing when his business is over, that he has the blessed refuge of home, which you have that day done your best to brighten and refine? Oh, weary and faithful mother, you little know your power when you say, "I have done nothing." You have a fairer record than this written over against your name in the minds of others. Do not then despond. —Sel.

WARMING WITHOUT FIRE.—If people had no common sense about what they should wear to keep them warm during cold weather, we might stop to tell them; so the trouble is, they never think for a moment, but, like a wild beast use the same hide summer and winter. People go about the streets and about their business half doubled over, looking like anything but a man; go for hours together huddling up and shivering, quarreling at the weather; quarreling at the fires, which are not sufficient to warm them, when the fact is the fault lay in themselves. There is fire enough in every one to keep them comfortable, if he puts clothing on. Lay it on until you have enough to feel warm. Never go about half frozen, or remain chilled for half-an-hour at a time. But if one feels cold, even for a short while, he may get a comfortable heat, not reached of a fire, by immersing his hands in hot water. Let every reader try this, and very poor people may find it a great economy. Still, dress warm; it is better than fire.—Hall's Journal.

MANTLEPIECE ORNAMENTS.—Suspend an acorn within half an inch of the surface of some water contained in a vace, tumbler or saucer, allow it to remain undisturbed for several weeks. It will burst open, and small roots will seek the water, a straight and tapering stem, with beautiful glossy green leaves will shoot upward and present a very pleasing appearance. The water should be changed once a month, taking care to supply water of the same warmth; bits of charcoal added to it will prevent the water from souring. If the leaves turn yellow, add one drop of ammonia to the water, and they will renew their luxuriance.

Farm and Garden.

MODES OF FEEDING.—The most wasteful way of feeding corn is on the ear, for very much is wasted and thrown out with the manure, while much that is eaten passes through the pig undigested, and thus keeps company with that already wasted. A better plan is to shell it and feed it in troughs, though not, by any means, the most economical. Oats is a better feed than corn for the production of milk, as more nitrogen is furnished to make the casein or cheese of the milk. Pea meal also is a great milk yielder, because possessing a large proportion of the nitrogenous element. If corn meal is used, a pound of oil-meal to each cow per day should be added; and all fed with cut hay, moistened so as to cause the meal to adhere to the hay. Sometimes the cost of oats is more than oil meal or pea meal per pound, when it is much cheaper and as well to use the latter.—Live Stock Journal.

AN EXCELLENT VARNISH FOR HARNESS.—Procure a half pound or a pound of gumshellac, according to the quantity desired; break the scales fine, and put them in a jug or bottle; add good alcohol sufficient to cover the gum; cork tightly and place where it will be kept warm. In about two days, if shaken frequently, the gum will be dissolved and ready for use. If the liquid appears as thick as thin molasses, add more alcohol. To one quart of varnish add one ounce of good lampblack and an ounce of gum camphor. Such varnish will not render leather hard, but will keep the harness from becoming soaked with water, and the surface clean and neat for a long time. A coat of it will effectually prevent the oil in the leather from soiling one's hands. Nothing is better to render a farmer's boots water-proof than an occasional coat of this leather varnish.—Home Journal.

KEEPING APPLES.—Apples keep well in good, new, clean flour barrels, headed up and placed in a cool, dry cellar, or better still, in some upper room, if not allowed to freeze. Barrel as above, and lay down in an outhouse or shed about three inches apart, on sawdust some three or four inches thick, and then cover barrels and all with sawdust deep enough to prevent freezing, being careful not to put on or between the barrels enough to heat. They can easily be taken out as wanted, a barrel at a time, and even Fall apples keep crisp and nice till March or April.

WHAT TO DO WITH OLD BOOT LEGS.—"Farmer" writes to the Agriculturist: "Old boot legs are worth very little as mending material. The best use that I have found for them is, to cut the legs of them off low down, draw the legs on, put on your shoes, letting the legs come low down over the shoes. If plowing or walking through mud, wet grass, etc., put your pants inside, and the leggings will answer about as well as a pair of boots entire, and cost about half as much."

EDUCATIONAL.

—A daily noon prayer-meeting has for some time been maintained with encouraging results at Wheaton College. This is in addition to the students' weekly prayer-meeting. A weekly inquiry meeting is also held in the study of the pastor of the College church, Rev. L. Taylor.

—Prof. Boise of the Chicago University writes to the Standard that probably one-third of his students have some employment to sustain themselves while in college. Some distribute morning papers, some are reporters for the press, some are sextons, others light street lamps, and others are street car conductors.

—The Western Light is a new college journal devoted to the interests of Western College at Western, Iowa. It will maintain the religious and reformatory views of the United Brethren in Christ and be another educator in this excellent way alongside the college.

—The Knoxville Chronicle says that a building is soon to be erected in that city for a Normal School for the colored people by the United Presbyterians. It is proposed to erect a three-story building, 82x64 feet, with kitchen, dining-room, laundry, etc. They propose to complete the building and have the school in operation within a year.

—Saxony is generally held to come next to Prussia in their high estimate of national education. The entire kingdom, with a population of 2,500,000, possesses 2,143 public schools, with 430,000 thousand scholars and 5,000 teachers. Besides these public schools are 124 private ones, with 8,200 pupils and 711 masters. There are also ninety-one infant schools on the Froebel system.

—Germany is doing much to advance art education among her people. An annual sum of forty thousand thalers has been granted by the Government for the carrying out of the proposed project of having plaster casts taken of all the most important monuments of architecture and sculpture in Italy. The Berlin Gallery alone has been enriched during three years by the addition of 220 pictures, 73 works of sculpture, 12,368 engravings and drawings, 20,800 coins and medals, 50 Egyptian antiquities, and other additions in various departments making in the whole a total of 44,337 works in three years.

Temperance.

The National Christian Temperance Alliance.

[From the third circular of this body we extract the following. Full information regarding its interesting work may be had of Thos. H. Rabe, Pittsburgh, Pa.—ED. CYN.]

We have enlisted in this work, wholly from a sense of duty, being convinced that a united Christian effort would lead, by divine guidance and aid, to practical results, and speedily end the sinful and murderous traffic in intoxicating drinks. As our population increases, this evil takes deeper root, and each succeeding generation will have greater difficulty in uprooting it.

Consider, briefly, the necessity and aim of the work:

It is to save our laboring classes $1,000,000,000, annually, to provide family comforts. To open prison doors, and release 300,000 of our fellow-men now held in confinement to accommodate this trade. To transform double the above number of drunken idlers into sober producers, and save a thousand of our citizens weekly from a premature death, and a drunkard's eternity, shut out from heaven.

But again. Politically, our country is in a fearful condition; the whiskey ring now dictates who shall rule the land; their corrupt influence is everywhere felt, and, as towns become cities, and cities increase in population, the case steadily grows worse.

But where does this whiskey ring obtain its wonderful strength, and become a ruler over us? This question must be answered before we need attempt to deprive it of its power.

We answer without fear of contradiction, that their strength lies in what is known, politically speaking, as the primary meetings, and it is in the mode of conducting these meetings that the ring find an opportunity to practice fraud and corruption, which they are enabled to do by their seared consciences, and enormous profits, and thus secure their delegate to the nominating convention, where they nominate only those who are pledged to do the bidding of the ring. The intelligent reader knows this to be true; and, without further delay, we turn to the remedy! And this must be suited to the case to effect a cure. Whatever is necessary to insure success should certainly be undertaken, or the attempt abandoned.

1st. Then we place prayer as a necessary means to this end. God must be in the movement, or we fail; and by his Holy Spirit the consciences of the good people of the land must be aroused, that they may become sensible of this monster demon that is encompassing our destruction, and be induced to rise as a unit for its banishment

2d. A unit we must be.

Unless God will unite us in this work, and give us a general plan for its accomplishment, the end of this struggle will be greatly delayed. By advancing all along the line, shoulder to shoulder, we can enjoy each other's company, come to each other's help, and as children of God, see at last how wisely our Father has led us.

3d, Agitation by pulpit, press, rostrum, and personal appeal is necessary.

The old plan, say you. Yes, powerful speakers have put forth herculean efforts to reform the masses; liquor dealers have been conscience-stricken, and abandoned the traffic; drunkards have quit their cups; but when the laborers became exhausted, and overtaxed bodies demanded rest, the dram-shops were again opened, and the drunkards returned to their cups. The end was not accomplished and why? Because the roots of the traffic were still left to spring up again.

4th, and lastly. We have already said the primary meeting was the vital point to be reached and remedied.

We must then have a change just here, and in the mode of holding these meetings; and here the ballot comes in as essential to the success of our cause, and without its use, we need not attempt to succeed in our mission.

The first thing to be done is to organize your State Alliance, auxiliary to the National; then your county Alliance, auxiliary to the State; then appoint committees in every voting precinct in the county, of those who will pray and work. And, when the season arrives for holding primary meetings, the County Executive Committee shall call for public primary meetings, to be held in every voting precinct, each meeting in a separate room in the public school building, hall or church, and be composed only of those who are in favor of abolishing the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

These primaries should be evening meetings, and special prayer be offered, that the friends of the cause, residing in the precinct do attend, as indifference here will prove fatal to us.

This plan of electing delegates will secure nominating conventions composed of persons who will respect the views of those whom they represent, and ere long we shall be enabled to place in positions of public trust, Christian statesmen, who will enact righteous laws, and fearlessly have them enforced. Men who will look to God and his law for wisdom and direction, and not to the brothel for counsel and bribes. Men who will have the intelligence to know what our country requires to restore prosperity; who will discern that depreciated currency, and speculative prices, while they burden the poor, do not add to the wealth of a nation, but the land that, by God's blessing will produce abundance, and be the supplier of the world, will be the land of gold, and solid prosperity. That it is not those who are ignorant of God's law that are the educated ones, nor those who desecrate the Sabbath that are the happy people.

Lesson for Nov. 7th.—The Work of the Spirit.

SCRIPTURE.—John xvi. 7-14; Commit 7-14; Primary Verse, 8.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin and of righteousness, and of judgment:

9 Of sin, because they believe not on me;

10 Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;

11 Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"He shall teach you all things."—John xiv. 26.

LESSON OUTLINE.

THE COMFORTER.

HIS COMING WAS EXPEDIENT.

(1)—For the world. vr. 8; John vii. 39: Acts ii. 33-41.

(2)—For the Apostles. John xiv. 16; vr. 13.

(3)—For himself. John xv. 26; vr. 14.

HIS OFFICE.

(1)—To convince the world

a. Of Sin. v. 9: John xv. 22-24.

b. Of Righteousness. v. 10.

c. Of Judgment. v. 11.

(2)—To teach.

a. By quickening the understanding. John xiv. 26; Eph. i. 17, 18; I John ii. 20, 27.

b. By quickening the memory. John xiv. 26; xii. 16.

c. By illuminating the Word. 1 Cor. ii. 9-14; v. 13.

(3)—To testify of Christ.

a. As to himself. John xv. 26; xvi. 14.

b. As to his words. xiv. 26; xvi. 13, 15.

c. Through his disciples. Acts i. 8; Heb. ii. 4; 1 Pet. i. 12.

d. Against his murderers. Acts ii. 37; v. 30-32.

1.—How little we know when to sorrow and when to rejoice! The disciples were mourning because Jesus was going away from them. But his going was necessary to redemption. What a blessing would they have withheld if their affectionate sorrow had detained him with them. Had they kept him, they had not had the gift of the Holy Spirit, and so would not have seen three thousand converted in one day. Let us, when seeming afflictions come, remember that they are but for a moment "and that they work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Matt. v. 11, 12; 2 Cor. iv. 17, 18; Heb. xii. 10; 1 Pet. iv. 13, 14.

2.—The sin of unbelief is something more than a rejection of Christ as the Son of God. It is a declaration that God would not send his Son; that all the divine attestations of his divinity by signs, by miracles, by prophecy, are untrue, and so God is made a liar. When our government gives to its representative abroad the seal and attestation of his ministry, if he then is rejected and insulted by the people of the country to which he is accredited, it is a rejection and insult of this government as well as its servant. iii. 36; v. 23; viii. 23; x. 30; xv. 23, 24; xii. 48; 1 John ii. 23; iv. 15; 2 John ix.

3.—The heart once convicted of sin does not stop to compare itself with other hearts, but with the righteousness of Christ. It does not say: "I guess I am as good as my neighbors," but "Woe is me, for I am the chief of sinners!" It knows that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked."— Eccl. vii. 20; Jer, xvii. 9; Matt. xii. 35; Mark vii. 21-23; 1 Cor. xv. 9; 1 Tim. i. 15; Jas. ii. 10, 11.

4.—Even the Holy Ghost came with no new revelation. He came with the same "old, old story" that the world needs so much, and that some of us have learned to love so well. He came not even to speak of himself, but just to tell anew that story. And whenever men are converted we may be sure that it is not because they have heard something new, but that same story of love and redemption. iii. 14; viii. 23; xii. 32, 33; xiv. 6; xvii. 3; Heb. ii. 9; 1 John ii. 7.

5.—O, the power of the Holy Ghost—its convicting, converting, instructing power! And yet there are many who do not seem to have even "so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." If men were only thoroughly filled with his Spirit, one man might convert a nation, and soon every knee would bow. Pray, pray, PRAY more for the gifts and power of the Holy Ghost! Zech. iv. 6; Micah iii. 8; Rom. xv. 19; 1 Cor. ii. 4; Eph. ii. 18; iii. 18; vi. 17; 1 Thess i. 5; Heb. ii. 4.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to the Treasurer, H. L. KELLOGG 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—J. Blanchard.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITORS.—C. R. Hagerty and Edward Hildreth.

The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer, and drafts or P. O. orders made payable to him. The general correspondence, inquiries, etc., should be directed to the Corresponding Secretary.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Peoria Meeting.

To the Friends of Reform in Illinois:

Two things are needed on our part to make our Peoria Convention a success, viz: A large attendance of our friends, and subscriptions sufficient to employ a State lecturer for another year. In order to accomplish these desired results, please so far as possible, do two things:

FIRST.

Please have the notice of the meeting read in the churches of your town; printed in the County papers, and endeavor to attend yourself or have some one from your locality do so.

SECOND.

Please send as soon as possible to H. L. Kellogg, Treasurer of the State Association, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., a subscription for the coming year, and be careful to state in your subscription the time when you wish to pay it. These subscriptions will be used to pay a State lecturer and to pay the expenses of our Convention. If we do our duty God will prosper our cause for it is his.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY OCT. 21, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENDE.

WESLEYAN GENERAL CONFERENCE—9TH QUADRENNIAL SESSION.

SYCAMORE, DeKalb Co., Ill.
Oct. 20, 1875.

This venerable body met here in the Wesleyan church, 2 o'clock P. M. I arrived in the evening in time to hear a discourse from Rev. H. E. Walker of Minnesota, from the text, "War a good warfare," 1 James, i. 18, and seldom has a call to arms been better or clearer rung out. His scope and drift were that the ministers before him should "war a good warfare" against sin in general on the side of holiness. "There are but two sides to God's throne of judgment, the right hand and the left; but two voices come from that throne, 'Come ye blessed,' and 'Depart ye cursed;' but two characters, saint and sinner; and but two ends to life's race, heaven and hell. We are on one side or the other in this universal war between right and wrong. Neuter means nothing; but there are no neuters in this mighty and universal struggle." "War on intemperance," of which he gave a rapid statistical view; "war on secretism which was opposed to God's nature and Christ's example, who "In secret said nothing." We must war on that which excludes Christ, dishonors marriage and distracts the family by oaths separating husband and wife; and, in a few vigorous sentences, he depicted the secret orders as simple antagonisms to all virtue and rational goodness among men. He proceeded to say we must "war on that foreign power which is reaching its long bony fingers into our schools and tearing the Bible of God out of American education, and stripping the laurels of divine thought and truth from the brows of our children; taking out all ideas of God from our national education and filling the vast void by ideas of prie stis and the tinsel drapery and lordly titles of kings." On this head the speaker was very eloquent. Hist uterance was rapid and not always smooth; his words cannot be given, but his thoughts can.

After he had closed he was followed by a few clear and finished remarks by Rev. C. F. Hawley of Pennsylvania, who repeated the leading ideas of the discourse touching the great warfare so vividly depicted by the preacher. Mr. Hawley is a much more than common speaker, with quiet, dreamy eyes, full fair forehead and fearless utterance. He mentioned intemperance, secretism and popery by name, as proof that the foes were mighty with which we are called to war; and by his more calm and cultivated utterances made the impression on all in the crowded house that this war can have but one termination, and that the extinction of these popular evils which are the foes of goodness and God.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1875.

After an earnest prayer-meeting conference proceeded to elect permanent officers in place of Rev. Mr. Foster of Syracuse, temporary chairman, Rev. N. Wardner of New York, temporary clerk. The ballot resulted in choice of Rev. N. Wardner, Moderator, and Rev. H. T. Besse of Kansas, permanent Scribe, and Rev. A. J. Hiatt, assistant.

CHARACTER OF THE BODY.

While the votes were counting, I looked in the faces of the men and women before me. They are indeed a spectacle on which "Angels who make the church their care" must rejoice to look. Most of them passed through the slavery struggle and came out of that furnace without the smell of its fires of temptation on their garments. And they now, while their locks are whitened and their natural sight somewhat dimmed, but with spiritual vision cleared, like the sight of seamen, by looking far into heaven, are ready to attack the rulers of the world's darkness who have fled from the fallen temple of American slavery to their new position in the recesses of the lodge.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

These were now elected and are Richard Green, Esq., and Rev. George Ritchie. Each of the elections was made unanimous by a rising vote. Pres. Blanchard and Rev. H. A. Norton, agent of the Wasioja Seminary, Minnesota, were then admitted to seats as honorary members of Conference.

Conference then went into executive business; Committee to investigate conference claim to a certain legacy in Weybridge, Vermont; new members received on arrival; a paper on duties and jurisdiction of president's of Annual Conferences referred; paper submitted to appoint a class of evangelists or superintendents. A brother, "I move to amend by a motion to resolve ourselves into a M. E. church!" Paper referred to Committee on Revisals. Paper against the use of tobacco, referred to the same committee. Paper on secret scieties and tobacco from Kansas Conference; referred. Paper on change of secret society article, referred. Paper from Iowa Conference requesting change of article on secret societies, referred. Moved to request Committee on Revisals to report form of marriage service, passed. The election of General Agent and Editor of The Wesleyan made the order of the day for Saturday morning.

At this stage of proceedings Prest. Blanchard was invited to address the house, which he did asking that members of Conference would arrange for him to speak on the subject of religion or reform or both where the people will pay $100 toward liquidating the college debt. Rev. J. M. Snyder made some earnest remarks complimentary to President Blanchard in which the members of conference warmly united. Mr. Snyder said he would be one of 100 persons to endow Wheaton College with $100,000. He requested members of Conference to consider this subject and report to him. Rev. Secretary Hiatt then offered the following resolution which was carried by a rising vote and was unanimous and enthusiastic, and is as follows:

Resolved, That we, as a body, tender to Bro. Blanchard our most hearty thanks for his kind and encouraging words. We feel that the cause he represents is God's cause and ours, and we will ever remember him in our kindest sympathies and prayers. As a man of God he stands with us and may God bless him.

The place of holding the next Quadrennial Conference was then taken up, and after several nominations and invitations, Pittsford, Michigan, was unanimously selected.

L. N. Stratton from Committee on Nominations reported names for twelve committees; adopted and committees appointed. After reports on hospitality adjourned for evening session. I was unable to be present at the evening session. Rev. M. E. Johnson of New York and Rev. Mr. McGilvra of Iowa, preached and addressed the people and the meetings increase in interest.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

A Convenient System.

The Methodist Episcopal church has provided for itself a convenient method for disposing of troublesome and reformatory ministers, namely the superannuated list. It properly has a benevolent end, but it seems very susceptible of abuse in the present condition of the Methodist pastorate. By their ungodly association with the lodge they have become "troublers in Israel" and when any Elijah cries out at their abominable ways they run him off to the wilderness of superannuation. The Detroit Conference tried it, with what success we all know, and now we have another instance. Tha blameless, God-fearing brother, Woodruff Post, has for years borne a consistent testimony in the Rochester (N. Y.) Conference against the infidel lodge practices of his brother ministers. A Rochester paper of late date has the following account of the effort to shelve this brother, and at once be rid of his presence and resolutions both equally offensive to these sin-loving souls. Their action cannot remain. It will be repented of and revoked.

Rev. W. Post introduced the following:

On Secret Societies.—For the glory of God and the prosperity of Methodism, and in view of the fact that many now of our churches, once affiliating with secret societies having b come converted, have forsaken them forever; and,

Whereas, such men as Daniel Webster, Wendell Phillips, W. H. Seward, Millard Fillmore, J. Q. Adams, Charles Sumner, and many others in the secular world, of like reputation, denounce secret societies as dangerous to the commonwealth, and unfit to exist among a free people: and

Whereas, C. G. Finney, David Barnard and our lamented Bishop Hamlin, and many others in the religious world, holy men of God, declare with one voice that secret societies are a bore in our midst; and

Whereas, our discipline, based upon the Word of God, prohibits the taking of oaths only; that a man may swear when a magistrate requireth, if done in justice, judgment and truth; and

Whereas, many of our church members, as well as ministers, become so infatuated and led away by such associations, that they declare emphatically they would rather leave the church than the lodge; therefore be it

Resolved 1st—That as ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ, called of God to be holy, separated unto the Gospel of God; that we discountenance all such alliances, and consider them foreign to our common cause in Christ Jesus, and unfit associations for us, or the churches which we represent.

2nd—That the time has come when, in order to perpetuate harmony in our midst, that we legislate the evil from among us.

3d—That the Bishop appoint at this Conference one of our number who shall address the Conference next year on the genius of secret societies.

These being seconded by the Secretary, it was moved that they be laid on the table, which was done by a vote of 58 to 32.

Rev. John Copeland from Lima, arose and said: In his youth he became a Mason, but found such affiliations were a serious damage to him as a Christian minister. The fellowship with infidel and irreligious men which the obligations of Masonry required were detrimental to spiritual progress, and always on leaving the lodge, he was cognizant of loss of godliness in his soul.

This matter being disposed of the Rev. K. D. Nettleton arose and called for the changing of Mr. Post's relation to supernumerary, stating that it was the vote of the presiding elder. Hi relation was changed.

NOTES.

—President J. Blanchard attended the Wesleyan General Conference at Sycamore, Ill., last week and spoke on invitation on Friday. His interesting report of the meeting could not be published entire this week.

—Past Master Ronayne returned last Saturday from Indiana highly pleased with the outcome of his battles with the lodge at Marion and Portland. He attended eleven meetings after the close of the State convention, ten of which were open lodges. He speaks highly of Bro Kiggin's zeal and working powers.

—The General Agent is now in Michigan where he will assist Bro. Springstein and others in the State convention, after which he will be found at Peoria. Then will follow quickly the State meetings in New York, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania at each of which he is wanted, and he needs a constitution of iron to take him through the fall and winter campaign. Pray, brethren, that his strength may not fail in this day of battle.

—The Pennsylvania State meeting has been postponed. A meeting of the State Executive Committee will be held on the 30th inst., at the residence of Mr. Geo. Cobb at Factoryville to decide more definitely the time, etc.

—Elder Barlow has a good work in hand, the State convention of New York. See notice and look for further particulars next week.

—In the midst of our enthusiastic State conventions we must not forget the features of our reform which give it stability and fix its influence in families and communities as the trancient lecture cannot do. REMEMBER THE CYNOSURE. Pray and labor for its circulation.

—One evening a couple of youngmen who had been attending a meeting in a hall in the North Division of Chicago accidently opened the door of a recess. A casket finely finished in black aroused their curiosity and they found within a skeleton. Instead of informing the police of their discovery it was reported to us and all made plain when they added the fact that an Odd-fellow's lodge met in the same room.

—Yale students are well initiated into the mysteries of secret tomfoolery, as every one knows. What could be more natural therefore than that they should attack an Odd-fellow procession last week marching through the streets of New Haven. Intruding on preoccupied premises was like shaking a red rag before a bull, and from hoots and jeers to stones the story is too short to be told. The peaceful and charitable lodge men had borrowed what swords were to be had before they set out and with the long tin hatchets and pine staffs they made a charge and drove the brave Greeks into cover.

Flashed all their sabers bare,
Flashed as they turned in air,
Charging [the students] while
All the world wond'red
Noble Odd-fellows, etc.

The Bible Question in Chicago.

Reply of the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church to an invitation to repeat his discourse on casting out the Bible from the Public schools, in the Union Park Congregational church on the evening of Sabbath, Oct. 24th.

To Messrs. C. D. Helmer, C. H. Case, S. S. Bushnell, and others:

GENTLEMEN: Since the action of the Board of Education on the 28th ult., expelling the Bible from our schools, I have received from teachers in these schools so many expressions of grief at this prohibition of their constant and valued custom of Bible-reading, and have heard from so many of our best citizens expressions of sorrow and indignation, that my own first impressions as to the character of that action are hourly confirmed. Whatever may be the influences, direct or indirect, which led the Board to the step they have taken, the fact remains, that the Bible is put under an interdict in all our schools. Those teachers who are convinced of its usefulness in the discipline of the school and the moral instruction of the children, and who ask the privilege accordingly of reading it, and of spending a few moments in offering the Lord's Prayer at the opening of the school, are prohibited from doing so. They are not allowed to read from the Protestant version, and if they offer to use the Douay version, that also is forbidden; neither the Ten Commandments, nor the Sermon on the Mount, nor the parable of the good Samaritan, can be recited in the hearing of the 30,000 scholars in the public schools of this city.

The Bible deserves better things than this at the hands of Americans, and of the citizens of Chicago. To mention nothing else, that book sent us the millions which came to our relief at the time of the Fire.

Allow me to state a few of the points to which attention ought to be turned:

First—It is said that the expulsion of the Bible from the schools is insignificant. Somebody evidently thinks its presence there is not insignificant, or the good old Book would not be selected from all our literature for this conspicuous disgrace. If it means nothing, and amounts to nothing to have it in, why in the world are we witnessing such persistent efforts to get it out? It will not hurt the Bible to be expelled; but its expulsion will hurt Chicago.

Second—Its removal is insisted on by others because, it is said, freedom of conscience demands it. Some do not believe in the Bible, and ought not, therefore, to be taxed for schools where it is read. Then, for the same reason expel it from our army and navy, from Congress, from the courts, dismiss all our chaplains, banish the Bible from our prisons, and from all public asylums for the poor, the deaf, and the blind. Those who suppose that religious liberty calls for this may be good men; but their ideas are somewhat muddled.

Third—It is said we have no union of church and state. Our Government has nothing to do with the propagation of religion. Neither has it anything to do with the propagation of medicine—allopathy, homeopathy, hydropathy; but it vacinnates the children by law, nevertheless. What a horrible union of medicine and state it is! The state is not instituted, it is true, for the purpose of disseminating Bibles; but if the Bible can contribute anything to the good of the state, has not the state a right to it? Why not prohibit vaccination? A good many people do not believe in it. Why not prohibit the army? The Quakers think it is wicked. Yet they are taxed for it. Is the Government then trampling on the consciences of the Quakers? The Government is sorry for them, but it must look out for its own interests, which are the interests of the Quakers too.

Fourth—It is asked derisively, whether the churches—the poor, degenerate churches—must get the state to help them do their work. Nonsense! When have the churches of Chicago asked anything of that kind? It is the citizens of Chicago, not the churches, who want the Bible in the schools, and they want it there for the sake of Chicago, not for the sake of the churches. If the interest of any of the churches should be found to be coincident with the interests of the city, so much the better for the churches. They ought to be ashamed of themselves if it were not so. It would be a pity if their interests were not reconcileable with a little Bible-reading, and with the welfare of the city. The churches are asking no favors. Some of us are church members, but we are citizens too. We need not hurt the city for fear lest we should help the church.

I do not insist on the version used by my church being employed. I am no Romanist, but I say let the boys and girls hear the Romanists' version of the Bible rather than none at all. To be sure, the Protestants are in a vast majority, and pay, according to the Assessor's books, three-quarters of the taxes; but who cares? Read what version you will, only read the Bible. Do not expel all versions and silence the best book in the world to quiet a handful of bold, noisy men. If the Bible is still, as it always has been, the best friend of good government and public order, and if the great mass of Americans believe this, why should we drop it, frightened by the crack of some free-thinker's whip? We have a natural right to it as citizens. This demand is only one indication of the new plan to drag the whole school system into local politics, and use it to get votes. The next thing on the programme is ousting the present Superintendent, because he is too good a man to be made a tool of; and, following that, I have the best of reasons for knowing that we shall see the resignation of some of the oldest and most skillful teachers in the schools. They are getting disgusted with recent developments.

But I have been betrayed into an unnecessary length in answering your note. It will give me much pleasure to speak on this subject, according to your request, next Sunday evening. It will be my object to show that the State has some legitimate interest in the use of the Bible among us, and that this involves no union of church and state either. Yours respectfully,

ARTHUR MITCHELL.

Religious Intelligence.

—John A. Boppe, the great brewer of Newark, N. J., died on the 27th of Sep. On Thanksgiving Day, 1873, he announced his intention to the Rev. Geo. E. Horr, pastor of the Baptist church, of giving up his business, which he carried out in the next January, amid a storm of obloquy and abuse. He became a humble Christian and united with the Baptist church in May, 1874. A praying wife saved him under God.

—The effort to maintain daily afternoon prayer-meetings in Chicago has not been successful, and the noon meeting has been fallen back upon. This gathering has been greatly increasing in numbers and spiritual power lately. Messrs. Whittle and Bliss will begin special meetings here as soon as they can leave a very successful work in Minnesota.

—A new daily noon prayer-meeting has been started under Lyric Hall, in the "up-town" portion of New York with encouraging numbers and spirit.

—The State law of Iowa makes it optional with the teachers to read the Bible in the public schools. The school Directors of the city of Des Moines have rescinded the rule requiring the Bible to be read in their schools, thus leaving the matter entirely in the hands of the teachers.

—The Baptists of Prussia are very much encouraged by the law recently passed by the Prussian Diet, which gives them the right of incorporation. It was a government measure, and carried in the face of some opposition.

—The Methodists, Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregationalist and Evangelical churches of Cleveland, have agreed to unite in a series of meetings during the fall. The Rev. A. B. Earle will have charge of the meetings.

—Mr. H. L. Hasting, the evangelist of Boston, and editor of The Christian, preached to about 5,000 persons on the eastern portico of the Capitol at Washington, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 17th.

—At the suggestion of the pastors of St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 8th, was observed as a day of special prayer by the churches of Minnesota and Wisconsin, for a revival of religious faith among the people.

—The Michigan Methodist Conference adopted strong resolutions in relation to Sabbath observance. They called for the strict enforcement of the State Sabbath laws.

—Dong Gong, a Chinaman, was ordained in Oregon as a Baptist minister recently, after due examination by a council of ministers. Several of his countrymen were present.

—As many as 33 of the Catholic Bishops of Italy have been compelled by the State to leave their Episcopal residences for refusal to ask the royal exequatur.

—A new movement appears in the Presbyterian church in the form of Conventions of Ruling Elders. One was held in Baltimore last Spring; others are expected.

—The closing of the Catholic religious establishments in Prussia goes on constantly.

—A native Japanese publisher has issued a translation of the "Pilgrim's Progress."

Whilst Stopping at the Inn.

From much loved friends whene'er I part,
A pensive sadness fills my heart,
Past scenes my fancy wanders o'er,
And sighs to think they are no more.

Along the road I musing go,
O'er many a deep and miry slough,
The clouded moon withdraws her light,
And leaves me to the shades of night.

An inn receives me; where, unknown,
I solitary set me down,
Many I hear and some I see,
I naught to them, they naught to me.

Thus in the regions of the dead
A pilgrim's wandering life I lead:
And still at every step declare
I've no abiding city here:

For very far from here I dwell,
And therefore bid the world farewell;
Finding of all the joys it gives
A sad remembrance only lives.

Rough stumbling stones my steps o'erthrow,
And lay a wandering sinner low,
Yet still my course to heaven I steer
Though neither moon nor star appear.

The world is like an inn, for there
Men call and drink and storm and swear,
While undisturbed a Christian waits,
And reads and writes and meditates.

Though in the dark ofttime I stray,
The Word shall light me on my way,
And to the city of the Sun
Conduct me when my journey's done.

There by these eyes shall he be seen
Who sojourned for me in an inn;
On Zion's hill I those shall hail
From whom I parted in the vale.

Why am I heavy, then, and sad
When thoughts like these should make me glad?
Mnse, then, my sonl, no more on things below,
Arise, my sonl, and let us go.

—Bishop Horne.

Must we Always Obey Conscience?

It has been a prevalent notion in the minds of well-disposed persons that if they acted according to their own conscience, they must, therefore, be doing right. But they assume, in feeling or asserting this, either that there is no law of God, or that it cannot be known, but only felt or conjectured. "I must do what I think right." How often is this sentence uttered and acted on, bravely, nobly, innocently, but always because of its egotism, erringly. You must not do what you think right, but, whether you or anybody think or don't think it, what is right. "I must act according to the dictates of my conscience." By no means, my conscientious friend, unless you are quite sure yours is not the conscience of an ass. "I am doing my best—what can man do more?" You might be doing much less, and yet much better; perhaps you are doing your best in producing or doing an eternally bad thing. All these three sayings, and the convictions they express, are wise only in the mouths and minds of wise men; they are deadly, and all the deadlier because bearing an image and superscription of virtue, in the mouths and minds of fools. "But there is every gradation, surely, between wisdom and folly." No! The fool, whatever his wit, is the man who doesn't know his master—who has said in his heart, "There is no God"—no law. The wise man knows his master. Less or more wise, he perceives lower or higher masters; but always some creature larger than himself—some law holier than his own. A law to be sought, learned, loved, obeyed; but, in order to its discovery, the obedience must begin first, to the best one knows. Obey something, and you will have a chance some day of finding out what is best to obey. But if you begin by obeying nothing, you will end by obeying Beelzebub and all his seven invited friends.

My mother never gave me more to learn than she knew I could easily get learnt, if I set myself honestly at work, by twelve o'clock. She never allowed anything to disturb me when my task was set; if it was not said rightly by twelve o'clock, I was kept in till I knew it, and; in general, even when Latin Grammar came to supplement the Psalms, I was my own master for at least an hour before dinner at half-past one, and for the rest of the afternoon. My mother, herself finding her chief personal pleasure in her flowers, was often planting or pruning beside me—at least if I choose to stay beside her. I never thought of doing anything behind her back I would not have done before face; and her presence was therefore no restraint to me; but, also no particular pleasure; for, from having always been left so much alone, I had generally my own little affairs to see after; and on the whole, by the time I was seven years old, was already getting too independent, mentally, even of my father and mother; and having nobody else to be dependent upon, began to lead a very small, perky, contented, conceited, Cock-Robinson-Crusoe sort of life, in the central point which it appeared to me (as it must naturally appear to geometrical animals) that I occupied in the universe.—Ruskin.

A Good Day.

A good day begins with God. A wise merchant would no more think of going to business without communion with Christ, than of going to the store without coat or hat or shoes. I used to have a very poor watch, and I had to set it every morning in order that I might make from it a guess about the time of day. Our souls are poor timepieces, utterly disordered; and every morning we need to set them by the Sun of Righteousness. Before we start off to the store, we need to pray for patience. We will be harrassed and perplexed. Men will wrong us, and impose upon us, and cheat us; and before the day is past, if you have not laid in a large supply of patience, you will half swear with your lips, and perhaps make a whole swear with your hearts.—T. De Witt Talmage.

The Hindoos are said to have no word for "friend." The Italians have no equivalent for "humility." The Russian dictionary gives a word the definition of which is, "not to have enough buttons on your footman's waistcoat;" a second means to "kill over again;" a third "to earn by dancing." The Germans call a thimble a "finger hat," which it certainly is, and a grasshopper a "hay-horse." A glove with them is a "hand-shoe," showing that they wore shoes before gloves. The French, strange to say, have no verb "to stand," nor can a Frenchman speak of "kicking" any one. The nearest approach he, in his politeness, makes to it, is to threaten to "give a blow with his foot," the same thing, probably, to the recipient in either case, but it seems to want the directness, the energy, of our "kick." The terms "upstairs" and "down stairs" are also unknown in French.

Religious State in Japan.

BY A JAPANESE STUDENT IN FOREST GROVE COLLEGE, OREGON.

There were in Japan various creeds and sects of religion, amongst which the most prominent ones were the religions of Sinto and Buddha, between which the great bulk of the people was divided.

Sinto, which means the way of the gods, is the original natural religion of Japan. The Sinto mythology and cosmogony are as doubtful and absurd as those of most oriental nations. From primeval chaos, according to the Japanese, arose a self-created god, who fashioned the universe out of chaos. The universe was then governed for some myriads of years by seven successive celestial gods. Then there came the daughter of the last of the seven gods, who was called Tensho Dijin, and began a new epoch of sovereignty on the earth. She was followed by four other gods. These were the five terrestial gods, and the last of them having married a mortal wife, left a mortal son upon earth, named Zinm Tenwa, the ancestor of the reigning Mikado (emperor.)

Although all these high gods essentially belong to the Sinto mythology, yet only Tensho Dijin was made the object of worship, and regarded as the mother of the nation. Thus, since the Mikados were the immediate descendants of the Kamis (gods), though they were regarded during their lives as mere men, yet at their death they underwent, as in the case of the Roman Caesars, a regular apotheosis, by which they were added to the number of the Kamis. The Kamis again are divided into superior and inferior. The superior gods are those that were born gods, or perhaps spirits, and the inferior gods are those that were deified as gods, by the doctrine of the apotheosis of all Mikados, all great saints, and al great heroes; they were as in the old pagan religion, added to the number of the gods, to which the temples are consecrated.

THE TEMPLES.

But with such numerous gods the Sintoists are no idolaters. Their temples, called Meias, are unpolluted by idols, and are only incentives to devotion. They contain only a mirror, the emblem of the soul's perfect purity, and fringes of white paper called gahei, which is merely an emblem of purity. But really the temples possess images of the Kamis to whom they are especially dedicated, but they are not set up to be worshiped, being kept in some secret receptacles, and only exhibited upon particular festivals. The Sintoists study mythology and antiquity and prefer the manners and customs of the ancients, so they build the temples of the Kamis according to the ancient, simple style, and most of them are built after one model—that of the famous temple of Isye, of which I shall speak hereafter. The temples were originally built upon eminences in retired spots, at a distance from noise and business, surrounded by groves and hedges, having a gate of stone or wood called Frye, bearing a tablet or door-plate of about a foot square or so, which announces in gilded letters the name of the Kami to whom the temple is consecrated, and just before the temple, on either side of the walk, stands water in a basin made of stone or brass, by washing the mouth and hands in which the worshipers may purify themselves, and before the mirror there is a great chest for the reception of money, which every worshiper deposits before he begins to pray. The worship consists in prayers and prostration before the mirror. In the days of festivals almost every one of those who profess the faith, in his dress of ceremony, performs his duty of prostration and prayer together with a sacrifice of rice, fruit, tea and wine, or the like, and sometimes they offer a theatrical exhibition in front of a temple to entertain the Kami. This exhibition consists of music and dancing, which are generally performed by Sinto priests, their wives and daughters. The Sinto priests are called Kaminusi, meaning landlord of the gods, and in conformity with their names, they reside in houses built within the grounds of their respective temples where they receive strangers very hospitably. The money contributions deposited by the worshipers are designed for the support of the Kaminusi who belong to the temple. The Sintoists have an indefinite notion of the soul's immortality; of an eternal future state of happiness and misery as the reward respectively of virtue and vice. The adherents of Sinto, contrary to the doctrine of Buddha (which teaches that sorrow is inseparable from existence), are disposed to look upon the other side of things, making their religious festivals as holidays, and regarding people in sorrow and distress as unfit for the worship of the Kami, whose felicity ought not to be disturbed by the sight of pain and misery.

PRINCIPLES OF SINTOISM.

The most prominent principle of Sinto doctrine is internal and external purity—that is, the preservation of the purity of the soul, heart and body, by obedience to the dictates of reason and natural law: and the preservation of pure fire and water as the emblems of purity and instruments of purification. The impurity to be avoided is contracted in various ways; by associating with the impure, by eating certain kinds of meats, and also by contact with blood and death. The death of a near relation is considered as the heaviest impurity, so that a man, when his nearest relatives die, is not allowed to worship the Kami for some fixed length of time. I must add the going on pilgrimages, to which, indeed, all the religions of Japan are greatly addicted. To make this pilgrimage to Isye, the name of a central province on the south coast of Nipan, in which Tensho Dijin was reported to have been born and to have died, and which contains a Meia (temple) exceedingly venerated, and already mentioned as the model after which all the others are built; men, women and children, of every rank are bound to make once a year, or at least one in their life. And it might almost be said of every religion, since even among professed Buddhists, only the priests of that religion exempt themselves from this duty.

THE MIKADO.

The Mikado (emperor), and Shogoon (commander-in-chief), who were permitted to have some great prince perform this duty of devotion, send a yearly embassy of pilgrims to Isye. Of course the modes of pilgrimage are various, according to their convenience and circumstances, but the most approved and sanctifying mode is to make the pilgrimage on foot. The greater the hardships endured the higher the merits of the pilgrims, and of course no person in a state of impurity can undertake this pilgrimage, and all exposure to impurity must be studiously avoided during its continuance. The religion upon which the sovereignty of the country is founded must forever remain the exclusive faith of Japan, unless superceded for the express purpose of deposing the reigning emperor.

BUDDHISM.

But another religion co-exists and has long co-existed there with Sinto, that is, Buddhism. Of this religion of Buddha, by no means peculiar to Japan, but prevailing through the whole of Central and South-eastern Asia, and having probably more adherents than any other religious creed, it is unnecessary here to speak at any length. This religion was introduced to Japan about the year 552 A. D., by the King of Corea, who sent an image of Sheka (founder of that religion) and sacred books and a liturgy, but at the time they were rejected and these images and books were thrown into the sea.

Again, about the year 602, A. D., some Japanese travelers or traders brought from Corea, two images of Sheka and sacred books, and presented them to the Minister of the reigning Emperor, and, as he was such a zealous Buddhist, begged of the Emperor the toleration of his religion, and it was permitted. Since then Buddhism has prevailed and become the second established religion of Japan. The Buddhist priests, called bozes, were arranged in a hierarchy, and they imperfectly read the foreign language in which their sacred books and their liturgy were written, and before the people they read them so that the people cannot understand it. Their doctrine of celibacy; the establishment of monasteries and nunneries; their orders of devotees; their exterior purity and self-denial, but supposed secret licentiousness; their fasts; their clothes; the tinkling of bells; the rosaries on which they count their prayers; their manner of preaching; their religious processions; their pilgrimages; the size, splendor and magnificence of their temples, known as Teras; the altar within, and the lamps and incense burning there—in all these respects, I suppose that this system presents a counterpart, at least as to show and forms, and is nearly similar to the scheme of Roman Catholic worship. But in Japan church and state were entirely kept distinct, as now in the United States. The priests possessed no direct temporal power; there were no appeals to the secular arm; no civil punishment for heresy, and no religious vows perpetually binding, all being at liberty, so far as the civil law is concerned, to enter or leave the monasteries at pleasure. There are also in Japan a higher sect of rationalists, the the natural results of freedom of opinion, who regard all these practices and doctrines, and all the various creeds of the country with secret incredulity and even contempt. There are the Judoists, who read and expound the philosophy of Confucius, which is totally unconnected with any mythology or religious rites, and teach only moral principles and some mysteries touching the human soul. First, when this Judo (the way of philosophers) was introduced into Japan, it is said to have been immediately adopted by the wise and learned, and they followed Confucius as their master and teacher.

At the later period, that is, before the revolution of 1868, the lower classes were Buddhists, the higher orders, especially the wise among them, were Judoists, professing respect to Sinto, and avowedly despising Buddhism.

There were besides the more regular clergy, enthusiasts, or impostors, religious vagabonds, who lived by beggary and by pretending to drive away evil spirits, to find things lost, to discover robbers, to determine the guilt or innocence of accused parties, to interpret dreams, to predict the future, to cure desperate maladies and perform similar deeds which they performed chiefly through the medium of spirits or something like that sort of falsehood. This is a brief account of the religious state of Japan previous to the civil war in 1868.—N. Y. Witness.

African Camels and Capetown Horses.

The milk of the camel is highly esteemed by the Arabs as an article of diet, and is prescribed as a specific in many cases of disease. Lady Duff Gordon, who resided several years in Egypt in the vain hope of recovering from consumption in that mild climate, drank camel's milk every morning, and derived a good deal of temporary benefit from it. In her spicy letters home, she thus wrote of the novel beverage: "It has the merit of being quite delicious. I wish I could send you a jug of it every morning, such as I drink; it is better than any other milk, with thick froth like whipped cream. The Arabs think it very good for sick people; and a man called Sheriff brings his camel here every morning, and milks her for me; her baby camel is so funny, he looks all legs and big black eyes, with soft, fluffy, buff-colored hair, and so very little body to such tall legs. I wish, too, you could see the camels have their dinner; they are the only people who use a table-cloth. The camel driver spreads a cloth on the ground, and pours a heap of maize (dourra) upon it, and then old Mr. and Mrs. Camel sit down at the top and bottom, very gravely, and the others all take their places in proper order, and eat quite politely, bowing their long necks up and down; only one was sulky, and went and had his dinner by himself, like a naughty boy, and sometimes, the man said, he would not eat at all."

When in Capetown, Africa, in one o her long journeys after the health that she never found, Lady Duff Gordon frequently mentioned the wonderful strength and endurance of the native breed of horses. The animals are very scantily fed, and, as no grass grows in the region, their fodder is restricted to oats, which they consume straw and all. Often after hours of travel the only refreshment offered the beasts is a roll in the dust; but this really seems to strengthen and nourish the tough, hardy, little quadrupeds, which are thus described by the lady from whom we have already quoted:

"I could write a volume on Cape horses. Such valiant little beasts, and so composed in temper, I never saw. They are nearly all bays—a few very dark gray. I have seen no black, and only one dark chestnut. They are not cobs, and look 'very little of them,' and have no beauty; but one of these little brutes, ungroomed, half fed, seldom stabled, will carry a 6½ foot Dutchman 60 miles a day, day after day, at a shuffling easy canter, six miles an hour. You "off saddle" every three hours, and let him roll; you also let him drink all he can get; his coat shines and his eye is bright, and unsoundness is very rare. They are never properly broke, and the soft-mouthed colts are sometimes made vicious by the cruel bits and heavy hands; but by nature their temper is perfect.

Every morning all the horses in the village are turned loose, and a general gallop takes place to the water tank, where they drink and lounge a little; and the young ones are fetched home by the niggers, while the old stagers know they will be wanted, and saunter off by themselves. . . . To see a farmer outspan and turn the team of active little beasts loose on the boundless veld to amuse themselves for an hour or two, sure that they will be there, would astonish you a little; and then to offer a horse nothing but a roll in the dust to refresh himself withall! . . .

How the cattle live is a standing marvel to me. The whole veld (common) which extends all over the country (just clothed with a few square miles of corn here and there) is covered with a low thin scrub about eighteen inches high, called rhenostes-bosch—looking like meagre arbor-vitae or pale juniper. The cattle and sheep will not touch this juicy Hottentot fig; but under each little bush, I fancy, they crop a few blades of grass, and on this they keep in very good condition.

The noble oxen, with their huge horns (nine or ten feet from tip to tip), are never fed, though they work hard, nor are the sheep.

The horses get a little forage (oats, straw and all). I should like you to see eight or ten of these swift, wiry little horses harnessed to a wagon,—a mere flat platform on wheels. In front stands a wild-looking Hottentot, all patches and feathers, and drives them best pace all "in hand," using a whip like a fishing rod, with which he touches them, not savagely, but with a skill which would make an old stage-coachman burst with envy to behold.—Selected.

Just Going To.

"I supposed you mailed my letter in time, Bob," said his father.

"N-n-o-o, sir," he answered. "I was just going to run over to the office with it, and the stage drove off."

"Then I must send a telegram; and that will cost several dollars."

"I am so sorry," said Bob; "I will try to be more prompt next time."

But one day soon after, when he was coming home from the mill, he stopped to see Rodney Brown's gray squirrel.

"Your horse seems a little restless," said Mrs. Brown, opening the window; "had you not better fasten him to the post?"

"Yes'm, I was just going back to tie him," said Bob. But at this moment a bit of white paper fluttered over the ground; the horse took fright and ran down the street breaking the wagon, and losing most of the flour. "Oh dear!" said Bob, "I wish I had started a little sooner." That was the way with him most of the time; he was a little late at table, at school, and at church; and the people soon began to see that he could not be trusted to do errands.

What kind of a man will the boy make who is only "just going to" do things; and, worst of all, isn't there danger that poor, tardy Bob will be just a little too late in giving his heart to the Saviour.—Congregationalist.

Worshipful Master:—What is this?
Senior Deacon:—The grip of an Entered Apprentice Mason?
Worshipful Master:—Has it a name?
Senior Deacon:—It has.
Worshipful Master:—Will you giveit to me?
Senior Deacon:—I did not so receive it,neither will I so impart it.
Worshipful Master:—How will you dispose of it?
Senior Deacon:—I will letter and syllable it.
Worshipful Master:—Letter it and begin.
Senior Deacon:—Begin you.
Worshipful Master:—Nay, you must begin.
Senior Deacon:—A.
Worshipful Master:—B.
Senior Deacon:—O.
Worshipful Master:—Z.
Senior Deacon:—Bo.
Worshipful Master:—Az.
Senior Deacon:—Boaz.

Worshipful Master:—The name of this grip, my brother, is Boaz. It denotes "strength," and is represented by the left hand pillar at the entrance of the porch of King Solomon's temple. You must always take the necessary precaution in giving it as you have received it and invariably beginning on the letter A. You will now arise and salute the Junior and Senior Wardens as an Entered Apprentice Mason.

The candidate is here assisted to his feet, the Master retires to his seat, raps the lodge down and the candidate is conducted by the Senior Deacon to the Junior and Senior Wardens, before each of whom he makes the step, due-guard and sign, and is led towards the East halting on a line with the altar.

Worshipful Master:—(one rap) How do you find it in the South,brother Junior Warden?

Junior Warden:—(rising and making the due-guard) All right in the South, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—How in the West, brother Senior Warden?

Senior Warden:—(rising and making the due-guard) All right in the West, Worshipful.

The Master now taking a white apron approaches the candidate and says:

Worshipful Master:—My brother, I have now the pleasure of presenting you with a lambskin or white leather apron. It is the emblem of innocence and the badge of a Mason. It is more ancient than the Golden Fleece or Roman Eagle, more honorable than the Star and Garter or any other order that could be conferred upon you at this or any future period, by king,prince, potentate,or any other person except he be a Mason,and it is to be hoped you will ever wear it with equal pleasure to yourself and honor to the fraternity. Believing this to be your intention, you will take it, (handing it to the candidate) carry it to the Senior Warden in the West, who will teach you how to wear it as an Entered Apprentice Mason, and return to the East.

The candidate should here be re-conducted to the West without passing round the altar, and the Senior Deacon giving one rap addresses the Senior Warden as follows;

Senior Deacon:—Brother Senior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you teach this brother how to wear his apron as an Entered Apprentice Mason.

The Senior Warden, taking the apron from candidate, unfolds it and while tying it on, says:

Senior Warden:—My brother, Masonic tradition informs us that at the building of King Solomon's temple there were various classes of workmen each of whom as a distinctive badge wore their aprons in a peculiar manner. Entered Apprentices being bearers of burden wore theirs with the bib turned up to prevent their clothes from being soiled, but as stains upon the apron of the operative workman would bring credit rather than disgrace, yet you being a Speculative Mason are expected to keep yours unspotted from the world. You are therefore entitled to wear yours in this manner while working with us on this degree. (He turns up the bib of the apron.)

Worshipful Master:—Brother Jones, agreeably to an ancient custom practiced and adopted in all regular and well governed lodges from time immemorial, it now becomes necessary that you should be requested to deposit something of a metallic kind, not for its intrinsic worth or value, but that it might be laid up among the records in the archives of the lodge as a memorial that you were herein made a Mason. Any small piece of coin, therefore, you may have about you will be thankfully received; in the absence of a coin, a pin or even a button will do. Brother Secretary, you will please collect the deposit from brother Jones. The Secretary comes forward and reaching out his hand as if to collect something from the candidate and of course receiving nothing he turns to the Master and says "The candidate is entirely destitute, Worshipful."

This proceeding often embarasses the candidate very much, especially if he has not read Masonic expositions,for having left all his clothing, money, etc., in the preparation room, he is not at all in a fit coudition to respond to a request of a deposit of money or anything of a metallic kind in the archives of the lodge.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Jones,your condition is indeed truly deplorable. Almost naked, in one sense among strangers, but happily for you at this time among friends. But believe me, my brother, this has not been done with the view of trifling with your feelings but to teach you a lesson in charity and should you hereafter meet a friend and more especially a brother Mason in like destitute circumstances you will cheerfully contribute to his relief so far as his necessities may require and your ability permit, without material injury to yourself. You will now be reconducted to the place from whence you came and be there invested with what you have been divested of and return to the lodge for further instruction.

The Senior Deacon now conducts the candidate to the altar where he is taken in charge by the stewards and all three having made the due-guard and sign of this degree, they retire with the candidate to the preparation room, the Senior Deacon in the meantime resuming his usual place. While the candidate is getting on his clothes the lodge is usually "called off," that is a recess is taken, when the brethren indulge in a little social chit-chat and otherwise amuse themselves. When the candidate is dressed he is led into the lodge again by the stewards, generally introduced to and welcomed by the members present and the Master's gavel again sounding in the East all the brethren are seated and the lodge once more called to order. He is then placed standing in the north-east corner, "his feet forming the angle of an oblong square," that is, on the step of an Entered Apprentice, and his body erect, where the Worshipful Master gives him the following charge:

Worshipful Master:—Brother Jones, you are now standing in the north-east corner of the lodge, as the youngest Entered Apprentice Mason, your feet forming the angle of an oblong square and your body erect, at the right of the Worshipful Master, where you stand to all appearance a just and upright man and Mason, and I give it to you strictly in charge ever to walk and act as such. Being clothed as an Entered Apprentice you are now entitled to your working tools.

THE WORKING TOOLS

of an Entered Apprentice Mason are the twenty-four inch guage and the common gavel. [The Master holding these implements in his hand exhibits them to the candidate.] The twenty-four inch guage is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to measure and lay out their work, but we as Free and Accepted Masons are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of dividing our time: it being divided into twenty-four equal parts is emblematical of the twenty-four hours of the day, which we are taught to divide into three equal parts whereby we find eight hours for the service of God and the relief of a distressed worthy brother, eight for our usual avocations, and eight for refreshments and sleep.

The common gavel is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to break off the superfluous corners of stones the better to fit them for the builder's use, but we as Free and Accepted Masons are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of divesting our hearts and consciences of all the vices and superfluities of life thereby fitting us as living stones for that spiritual building, that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

The first degree usually ends here as but very few Masters are qualified to give the lecture which comprises the second and third sections of this degree; but as I am desirous of giving all the degrees in full and exactly as they are, or ought to be given in all regular and well governed lodges, I shall now proceed to give the

LECTURE.—2ND SECTION.

Brother Jones, in being prepared to be made a Mason you were deprived of all metals for two reasons: first, that you should carry nothing offensive or defensive into the lodge, and, secondly, because at the building of King Solomon's temple there was not heard the sound of ax, hammer, or any tool of iron. The stones were all hewn, squared, and numbered in the quarries where they were raised; the trees were felled and prepared in the forests of Lebanon, carried by sea on floats to Joppa and thence by land to Jerusalem, and the building when completed (its several parts fitting with such exactness) presented more the appearance of the handi-workmanship of the Supreme Architect of the Universe than of that of human hands.

You were neither naked nor clad, because Masonry regards no man for his worldly wealth or honors; it was therefore to signify that it is the internal and not the external qualifications of a man which should recommend him to be made a Mason.

You were neither barefoot norshod,agreeably to an ancient Israelitish custom. And we read in the book of Ruth concerning their manner of redeeming and concerning changing,and to confirm all things a man plucked off his shoe and gave it to his neighbor and this was a testimony in Israel. This therefore you did on the present occasion to signify in the strongest manner possible the sincerity of your intentions in the business in which you were about to engage.

You were blindfolded and with a cable-tow about your neck for these reasons: first, that as you were then in darkness so should you keep the whole world in darkness as regards the secrets of Masonry, unless they obtained them in the same lawful manner you were about to do yourself; secondly, that your heart may be taught to conceive before your eyes should behold the beauties of Freemasonry; and thirdly, that had you not submitted to any of the forms or ceremonies of your initiation and thereby render yourself unworthy to be taken by the hand as a brother, you might be conducted out of the lodge by the aid of the cable-tow without even seeing the form thereof.

You gave three distinct knocks to alarm the lodge and to inform the Worshipful Master that you were prepared for initiation. These knocks allude to a passage in Scripture which says, "Ask, and you shall receive; seek, and you shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you," and which you might have applied to your then condition in the following manner: You asked the recommendation of a friend to be made a Mason, through his recommendation you sought initiation; you knocked at the door of the lodge and it was opened unto you.

You were received upon the point of a sharp instrument pressing your naked left breast, the moral of which was to teach you that as that was an instrument of torture to the flesh so should the recollection thereof be to your mind and conscience should you ever presume to reveal any of the secrets of Freemasonry unlawfully.

You were conducted toward the center of the lodge and caused to kneel for the benefit of prayer, because no man should ever enter upon any great or important undertaking without first imploring the blessing of Deity.

You were asked in whom you put your trust because according to Masonic law no atheist could have been made a Mason; it was therefore necessary that you should profess your faith in a Supreme Being, otherwise no oath or obligation could have been deemed binding upon you.

You were taken by the right hand, ordered to arise, follow your conductor and fear no danger, to signify that at a time when you could neither foresee or avoid danger, you were in the hands of a true and trusty friend in whose fidelity you might with safety confide.

You were conducted once round the lodge that the brethren present might see that you were duly and truly prepared to be made a Mason.

You met with several obstructions on the way because at the building of King Solomon's temple there were guards placed at the South, West and East gates of the outer courts of the temple, who permitted none to pass or repass except those who were duly qualified and had permission.

You were caused to kneel upon your left knee because the left has always been considered the weaker part of man, it was therefore to signify that it was upon the weaker part of Masonry you were then entering, being that of the Entered Apprentice.

Your right hand was placed upon the Holy Bible, square and compass because the right hand has always been deemed the seat of fidelity, and we learn that the ancients worshiped a deity under the name of Fides or Fidelity, which we sometimes find represented by two right hands joined, at others by two human figures holding each other by the right hand.

You were presented with a lambskin or white leather apron because the lamb has in all ages been deemed the emblem of innocence. He therefore who wears the lambskin as the badge of a man is thereby continually reminded of that purity of life and conduct so essentially necessary to his gaining admission to that celestial lodge above where the Supreme Architect of the universe presides.

You were requested to deposit something of a metallic kind to teach you a lesson in charity; and that should you ever thereafter meet a friend, but more especially a brother Mason, in like destitute circumstances, you would cheerfully contribute to his relief so far as his necessities may require and your ability may permit without material injury to yourself.

You were placed in the north-east corner of the lodge as the youngest Entered Appreutice because in operative Masonry the first stone of a building is usually laid in the north-east corner, it was therefore necessary that you should be placed in that position in order to receive your first instruction whereon to build your future moral and Masonic edifice.

And lastly you were presented with the working tools and taught their uses.

THIRD SECTION.

The third section of this degree treats of the lodge itself, its Form, Support, Covering, Furniture, Ornaments, Lights, Jewels, how Situated and to whom Dedicated.

A lodge is a number of Masons regularly assembled and duly constituted, having the Holy Bible, square and compass, and a charter or warrant empowering them to work.

Masonic tradition informs us that our ancient brethren assembled on high hills or low vales, the better to guard against the approach of cowans and eavesdroppers ascending or descending. But at the present day lodge meetings are usually held in an upper chamber, probably for the better security which such places afford. It may be however, that the custom had its origin in the practice adopted by the ancient Jews of building their temples, schools and synagogues on high hills, a practice which seems to have met with the approbation of the Almighty, who said to the prophet Ezekiel, "On the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy." Before the erection of temples the celestial gods were worshipped on hills and the terrestrial ones in valleys. At a later period wherever it was practicable the Christians erected their churches on eminences.

The form of a lodge is that of an oblong square, extending from East to West, embracing every clime between the North and South. In fact, its universal chain of friendship encircles every portion of the human family, and beams wherever civilization extends.

The Masonic lodge bounded only by the extreme points of the compass, the highest heavens, and the lowest depths of the central abyss is said to be metaphorically supported by three great pillars, denominated Wisdom, Strength and Beauty, because there should be wisdom to contrive, strength to support, and beauty to adorn all great and important undertakings. The universe is the temple of the Deity whom we serve; wisdom, strength and beauty are about his throne as pillars of his work, for his wisdom is infinite, his strength is omnipotent, and his beauty shines forth throughout all his creation in symmetry and order.

The pillar of wisdom is represented by the Worshipful Master because he should have wisdom to open and govern his lodge, set the craft to work, and give them proper instruction. The pillar of strength is represented by the Senior Warden, it being his duty to assist the Worshipful Master in opening and closing the lodge, pay the craft their wages if any be due, so that none may go away dissatisfied, harmony being the strength and support of all institutions, more especially ours; and the pillar of beauty is represented by the Junior Warden in the South, it being his duty at all times to observe the sun at meridian hight, which is the beauty and glory of the day.

The covering of a lodge is no less than that clouded canopy, or starry decked heaven where all good Masons hope at last to arrive by the aid of that theological ladder which Jacob in his vision saw extended from earth to heaven; the three principal rounds of which are denominated faith, hope and charity, teaching us faith in God, hope in immortality, and charity to all mankind. But the greatest of these is charity; for faith may be lost in sight, hope ends in fruition, but charity extends beyond the grave to the boundless realms of eternity.

The furniture of a lodge is the Holy Bible, square and compass. The Holy Bible is dedicated to God, the square to the Master, and the compass to the craft. The Holy Bible is dedicated to God because it is the inestimable gift of God to man, and on it we obligate a newly admitted brother; the square to the Master, because it is the proper Masonic emblem of his office; and the compass to the craft because, by a proper application of its use we learn to subdue our desires, and keep our passions within due bounds toward all mankind and more especially toward our brethren in Freemasonry.

The ornaments of a lodge are the Mosaic pavement, the indented tessel, and the blazing star. The Mosaic pavement is a representation of the ground floor of King Solomon's temple; the indented tessel, of the beautiful tesselated border or skirting which surrounded it with the blazing star in the center. The Mosaic pavement is emblematical of human life, checkered with good and evil; the indented tessel or tesselated border, of the manifold blessings and comforts which surround us, and which we hope to enjoy by a firm reliance on Divine Providence, which is hieroglyphically represented by the blazing star in the center.

A lodge has three symbolic lights, placed East, West and South, but none in the North. There is none in the North because this and every other lodge of Free and Accepted Masons is or ought to be a true representation of King Solomon's temple which was situated so far north of the ecliptic that the sun and moon at meridian height could dart no ray of light into the north portion thereof, we therefore Masonically term the North a place of darkness.

A lodge has six jewels, namely, three moveable and three immoveable. The immoveable jewels are the square, level, and plumb. The square teaches morality: the level, equality; and the plumb, rectitude of life. The moveable jewels are the rough ashler the perfect ashler and the trestle-board.

The rough ashler is a stone as taken from the quarry in its rude and natural state. The perfect ashler is also a stone made ready by the hands of the workmen to be adjusted by the working tools of the Fellow Craft; and the trestle-board is for the Master to draw his designs upon. By the rough ashler we are reminded of our rude and imperfect state by nature; by the perfect ashler of that state of perfection at which we hope to arrive by a virtuous education, our own endeavors and the blessing of God; and by the trestle-board we are also reminded that as the operative workman erects his building agreeably to the rules and designs laid down by the Master on his trestle-board, so should we both operative and speculative, endeavor to erect our spiritual building according to the designs laid down by the Supreme Architect of the universe in the great book of nature and revelation which is our spiritual, moral and Masonic trestle board.

The lodge is situated due East and West because of the situation of King Solomon's temple which was so situated because Moses at the command of God erected a tabernacle in the wilderness which he placed East and West to catch the rays of the rising sun, and to commemorate that miraculous East wind which divided the waters of the Red sea and enabled the children of Israel to pass over dry shod when pursued by Pharaoh and his hosts.

In ancient times lodges were usually dedicated to King Solomon as he was our first Most Excellent Grand Master, but at the present day they are usually dedicated to Saint John the Baptist and Saint John the Evangelist, who were two eminent Christian patrons of Masonry, and since their time there is represented in every regular and well governed lodge a certain point within a circle, the point denoting an individual member and the circle the boundary of his duty towards God and man beyond which he is never to suffer his passions, prejudices or interests to betray him on any occasion. This circle is embordered by two perpendicular parallel lines representing Saint John the Baptist and Saint John the Evangelist who were perfect parallels in Christianity as well as in Masonry, and upon the vertex rests the Holy Bible which points out the whole duty of man. In going around this circle we must necessarily touch upon these two lines as well as upon the Holy Bible and while a Mason keeps himself thus circumscribed it is impossible that he can materially err.

BROTHERLY LOVE, RELIEFAND TRUTH.

The principal tenets of a Masons profession are brotherly love, relief and truth. By the exercise of brotherly love we are taught to regard the whole human species as one family, the high, the low, the rich, the poor, who as created by one Almighty Parent and inhabitants of the same planet, are to aid, support and protect each other. On this principle Masonry unites men of every country, sect and opinion and conciliates true friendship among those who might otherwise have remained at a perpetual distance.

ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE Continued.

Worshipful Master:—What is this?
Senior Deacon:—The grip of an Entered Apprentice Mason?
Worshipful Master:—Has it a name?
Senior Deacon:—It has.
Worshipful Master:—Will you give it to me?
Senior Deacon:—I did not so receive it, neither will I so impart it.
Worshipful Master:—How will you dispose of it?
Senior Deacon:—I will letter and syllable it.
Worshipful Master:—Letter it and begin.
Senior Deacon:—Begin you.
Worshipful Master:—Nay, you must begin.
Senior Deacon:—A.
Worshipful Master:—B.
Senior Deacon:—O.
Worshipful Master:—Z.
Senior Deacon:—Bo.
Worshipful Master:—Az.
Senior Deacon:—Boaz.

Worshipful Master:—The name of this grip, my brother, is Boaz. It denotes "strength," and is represented by the left hand pillar at the entrance of the porch of King Solomon's temple. You must always take the necessary precaution in giving it as you have received it and invariably beginning on the letter A. You will now arise and salute the Junior and Senior Wardens as an Entered Apprentice Mason.

The candidate is here assisted to his feet, the Master retires to his seat, raps the lodge down and the candidate is conducted by the Senior Deacon to the Junior and Senior Wardens, before each of whom he makes the step, due-guard and sign, and is led towards the East halting on a line with the altar.

Worshipful Master:—(one rap) How do you find it in the South, brother Junior Warden?

Junior Warden:—(rising and making the due-guard) All right in the South, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—How in the West, brother Senior Warden?

Senior Warden:—(rising and making the due-guard) All right in the West, Worshipful.

The Master now taking a white apron approaches the candidate and says:

Worshipful Master:—My brother, I have now the pleasure of presenting you with a lambskin or white leather apron. It is the emblem of innocence and the badge of a Mason. It is more ancient than the Golden Fleece or Roman Eagle, more honorable than the Star and Garter or any other order that could be conferred upon you at this or any future period, by king, prince, potentate, or any other person except he be a Mason, and it is to be hoped you will ever wear it with equal pleasure to yourself and honor to the fraternity. Believing this to be your intention, you will take it, (handing it to the candidate) carry it to the Senior Warden in the West, who will teach you how to wear it as an Entered Apprentice Mason, and return to the East.

The candidate should here be re-conducted to the West without passing round the altar, and the Senior Deacon giving one rap addresses the Senior Warden as follows;

Senior Deacon:—Brother Senior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you teach this brother how to wear his apron as an Entered Apprentice Mason.

The Senior Warden, taking the apron from candidate, unfolds it and while tying it on, says:

Senior Warden:—My brother, Masonic tradition informs us that at the building of King Solomon's temple there were various classes of workmen each of whom as a distinctive badge wore their aprons in a peculiar manner. Entered Apprentices being bearers of burden wore theirs with the bib turned up to prevent their clothes from being soiled, but as stains upon the apron of the operative workman would bring credit rather than disgrace, yet you being a Speculative Mason are expected to keep yours unspotted from the world. You are therefore entitled to wear yours in this manner while working with us on this degree. (He turns up the bib of the apron.)

Worshipful Master:—Brother Jones, agreeably to an ancient custom practiced and adopted in all regular and well governed lodges from time immemorial, it now becomes necessary that you should be requested to deposit something of a metallic kind, not for its intrinsic worth or value, but that it might be laid up among the records in the archives of the lodge as a memorial that you were herein made a Mason. Any small piece of coin, therefore, you may have about you will be thankfully received; in the absence of a coin, a pin or even a button will do. Brother Secretary, you will please collect the deposit from brother Jones. The Secretary comes forward and reaching out his hand as if to collect something from the candidate and of course receiving nothing he turns to the Master and says "The candidate is entirely destitute, Worshipful."

This proceeding often embarasses the candidate very much, especially if he has not read Masonic expositions, for having left all his clothing, money, etc., in the preparation room, he is not at all in a fit condition to respond to a request of a deposit of money or anything of a metallic kind in the archives of the lodge.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Jones, your condition is indeed truly deplorable. Almost naked, in one sense among strangers, but happily for you at this time among friends. But believe me, my brother, this has not been done with the view of trifling with your feelings but to teach you a lesson in charity and should you hereafter meet a friend and more especially a brother Mason in like destitute circumstances you will cheerfully contribute to his relief so far as his necessities may require and your ability permit, without material injury to yourself. You will now be reconducted to the place from whence you came and be there invested with what you have been divested of and return to the lodge for further instruction.

The Senior Deacon now conducts the candidate to the altar where he is taken in charge by the stewards and all three having made the due-guard and sign of this degree, they retire with the candidate to the preparation room, the Senior Deacon in the meantime resuming his usual place. While the candidate is getting on his clothes the lodge is usually "called off," that is a recess is taken, when the brethren indulge in a little social chit-chat and otherwise amuse themselves. When the candidate is dressed he is led into the lodge again by the stewards, generally introduced to and welcomed by the members present and the Master's gavel again sounding in the East all the brethren are seated and the lodge once more called to order. He is then placed standing in the north-east corner, "his feet forming the angle of an oblong square," that is, on the step of an Entered Apprentice, and his body erect, where the Worshipful Master gives him the following charge:

Worshipful Master:—Brother Jones, you are now standing in the north-east corner of the lodge, as the youngest Entered Apprentice Mason, your feet forming the angle of an oblong square and your body erect, at the right of the Worshipful Master, where you stand to all appearance a just and upright man and Mason, and I give it to you strictly in charge ever to walk and act as such. Being clothed as an Entered Apprentice you are now entitled to your working tools.

of an Entered Apprentice Mason are the twenty-four inch guage and the common gavel. [The Master holding these implements in his hand exhibits them to the candidate.] The twenty-four inch guage is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to measure and lay out their work, but we as Free and Accepted Masons are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of dividing our time: it being divided into twenty-four equal parts is emblematical of the twenty-four hours of the day, which we are taught to divide into three equal parts whereby we find eight hours for the service of God and the relief of a distressed worthy brother, eight for our usual avocations, and eight for refreshments and sleep.

The first degree usually ends here as but very few Masters are qualified to give the lecture which comprises the second and third sections of this degree; but as I am desirous of giving all the degrees in full and exactly as they are, or ought to be given in all regular and well governed lodges, I shall now proceed to give the

LECTURE.—2ND SECTION.

Brother Jones, in being prepared to be made a Mason you were deprived of all metals for two reasons: first, that you should carry nothing offensive or defensive into the lodge, and, secondly, because at the building of King Solomon's temple there was not heard the sound of ax, hammer, or any tool of iron. The stones were all hewn, squared, and numbered in the quarries where they were raised; the trees were felled and prepared in the forests of Lebanon, carried by sea on floats to Joppa and thence by land to Jerusalem, and the building when completed (its several parts fitting with such exactness) presented more the appearance of the handi-workmanship of the Supreme Architect of the Universe than of that of human hands.

You were neither naked nor clad, because Masonry regards no man for his worldly wealth or honors; it was therefore to signify that it is the internal and not the external qualifications of a man which should recommend him to be made a Mason.

You were neither barefoot norshod, agreeably to an ancient Israelitish custom. And we read in the book of Ruth concerning their manner of redeeming and concerning changing, and to confirm all things a man plucked off his shoe and gave it to his neighbor and this was a testimony in Israel. This therefore you did on the present occasion to signify in the strongest manner possible the sincerity of your intentions in the business in which you were about to engage.

You were blindfolded and with a cable-tow about your neck for these reasons: first, that as you were then in darkness so should you keep the whole world in darkness as regards the secrets of Masonry, unless they obtained them in the same lawful manner you were about to do yourself; secondly, that your heart may be taught to conceive before your eyes should behold the beauties of Freemasonry; and thirdly, that had you not submitted to any of the forms or ceremonies of your initiation and thereby render yourself unworthy to be taken by the hand as a brother, you might be conducted out of the lodge by the aid of the cable-tow without even seeing the form thereof.

You gave three distinct knocks to alarm the lodge and to inform the Worshipful Master that you were prepared for initiation. These knocks allude to a passage in Scripture which says, "Ask, and you shall receive; seek, and you shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you," and which you might have applied to your then condition in the following manner: You asked the recommendation of a friend to be made a Mason, through his recommendation you sought initiation; you knocked at the door of the lodge and it was opened unto you.

You were received upon the point of a sharp instrument pressing your naked left breast, the moral of which was to teach you that as that was an instrument of torture to the flesh so should the recollection thereof be to your mind and conscience should you ever presume to reveal any of the secrets of Freemasonry unlawfully.

You were conducted toward the center of the lodge and caused to kneel for the benefit of prayer, because no man should ever enter upon any great or important undertaking without first imploring the blessing of Deity.

You were asked in whom you put your trust because according to Masonic law no atheist could have been made a Mason; it was therefore necessary that you should profess your faith in a Supreme Being, otherwise no oath or obligation could have been deemed binding upon you.

You were taken by the right hand, ordered to arise, follow your conductor and fear no danger, to signify that at a time when you could neither foresee or avoid danger, you were in the hands of a true and trusty friend in whose fidelity you might with safety confide.

You were conducted once round the lodge that the brethren present might see that you were duly and truly prepared to be made a Mason.

You met with several obstructions on the way because at the building of King Solomon's temple there were guards placed at the South, West and East gates of the outer courts of the temple, who permitted none to pass or repass except those who were duly qualified and had permission.

You were caused to kneel upon your left knee because the left has always been considered the weaker part of man, it was therefore to signify that it was upon the weaker part of Masonry you were then entering, being that of the Entered Apprentice.

Your right hand was placed upon the Holy Bible, square and compass because the right hand has always been deemed the seat of fidelity, and we learn that the ancients worshiped a deity under the name of Fides or Fidelity, which we sometimes find represented by two right hands joined, at others by two human figures holding each other by the right hand.

You were presented with a lambskin or white leather apron because the lamb has in all ages been deemed the emblem of innocence. He therefore who wears the lambskin as the badge of a man is thereby continually reminded of that purity of life and conduct so essentially necessary to his gaining admission to that celestial lodge above where the Supreme Architect of the universe presides.

You were requested to deposit something of a metallic kind to teach you a lesson in charity; and that should you ever thereafter meet a friend, but more especially a brother Mason, in like destitute circumstances, you would cheerfully contribute to his relief so far as his necessities may require and your ability may permit without material injury to yourself.

You were placed in the north-east corner of the lodge as the youngest Entered Appreutice because in operative Masonry the first stone of a building is usually laid in the north-east corner, it was therefore necessary that you should be placed in that position in order to receive your first instruction whereon to build your future moral and Masonic edifice.

And lastly you were presented with the working tools and taught their uses.

THIRD SECTION.

The third section of this degree treats of the lodge itself, its Form, Support, Covering, Furniture, Ornaments, Lights, Jewels, how Situated and to whom Dedicated.

A lodge is a number of Masons regularly assembled and duly constituted, having the Holy Bible, square and compass, and a charter or warrant empowering them to work.

Masonic tradition informs us that our ancient brethren assembled on high hills or low vales, the better to guard against the approach of cowans and eavesdroppers ascending or descending. But at the present day lodge meetings are usually held in an upper chamber, probably for the better security which such places afford. It may be however, that the custom had its origin in the practice adopted by the ancient Jews of building their temples, schools and synagogues on high hills, a practice which seems to have met with the approbation of the Almighty, who said to the prophet Ezekiel, "On the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy." Before the erection of temples the celestial gods were worshipped on hills and the terrestrial ones in valleys. At a later period wherever it was practicable the Christians erected their churches on eminences.

The form of a lodge is that of an oblong square, extending from East to West, embracing every clime between the North and South. In fact, its universal chain of friendship encircles every portion of the human family, and beams wherever civilization extends.

The Masonic lodge bounded only by the extreme points of the compass, the highest heavens, and the lowest depths of the central abyss is said to be metaphorically supported by three great pillars, denominated Wisdom, Strength and Beauty, because there should be wisdom to contrive, strength to support, and beauty to adorn all great and important undertakings. The universe is the temple of the Deity whom we serve; wisdom, strength and beauty are about his throne as pillars of his work, for his wisdom is infinite, his strength is omnipotent, and his beauty shines forth throughout all his creation in symmetry and order.

The pillar of wisdom is represented by the Worshipful Master because he should have wisdom to open and govern his lodge, set the craft to work, and give them proper instruction. The pillar of strength is represented by the Senior Warden, it being his duty to assist the Worshipful Master in opening and closing the lodge, pay the craft their wages if any be due, so that none may go away dissatisfied, harmony being the strength and support of all institutions, more especially ours; and the pillar of beauty is represented by the Junior Warden in the South, it being his duty at all times to observe the sun at meridian hight, which is the beauty and glory of the day.

The covering of a lodge is no less than that clouded canopy, or starry decked heaven where all good Masons hope at last to arrive by the aid of that theological ladder which Jacob in his vision saw extended from earth to heaven; the three principal rounds of which are denominated faith, hope and charity, teaching us faith in God, hope in immortality, and charity to all mankind. But the greatest of these is charity; for faith may be lost in sight, hope ends in fruition, but charity extends beyond the grave to the boundless realms of eternity.

The furniture of a lodge is the Holy Bible, square and compass. The Holy Bible is dedicated to God, the square to the Master, and the compass to the craft. The Holy Bible is dedicated to God because it is the inestimable gift of God to man, and on it we obligate a newly admitted brother; the square to the Master, because it is the proper Masonic emblem of his office; and the compass to the craft because, by a proper application of its use we learn to subdue our desires, and keep our passions within due bounds toward all mankind and more especially toward our brethren in Freemasonry.

The ornaments of a lodge are the Mosaic pavement, the indented tessel, and the blazing star. The Mosaic pavement is a representation of the ground floor of King Solomon's temple; the indented tessel, of the beautiful tesselated border or skirting which surrounded it with the blazing star in the center. The Mosaic pavement is emblematical of human life, checkered with good and evil; the indented tessel or tesselated border, of the manifold blessings and comforts which surround us, and which we hope to enjoy by a firm reliance on Divine Providence, which is hieroglyphically represented by the blazing star in the center.

A lodge has three symbolic lights, placed East, West and South, but none in the North. There is none in the North because this and every other lodge of Free and Accepted Masons is or ought to be a true representation of King Solomon's temple which was situated so far north of the ecliptic that the sun and moon at meridian height could dart no ray of light into the north portion thereof, we therefore Masonically term the North a place of darkness.

A lodge has six jewels, namely, three moveable and three immoveable. The immoveable jewels are the square, level, and plumb. The square teaches morality: the level, equality; and the plumb, rectitude of life. The moveable jewels are the rough ashler the perfect ashler and the trestle-board.

The rough ashler is a stone as taken from the quarry in its rude and natural state. The perfect ashler is also a stone made ready by the hands of the workmen to be adjusted by the working tools of the Fellow Craft; and the trestle-board is for the Master to draw his designs upon. By the rough ashler we are reminded of our rude and imperfect state by nature; by the perfect ashler of that state of perfection at which we hope to arrive by a virtuous education, our own endeavors and the blessing of God; and by the trestle-board we are also reminded that as the operative workman erects his building agreeably to the rules and designs laid down by the Master on his trestle-board, so should we both operative and speculative, endeavor to erect our spiritual building according to the designs laid down by the Supreme Architect of the universe in the great book of nature and revelation which is our spiritual, moral and Masonic trestle board.

The lodge is situated due East and West because of the situation of King Solomon's temple which was so situated because Moses at the command of God erected a tabernacle in the wilderness which he placed East and West to catch the rays of the rising sun, and to commemorate that miraculous East wind which divided the waters of the Red sea and enabled the children of Israel to pass over dry shod when pursued by Pharaoh and his hosts.

In ancient times lodges were usually dedicated to King Solomon as he was our first Most Excellent Grand Master, but at the present day they are usually dedicated to Saint John the Baptist and Saint John the Evangelist, who were two eminent Christian patrons of Masonry, and since their time there is represented in every regular and well governed lodge a certain point within a circle, the point denoting an individual member and the circle the boundary of his duty towards God and man beyond which he is never to suffer his passions, prejudices or interests to betray him on any occasion. This circle is embordered by two perpendicular parallel lines representing Saint John the Baptist and Saint John the Evangelist who were perfect parallels in Christianity as well as in Masonry, and upon the vertex rests the Holy Bible which points out the whole duty of man. In going around this circle we must necessarily touch upon these two lines as well as upon the Holy Bible and while a Mason keeps himself thus circumscribed it is impossible that he can materially err.

BROTHERLY LOVE, RELIEFAND TRUTH.

The principal tenets of a Masons profession are brotherly love, relief and truth. By the exercise of brotherly love we are taught to regard the whole human species as one family, the high, the low, the rich, the poor, who as created by one Almighty Parent and inhabitants of the same planet, are to aid, support and protect each other. On this principle Masonry unites men of every country, sect and opinion and conciliates true friendship among those who might otherwise have remained at a perpetual distance.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLÆ, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosure Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimited number of his tract addressed "TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." It is an excelent tract, bearing the printed endorsement of Executive Committee of the National Christian Association1 He has furnished the public over 150.000 pages of these tracts during the past year.

A Club of Five or Ten can be raised in nearly every town by persistent earnest effort.

Now for "a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together."

Prospect for Clubs.

Since our letter of September 25th was published the FIRST CLUB OF TEN has been received. It comes from Moses Pettengill, Peoria, Ill. He writes that he hopes to secure another club soon and adds, "I wish to have the people educated on a subject of so much evil. It is good missionary work. We hope to have a good State meeting in November." Geo. Brokaw, Washington, Iowa, sends six subscriptions; A. C. Jennings, Ro, Wis., and others send renewals. We hear of clubs of ten forming in several places and we hope to receive them soon. Are you going to secure a club of five or ten or more? The readers, and especially the lecturers, realize the importance of a wide circulation of the Cynosure. A Mason who left the lodge about one year since and is now lecturing in the Anti-masonic ranks, said to us recently, "If I had only known of the Cynosure sooner than I did, what trouble it would have saved me. I realize more and more the need of having the Cynosure widely circulated and read, if this cause is permanently successful." Does it take time and hard work? Is it not worth it? Lectures are very valuable but the Cynosure ought to precede and follow them.

LATER.

Since the above was written we have received another CLUB OF TEN WITH FIFTEEN DOLLARS. H. J. McMasters, Luana, Iowa, who sent it, writes: "We have found it. What? The club of ten for the Cynosure." So Illinois has the honor of securing the first club of ten and Iowa the second. Where is the next coming from?

How many have you secured towards making a club of five or ten?

C&N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloc, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sionx City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

EVENING.—How is a man made a Mason? By Edmond Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Ledge, No. 639, Chicago, Ill

Many of the friends throughout the State are doubtless anxious to witness the initiations of Freemasonry by P. M. Ronayne, and his presence at the Peoria meeting will be an additional reason for attending. It may be your only opportunity to witness the initiations for some time, as arrangements are being made for Mr. R. to attend the State meetings in N. H., N. Y., Pa., and other States which will occupy some months more or less. The sure way of witnessing the most convincing proof of the unmitigated evil of Masonry is to attend the Peoria meeting Nov. 9th and see it as it is.

Topics of the Time.

On Friday evening last Chicago exhibited to the world a conquest of a century—intelligence and religion over brutality and lust. We have had a fire for celebrity, but in the words of a leading business man that was the "chicken-pox; we now have got the small-pox." The quarrel over the county treasury was brought to an unexpected crisis before the polls were reached. The city merchants alarmed at the trap set by the party in power to open the ballot-box to gross frauds, called a meeting in Farwell Hall on Friday evening, October 29th, to protest and take such action as seemed necessary to protect the polls. The vast auditorium was packed in spite of a violent storm. When the exercises were proceeding orderly, Hesing, followed by a party of his backers, worked his way toward the platform, bellowing his objections and demanding to be heard. Several hundred, gamblers, thieves and ward politicians, distributed in convenient portions of the hall, crowded forward to get possession of the stage. They were met by determined men and a terrible row ensued and sharp fighting was had in front of the platform for some twenty minutes, the police joining to help the brutal element, dragging respectable men by the heels from the stage upon the heads of the crowd and clubbing them without stint. The vast audience unable to take more active part, shouted and stamped their rage, and from the time Hesing appeared, raised a continual yell, "Put him out." The roughs at last beaten off the stage, Mr. J. V. Farwell mounted on a table and wielding the back of a broken iron chair, "the best election argument," made a rousing speech, which cowed the mob and sent them beaten to their doggeries. It is on all sides conceded that the Opposition party now controlling this city has dug its own grave and the election of Tuesday will set up the tombstone.

Prof. Swing has made the following characteristic deliverance on the Bible question: "The Government has no more right to teach the Bible than it has to teach the Koran. My idea is that the Government did, in its earlier life, run according to a sort of Christian common law, but now the number of Jews, Catholics and infidels has become so greatly increased, the Government has to base itself squarely upon its constitutional idea, that all men are religiously equal." The fallacy of this reasoning has often enough been shown, but is continually repeated by those shallow religious minds who follow the Masonic doctrine that Allah is as good for a Mohammedan as Jehovah for a Christian. How has it come about that our "sort of Christian common law" has been repealed because a number of persons have come into the country who have no respect for evangelical religion? By what process does that fact annul the authority of God and his Son over this or any other nation? When Prof. Swing can show that Buddha is of equal authority as ruler of nations with "our God," or that the Koran promotes that sound morality which is one of the essentials of good citizenship, his words will appear reasonable. It must also very much be doubted whether the majority of the nation care to yield their rights to "Jews, Catholics and infidels," any more than the honest voters of Chicago do to put their public money into the hands of thieves and gamblers for safe keeping. That class of religionists or non-religionists have no more power to set the nation "squarely upon its constitutional idea" than the Christians.

According to information received by the Paris correspondent of the London Times, Garcia Moreno, the late President of Ecuador, was assassinated by members of a secret society, which has branches all over South America, and even in Europe. Lots were drawn to select the murderer who entered the Presidential palace at Quito. One of the accomplices, an officer, who was caught after the assassination, was told by the President of the court-martial before whom he was tried that his life would be spared if he would give up the names of his associates. "My life," he replied, "would be worthless, for if you spared me my comrades would not. I would rather be shot than poniarded." The Catholic Review of New York has published several articles going to prove the complicity of the Freemasons in the assassination of Moreno, who was an ardent papist, and bitterly hated by the lodge. There is little doubt of the correctness of the statement. The oppression of the priesthood has been the indirect means of bringing Freemasonry into considerable power in Brazil and other South American countries. Introduced from Europe it offered to the ignorant and bigoted who were offended at priestcraft an opposing organization. Confusion and strife have resulted. The reply of the culprit in this case has the character of Freemasonry, and furnishes strong proof that the lodge has begun a legitimate career in Ecuador.

Freemasonry and Odd-Fellowship at a Discount.

BY REV. W. POST.

The Rochester daily recently contained the following:

QUEER LEGAL TACTICS.

"We are informed that the defense of John Clark, the murderer, have been indulging in some rather strange measures for these parts. The first panel of jurors was publicly known, so a canvass of the entire panel was made by some one. Calls were made at the residences of prospective jurors and all sorts of inquiries were made concerning them. The questions of a census taker were as nothing to the inquisition concerning the religious belief, nationality and so forth, of a man. The main point was to find out if the possible juror was a Mason or Odd-fellow. When unable to obtain the sought-for information at a man's house, his acquaintances were interviewed on these points."

This shows conclusively that secret societies are considered prejudicial to the cause of truth, and that justice stands a poor chance where they obtain. It also encourages us to believe the time is drawing near when no Mason, Odd-fellow, or such like will be accepted as a juryman on any case. Invariably murder, robbery and all crimes are associated in the mind with secrecy. They go hand in hand. Secrecy, darkness and crime are linked together. No secret brotherhood is fit for jurymen, so it seems, or Mr. Howe, counsel for the murderer and burglar, Clark, would not have objected to Masons or Odd-fellows as jurymen. Mr. Trevor, who was murdered, was a Mason, and Howe, understanding the terrible potency and danger of Masonic and such like obligations, would not allow his chances to clear the prisoner to be interfered with by them.

Mr. Howe is an eminent criminal lawyer of New York City and understands how secrecy affects men, and interrupts justice. Mr. Howe may not have cared "a fig" about these secret societies, or he may have belonged to some one of them. It matters not; his objection to such jurymen tells the story—that the most astute legal counsel know and fear the danger and power of secretism to pervert men who are even legally sworn to justice; and into whose hands are placed the issues of life and death of a fellow mortal.

We are glad that this "challenging" occurred in our city of Rochester, where there are no less than thirty-six of these secret societies of different grades. But if Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship disqualify men to act as jurors, what do we say of judges, lawyers and all government officers? If secretism perverts justice in the jury; will it not among the judges? And if a secular attorney, to guard well the interests of his client, objects to Masons and Odd-fellows, as disqualified to act impartially in a matter of so great moment as the life of a fellow, or the public welfare, what would you say about ministers of the Gospel being heart in hand with such clans, to whom is committed the eternal interests of the souls of men?

If a man is not fit for a juryman, who has sworn to keep the secrets of a craft, even murder and treason not excepted, or if you please, murder and treason only excepted, ought he to have the care of souls—to be a minister of the Gospel?

If wicked men, or men of no religious pretensions, frown upon such corrup and corrupting associations, is it not high time that they were denounced from both the pulpit and the press of the religious world, and also by all lovers of truth and justice?—Reformer and Free Press.

Lutheranism vs, Lodge.

In order to obtain an official declaration from Synod itself touching its real position with regard to secret orders and the protection a pastor might expect when opposed by membership of such societies, because of honest testimony against the sinfulness of the same, the joint vestry of the Lima charge, through its delegate, Richard Oard presented to Synod at Lewisburg certain questions of the above import.

The following through the eighth committee is the action of Synod thereunto pertaining;

The committee to whom was referred a paper from the delegate of the Lima charge beg leave respectfully to report:

1st. That the first item is a resolution of the joint vestry of the Lima charge, requesting this Synod to "express itself clearly and positively, as to whether it endorses the utterances of the General Council at Pittsburgh on secret societies."

To this request we reply, that no clearer or more positive endorsement of the General Council's declarations could be made than that heretofore given by this Synod. (See Min. 1871). If said joint vestry has failed to see our previous action, as printed in our minutes, it is their oversight.

Resolved, That brother Bartholomew be requested to again inform said people of the former action and language of this Synod.

2d. There is coupled with the above request another inquiry by the vestry charge which is in the following words:

"Whether the Synod will protect its pastors in enforcing discipline against such members as prove themselves unworthy by opposing God's word in the defence of secret societies!"

To this we reply, That this Synod will and does protect its pastors in all their just rights and the functions of their office properly exercised according to the rules of God's word, and the constitution of this body. But as no mortal man is infallible, we cannot be expected to endorse the discipline of any brother in any particular case, unless all the circumstances are as well known to Synod as to the pastor and his church council. How far a man may be guilty in opposing God's word, and to what extent he is unworthy is a question that can only be decided upon proper investigation and evidence. All cases of discipline by a pastor and church council are supposed to be right, and stand approved, unless an appeal is taken to the Synod, when the case will be properly examined, and the pastor and church council either sustained and protected, or their action reversed and condemned as the superior wisdom of the whole body of the Synod may determine after a complete knowledge of the case."

With regard to the 1st point I would urge that we still supposed these council utterances meant positive opposition to secret societies. And the joint vestry intended to find out whether the Synod thought so and meant so too.

The Synod replied that it stands by those utterances. But those utterances are claimed by parties on both sides of the house; and the Synod is aware of this. Where now is the Synod? Perhaps like a swarm of bees on and all over the fence!

However, the 2d question was intended to reduce theory to practice. But lo! Mark the windy war of words against a man of straw so artfully set up to evade commitment on the subject of secret societyism by a positive answer! As though the question had been: whether the Synod would endorse any and every discipline enforced by its pastors on any pretext whatever! Had the question been minus the last part—in the defense of secret societies—it, without many "its" and "buts," would undoubtedly have met with a categorical yes. That committee and Synod well knew the literal meaning of that question, what it involved, and into what it be resolved, to wit: are secret societies sinful? Is opposing God's Word at any time sinful? Therefore, is opposing God's Word in defense of secret societies sintul? Whether pastors should enforce discipline against such members as prove themselves unworthy is beyond the Synod's jurisdiction—that is settled by the Master himself, Matthew xviii 18, 19. "But if he" (in case of sin against God's Word and after proper previous admonition) neglects to hear the church, let him be to thee as a heathen man and a publican!" Whether the Synod will protect its pastors in enforcing such discipline, —when such sin is mixed up with secret societyism, and when thereby the Synod would commit itself as to its true position with regard to secret societies, this may yet be a question for future ill-concealed, bungling, Synodical evasion.

However this vexed subject came up before the Synod at its last session in another form. Mr. G. W. Overmyer, indignant at the reasons of the Elida congregation for not confirming his appointment as delegate to the Synod, and still hoping that the Synod would protect them from my testimonies and discipline against their ungodly secret society rebellion, took an appeal from that action to the Synod as herein before mentioned. This brought the whole matter of strife before the IV. committee and by it before the Synod at Lewisburg a second time [on the following commendation:]

"Your committee, after careful consideration of all the facts in the case brought to their knowledge, whilst they do not assume to judge of every act of either party, and believe, as the Synod did one year ago, that mistakes have been made on both sides, have come to what is to them a sad and painful conclusion, that there is but one possible solution of these troubles, viz: the resignation by pastor Bartholomew of the Lima charge, to which act we hereby advise him, sincerely convinced that such a step will not only prove conducive, but is a necessity to his peace of mind and the welfare of his soul, as well as those of the people of the Lima charge.

On the other hand, we admonish the brethren appealing, that they have not appeared before us in the true Christian spirit in which they should have come, nor have they by any means, as far as appears from the evidence before us, throughout the entire progress of the difficulty, from its first inception, acted in a proper Christian spirit towards pastor Bartholomew and the Lima congregation, and we ask them most earnestly, for their temporal and eternal well-being and for the peace of Zion to return to the way of Christian order and discipline."

J. P. Hentz, Chairman.

(See Lewisburg Min. p. 24.)

Thus, after avowed predetermined rebellion in the interest of secret societyism, to silence the voice of testimony or drive away a regularly called pastor from his divinely appointed post; after bitter opposition and persecution of such pastor in the congregation and before the Synod; after harrassing him in every available way for the greater part of two years; after bribes of other "fields of labor," by flattering letters, offered through members of the Synod; and after repeated threats, that if the Synod will not accede to their purpose, they will seek some other ecclesiastical organization, these conspirators finally bring the Synod to "what is to them a sad and painful conclusion, that there is but one possible solution to these troubles, viz: "the resignation by pastor Bartholomew of the Lima charge, to which act we hereby advise him, sincerely convinced that such a step will not only prove conducive, but is a necessity to his peace of mind and welfare of his soul, as well as those of the people of the Lima charge." And this is so done with full knowledge of the facts in the case before them!

Thus is the rebellious faction confirmed in the purpose of its conspiracy, and hardened against the hope of further Christian admonition and remonstrance. And thus does the Synod make itself partakers of other's sins! . . . In view of this and all thereunto pertaining, as herein before specified and by indubitable proofs established, I do therefore and herewith solemnly, and in the fear of God, charge the Eng. Ev. Lutheran District Synod of Ohio (Council District), as a body, this ministerium as integral part of the same, and the Rev. Messrs. G. W. Mechling, President; Daniel Worley, pros. attorney; J. P. Hentz, G. Master, W. H. Swaney, clerical members of the IV. and Prof. L. S. Harkey, J. P. Hentz, and G. Harter, clerical members of the VIII. committee of the convention of said Synod at Lewisburg, O., Aug. 9, 1873, severally and individually, with sinful complicity in the before mentioned godless conspiracy and purpose of certain insubordinate members of the Lima congregation, A. D. 1872 and 1873, as headed by G. W. Overmyer, to remove me, because of offence taken at my Christian testimonies against the sinfulness of such secret deistical organizations as the order of Odd-fellows and Masons, from my legitimate office and divinely appointed post—as pastor of the Lima charge. . . .

Touching the further high-handed charges, 2d and 3d, proffered so boldly and confident of incrimination, against me, I would, in the light of the foregoing, simply say: "Whose hatred is covered by deceit, his wickedness shall be showed before the whole congregation! Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein; and he that rolleth a stone, it will return upon him!" Haman prepared a gallows for Mordecai; but was hanged upon it himself.

Finally, I close this my defense with the reaffirmation and citation of what I stated in my Lewisburg sermon: "Here (this self-same secret society matter) "was the source of the unhappy division of our Synod at Lima and the alienation that now exists between the brethren, who otherwise are of the same evangelical faith, and ought to be standing shoulder to shoulder against the world, the flesh and the devil. Shall we childishly fear to take hold of this monster evil, which is still threatning our life? We have only to fondle with it a little while longer and our Synod will again be divided and then subdivided. Yes; disintegration will go on and on, until the whole body will be utterly demoralized. "To be forewarned is to be forearmed."

Popular Heresies.—One of these is, "In time of peace prepare for war." Taken in the usual sense this is heresy. In one sense it is sound and noble, viz: Prepare to resist war by the dissemination of the principles of peace. But this is not the meaning. It is military preparation. The heresy lies in this, that men are usually ready to do what they have prepared to do. If they have prepared for war they are more ready to engage in it. Let this pernicious dogma with its more pernicious results be tabooed.

A second of these heresies is Vox Populi Vox Dei—The voice of the people is the voice of God. At any time this aphorsm may mislead, but in time of anticipated or threatened war is more likely to do so. At that time the nation's blood is up, and a bold or bad leader sounds the tocsin and the people send back the shout of blood. The leaders shout Vox Dei, when in fact it is more nearly Vox Diaboli. Hence Vox Populi Vox Dei is not always safe, at least in times of war excitement.

A third heresy is the praise bestowed on military heroes. Our histories, school books, and even speeches to children, are poisoned with this. Every school boy knows Alexander, Caesar, and Napoleon, but alas! how few know the bloodless heroes of peace. If a member of the school board or other gentlemen be called upon on examination days to talk to the children, he is not unlikely to attempt to inspire them by referring to Caeser, Napoleon, Wellington or other military heroes. Very likely no reference is made to Paul, to Luther, or Wilberforce, or to others whose banners have not been rolled in blood. These things should be changed. If we want the reign of peace let us teach our children the principles of peace. Let this teaching be at school as well as at home. The German aphorism is that what you want to appear in the life of a nation, should first be put into the schools of that nation. Let this apply to our text books and our teaching in schools. —President Ross of the Kansas State Normal School.

Wives or Concubines.

Gordon, who was a British subject, residing at Rio do Janeiro, married the daughter of a merchant, also residing there in 1843. Both parties were Protestants, and the marriage was celebrated by an English clergyman in the ambassador's house. They lived together for a quarter of a century as man and wife down to 1868, when Gordon, who had become a Roman Catholic, proceeded to marry a Baroness von Beulwitz, of his adopted faith, in a Roman Catholic church at Manchester, and the next year a child of his second marriage was born. His first wife now appealed to the Courts at Edinburgh, when Gordon admitted the alleged facts, and pleaded the law of his church in defence of the bigamy. And the Roman authorities upheld what he had done, for it had assured him officially that he was committing no adultery in forsaking his wife and living with the other woman he had picked up.

The conscience and intellect of every man must rise in judgment against such claims. But Rome cannot change. The Tridentine decrees are the infallible truth of God. The marriages contracted in a community are the key stone of the whole fabric of society, while we find a foreign power claiming in the name of religion a right, in this most momentous of all contracts, to set aside, by its own decrees, the laws and regulations which the civil power has made for the good government of society and the preservation of public morals. And the patent fact remains that it is not on moral grounds that Rome proceeds in this course. For while stigmatizing as filthy concubinage marriages not Tridentine, she reserves to herself a right of acknowledging the validity of such marriages, if she thinks the interests of the church require her to do so. Cases which she dare not solve violently, she solves by the dispensing power which she says resides in her. It rests with the Papal Curia to say whether a Protestant marriage or any number of them is valid or not. If it is to the interest of the church to declare them valid, then she so declares them; and in this way affects the right of making adultery innocent, and an honorable marriage concubinage. These claims are so crucial a test of the length to which Roman pretensions go, while Englishmen in the mass are so little aware of the importance of the issue that is being fought out, that is desirable, we think, to reproduce Mr. Gladstone's statement of the matter:—

"I have before me the exposition, with the text, of the Encyclica and Syllabus, published at Cologne in 1874, with the approval of authority (mit oberkirchlicher Approbation). In p. 45 it is distinctly taught that with marriage the State has nothing to do; that it may safely rely upon the church; that civil marriage in the eyes of the church, is only concubinage; and that the state, by the use of worldly compulsion, prevents the two concubinary parties from repenting and abandoning their guilty relation to one another.

"The decrees have force already in many parts of Germany, and in many entire countries of Europe. Within these limits, every civil marriage, and every religious marriage not contracted before a Roman parochus, as the Council of Trent requires, is but the formation of a guilty connection, which each of the parties severally is charged by the church of Rome to dissolve, under pain of being held to be in mortal sin.

"In 1602, when the Decree of Trent had been in force for thirty-eight years, it was applied by the Congregatio Concilii, with the approval of Pope Clement VIII., to non-Roman marriages, by a declaration that heretics were bound to conform (which was impossible) to the rules of the Council, in default of which their marriages, whether religious or civil, were null and void.

"To this portentous rule exceptions have been made, especially by Benedict XIV. in the case of Holland. Indeed, he questioned its propriety; and Pius VII., in a communication to the Primate Dalberg, formerly Archbishop of Mentz, referred with approval to the language of Benedict XIV. Many theologians have held an opinion adverse to it, and clergy have been allowed to act at times upon that opinion, but only under cover of a policy of dissimulation, a name by which the court of Rome itself has not been ashamed to describe its own conduct. But when the abrogation of the rule for non-Roman marriages has been prayed for, even by Bishops and bodies of Bishops, the prayer has failed. It has been kept alive; and transactions positively dreadful have taken place under its authority, and under other provisions calculated for the same end. Perrone, who may be called the favorite theologian of the Curia, points out that it works for the benefit of heretics, as on their conversion it has often given them an opportunity of contracting a new marriage during the life-time, that is to say, of the former wife.

"The upshot, then, seems to be this; that Rome, while stigmatizing marriages not Tridentine as concubinage in the manner we have seen, reserves a power, under the name or plea of special circumstances, to acknowledge them or not, as policy may recommend. This is but the old story."—N. Y. Observer.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

WESLEYAN GENERAL CONFERENCE—9TH QUADRENNIAL SESSION.—LODGE EXCLUSION AND THE DISCIPLINE—REPORT CONCLUDED.

Friday, Oct. 22.

I came in while the attention of the article of the discipline on secret societies was under discussion.

Rev. Mr. Dempsey was ardently advocating an alteration of the discipline so that it shall exclude all secret societies as well as Masonry and Odd-fellowship.

Rev. Mr. Wardner of N. Y., spoke with great force. He said that it had been intimated (by Rev. Hardy) that members of this Conference are members of secret temperance societies. He took the ground that the Gospel of Christ neither taught nor tolerated secret societies for any purpose under heaven. The secret temperance orders are the bane of the temperance cause. They are gotten up by Freemasons in the interest of Freemasonry. I believe these orders were originated not in the interest of temperance, but in the interest of Freemasonry. They are a train with the front car blazoned with the flags of temperance, but drawing in the rear car a design as dark as the eldest progeny of perdition. I believe they are and have been a nuisance to the temperance cause, and in general a curse. It is intimated that if we prohibit Good Templarism some of our members will leave us. I doubt whether many go. (Responses over the house; "So do I.") I have been ready for some years, and to-day am ready to adopt a rule against all secret societies, and get down upon my knees and ask the blessed and Eternal God to aid us through this great and terrible conflict.

No report can do anything like justice to the almost terrible eloquence of Mr. Wardner at this point which converted the whole house into an echo. "I am willing," he said, "to be radically right on any subject. Standing on this rock of principle, we cannot fall. The eternal rock of principle will sustain us. God, and Christ, and heaven and the Holy Ghost, all are with us.

Answer by committee: Five Conferences have petitioned. Three against secret societies, one against Masonry and Odd-fellowship, and one for the rule as it is.

Mrs. Besse of Kansas was loyal to the exclusion of secret societies, but advocated gentleness and patience. She is a pleasant-spoken, agreeable woman. Sometimes she had thought the best way to cure brethren of secret societies was to let them go in and get disgusted with them.

Brother Greene goes for the rule as it is interpreted against all secret societies, for they are all "such as Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship." He favored recommitment and a rule with a penalty of expulsion of adhering members to any and all secret orders.

Mr. Herrick: Never was a Mason or Odd-fellow, had refused the oath of the Loyal League, but he goes for the rule as it is. He thinks the Gospel fairly applied will destroy all secret societies.

Prest. Blanchard said the rule ought to exclude all secret societies, and then expel only such as refuse to leave them after loving labor.

Rev. J. M. Snyder: If we alter the rule the alteration cannot become law for four years; or till the next General Conference. This is doubted by members, who think when two-thirds of the Conferences have opposed it, it will stand. The session was prolonged twenty minutes to hear Mr. Snyder. He is opposed to a radical rule till the people are educated up to it. So on tobacco, in about eight years we shall have warm discussions on this theme. We must not push things too fast, secret societies must and will all go down, but we must not hurt one of Christ's little ones. I believe you will nearly all vote to adopt the report. If St. Paul or Peter were here he would vote for the report. He argued this from their refusal to enforce circumcision on the heathen converts. They admitted the heathen converts with their amulets, and with their superstitions, like secret societies, which came down from Egyptian or Babylonian idolatry, and are essentially idolatry. But he will vote against excluding members of the minor secret societies. But you can all exclude grangers or Good Templars if you will under the rule as it is; but you must allow others their discretion. Something is due to prudence as well as to bravery. Adopt this rule four years hence if you will. We shall, by that time be prepared for it.

Rev. Mr. Dempsey claimed the floor in the afternoon.

Prof. G. F. Baker of Wheaton, was presented to Conference, and invited to an honorary seat.

Mr. Dempsey: We wish to be as prudent as truth permits; we wish to be as radical as God requires. He gave statements showing that a church was torn and distracted by measures concocted in a Good Templars lodge. The lodge had laid its hand on the woman's movement, resolved that the stream of temperance must not flow at all if not through their secret mill. He continued to reply with great eloquence and adroitness to the speech of Mr. Snyder, and closed with a powerful appeal for the purity of the Wesleyan church from the filth of secretism.

Rev. J. G. Terrill here presented the greetings of the Free Methodist church. The paper read by Mr. Terrill was very eloquent, giving a full statement of the statistics of his denomination, its testimonies against slavery, secretism, and other popular evils. The paper was requested for publication in the Wesleyan, and a committee appointed to reply to it.

Rev. George Ritchie came from Ohio instructed by his Conference to procure a rule which will forever exclude members of all secret orders. He thinks the law of the Conference fairly interpreted would exclude secret societies, but the report would limit the law to Masonry and Odd-fellowship. He therefore must vote against the report.

Rev. Mr. Preston, a member of the committee, was unwilling to take ground lower than the present rule. He believed all secret societies were begotten in hell. He must vote against the committee's report.

Rev. Mr. Vandoren, felt bad when he heard brother Snyder's speech, for he felt that it opened the doors of the church to Good Templars. Now, you would not allow your son in a Masonic lodge, but you have the same corruptions in a Good Templar's lodge, for Freemasons are its authors. I have no pledges to make to the Wesleyan church further than they are true to principle. I believe if that report is adopted we shall make a bad matter worse. He must vote for the seclusion of the Templars, and against the Committee's report. He was earnest and eloquent.

Rev. Mr. Hinman said the converts from heathenism were required to leave their gree-grees, and all elements of heathen worship, and also secret societies, which are stronger in Africa than they are here. He then showed by a few clear remarks that Freemasonry, Good Templarism, snd the grange utterly destroy Christian fellowship. He was listened to with profound attention.

Rev. Mr. Richards: I am embarrassed. I was a member of the committee and consented to the report, but I am not in sympathy with that report. He read resolutions of the Michigan Conference requesting members of the grange to withdraw from that secret order, or from the Wesleyan church. He was still on that ground.

He would feel much like saying to all secret societies, "Ye are of your father the devil, and the works of your father ye will do." But if God received a member of a secret society and we exclude him, do we not reproach our Maker?

Rev. Mr. Hawley of Pa., rose and was well greeted. His Rochester Conference excluded all secret societies; our rule says we will not tolerate our members in belonging to secret societies, such as Masons and Odd-fellows, one oath-bound, the other pledge-bound; all secret societies are one of these. Our rule therefore excludes all secret societies. Every chick which the old hen of Masonry has hatched has secret signs and grips. All have special obligations to each other. All assume the church to be defective, and they must help her with truths out of their secret locker. Thus they claim to be helpers, handmaids of Christianity. All such pretended helpers are harlots. Freemasonry is the mainmast, the minor societies the stay-ropes that support it. We must cut those stay-ropes or no gale of public sentiment can prostrate it. It fell before popular sentiment in Morgan's day, because it had no stay-ropes. Mr. Hawley continued with eloquent argument and invective to which no report can do justice. The whole house was electrified by it. "I object," he said, "clogging the wheels of this reform by adopting the Committee's advisory addition to our rule, I must vote against the Committee's report."

Rev. Mr. Horton: That rule against secret societies was the result of a decisive battle after the disruption of the Wesleyan church. This advisory addition is an attachment depleting the force of the rule against secret societies. Like all parasites, the Committee's addition lives on the force of what it is attached to. Let the rule stand; let the parasite perish.

Rev. Mr. Kinney, connectional agent, has voted radically against secret societies during his whole public life. For the Committee he would say that they acted prayerfully but a little in haste; yet the object of the Committee was to advance, and not to go backward. Bro. Crooks had often stated that the rule did not apply to Good Templars and the grange. It was stated to the Committee that some Conferences would be wiped out if the rule should rigidly exclude all secret societies, Templars and all. We intended to hold our ground and help these Conferences up by advice. We want no impression to go out that some of us are cross-bearing men, and others laggards and time-servants. He had seen lately two Master Masons and five Good Templars drawn out of their lodges by kind measures. We are advancing, but he was not in favor of an iron rule adopted now on this subject. He must vote "yes" on the report of the Committee with the interpretation given.

Adjourned over night.

NOTE. I have heard Lord Brougham in the British House of Lords, and Lord John Russell, and Sir Robert Peel in the Commons, but I never heard more effective speaking than today.

SATURDAY, OCT. 23D.

I was not able to be in at preaching last night. Rev. Mr. Hawley of Pa., preached on holiness, and made, I am told, an excellent impression.

The discussion on the secrecy rule is continued and Rev. Mr. Hardy is speaking in favor of the report of the committee, excluding Masonry and Odd-fellowship and advising against the minor secret orders.

Men may go too fast. Luther went too fast when he banished Carlstadt for breaking images. There has been intemperate haste in this anti-secrecy war. One would not use the Lord's prayer because Masons use it and "For Christ's sake" was not the close of it. Let us go for principle, but let us also go for charity to man. Let us not say to those who differ with us on the secret orders, Ye are not men of God. He closes with an earnest appeal for charity and moderation.

Rev. Mr. Ritchie wishes the rule to apply to all secret societies. There is no consistency in rejecting one and receiving another. If we refuse the substitute it is proof that we do not intend to go forward. Let us exclude all or receive all and be consistent.

Rev. Mr. Johnson, Champlain Conference, N. Y. He is opposed to the substitute and in favor of the report of the committee. In many respects the minor societies do and in others do not support Masonry. He knows Good Templars who hate Masonry, but join secret temperance societies to save our young men. If a Good Templar comes to my church we receive him, though I do not approve of any secret societies. I hold that we have no secret societies in this country; they are all revealed. If we have a rule against secret societies only, it will apply to nothing because there are none.

Rev. Mr. Wardner wishes to act and vote as Christ would if here. He is in favor of the substitute. If we ever intend to adopt prohibition of all secret societies, we are now pushed to it by the wish of the Wesleyan church, and the principles of truth and the God of heaven. No brother, he believed, would turn back the Wesleyan church in the march of reform. We are a unit that sooner or later we must come to prohibition of all these secret orders. The Good Templar's affirmation is an oath and would be so accepted by the courts. He read the Good Templar's obligation: before God, not only to abstain from liquor, etc., but also not to reveal the private doings and work of the lodge! If this is not a secret society Masonry and the Ku-Klux are not. Further, he is under affirmation not only to concealment but to obedience to superiors; and this without yet knowing what he swears to conceal or obey! This is Masonry with name changed! Then the obligation binds the Good Templar not to wrong a member of that lodge; leaving him free, so far as that obligation is concerned, to wrong all others. The time for us to take the ground of truth is the first moment that truth dawns on our understanding. I rest on this plain axiom. The Gospel of Christ neither teaches nor tolerates secret societies. His church, therefore is forbidden to do either. Paul forbade to "fellowship" secret societies as unfruitful works of darkness;" if here, would he vote for that fellowship? (No! no! no! all over the house.) "Then I won't!" This caused approving laughter from the audience.

Mr. Wardner closed with a peroration which reporting could only mar. It thrilled and overpowered us. The audience then sung, "Hold the Fort."

Rev. L. N Stratton: He had understood the Committee's report as a forward and no backward step. If he so understood it he would oppose it. If he knew a member of this Conference was an adhering Mason he would be in favor of stopping business till he was put out. If he knew of a Good Templar here and was that man's pastor he would get labor right along. He knew of no Good Templar in any church in Syracuse Conference. But he thinks we should not treat Masonry and Templarism just alike. He believed our object is the same and when the vote should be taken he would vote to make it unanimous, whichever way the vote goes.

Recess taken for dinner.

NOTE.—Our readers will understand that these sketches do not pretend to be anything like a full report of this interesting Conference. The Assistant Secretary, Rev. A. J. Hiatt, is a very interesting and eloquent young preacher, and others who may escape notice here would by themselves make any meeting interesting and profitable. Our object being to represent to the readers of the Cynosure a sketch of the interesting debates and final action on secret societies.

DEBATE RESUMED.

Rev. Mr. Crane favors the Committee's report, considering it not going back but forward. We are not prepared for the substitute yet. We want unity and love. We shall sometime come te the ground of the substitute.

Rev. Mr. Walker from the far West Conference thinks the connection not prepared for the substitute yet. We shall split the church if we press it. In his Conference a council of grangers which filled the whole town was shrunk to simply three men. Let alone it will go down.

Mr. Greene: Will vote for the substitute. If you want this old man out of the Wesleyan church, let in secret societies and you get him out; for I won't be with them. If one joins one of these little things which our brethren defend, he at once defends the whole brood.

The order of the day arrived, and report of Connectional Agent, Rev. D. S. Kinney, heard. The Publishing House fund is now

THIRTY THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

This occasioned great joy among the brethren of Conference, and the Doxology was sung. Rev. D. S. Kinney was elected Connectional Agent by all the votes but three and then made unanimous. The election of editor of the Wesleyan being in order, Rev. L. N. Stratton made a stirring speech on his experience and the duties and interests of the press. Rev. L. N. Stratton was elected and the vote made unanimous. D. S. Kinney, agent, was then elected Associate Editor.

DEBATE RESUMED.

Rev. Mr. Hawley, Pa., wishes to have the law left just as it is without the substitute.

Rev. J. M. Snyder: When the secrecy rule was adopted we lost the New England Conference in consequence of its adoption. This is worth remembering. If any one assumes that we shall lose no members by extreme action they assume it against history. He argues that the fathers did know the minor secret societies and did not include them in the rule. And as the intention of the law-makers is the meaning of the law, the law don't include the Good Templars, etc., and exclude them from the church. He is opposed to the substitute which leaves the rule against all secret societies because it will advertise us as fanatics and extrematists. Also because it is prepared in hot haste. Again he objects to the substitute because it rejects the report of the committee. We may, he doubts not, come to exclude all secret societies some twelve years or so hence. But the denomination is not now prepared for it. While anti-secret literature is everywhere increasing there is no danger of our sinking before secret societies. We can safely wait four years for an absolute rule and save our denomination.

Recess till Monday morning; Mr. Snyder holds the floor.

MONDAY MORNING, OCT. 25th.

Yesterday the pulpits of Sycamore were filled by Wesleyan preachers. In the Congregational church Rev. Mr. Foster of Syracuse preached a sound Gospel sermon in the morning, but did not allude to the lodge to which some of the members there belong.

At night Rev. Mr. Preston of Iowa preached a sermon on Quenching the Spirit; one of the ablest discourses I have heard for years. I would gladly give a synopsis of it but for room. He also prayed against secretism, and in his sermon showed our absolute dependence on the power of the Holy Ghost to overthrow the system of secret lodges. There were Freemasons in the choir and body of the house. but the power and spirit by which Mr. Preston spoke carried his audience with him, and after sermon there were joyous greetings and loud conversation like people in a revival.

DEBATE RESUMED.

Rev. Mr. Richards offered an amendment to Mr. Preston's substitute leaving the law as it is, and recommending its application to all secret societies.

Rev. Mr. Foster is opposed to this because it would be a forced construction of the law, to apply it to all secret societies. He could not administer it as law.

Rev. Mr. Richards amendment was then adopted by yeas, 38, and nays, 7; absent 5, and in these words:

"Resolved; That we deem it inexpedient to change the law as embraced in the 22nd section of our Book of Discipline; and recommend its application to all secret societies."

Thus the "long agony is over" and the Wesleyan General Conference "recommend" the application of their law excluding Freemasons and Oddfellows from fellowship, "to all secret societies."

This is a judicious and Scriptural method of treating this important subject. If now any churches or conferences into which these orders have snaked their way, cannot enforce discipline against them, they violate no law but only disregard a "recommendation." The action of this Conference is therefore a noble tribute to reform and a wise and merciful arrangement for the denomination; which, I venture to predict, within the next four years, will clean out the secret societies from the Conferences which they infest; and give his denomination a noble position, free from the secret idolatries of the age. All friends of the country and of God have every reason to hail this great triumph of truth and pray for the blessing of God on the Wesleyan connection.

POSTSCRIPT.—We learn from Father Greene and Rev. Mr. Dempsey that the subject was reconsidered and the question referred to the churches:—Shall the law exclude all secret societies! If the churches now, as they will, vote "aye,"this action is stronger even than that reported above.

Illinois.

The Convention of the Illinois State Christian Association will be held in the Congregational church, Peoria, Ill., commencing on Tuesday, Nov. 9th, and ending on the night of the 10th. Arrangements are being made for a large and successful meeting, so far as able speakers, popular expositions of the lodge and the hospitality of citizens can further that end.

New Hampshire.

A convention is called to organize an association in New Hampshire to meet in Lake Village, Belknap county, nea, the center of the State and on the Boston, Concord and Montreal railroad, the seventh station north of Concord. The convention will be held in the Baptist church November 23d and 24th.

Reform News.

Way Notes from the General Agent.

YPSILANTI, Oct. 25, 1875.

DEAR K.—I arrived here since dark and have seen nothing of the town as yet. It is raining and I have not been out in search of friends whom I hope to find to-morrow. My journeyings since last reported have not been through a barren wilderness, although I have encountered some "spies" and met with several instances of interest. Bro. Kiggins will likely report the Jay county meetings, which closed with a rambling address to a fair audience gathered about a school-house which was looked (as is supposed by Masonic influence) against the people who had been taxed, or voluntarily contributed, the funds for its erection.

Parting company with P. M. Ronayne at Ft. Wayne on Friday P. M., I reached Waterloo, Ind., where I spent the night and received most cordial greetings from Bro. Jefferds who expressed great anxiety to witness the tragic death, burial and resurrection of Hiram, and at his earnest request I promised to use my influence in securing a visit from P. M. Ronayne to that place as early as practicable.

Hillsdale lying in the line of my route to this city, I deemed it advisable to call and if the way opened to spend the Sabbath in that educational center of Southern Michigan. Here I found Prof. A. C. Rideout and his excellent "help meet" fully in sympathy with our reform, and, although cumbered with many cares in connection with home interests, they found time for consultation and devised means by which to make my stay not only exceedingly pleasant but highly profitable. Their kindness to the "wanderer" will long be held in grateful remembrance.

The pastor of the Free Baptist church called upon me in the evening and kindly invited me to occupy his pulpit on Sabbath morning which I did, and as I trust by the blessing of God, with some profit to the large and apparently deeply interested audience. Bro. Smith has a rare field of usefulness among so many young active minds gathered to attend the college from different and distant parts, and he is doing a good work in conjunction with his co-workers for the Master in and about the institution. Referring to the secrecy question my judgment is that Bro. Smith needs "more light," and in the very pleasant interview which I had with him and his lady while enjoying their hospitality, I was glad to find that he was not wholly pleased with his personal experiences, or indisposed to submit the question to the test of reason and Scripture. I called upon some of the staunch old reformers who had battled against the slavery of the blacks, and found them of course in Hillsdale, as I find this class of men everywhere, opposed to the slavery of the lodge. I found Bro. Artman living on "borrowed time," but not like too many on borrowed "capital." Prudence, energy and business tact has brought him through the struggles of a long life and in the rich, ripe age of almost four score he finds himself possessed of an ample competency, which after providing for his own wants and doing justice to his kindred in the flesh, he proposes to distribute among those reforms in which he takes a deep interest. Brethren Reynolds, Sr., Bro. Baldwin, whose companion has just passed over the "River," and who is now adjusting his financial matters as the Master's steward, and others with whom I conferred expressed their gratitude for the liberal offer by Mr. Carpenter and a willingness to aid in completing the required sum at an early day.

On Sabbath I enjoyed the unexpected pleasure of an interview with Rev. R. Faurot and wife who were providentialy in the place on their way to Mississippi, where they are going under direction of the Missionary Board to "preach the Word," and if God permit, found an educational institution. The thorough scholarship, extensive experience, the unflinching integrity, the calm, persuasive earnestness and the abiding faith in Christ combined in these Disciples are eminent qualifications for the great work in which they have embarked. May the Shepherd go before and prepare the way for their abundant usefulness.

Correspondence.

An Important Question.

MASON CITY, Iowa, Oct. 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am constrained to pen a few lines for the columns of your most excellent paper. There never was a time in my history when it seemed so difficult to ascertain just what duty is in regard to church relations, and attending church where a Masonic minister occupied the pulpit, or, if not an adhering Mason, allowed the lodge to control to such an extent that he dare not denounce it.

Now we had a change in our ministry lately. I wrote to the P. E. at Conference requesting him to send us a man who had no connection with the craft. A man was sent who says he has been conneeted with the lodge, a Master Mason; but has not attended lodge for quite a number of years, and that ought to satisfy us that he is not a very strong Mason; but that we must not expect him to say aught against the institution; simply let it alone. Now suppose that man had been a drunkard or a rum-seller, but has not been thus engaged for some years, but temperance people must not expect him to denounce drunkenness. All crime might demand the same thing, swearing, Sabbath breaking, adultery, and every other vice. Does a man of God do his duty fully when he changes his life and leaves off those vices, or is he expected to denounce and warn the people against such a course, and point out and explain to them the danger to which they are exposed? If Freemasonry is wrong (and if it is not why has he failed to encourage and support it all these years?) why not warn people against that wrong, naming it, showing its results, just as a faithful teacher would any other wrong? I claim a man who is not a time-server would do so, regardless of results. And then again how much charity are we to have, and in what light are we to regard professed Christians, who, while they claim to regard secretism and especially Masonry of the devil, and think that no good man can belong to it, yet endorses and supports those who adhere to and defend the system. I hope some one will comment upon this letter, and if possible give the writer some advice for I am really perplexed, and need more light.

The Lecture Work Blessed.

BARNESVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 22, '75.

DEAR BROTHER:—Please find enclosed $1,10 for the Cynosure. I wish you to continue, as I expect to be a life subscriber. I am lost without it. I would rather lay aside all others, with one exception, and I am taking six. It is the best family paper published, all things considered. I have been standing almost alone on the Masonic question, and all manner of evil has been said against me. Last winter I suggested the idea of sending for our State lecturer. Many thought I had better not, as it would endanger my life. Then I thought if I was living in a community of that kind the sooner it was ventilated the better. I addressed a few lines to our beloved State lecturer, Rev. J. L. Barlow, who promptly responded, and came and delivered five lectures and came off victorious every time, and there has been a gracious influence extended for miles and miles in the surrounding country. He is master of his subject; his Christian character and gentlemanly deportment tells wonderfully upon the better part of community. I feel he should be encouraged by the real Christian portion of every county in the State, not only by their prayers but by their money, so that he may know his labors are appreciated and the cause of God honored. We expect to have him return in the winter and rout the devil from center to circumference. Masonry is the greatest enemy or barrier to the kingdom of Christ upon the earth; stands right in the way of the revival of God's work. This is apparent to all true followers of Christ, and may God hasten the day of its overthrow.

Yours for the war,

PHILIP P. WERNER.

Jottings of Wisdom and Experience.

FRANKLIN CENTER, Ia., Oct. '75

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I would have sent you some subscribers before this time, but our Germans do not at all admire your temperance language and the Americans have county papers, and are generally infidels. But still,

"Right is right; since God is God
And right the day must win,
To donbt would be disloyalty,
To falter wonld be sin."

I just think of some sayings which every Mason and Anti-mason would truly do well to consider, since every person has his faults and no one can be faultlessly perfect as God is in this world: Speak much and err much. In your discourse take heed what you speak and to whom you speak, how you speak, and when you speak; what you speak, speak truly; when you speak, speak wisely. Those that go to the saloon first for the love of company will at last go there for the love of liquor. Let your prayers be as frequent as your wants, and your thanksgivings as your blessings. Say little of persons whom you can neither commend without envy, nor dispraise without danger. Crosses are ladders that lead to heaven. Good to begin well, better to end well. He that runs in the dark, stumbles. He that teaches often learns himself. Better the last smile than the first laughter. All things are soon prepared in a well ordered house. When men speak ill of thee, live so as nobody will believe them. Write down the advice of him that cares for you, though you like it not at present. When the husband is fire and the wife is tow, the devil easily sets them in a flame. He is wise that is honest. Gravity, discretion, humility and modesty embellish a woman. Silence seldom doth harm. Silence is the best ornament of a woman. He who spends more than he should shall not have to spend when he would. Gather instructions from thy youth up, so shalt thou find wisdom till thine old age. Knowledge is the treasure of mind, discretion the key of it, and it illustrates all other learning as the lapidary doth unpolished diamonds. Courteous behavior and prudent communication, are the most becoming ornaments to a young man with which he may be furnished by timely education and the virtuous example of parents and governors. Jeer not others upon any occasion; if they be foolish, God hath denied them understanding; if they be vicious, you ought to pity them, not revile them; if deformed, God hath framed their bodies, and will you scorn his workmanship? Are you wiser than your Creator? If poor, poverty was designed for a motive to charity, not to contempt; you can not see what riches they have within. Especially despise not your aged parents, if they be come to their second childhood and be not so wise as formerly, they are yet your parents, your duty is not diminished. To hear the discourse of wise men delights us, and their company inspires us with noble and generous contemplations.

I am very respectfully your fellow citizen and a traveler to eternity,

JACOB HAFFNER.

Washington's Address.

ALTAY, N. Y., Oct. 21, '75.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

DEAR SIR:—You ask information. I offer what I have. It will help defend our loved Washington from slander. I am perfectly sure that in my schoolboy days, 70 to 75 years ago, the school-books in which I was then taught to read said that George Washington, in his farewell address to his army, (or probably it was in caution to the nation), charged them to beware of secret combinations, saying, "The government will be in more danger from secret societies at home than from foreign enemies."

The above may not be Washington's precise words, but I well know that it is true in substance. Those old school-books have long since been hunted and destroyed by the craft; thus trying to hide the fact from the present generation that Washington was an Anti-mason forty-five years.

ENOCH HONEYWELL.

—A young pastor of a flourishing church in one of the Illinois river cities ends a cheerful word with his contribution:

"I enclose $3,00 which you will please add to the fund in consideration of which Mr. Carpenter promises to donate the building on Madison street to the uses of the National Christian Association. Wish it were more, but such as it is I send it."

OUR MAIL.

Mrs. Eliza Baker, Vicksburg, Mich., writes:

"The devil has so many traps baited with so many different kinds of bait that he has caught a good share of the inhabitants of this place, old and young, and they dare not take the Cynosure; but I send mine around so all that will may read it. Before Congress doubled up the postage I used to send my papers to people in different parts of the State and into other States, but now I only send where I can send by private conveyance. It is the Lord's work that we are engaged in and it will prevail, and I want a hand in it. Let us contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.

Rev. E. Thomas, Oakland City, Ind., writes:

"I propose to take the Cynosure for life or until secrecy is wiped out of existence. May the good Lord continue his blessings with you forever. The paper is a power for good."

Asher Thompson, Mina, N. Y., writes:

"I expect to be opposed to secret societies and every other wrong as long as I live."

Dan'l Rowley, Fabius, N. Y., writes:

"I can lodge and board a lecturer. I wish there was one here."

Abram Wright, Half Way, N. Y., writes:

"The old abolitionists are falling into line of battle with those who sell intoxicating drinks, and have formed a party here, and it is forming thoughout the nation. Their watchword is not "Shibboleth" or "Mah-ha-bone," but a word that will be understood by all the people, Prohibition from all intoxicating drinks as a beverage. This movement in politics seems to me like the first temperance movement nearly fifty years ago when we signed the old pledge; but Anti-masonry, which is sure to come next in order, is like the total abstinence pledge."

Rev. John Miller, Wauseon, O., writes:

"After waiting a long time we matured arrangments with the trustees of the new M. E. church here for lectures. We advertised thoroughly throughout the county. Bro. Stoddard came from his work in central Iowa, and his first lecture was so truthful and scathing that the craft with all their numbers, wealth, popularity and display, could not stand the first fire. In his second lecture he proposed to present the contrast between the religion of the Bible and that of the lodge. The fraternity rather than be driven unto their last ditch by one man, concluded to resort to the gag law by closing the doors of the churches against the lecturer and hundreds of anxious inquirers after truth. We resorted to Chadler's large hall where Mr. Ronayne turned the lodge inside out. These few efforts have aroused the people of our town and country round about. For the last eight years a few of us have been skirmishing, but now we are in the thickest of the fight. We go upon the principle that one with God is a majority. We would like to have the benefit of the prayers of the readers of the Cynosure."

John Chapin, Mill Village, Pa., writes:

"There are some friends of your cause here but they need greatly a lecturer to wake them up to the importance of the work. Any of the lecturers will find a home with us."

We hope some of the lecturers will note this and give Mr. Chapin a call.

H. W. Marsh, Elmwood, Ill., writes:

"I find it easier to get subscribers for three months at first. I then watch sharp and try and get renewals."

Those who cannot get subscribers for a longer period would do well to try Mr. Marsh's plan being, sure "to watch sharp for renewals."

Jason McKee of Watertown, N. Y.. who is 75 years old, and has been an invalid for many years, is still abundant in good works. He writes us an excellent letter in which he separates the American people into five classes, in regard to secret societies. We like the classsfication so well we will quote it for the benefit of our readers:

"First, the uninformed, careless, and utterly indifferent—don't care one way or the other. Second, those who judge Masonry by its high professions, grand displays, etc., and who praise and honor the system though they know nothing about it. These are jack Masons. Third, those who have taken one or more degrees, and are sick and disgusted with the lodge, but will not, or dare not, stand up against it for fear of harm, and are yet counted to swell the number of Masons. Fourth, there are the honest, intelligent and upright, who, when properly informed are ready to take sides with the right; will bear opposition even persecution in defense of the truth. On these alone can we rely. They are willing to know the truth. Fifth, the stubborn, willful, inflexible adherents of Masonry, who are resolved to support it by any and all means, right or wrong. These are degraded and hardened by their oaths, and are bent on ruin."

He also adds: "I approve the excellent political platform and also of your excellent paper; hope it may be abundantly sustained."

Chas. Jackson, Fitchburg, Wis., writes:

"It is nearly fourteen months now since I first read the Cynosure, and I must say that my heart was filled with joy in reading it. I never thought or knew that there was anybody felt in America who with their whole soul was trying to bring the light before the people. I hope that my name will soon be published in the honor regiment, and that I may help fight for honor and righteousness on this earth.'

Report on Secret Societies.

Adopted by the Iowa Conference Free Methodist Church.

As a body of American citizens, and as representatives of a branch of the church of Christ, we regard it as neither impertinent nor officious to deliberate upon, and express our opinion of any and every organization among us, that does, or even may exercise an undue and improper influence upon our political, religious and social institutions or relations.

Holding, as we do, ourselves and our actions open to criticism, we claim the right to candidly criticise others. Nor are we to be cheated of this inalienable right, by any pretensions to antiquity, sanctity, etc., etc., of any of the various secret orders, as made by their adherents and friends.

And as the working of such orders in the church led to and helped on the injustice and oppression of ministers and members, who, in all sincerity were opposed to them and their faction-making influence, resulting in the denial of rights pledged in the Book of Discipline, and the final ejectment of some, thereby giving room for and making it a necessity that another church be organized in which such influence might not be exercised—we, being delivered, may, ought, and will speak out on this subject.

Such has been the usage of our respective Annual Conferences from time to time, and, at this our first session, we would be well understood as standing in line and in fullest sympathy with those who on principle oppose the existence of the secret orders.

We recommend to our people the Christian Cynosure as the organ of the National Christian Association, and equally recommend as an outspoken and untrammeled advocate of the cause, the Reformer and Free Press; and furthermore recommend that this Annual Conference elect from its members a delegate or delegates to represent them in the next ensuing National Convention of the National Christian Association.

—A brother sends a good list for the paper along with his collection for the Publishing House from a beautifu little town hidden like a nest among the hills of Bureau Co., Ill.:—

"Dear Bro.—, and all of our dear friends in the anti-secret cause, we send you greeting. We feel to praise God for his blessings in sending able men to pull down the strong holds of Satan and to build up the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. A. B— gives for Publishing House, $5.00; L. F— gives for do $5.00, and says he would rather give a thousand."

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for Nov. 14, 1875.—Jesus Interceding.

thSCRIPTURE.—John xvii. 15-21; Comsht 15-21; Primary Verse, 15.

15 I pray not that thou shouldest take I em out of the world, but that thou ouldest keep them from the evil.

16 They are not of the world, even as miam not of the world.

17 Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.

18 As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19 And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.

20 Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word.

21 That they may all be one; as thou Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

LESSON OUTLINE.

THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

HOW SHOWN.

a. Know Christ is divine: v. 7; John viii. 16, 27; xvi. 30; Rom. x. 14.
b. Keep his words: v. 6; John viii. 31; xiv. 21; 1 John ii. 5.
c. Glorify him: v. 10; Phil. i. 20; 2 Cor. viii. 23; 1 Cor. vi. 20.
d. Are hated of the world: v. 14; John xv. 19, 20; Jas. iv. 4.
e. Love the brethren: John xiii. 35; 1 John iv. 20; 1 Pet. i. 22.

HOW SUSTAINED.

a. From what: v. 15; Matt. vi. 13; Gal. i. 4; 1 John ii. 13, 14; v. 18.
b. For what: 1 Thess. iii. 13; 1 Cor. i. 8.
c. By what: v. 11; John xii. 6, 39; John x. 29; 1 Pet. i. 5; Jude i.

HOW SEPARATED.

a. In character: Deut. xiv. 2; Ps. cxxxv. 4; I Pet. ii. 9; Tit. ii. 14.
b. In purpose: Rom. xii. 2; Heb. xi. 13-16; Tit. ii. 13; 1 Cor. i. 7; Col. iii. 3.

HOW SANCTIFIED.

a. Through the word: v. 17; John xv. 3; Eph. v. 26; 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17.
b. Though Christ: Heb. ix. 13, 14; Heb. x. 10; 1 Cor. i. 30.
c. Through the Holy Spirit: Rom. xv. 16; 2 Thess. ii. 13; 1 Cor. vi. 11.

HOW SENT.

a. As Christ was: v. 18; John vi. 38; 2 Cor. v. 20.
b. To preach: v. 20; Mark xvi. 15; 2 Tim. ii. 2.

HOW STRONG.

In unity; v. 23; John xiii. 35; Acts ii. 46, 47.
a. In Christ: Rom. xii. 5; 1 Cor. xii. 13; v. 23.
b. Of Faith: Eph. iv. 13; Phil. ii. 3; 1 Pet. iii. 8.
c. Of Spirit: 1 Cor. vi. 17; Eph. iv. 3; Acts iv. 32.
d. Of name: 1 Cor. i. 12, 13; iii. 3; i. 10; Rom. xvi. 17.

—In what ways should we show we are a "peculiar people?" By not laying up our treasures upon earth, but in heaven, where moth doth not corrupt, nor thieves break through nor steal. Matt. vi. 19-21. That, in these days, would mark any one as peculiar. "Be ye holy in all manner of conversation." 1 Pet. i. 15. Filthy conversation is characteristic of the world. "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." Matt. v. 45. Certainly "the publicans" do not so. Be self-denying, be full of faith, full of prayer; be as pilgrims here seeking a "better country that is a heavenly." Heb. xi. 16.

—The special need of the times is: more sanctified saints—saints sanctified through the Word. We need more Bible-reading Christians. Alas! that the Bible should be so crowded out and down from its rightful high place in the family. One of the first revivals for which we should pray is a revival of the study of the Scriptures in Christian families. Deut. xi. 18; Jos. i. 7; Ps cxix. 42; cxix-cxxxi; Prov. ii. 6-7; Matt xii. 35.

—Each one is "sent" to do some work. We may be sure that our mission was born at the same time we were. If we do not find it, it may be it is because we look too high. Even the Master himself did not come himself to convert the whole world. His ingatherings were comparatively insignificant to those of Pentecostal days. Remember that we were not sent to do our own will God makes choice of our fields of labor for us. If we would hear the "Well done, good and faithful servant" let us do whatever our hands find to do with all our might. Eccl. ix. 10; Matt. xxv. 25-36; Luke viii. 18; xii. 41-44; John iv. 34; ix. 4; xv. 2.—Nat'l. S. S.

Home and Health Hints.

NIGHT DRESSES FOR CHILDREN.—A mother writing in the Household says that she made her little one's night dresses of cotton flannel, with legs to them, so that if he got uncovered he should not take cold. Observing that he lost flesh and grew cold towards morning, she called in a physician. She continues:

"He said that cotton flannel was not the material for children, for when it gets wet it clings to them and is cold as ice. He also denounced the idea of making legs to the dresses; said that the limbs should not be separated, but should come together. His directions were to make a night dress of flannel long enough to lay on the floor half a yard, just like a big bag; run a string in the bottom of this, and when the child goes to bed tie it up. In this way the legs cannot get out, and there is perfect freedom of motion. We did so at once, and it worked like a charm. No more lying awake nights and wondering what the trouble is. The little fellow sleeps soundly, and wakes in the morning refreshed and with a good appetite."

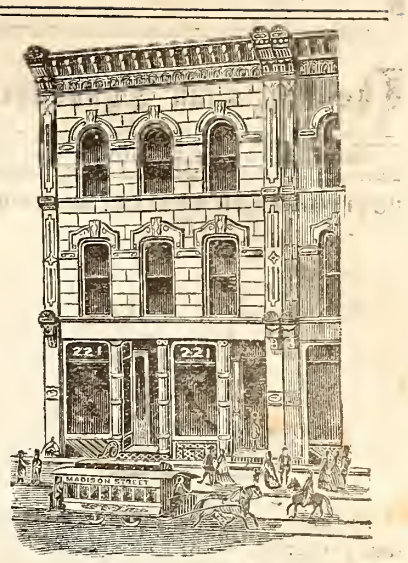
CARE OF THE FEET.—Concerning this subject the Scientific American very truly says: "Many are careless in the keeping of the feet. If they wash them once a week they think they are doing well. They do not consider that the largest pores are located in the bottom of the foot, and that the most offensive matter is discharged through the pores. They wear stockings from the beginning to the end of the week without change, which become perfectly saturated with offensive matter. Ill health is generated by such treatment of the feet. The pores are not repellants, but absorbents, and this fetid matter, to a greater or less extent, is taken back into the system. The feet should be washed every day with pure water only, as well as the armpits, from which an offensive odor is also emitted, unless daily ablution is practiced. Stockings should not be worn more than a day or two at a time. They may be worn one day, and then aired and sunned and worn another day, if necessary."

HOW TO COOK A TURNIP.—I will ask the reader to cook two turnips in two different ways. The first is to be peeled and sliced, and left to soak in cold water for an hour or more. The slices are to be boiled until quite tender, and then are to be drained and nicely mashed with butter. This is the most common way of cooking them, and it has the demerit of washing out the gum and the sugar, and the other fine constituents of the root, and consequently the flavor is very much reduced. The other root is to be washed quite clean; but is not to be peeled, or cut, or soaked. Boil it whole in its "jacket." It will take twice as long to cook as the one that was cut. When, by trying it with a fork, you find it quite tender, take it up, peel it, press it moderately, and mash it with butter. Instead of being, perhaps as you will expect, strong, rank or bitter, it will be deliciously full flavored, and will contain all the nourishment that was in it before it was cooked.—Gardener's Magazine.

Farm and Garden.

BREAKING HEIFERS.—A correspondent of the American Farm Journal gives the following:

As a good paper is made up of the experience of many, I will give ours in a few small things that we have tried this year. We had a young heifer that came in about the middle of March. She has always been inclined to be wild. We began early in the Winter to card and rub her, to get her used to being handled, but she would kick whenever her teats were touched, when she began to give milk. We passed a half-inch rope around her body, just in front of the udder, and drew it as tight as possible when we were milking. It cured her of kicking in about two weeks. She will follow us around the yard now, to be milked first, and is as quiet as an old cow. We have a near neighbor who is a milkman. He has some old, confirmed kickers. He has a ring in the floor behind them, and ties a rope around the leg and fastens it to the ring.



In answer to the question: Why are farmers so liable to rheumatism?—the Science of Health says: "Because they wear wet clothing, heat and suddenly chill the body, over-eat after very hard work, and because they do not keep the skin in a vigorous, clean and healthy condition. If farmers would avoid suddenly cooling the body after great exertion, if they would be careful not to go with wet clothing and wet feet, and if they would not over-eat when in an exhausted condition, and bathe daily, and use much friction, they would have less rheumatism.

FEEDING SKIM MILK TO COWS.—What to do with the skim milk is a troublesome question with butter makers. Skim milk cheese is strongly objected to and sells at so low a price as not to be profitable. The attempts to improve it by the use of oleo-margarine are vehemently opposed in some quarters. To feed the milk to pigs does well, for the pigs, but it is claimed that the returns in this way are not what they should be considering the real value of the skim milk.

In some localities dairymen have practiced feeding the skim milk to cows and claim very satisfactory results. In Chautauqua Co., N. Y., it is common to feed not only the skim milk but the butter milk. Mr. L. S Hardin recently visited that county and writes the Country Gentleman that he could not find a single cow that had been injured by the practice, and that he found two dairymen who had made an average of 300 pounds per cow per year, and six whose average was over 260 pounds. They have good cows, and feed from four to six quarts of ground feed daily when the cows are on luxuriant pasture or have good hay.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to the Treasurer, H. L. KELLOGG 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—J. Blanchard.
DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. A. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
AUDITORS.—C. R. Hagerty and Edward Hildreth.
PRESIDENT OF THE LAST NATIONAL CONVENTION.—Rev. D. R. Kerr, D. D., of Pittsburgh.

The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer, and drafts or P. O. orders made payable to him. The general correspondence, inquiries, etc., should be directed to the Corresponding Secretary.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Peoria Meeting.

To the Friends of Reform in Illinois:

Two things are needed on our part to make our Peoria Convention a success, viz: A large attendance of our friends, and subscriptions sufficient to employ a State lecturer for another year. In order to accomplish these desired results, please so far as possible, do two things:

FIRST.

Please have the notice of the meeting read in the churches of your town; printed in the County papers, and endeavor to attend yourself or have some one from your locality do so.

SECOND.

Please send as soon as possible to H. L. Kellogg, Treasurer of the State Association, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., a subscription for the coming year, and be careful to state in your subscription the time when you wish to pay it. These subscriptions will be used to pay a State lecturer and to pay the expenses of our Convention. If we do our duty God will prosper our cause for it is his.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY NOV. 4, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States

Rev. C. F. Hawley of Pennsylvania, on his return from General Conference at Sycamore stopped in Wheaton and delivered a very clear and convincing lecture to a good audience in the College chapel. He could not, of course, speak as he did at Sycamore under pressure of debate. But one of the College professors said it was "the best lecture he had ever heard on the subject;" and the pastor of the College church, who is a careful man, said, "I perfectly agree with the lecture last night." The point of the lecture was to show that Freemasonry is a "Satanic religion," not the religion of Christ Mr. Hawley has won a warm welcome in Wheaton.

Brutal Assault on Past Master Ronayne.—On Tuesday afternoon of last week as Mr. Ronayne was going toward his home and within a few blocks of it, two ruffians sprang from an alley; and, before a word could be said, or they could be seen so as to be recognized, one of them struck him to the earth with a heavy blow on the head, and both fell upon him with kicks and blows with the evident intention of taking his life or doing severe injury. An alarm put them to speedy flight, however, before they could do more than severely bruise Mr. R. upon his head and body. He was unable after searching all the next day to get any clue to the murderous villains, and rallying from the shock, left on Friday morning in response to an urgent call from Ypsilanti, Mich, to attend the State meeting. The natural supposition, to Mr. Ronayne and to all who know the stand he has taken in this city and his treatment by the lodge, is that the men who attacked him were Masons or Masons' hired assassins. Time and inquiry may give some clue and bring them to punishment.

CORPORATIONS—THE AMERICAN BOARD.

It is wise to heed the lessons of experience. Among our religious benevolent organizations, in the words of the law "not for pecuniary profit," the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions is pre-eminent in age, influence, and the extent of its benevolent transactions. Organized in 1809 it was the missionary agent of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches until the former established a mission society of their own; not, however, wholly withdrawing support, for Wm. E. Dodge, the wealthy and public spirited Presbyterian of New York, continues to sit as a member of the Board. Last year it sent to mission fields the vast sum of $418,225, with an expense of less than six per cent; sustaining 576 mission stations and 1439 missionary laborers. The number of children in its schools is 22,523, and the additions to its mission churches for the year 1504. A truly remarkable work, for if the whole expense had been for the mission schools alone, it would have averaged but eighteen dollars and a half per scholar. The management of the Board has been always largely on the committee plan. Its idea from the first was that of a number of intelligent, pious men, representing the churches and intimately acquainted with the necessities of the mission fields, sitting around a board or table, discussing freely, carefully and clearly the great work of preaching Christ to the nations. This feature has been presented for the sixty-six years of its existence. In 1821 provision was made for an honorary membership, conditioned on the payment of $50 by a clergyman, and $100 by a layman, at one time; the honorary members having every privilege of moving or seconding resolutions, or speaking to them, serving on committees—all except voting. By this means in time the meetings of the Board have become mass conventions, attended by thousands who are interested in its general work, and for whose profit a part of the annual meeting is especially planned, the discussions of the business meetings being more interesting to the reader than to the hearer.

From this popular feature of the Board meetings a change has been advocated in some quarters to allow the masses closser connection with the business of the society. The Prudential Committee, which is the executive body of the Board, presented an exhaustive paper on this subject in the Chicago meeting, which presents the ordinary working of the present system as follows:

"A meeting is held, it may be in New England, it may be in Illinois, and from sixty to one hundred corporate members are found to be in attendance. But there are also three, four, five, six, possibly nine times as many honorary members,—for each of these figures can be verified from the records of our meetings,—and outside of these two classes are hundreds of Christian friends deeply interested in all that takes place. The honorary members have the same rights and privileges as the corporate members with a single exception. They serve on committees; they can discuss any question that may arise; they can submit any motion and propose any amendment that shall be in order. They can do all this, moreover, with the advantage of knowing that they are much the larger body, and that many of them are the peers, in every sense, of those with whom they sit and deliberate.

As a matter of history, the right of voting hitherto would not have been of the least practical value to them. The action of the corporate members has never deviated by a hair-breadth from what would have been the deliberate voice of the honorary members, and it never could have so deviated without great peril to our common interests. The corporate members must know and feel that they can venture upon a disagreement only for the strongest reasons, such reasons as will be sure to receive the approval of the churches. To say, therefore, that the Board is an irresponsible corporation is a serious misrepresentation."

Such being the practical working of the Board as now constituted, the Committee yet suggests two or three plans whereby the representative membership can be increased; but not recommending any change for the reasons: that already complaint is made that in a mass meeting the business of the Board is not done so thoroughly as it should be; and for commercial and other interests which might be seriously impaired, which they state in these words:

"Under and by means of its corporate privileges it has gained a position like that of a long-established and well-known mercantile house. Under and by means of its corporate liabilities it has secured the confidence of those who deal with it, especially with its bankers. But a material change in our charter, especially in certain directions, may necessitate readjustments which will prove very inconvenient, not to say harmful. The present arrangement secures uniformity of administration. As the Board it now constituted, it can meet in places widely distant from each other, and yet avoid the risks incident to a fluctuating body. Aside from the honorary members, and aside from such of the corporate members as may fairly claim exemption from their earlier responsibilities, it has 150 gentlemen, chosen for life because of their supposed fitness for the important trust which they have assumed, with more or less of acquaintance with the questions which are likely to come before them, and who are expected moreover to give their attendance whenever it shall be practicable."

It must be noted that this society was formed while the churches of New England were yet suffering from the Unitarian defection, and the limitations of membership made more stringent to prevent any interference from that quarter, and the test of two-thirds of a century is sufficient proof of their practical merit.

The organization of the American Board has been largely copied in nearly all our associations for Christian benevolence and reform. Thus the National Temperance Society holds its annual business meetings at its head quarters in New York, while last year its great National Convention overflowed Farwell Hall in this city. The analogous feature of the central body of our reform are too familiar to require particular mention. When we consider that the foe we oppose is wily and unscrupulous as no other; that the lodge would not hesitate to dispossess the National Association by a coup de main of any privileges or property by which itswork was advanced, its organizations seems to be formed with superior wisdom. While under equal or less exacting restraints of membership with other bodies of similar character, unlike them it withstands an organization of fearful power in society, business, politics and religion, conscienceless, law-defying and hidden from the light of heaven. With less it would risk the confidence of its friends, too many of whom have already felt the unwarned serpent bite of the lodge.

Biting.—We are sorry to see in an otherwise good editorial in the last Free Methodist, a sneer at the Wesleyan Conference at Sycamore. The Editor says the frequent allusions to their denomination, reminded him of a petty African prince who asked a traveler what the American people thought of his government. If the Wesleyans have not made rapid growth, it is because they have been at once rational and faithful to their principles, and have lost their Masonic leaders. But the power of a denomination is no more to be guaged by its numbers than the importance of a funeral in the household by the size of the corpse. By the way, the same editorial mentions, as against the Wesleyans, that they allow their churches to choose their ministers! And are Free Methodist people so "free" that they cannot choose their own religious teachers? If so, I predict that rule will not stand; as men generally, and Americans especially, like to choose what water they will drink. With this the Cynosure has nothing to do, but to deplore that those of us engaged in this great reform should be biting one another. "Let us have peace."

ADDENDA.

Since writing the above we have read with joy the noble action of the Iowa Conference of Free Methodists which has the fearless ring of true metal. We have paid this denomination the complement before paid to the United Brethren and since to the United Presbyterians, by electing Rev. B. T. Roberts as President of our Anniversary meetin and we rejoice to see the Iowa branch of that church reward us by reciprocated confidence and co-operation.

—It is with regret we record the death of Mrs. Lyon, wife of D. W. Lyon of Mason City, Iowa, one of the most earnest laborers for the reform in the State. She is spoken of as a quiet, consistent Christian, the heart-center of an estimable family.

—Bro. D. S. Caldwell has removed from Nevada to Clyde, Sandusky Co., Ohio, where he wishes to be addressed, and will be glad to receive a call from any lecturers who may pass that way.

—A brother in New York who wishes well to the cause, and is annoyed by its enemies with charges of lying brought by them against the Cynosure for its statements of the Beecher case, can silence them by requiring proof of their statements. They will not find any in this paper.

—Seceding Masons in Illinois and neighboring States will not fail to read P. M. Ronayne's invitation to them to be present and assist him in opening the lodge before the public in Peoria. Such a display would strike terror to the lodge and create a new enthusiasm among its opponents. Nothing but sickness should prevent every seceder from being present. All necessary paraphernalia will be provided. Mr. Ronayne suggests that all who purpose going to the State Convention send him word at this office by postal card at once.

—Rev. Geo. W. Howe of Wor- East cester, New York, lately issued a hand bill announcing his intention to address the people of that place and also of Schenevus, New York and Starrucca, Pa., on the subject of his abusive treatment in the latter place by members of the Baptist church and their Masonic allies. He had offered to pay the Examiner and Chronicle of New York or the use of a column a year to publish these wrongs, but was refused. These addressed were announced for last week.

—An editorial in the Chicago Times has the following on the decay of grangerism: "We hear from most parts of the West that the interest in the order of the Patrons of Husbandry is dying out. Scarcely any new granges are being formed, while very many are disbanding or dropping to pieces without any formal disorganization. In many localities regular meetings are given up, and only occasional meetings are called for the transaction of particular business. Even these are slimly attended. It is reported that the great majority of the local granges in Iowa are in arrears to the State Grange. Though the order should give up an existence for which the world has no use, the seeds of false worship and secrecy have been sown and will, too many of them, mature into harvests of lodge pestilence.

Lawrence Co., Pennsylvania.

A series of lectures against secret societies will be given on Tuesday, Nov. 9 at the Lutheran church near Princeton, Lawrence Co, Pa. The design is to follow it up night after night in various places through the vicinity. J. B. Nessel has positively agreed to be present. E. Ronayne and others may also take part. The assistance and co-operation of all the friends of Lawrence and Butler counties are solicited.

The Chicago University Controversy.

Note:—The Baptist readers of the Cynosure are interested in the paper below. The Cynosure has taken no part and will take no part in the Chicago University controversy. But we print the following from the paper for the information of our readers and shall give the result when any is reached.—Eds. Cyn.

Two questions have been very frequently asked: What caused this controversy? Why does it continue? The following are the vital points of this difficulty, as they appear in the statements of those who have been connected with it from its beginning. It is claimed by the one side that "the University of Chicago had its origin in the comprehensive mind of Stephen A. Douglas, and the inteligent foresight of an eminent clergyman of the Baptist denomination, the Rev. J. C. Burroughs, D. D." That "the University owes its great and almost unparalleled success pre-eminently to Dr. Burroughs and Judge Douglas." That the prosperity of the University has been greatly retarded by "the most malign and unprincipled opposition." That Dr. Burroughs has labored with singular disinterestedness for the success of the University. That he has received but "a mere pittance of his salary" for all his work of about eighteen years. That, to advance the interests of the University, Dr. Burroughs has advanced his personal means, until, with unpaid salary, there are due him "more than $20,000." That Dr. Burroughs mortgaged "his homestead and all his personal property" to obtain the money to carry through the well known "land scheme," and that he thereby made for and turned over to the University, $50,000. That for all his work in the above enterprise Dr. Burroughs charged nothing, while others "received a commission of several thousand dollars." That "the payment of this large part of the indebtedness of the University is alone due to Dr. Burroughs." That the desposition of Dr. Moss was necessary for the best interests of the University and also just. That in the opinion of some who have been long associated with Dr. Burroughs, he is pre-eminently qualified for the presidency of the University.

It is asserted by the other side, which has repeatedly and explicitly denied all the above claims and demanded an investigation of their merits without response: That other parties preceded and labored equally with Dr. Burroughs in securing and founding the University, but his claim to being its founder would not be noticed if it were not a great injustice to others and made the ground for justifying a personal administration which has ceased to be efficient. That Dr. Burroughs was elected temporary president with the understanding that he would shortly resign. That the work of several of the most successful financial agents was so seriously retarded by Dr. Burroughs that they were forced to abandon their work. That certain other parties secured the erection of the main part of the University building and the observatory, and that Dr. Burroughs very materially hindered them in their undertaking. That a large portion of the subscriptions, claimed to have been taken by Dr. Burroughs, were secured by others. That very many of the subscriptions taken by Dr. Burroughs and represented by him as good, proved worthless, because of special verbal agreements which vitiated them. That the "land scheme" through which the $50,000 were made for the University, was wholly projected and chiefly carried through by other parties. That, as a financier, Dr. Burroughs has signally failed to realize the promise of several large endowments, when there is every reason to believe that proper care and foresight would have secured them; also, that his accounts were so loosely kept that they were "jumped" with an unexplained deficit of $20,000; also, that he has increased the indebtedness of the University from nothing to about $200,000. (If he has been so poorly paid for his services, how does it happen that he is reported worth from $75,000 to $100,000, since he was a poor man when made president?) That as an executive officer, Dr. Burroughs has so managed the affairs of the University that several very valuable departments of learning have been either wholly or partly lost. That Dr. Burroughs has shown himself morally unfit for his high position; viz: repeatedly failing to regard his word or agreements—practicing deception in securing subscriptions; claiming for himself the honor of work performed by others; distracting, dividing or seriously injuring churches both in and out of the city of Chicago. That he has failed to command the respect and confidence of his faculty and other co-laborers. That Dr. Burroughs has disregarded the interests of the University in refusing to resign, when offers have been made by responsible parties to pay the indebtedness of the University if he would sever his connection with the institution. That the deposition of Dr. Moss, now so generally condemned by leading papers and educators of the Baptist party, was characteristic of Dr. Burroughs' treatment of others with whom he has been educationally associated. That Dr. Moss' deposition was the result of a pre-meditated plan, and was both unnecessary and unjust.

How far these claims and assertions are true, others must decide. All, or nearly all, of one side or the other must be, to a greater or less extent, false. Since no just conclusion can be reached without the largest possible knowledge of all the facts on both sides; and since these charges against Dr. Burroughs are of such a serious nature, and so directly effect the present and future welfare of the University, the following proposition is made: That a commission of three men be appointed, who have not identified themselves with either side and who, because of their scholarship, social position and experience command the respect and confidence of the Baptist denomination. . . . It shall be the aim of this commission to obtain the exact truth and the whole truth in regard to this controversy. When they shall complete their investigation, they shall publish a record of their work, with their decision in regard to every point of their examination. . . .

Let disinterested men investigate this whole matter and Dr. Burroughs thereby be freed from these charges, which are so damaging to the interests of the University, if they are false. His honor and usefulness, the welfare of the University, the cause of education, the cause of the Baptist denomination in Chicago and the West, as well as the cause of religion, truth and justice call for a thorough and impartial examination of this controversy. And he who refuses on any pretext whatever, will be adjudged guilty of the charges made against him, and history will show that judgment true.

Religious Intelligence.

—The Seventh Day Baptists of the United States have opened a mission in England. They have begun there the publication of a quarterly magazine, called The Sabbath Memorial. Its object is to prove that the Seventh Day is the only divinely appointed day of rest.

—It is now probable that the place for the meeting of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church next May will be changed from St. Louis to Baltimore. The financial embarrassment of the West and the nearness of Baltimore to the Centennial Exhibition are the reasons given for the change.

—There are 520 vacant churches in the Southern Presbyterian church. There are 203 preachers who are either superannuated or are professors, teachers, or otherwise without charge. The whole number of churches is 1,797, and the whole number of preachers, including licentiates, is 1,804. Consequently 881 preachers do about all the pastoral work done for the entire church.

—At the meeting of the Norwegian Synod of Kansas, in Atchison, a favorable report of the progress of Christianity in the Indian Territory was presented. It was stated that the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions had expended during the past year $30,000 in aid of 82 ministers and 165 churches in the State, and that only 10 of 186 Presbyterian churches of Kansas are independent of the Board.

—A Home Missionary organization is proposed among the sisters in the Wesleyan Methodist churches of Mich.

—The Sciota Conference (O.) of the United Brethren in Christ voted at its late session to encourage, in every laudable way, the State Christian Association opposed to secret societies.

—The committee on the "state of the country" in the Wesleyan General Conference reported in favor of a proper national recognition of Christianity; in favor of the recognition and use of the Bible in schools; and against secretism, the liquor traffic and Sabbath-breaking on railroads or at the Centennial.

—A Miss Newman having applied to the Elgin Congregational Association meeting last month in Huntley, Ill, for license to preach, the following commendation was voted her: "Without in any way endorsing the idea of women becoming pastors in the usual sense of that term, yet, from what we know of Miss Newman's qualifications, character and usefulness, we do, as an Association, commend her to those desiring such help as she can give, and in Paul's words concerning Phebe of Cenchrea, commend Miss E. E. Newman, a servant of the church, to the confidence of Christians as one fitted to preach Christ to dying men."

—The Erie U. B. Conference at Corry, Pa., resolved, that after our steadfastness of one hundred years against secret societies it is no time now, while the stars in their courses are fighting against Sisera, to unbolt our doors, but that we will stand firm by our rule of Discipline.

—The Ashland Avenue Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. Swazey's, Chicago, has gone into dissolution. The membership were disappointed in their expectations of erecting a building, by the effects of the financial stringency, and they wisely concluded not to burden themselves with a heavy church debt.

The Home Circle.

Light.

Since o'er Thy footstool here below
Such radiant gems are strown,
O! what magnificence must glow.
My God, around Thy throne.
So brilliant here those drops of light,
There, the full ocean rolls, how bright.

The dazzling sun at noon-tide hour
Forth from his glittering vase
Flinging on earth the golden shower
Till vale and mountain blaze:
But show, O Lord, one beam of Thine,
What then the day when Thou dost shine!

If night's blue curtain of the sky,
With thousand stars in-wrought,
Hung like a royal canopy
With glittering diamonds fraught,
Be, Lord, Thy temple's outer veil,
What splendor at the shrine must dwell!

Ah! how shall these dim eyes endure
That noon of living rays?
Or how my spirit so impure
Upon thy glory gaze?
Anoint, O Lord, anoint my sight,
And robe me for that world of light.

Instructive Anecdote.

A respectable merchant in one of our principal cities was traveling some few years ago, in a certain county of New York State. He arrived on Saturday evening at a public house where he had been accustomed to stay in traveling that way. After taking some refreshment he immediately commenced to distribute religious tracts in a respectful manner, recommending the same from the pleasure and advantage which he himself had derived from their perusal. Among those who received these tracts were some families who were removing to the new settlements. He gave several tracts to be carried by them to the place of their future destination.

Before this gentleman had completed the circuit of his distributions he offered a tract to a poor man, who declined receiving it, saying, "It is of no use to give me one, sir, for I can't read."

"Well," said the merchant, "it is probable you are a married man, and if so, perhaps your wife can read it to you."

"Yes," said he, "my wife can read, but I have no time to hear it read."

"To-morrow," said the merchant, "is the Sabbath; you certainly can hear it read then."

"Sir," said he, "I have no more time on the Sabbath than on any other day. I am so poor that I am obliged to work on the Sabbath. It takes six days to provide for my family, and on the Sabbath I am obliged to get my wood."

"If you are so poor as that," said the merchant, "you must be very poor."

"I am," said he, and then proceeded to state that he had no cow, and that his family were very destitute.

"It is no wonder that you are poor," replied the merchant. "if you work on the Sabbath. God won't prosper those who thus profane his day. And now," said he, "my friend, I have a proposition to make to you. You, landlord, will be my surety that my part of the contract will be fulfilled. From this time leave off working on the Sabbath. If you have no wood with which to be comfortable to-morrow, get a little for your necessity the easiest way you can, and then on Monday morning provide a supply for the week, and hereafter leave off your other labor every week early enough to provide a full week's store of wood on Saturday. Quit all your work on the Sabbath—reverence that day; and at the end of six months, whatever you will say that you have lost by keeping the Sabbath, I will pay you to the amount of one hundred dollars."

The poor man solemnly confirmed the contract, and the landlord engaged to be responsible for the due payment of the money. With this the interview was closed.

About five months afterwards, this same merchant stopped again at this same public house, and before he retired to rest, he began, as before, to distribute to each person present a tract. He observed a plain but well dressed man, who seemed to be watching him with special interest, and who, when he approached him, said, "Did you never distribute tracts here before, sir?"

"Probably I have; I am not unfrequently distributing them."

"Did you not four or five months ago, give a tract to a man here, who said he worked on the Sabbath day?"

The merchant replied that he recollected the circumstance very well.

"Well sir," continued the other, "I am that man. I carried the tract you gave me home, and told my wife every word of our conversation. She said you were right; and we sat down together, and she read the tract aloud. So much affected were we with the tract, and with what you said, that we scarcely slept any all night. In the morning we rose; I went and procured a handful of wood with which to get our breakfast, and after breakfast was over we sat down and read the tract again. By and by one of our neighbors came in, as was usual, to loiter away the day in vain conversation. We told him what had happened, he said, too, that you were right: and my wife read the tract again to him and myself. Other neighbors came in and we did the same by them. They came the next Sabbath, and we again read the tract to them, and now, sir, as the result of your distributing this one little tract we have at my house every Sabbath day a religious meeting; this same tract has been read every Sabbath since I saw you; and the reading of it is now accompanied with religious conversation."

"Well," said the merchant, "if you have kept your promise, you perhaps would be glad to have your money; how much have I to pay?"

"Oh! nothing, sir," replied the man; "I have never prospered so, as I have since I have observed the Sabbath to keep it holy. When I saw you before, we had no cow—now we have a cow and all our wants are comfortably supplied. We were never so happy before, and never can be thankful enough for what you have done for us."

Thus we see how much good even a man of business can do if so disposed. You, reader, can do the same if you will make the effort. Often in our own travels we see a man, Mr. Graves, who is a traveling agent for some house in New York This man goes all through the train on which he travels, and quietly distributes tracts. The judgment day alone will reveal the good he does in this quiet way. Go thou, and do likewise.—The Standard.

The Next Duty.

This is an epoch of elevators. We do not climb to our rooms in the hotel; we ride. We do not reach the upper stories of Stewarts' by slow and patient steps; we are lifted there. The Simplon is crossed by a railroad, and steam has usurped the place of the alpenstock on the Rhigi. The climb which used to give us health on Mount Holyoke, and a beautiful prospect, with the reward of rest, is now purchased for twenty-five cents of a stationary engine.

If our efforts to get our bodies into the sky by machinery were not complemented by our efforts to get our lives up in the same way, we might not find much fault with them; but, in truth, the tendency everywhere is to get up in the world without climbing. Yearnings after the infinite are in the fashion. Aspirations for eminence—even ambitions for usefulness—are altogether in advance of the willingness for the necessary preliminary discipline and work. The great amount of vaporing among young men and young women who desire to do something which somebody else is doing—something far in advance of their present powers—is fearful and most lamentable. They are not willing to climb the stairway; they must go up in the elevator. They are not willing to scale the rocks many weary hours under a broiling sun, they would go up in a car with an umbrella over their heads. They are unable or unwilling to recognize the fact that, in order to do that very beautiful thing which some other man is doing, they must go slowly through the discipline, through the maturing process of time, through the patient work which has made him what he is, and fitted him for his sphere of life and labor. In short, they are not willing to do their next duty and take what comes of it.

No man now standing on an eminence of influence and power, and doing great work has arrived at his position by going up in an elevator. He took the stairway step by step. He climbed the rocks often with bleeding hands. He prepared himself by the work of climbing for the work he is doing. He never accomplished an inch of his elevation by standing at the foot of the stairway with his mouth open and longing. There is no "royal road" to anything good—not even to wealth. Money that has not been paid for in life is not wealth. It goes as it comes. There is no element of permanence in t. The man who reaches his money in an elevator does not know how to enjoy it; so it is not wealth to him To get a high position without climbing to it, to win wealth without earning it, to do fine work without the discipline necessary to its performance, to be famous, or useful, or ornamental, without preliminary cost, seems to be the universal desire of the young. The children would begin where their fathers leave off.

What exactly is the secret of true success in life? It is to do without flinching, and with utter faithfulness, the duty that stands next to one. When a man has mastered the duties around him, he is ready for those of a higher grade, and he takes naturally one step upward. When he has mastered the duties of the new grade, he goes on climbing. There are no surprises to the man who arrives at eminence legitimately. It is entirely natural that he should be there, and he is as much at home there, and as little elated, as when he was working patiently at the foot of the stairs. There are heights above him and he remains humble and simple.

Preachments are of little avail, perhaps; but when one comes into contact with so many men and women who put aspiration for perspiration, and yearning for earning, and lounging for labor, he is tempted to say to them: "Stop looking up and look around you! Do the work that first comes to your hands and do it well. Take no upward step until you come to it naturally, and have won the power to hold it. The top in this little world is not so very high, and patient climbing will bring you to it ere you are aware."—Scribner's Monthly.

BLAMELESS, NOT FAULTLESS.—No Christian is or can be faultless before the Lord. Blameless all may and ought to be. The child that does its needle-work faithfully is commended though not a stitch is perfect. The child is blameless but the work not faultless. The Christian who lives up to his light and ability is blameless, but in God's sight faulty. He is not conscious of his defects, his eyes are not as sharp as God's; his best efforts are like the needle-work of the little girl, well done for her, but so defective in fact that every stitch must be removed, and done again by a more skillful and experienced hand. Saints sometimes judge themselves perfect because they are not conscious of sin. They may be innocent, but surely are not perfect. With more light and culture they would discern defects. Others of more experience observe them now, because sufficiently educated or advanced in wisdom. The novice that paints a horrid daub, thinks it beautiful; and it is well done for him. He has done his best, and is blameless, but a few months of training make him hide his earlier works in shame. Jesus keeps blameless trusting souls, and step by step leads them to higher culture, richer wisdom, purer tastes, until they attain his likeness in glory.—N. Y. Witness.

HOW TO TRAIN GIRLS.—In the training of a little girl great pains should be taken to discover what special gift or talent she has, if any, and whatever her circumstances, to fit her for its use. Even putting the money value of such art or accomplishment out of the question, its aid as a resource and strengthener is incalculable. Disappointment and grief come more easily to women than to men. They abide with them longer and sap more of their life away, simply because they need the tonic of hard, enjoyable work—not the mere drudgery of the bread-winner, but the toil of the artist. Neither pride nor philosophy can give the new vitality which such work bestows on the faithful votary. It repairs bodily and mental forces like nature itself—slowly, imperceptibly, surely. The father and mother who can find in their daughter such power, and give to her the means of using it, may count themselves happy, and her the inheritor of a royal heritage.

How Messages are Sent by Ocean Cable.

He (the ocean telegraph operator) taps the "key" as in a land telegraph, only it is a double key. It has two levers and knobs instead of one. The alphabet used is substantially like the Morse alphabet; that is, the different letters are represented by a combination of dashes and dots. For instance, suppose you want to write the word "boy." It would read like this: "— . . .— — — —. — — —" B is one dash and three dots; O, three dashes; and Y, one dash, one dot, and three dashes. Now, in the land telegraph, the dashes and dots would appear on the strip of paper at the other end of the line, which is unwound from a cylinder, and perforated by a pin at the end of the bar or armature. If the operator could read by sound, we could dispense with the strip of paper, and read the message by the "click" of the armature as it is pulled down and let go by the electro magnet.

The cable operator, however, has neither of these advantages. There is no paper to perforate, no "click" of the armature, no armature to "click" The message is read by means of a moving flash of light upon a polished scale produced by the "deflection" of a very small mirror, which is placed within a "mirror galvonometer," which is a small brass cylinder two or three inches in diameter, shaped like a spool or bobbin, composed of several hundred tuns of small wire wound with silk to keep the metal from coming in contact. It is wound or coiled exactly like a bundle of new rope, a small hole being left in the middle about the size of a common wooden pencil. In the centre of this is suspended a very thin, delicate mirror about as large as a kernel of corn, with a correspondingly small magnet rigidly attached to the back of it. The whole weighs but little more than a grain, and is suspended by single fibre of silk, much smaller than a human hair and almost invisible. A narrow horizontal scale is placed within a darkened box two or three feet in front of the mirror, a narrow slit being cut in the centre of the scale to allow a ray of light to shine upon the mirror from a lamp placed behind said scale, the little mirror in turn reflecting the light back upon the scale. This spot of light upon the scale is the index by which all messages are read. The angle through which the ray moves is double that traversed by the mirror itself: and it is, therefore, really equivalent to an index four or six feet in length without weight.

To the casual observer there is nothing but a thin ray of light, darting to the right and left with irregular rapidity; but to the trained eye of the operator every flash is replete with intelligence. Thus the word "boy" already alluded to would be read in this way: One flash to the right and two to the left is B. Three flashes to the right is O. One to the right, one to the left, and two more to the right is Y, and so. Long and constant practice makes the operators wonderfully expert in their profession, and enables them to read from the mirror as readily and as accurately as from a newspaper.—Boston Herald.

CARE FOR THE YOUNG CONVERTS.—We have always thought far too much stress is laid on the gathering in of men, leaving them to develope as best they may. The florist not only sets out his plants, but he cares for them afterward. So should it be in the church. The great labor of Paul was to keep and strengthen in the faith those who had embraced the faith. Let the churches do the same now, if they would have their members not a vast unorganized rabble with the army, impeding its course, but well disciplined members of that army, each in his place, moving on to conquer the world for Christ.

The still and quiet soul is like a ship that lies quiet in the harbor; you may take in what goods you please while the ship lies still. So, when the soul lies quiet under the hand of God, of Christ, of heaven, or the promises, and of ordinances; but, when souls are unquiet, they are like a ship in a storm, they can take in nothing.

Children's Corner.

O Little Child, Lie Still and Sleep.

O little child, lie still and sleep,
Jesus is near,
Thou need'st not fear;
No one need fear, whom God doth keep
By day or night.
Then lay thee down in slumber deep
Till morning light.

O little child, thou need'st not wake,
Though round the bed
Are dangers spread;
Thy Saviour care of thee will take.
Jesus is strong,
And angels watch thee for His sake,
The whole night long.

O little child, lie still and rest!
He sweetly sleeps,
Whom Jesus keeps;
And in the morning wake so blest
His child to be.
Love every one, but love him best—
He first loved thee.

Make Some One Happy To-day.

As Mabel was starting for school, grandma said, "Good-bye, dear; make some one happy to-day," and leaving a kiss on her rosy cheek, she went back to her knitting.

The wood fire crackled away and blazed, while it sung out, "Good bye, Mabel; make some one happy to-day."

"Good-bye, Grandma; good-bye, old fire," and Mabel threw another kiss to each, and bounded off to school, dragging her sled after her.

Just ahead of her was her dear friend, Maud Eastlake. Mabel ran faster than ever to overtake her.

But around the corner, between her and her friend came Philip Saunders and his little sister Dora. A good mile they had come this morning, and Dora was crying because she was cold and tired.

Mabel ran by and left them; but some echo voice said, "Make some one happy." She looked on at her friend, sighed a little sigh, then turned straight around and ran back to Philip and Dora.

"This horse is too gay," she said to Philip; "Put Dora on, then take hold, and we'll be a span."

"You're real good, Mabel. Dora is real tired. I've helped her all I can." And Philip lifted his little sister on.

"Don't cry, Dora, we'll have you there in five minutes," he said, as they started.

But the tears had already been driven back by the prospects of a ride.

And when at last Philip and Mabel drew up in grand style, it was a pretty happy girl they lifted from the sled; Philip, too, had been made happy.

"Thank you," said Philip again, as they stopped, "You've made us both happy."

"Ah," said Mabel, "that's what I did it for." Then she told what her grandmother had said to her at starting.

"Well," said Philip, "you can count two you have made happy already. It's a good rule. I believe I'll try it, too."

"And grandma," said Mabel, as she told of this and some other things at night, "we ought to count it three, for it made me happy too."—The Child's Friend.

A Girls' School in Egypt.

Miss Whately, an English educator and writer, has forwarded the following interesting description of a genuine Egyptian girls' school:—"I had recently an opportunity of visiting the school for Egyptian girls, chiefly of the poorer classes, which, about two years ago, was founded by one of the wives of his Highness, the Khedive. The house which was built for the purpose, is admirably suited to the necessities of school life, for two hundred scholars are boarders, one hundred being outsiders. It is plain and simple in furniture, but in size, loftiness, and solidity is like a palace. The marble bath-rooms in a suite, according to Eastern fashion, are such as a Pasha's family might envy, and in every part of the building air and space are abundant. The Inspector of public schools, M. Dor, a gentleman from Switzerland, was kind enough to show me all the details of the work, and introduced me to Sitt Rosa, the talented and diligent superintendent, who is a Syrian lady. The first set of scholars we saw were in a room set apart for needle work and embroidery of every kind practiced in Europe, the teacher being a clever Frenchwoman, who can instruct in all, from the finest lace-work, wool crochet, etc., down to the useful stocking-knitting, in which one row of little girls were diligently engaged. These children were all dressed in a uniform of plain gray cotton gowns in the Egyptian shape, girt round with a leathern belt; their hair plated behind, a bright yellow ribbon tied, snood fashion, over the head. All had shoes and stockings, which at first had been, I was told, a very disagreeable luxury to the little feet used to liberty. In another room a Turkish teacher was instructing about thirty girls in the exquisite embroidery of the East—far lovelier, I own, than any European work, but they are to learn every kind, and the classes are duly changed. At half-past seven o'clock they work for an hour, and then again in the forenoon, each class taking its turn. The progress of the little imble fingers was quite amazing, and the specimens of work were delicately clean and beautifully executed. In a large room a Moslem sheik was teaching reading. Each child had a tin, like a slate, before her on the desk, on which she wrote sentences at dictation and read them out in a half chant, according to Mohamedan custom. The lady superintendent asked if we would like to hear an arithmetic lesson, (she herself teaches this branch) and the rapidity and correctness of the ten-year-old Fatmeh who was called out, and who did a long sum on the blackboard, was a satisfactory proof that they are well taught. Adjoining this class-room was another where writing lessons were going on. Here the pupils were younger, averaging from seven to nine perhaps. Their writing struck me as better than usual with much older children, so far as a foreigner could judge of Arabic writing. Their perfect neatness of appearance contrasted wonderfully with the dirty, slovenly looks of the poorer children in Egypt, and their quiet, good manners were a no less pleasing change. In the dining halls ths long tables were spread with snowy cloths, and forks for their guest instead of fingers. In the laundry a Frenchwoman superintended, but several girls in turn assisted in washing and ironing. The roughest housework is done by emancipated negress slaves, who receive in the afternoon instruction in reading and sewing. The kitchen was, like all the rest, beautifully clean."

Thoughts of God.

Suppose two persons desirous to gain your affections—one far distant and not expecting to see you for a long time; the other always present with you, and at liberty to use all means to win your love, able to flatter and gratify you in a thousand ways. Still you prefer the absent one; and that you may keep him in remembrance you retire by yourself to think of his love to you, and view again and again the mementoes of his affection, to read his letters, and to pour out his heart in return. Such is now your case; the world is always before you, to flatter, promise and please. But if you really prefer to love God, you will fix your thoughts on him, often retire for meditation and prayer, and recount the pleasant gifts of providence, and especially his infinite mercy to your soul; you will read frequently his holy Word, which is the letter he has sent you as really as if it were directed to you by name.—Payson.

ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE Continued.

Relief.—To relieve the distressed is a duty incumbent upon all men, but more especially upon Masons who are linked together by an indissoluble chain of sincere affection. To soothe the unhappy, to compassionate their miseries, to sympathize with their misfortunes, and to restore peace to their troubled minds is the great aim we have in view. On this basis we form our friendship, and establish our connections.

Truth.—Truth is a divine attribute and the foundation of every virtue. To be good and true is the first lesson we are taught in Masonry. On this theme we contemplate and by its dictates endeavor to regulate our conduct. Hence, whilst actuated by this principle, hypocrisy and deceit are unknown among us, sincerity and plain-dealing distinguish us, and the heart and tongue unite in promoting each other's welfare and in rejoicing in each other's prosperity.

My brother, in future you shall be known to be a Mason by certain signs, a token, a word, and the points of your entrance. The signs, token and word have already been explained to you I shall now proceed to explain the points of your entrance. They are four, namely: the gutteral, the pectoral, the manual and the pedal; referring to the throat, breast, hands and feet, and are represented by the four cardinal virtues, Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence, and Justice.

CARDINAL VIRTUES.

TEMPERANCE.

Temperance is that due restraint upon our affections and passions, which renders the body tame and governable, and frees the mind from the allurements of vice. This virtue should be the constant practice of every Mason; as he is thereby taught to avoid excess, or contracting any licentious or vicious habits, the indulgence of which might lead him to disclose some of those valuable secrets which he has promised to conceal, and never reveal, and which would consequently subject him to the contempt and detestation of all good Masons.

FORTITUDE.

Fortitude is that noble and steady purpose of the mind, whereby we are enabled to undergo any pain, peril, or danger, when prudentially deemed expedient. This virtue is equally distant from rashness or cowardice; and should be deeply impressed upon the mind of every Mason, as a safeguard or security against any illegal attack that may be made, by force or otherwise, to extort from him any of those valuable secrets with which he has been so solemnly intrusted, and which were emblematically represented upon his first admission into the lodge.

PRUDENCE.

Prudence teaches to regulate our lives and actions agreeably to the dictates of reason, and is that habit by which we wisely judge and prudentially determine, on all things relative to our present as well as to our future happiness. This virtue should be the peculiar characteristic of every Mason, not only for the government of his conduct while in the lodge, but also when abroad in the world. It should be particularly attended to, in strange and mixed companies, never to let fall the least sign token or word, whereby the secrets of Masonry might be unlawfully obtained.

JUSTICE.

Justice is that standard, or boundary of right, which enables us to render to every man his just due, without distinction. This virtue is not only consistent with divine and human laws, but is the very cement and support of civil society; and as justice in a great measure, constitutes the really good man, so should it be the invariable practice of every Mason never to deviate from the minutest principles thereof.

And now my brother it is hoped that you will devote yourself to the study of Freemasonry with the same earnestness with which Entered Apprentices served their masters in ancient times, namely, with freedom, fervency and zeal, hieroglyphically represented by chalk, charcoal and clay. There is nothing more free than chalk, upon the slightest touch it leaves a trace behind; nothing more fervent than charcoal, to which when well ignited the most obdurate metals will yield; and nothing more zealous than clay or our mother earth to bring forth.

Our Mother Earth alone, of all the elements, has never proved unfriendly to man; the bodies of water deluge him with rain, oppress him with hail, and drown him with inundations. The air rushes in storms, prepares the tempest, and lights up the volcano; but the earth, ever kind and indulgent, is found subservient to his wishes. Though constantly harassed, more to furnish the luxuries than the necessaries of life, she never refuses her accustomed yield; spreading his path with flowers and his table with plenty; though she produces poison, still she supplies the antidote, and returns with interest every good committed to her care; and when at last he is called upon to pass through the "dark valley of the shadow of Death," she once more receives him, and piously covers his remains within her bosom; this admonishes us that from it we came, and to it we must shortly return.

This, my brother, closes the first or Entered Apprentice degree in Masonry, and nothing now remains but to give you the charge which has been delivered to all Masons from time immemorial.

CHARGE TO THE CANDIDATE.

Brother, as you are now introduced into the first principles of Masonry, I congratulate you on being accepted into this ancient and honorable order; ancient, as having subsisted from time immemorial; and honorable, as tending, in every particular, so to render all men who will be conformable to its precepts. No institution was ever raised on a better principle or more solid foundation; nor were ever more excellent rules and useful maxims laid down, than are inculcated in the several Masonic lectures. The greatest and best of men, in all ages, have been encouragers and promoters of the art; and have never deemed it derogatory to their dignity to level themselves with the fraternity, extend their privileges, and patronize their assemblies. There are three great duties, which as a Mason you are charged to inculcate—to God, your neighbor, and yourself. To God, in never mentioning his name, but with that reverential awe which is due from a creature to his Creator; to implore his aid in all your laudable undertakings, and to esteem him as the chief good; to your neighbor in acting upon the square, and doing unto him as you wish he should do unto you; and to yourself, in avoiding all irregularity and intemperance, which may impair your faculties, or debase the dignity of your profession. A zealous attachment to these duties, will insure public and private esteem.

In the state, you are to be a quiet and peaceful citizen, true to your government, and just to your country: you are not to countenance disloyalty or rebellion, but patiently submit to legal authority, and conform with cheerfulness to the government of the country in which you live. In your outward demeanor, be particularly careful to avoid censure and reproach.

Although your frequent appearance at our regular meetings is earnestly solicited, yet it is not meant that Masonry should interfere with your necessary vocations; for these are on no account to be neglected; neither are you to suffer your zeal for the institution to lead you into argument with those who, through ignorance, may ridicule it.

As your leisure hours, that you may improve in Masonic knowledge, you are to converse with well-informed brethren, who will be always as ready to give, as you will be to receive instruction.

Finally, keep sacred and inviolable the mysteries of the order; as these are to distinguish you from the rest of the community, and mark your consequence among Masons. If, in the circle of your acquaintance, you find a person desirous of being initiated into Masonry, be particularly careful not to recommend him, unless you are convinced he will conform to our rules; that the honor, glory, and reputation of the institution, may be firmly established, and the world at large convinced of its good effects.

Bro. Jones you will now take your seat at the right of the Junior Warden in the South to whom you will make aplication when ready for further advancement.

The candidate takes his seat as directed and the degree is ended. The foregoing is the correct mode of conferring the first degree in Masonry, and the lecture as given, here is the only manner in which it is given in the lodge in any part of the United States.

CHAPTER IV.

The following is the lecture which the candidate must learn (and which is always taught orally) before he can seek for advancement to the second degree, and is also that portion of which visiting the brethren are examined. The Masteron the night of his initiation usually appoints some brother, generally the one who proposed him, to post the newly initiated brother, and the lodge being opened on the first degree on a subsequent occasion (generally the night on which he is passed) he is examined before the entire lodge as follows:—

Q. Whence came you?
A. From a lodge of the Saints John of Jerusalem.
Q. What came you here to do?
A. To learn to subdue my passions and improve myself in Masonry.
Q. Then you are a Mason I presume?
A. I am so taken and accepted among brothers and fellows.
Q. What makes you a Mason?
A. My obligation.
Q. Where were you made a Mason?
A. In a regularly constituted lodge of Masons.
Q. How do you know yourself to be a Mason?
A. By being often tried never denied and ready and willing to be tried again.
Q. How shall I know you to be a Mason?
A. By certain signs a token a word and the points of my entrance.
Q. What are signs?
A. Right angles, horizontals, and perpendiculars.
Q, Give me a sign.
A. (Makes the penal sign by drawing right hand across the throat. See page 14.)
Q. Has that an allusion?
A. It has to the penalty of my obligation.
Q. What is a token?
A. A certain friendly and brotherly grip whereby one Mason may know another in the dark as well as the light.
Q. Where were you first prepared to be made a Mason?
A. In my heart.
Q. Where next?
A. In a room adjacent to a regularly constituted lodge of Masons.
Q. How were you prepared?
A. By being divested of all metals, neither naked nor clad, barefoot or shod, hood-winked, and with a cable-tow around my neck, in which condition I was conducted to the door of the lodge by a friend whom I afterwards found to be a brother.
Q. Being hood-winked, how did you know it to be a door?
A. By first meeting with resistance, and afterwards gaining admission.

Q. How gained you admission?

A. By three distinct knocks from without, answering by a like number from within.

Q. What was said to you from within?

A. Who comes here?

Q. Your answer?

A. I Septimus Jones, who has long been in darkness and now seeks to be brought to light, and to receive a part in the rights and benefits of this worshipful lodge erected to God, and dedicated to the Saints John, as all brothers and fellows have done before.

Q. What was then said to you?

A. I was asked if this was of my own free will and accord; if I was worthy and well qualified duly and truly prepared, of lawful age, and properly vouched for, all of which being answered in the affirmative. I was then asked by what further rights and benefits I expcted to gain admission?

Q. Your answer?

A. By that of being a man free-born, of good repute, and coming well recommended.

Q. What followed?

A. I was desired to wait with patience until the Worshipful Master should be informed of my request and his answer returned.

Q. What answer did he return?

A. Let him enter this lodge in the name of the Lord, and be received in due form.

Q. How were you received?

A. On the point of a sharp instrument pressing my naked left breast.

Q. How were you then disposed of?

A. I was conducted towards the center of the lodge, and caused to kneel for the benefit of prayer.

Q. After prayer what were you asked?

A. In whom I put my trust.

Q. Your answer?

A. In God.

Q. What followed?

A. I was taken by the right hand and informed that my trust being in God, my faith was well-founded; ordered to arise, follow my conductor and fear no danger.

Q. Where did you follow your conductor?

A. Once regularly around the lodge to the Junior Warden in the South, where the same questions were asked and like answer returned as at the door

Q. How did the Junior Warden dispose of you?

A. He directed me to the Senior Warden in the West and he to the Worshipful Master in the East, where the same questions were asked, and like answers returned as before.

Q. How did the Worshipful Master dispose of you?

A. He ordered me to be re-conducted to the Senior Warden in the West who taught me how to approach the East, by one upright, regular step, my feet forming the angle of an oblong square, my body ereet, facing the Worshipful Master in the East.

Q. What did the Worshipful Master then do with you?

A. He made me a Mason in due form.

Q. What is that due form?

A. Kneeling on my naked left knee, my right forming a square, my left hand supporting the Holy Bible, square and compass, and my right resting thereon, in which due form I took upon myself the solemn oath and obligation of an Entered Apprentice Mason as follows. (See page 35.)

(Some lodges require the obligations to be given in full, others only the penalty.)

Q. What is the penalty of your obligation?

A. Binding myself under no less a penalty than that of having my throat cut across, my tongue torn out by the roots, and buried in the rough sands of the sea at low water mark, where the tide ebbs and flows twice in twenty-four hours, should I ever knowingly or willingly violate this my solemn oath and obligation as an Entered Apprentice Mason, so help me God and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same.

Q. After your obligation what were you asked?

A. What I most desired.

Q. Your answer?

A. Light in Masonry.

Q. Did you receive light in Masonry?

A. I did by order of the Worshipful Master, and the assistance of the brethren.

Q. On being brought to light in Masonry, what did you first discover?

A. The three great lights in Masonry by the aid of the three lesser lights.

Q. What are the three great lights in Masonry?

A. The Holy Bible, Square and compass, and are thus explained: The Holy Bible is given to us as the rule and guide of our faith, the square to square our actions, and the compass to circumscribe our desires, and keep our passions within due bounds towards all mankind, and more especially toward our brethren in Freemasonry.

Q. What are the three lesser lights?

A. They are three burning tapers placed in a triangular form near the altar representing the sun, moon and Master ef th lodge and are thus explained: As the sun rules the day and the moon governs the night so should the Worshipful Master endeavor to rule and govern his lodge with equal regularity.

Q. What did you next behold?

A.—The Worshipful Master approaching me from the East on the step, under the due-guard and sign of an Entered Apprentice, and who in token of friendship and brotherly love presented me with his right hand and with it the grip and word of an Entered Apprentice Mason ordered me to arise and salute the Junior and Senior Wardens as such.

Q.—After saluting the Wardens what did you discover?

A.—The Worshipful Master approaching me from the East a second time who presented me with a lambskin or white leather apron which he informed me was the emblem of innocence and the badge of a Mason, more ancient than the Golden Fleece or Roman Eagle, more honorable than the Star and Garter or any other order which could be conferred upon me at that or any future period by king, prince, potentate or any other person except he be a Mason and which he hoped I would wear with equal pleasure to myself and honor to the fraternity ordered me to carry it to the Senior Warden in the West who would teach me how to wear it as an Entered Apprentice Mason and return to the East.

Q.—How should Entered Apprentice Masons wear their aprons?

A.—With the bib turned up.

Q.—What followed?

A.—I was informed that agreeably to an ancient custom adopted and practiced in all regular and well governed lodges from time immemorial, it became necessary that I should be requested to deposit something of a metallic kind not for its intrinsic worth or value but that it might be laid up among the records in the archives of the lodge as a memorial that I was therein made a Mason but upon strict search I found myself entirely destitute.

Q.—How were you then disposed of?

A.—I was ordered to be re conducted to the place from whence I came and there to be invested with what I had been divested of and return to the lodge for further instruction.

Q.—On your return to the lodge where were you placed?

A.—In the northeast corner of the lodge as the youngest Entered Apprentice Mason, my feet forming the angle of an oblong square and my body erect at the right of the Worshipful Master who was pleased to remark that I there stood to all appearance a just and upright man and Mason, and gave it to me strictly in charge ever to walk and act as such.

Q.—What followed?

A.—I was presented with the working tools of an Entered Apprentice and taught their uses.

Q.—Which are the working tools of an Entered Apprentice?

News of the Week.

The City.

The clubbing together of the vicious and lawless classes in Chicago and Cook county to get and hold the power of defrauding at elections for years, added to the attempt to get control of the county treasury aroused the decent citizens last week to unusual efforts for Tuesday's election. The riot at Farwell Hall is described elsewhere.—-Gov. Beveredge was in the city this week to look after its peace and quiet during the unusual excitement of election.——Prof. Swing has announced his intention to leave Chicago.——At a public meeting in Farwell Hall, Oct., 10th, addressed by Rev. Arthur Mitchell, a committee of eminent citizens was appointed to request the School Board to rescind their action on the exclusion of the Bible. Their communication was put over indefinitely.

The Country.

Elections were held in Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas and Mississippi on Tuesday. Figures for next Presidential election will now be brought into more exactness.——The President has appointed Thursday, the 25th of November as the annual Thanksgiving Day.——The fast mail service between the East and the West has worked remarkably well, and there are now arrangements in progress to give the South similar facilities. Soon there is to be a fast mail between Washington and New Orleans, and it has been decided that the trains will pass through Danville, Charlotte and Augusta. It is probable that a limited number of passenger cars will be allowed to run with these Southern mail trains. The Pan Handle road runs a fast train to St. Louis and the Baltimore and Ohio two between Chicago and Washington.——Hon. Amasa Walker died on the 29th ult. in Boston.——Brigham Young has been arrested and imprisoned for failing to pay the alimony ordered by the courts to be paid to his wife Ann Eliza.——A terrible conflagration visited Virginia City, Nevada, last week destroying property valued at $7,500,000, and swept over a territory three-fourths of a mile long and half a mile wide. The mills and hoisting works at the largest mines were destroyed and the product of gold and silver will be reduced several millions before they can be replaced.

Foreign.

A special dispatch from Berlin, says that the Imperial Government is about proceeding formally to cashier Count Von Arnim from the public service.——A petition will shortly be presented to the French Assembly requesting that a claim be made upon England for the balance of the indemnity fund raised by Louis XVIII. to indemnify British subjects injured during the great French war. The balance is claimed to be about 50,000,000 l sterling.——It is reported from Germany that Archbishop Ledochowski will be expelled the country as soon as his term of imprisonment expires.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argnmt. 425 pagenes,
Price $1.35.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLÆ, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month. but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in thiscause of God are poor men, who would be gladto circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLETRACT FUND?

A Club of Five or Ten can be raised in nearly every town by persistent earnest effort.

Now for "a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together."

Prospect for Clubs.

Benj. Ulsh sends a club of five subscriptions for the Cynosure and hopes in a few days to make it ten. We have not received a club of ten since our last issue, but hear that a few are trying to secure them. Yet where there is one person trying to extend the circulation of the paper we think there should be ten. The future prosperity of the paper depends to some extent upon the efforts of its leaders this fall and winter. Large numbers of people in towns where the paper is received do not know anything about it. One earnest worker writes: "I find the most successful way to work is to hunt up friends and save the young men and keep money out of the lodge and waste no in time arguing with Masons and jacks." Work while the day lasts and the PROSPECT FOR CLUBS will brighten each week.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

C & N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

SEPT. 30TH CYNOSURE.—We want about 25 copies of the Cynosure of Sept. 30th, to fill orders for Ronayne's Exposition, which begins with that number. Any one who will return us that number will confer a favor and we will put forward the date of their subscription two weeks in payment therefor.

THANKSGIVING NOV. 25TH.—This annual festival is again called for by proclamation of President Grant. The omission of the name of Christ as one to whom or through whom our thanks are due to "Almighty God," which is becoming somewhat marked and Masonic in these proclamations, is relieved in President Grant's by its date "In the year of our Lord." We wish all our readers a happy Thanksgiving.

The Cry of Justice.

BY H. S. KIRK.

[Lines suggested by hearing a criminal who had been rescued from justice by the lodge, warmly defending Odd-fellowship and Freemasonry as good institutions.]

The lodge, what has it done for you!
'Tis true it robbed a prison cell;
At all men's peril you are free,
And as you prize your liberty
To its behest you will be true.

You rove at large, a monster dread,
More terrible than beast of prey.
You look contempt on human law;
Your combinations who shall awe,
Or visit justice on your head?

O how you love the signs and grips,
That saved you from the law's dread power!
A criminal of darkest dye,
Our hoodwinked courts have passed you by,
The skull of wine has pressed your lips.

And your companions, one and all,
Are pledged, nay, sworn, that right or wrong,
With horrid oaths as bandits swear,
With mock solemnities and prayer,
They'll rally at your every call.

Had it not been for that dread oath
Pledging impunity to crime,
Perhaps you ne'er had gone astray
But ever kept the narrow way,
Shunning the wrong you once did loathe.

There is a court where bandit power
Shall not avail to shelter crime;
False priests and perjured judges then,
Shall not avail for bloody men,
But justice strike in that dread hour.

O patriots, freemen, brethren dear,
Arise and break the bandits' chains!
To you aloud for help we cry;
Shall wrong prevail and justice die?
Or will you for her cause appear?

A writer says: John Quincy Adams was undoubtedly the most cultured President who ever wore the dignity. Beyond this he had the warmest heart and the deepest sympathies to those who knew him outside of his official position, but a cynical air and expression to those with whom political or official courtesy had brought him into momentary contact. It is related of him that when a candidate for the Presidency he was persuaded, much against his will, to visit the country cattle show. Among the plain and hearty farmers who crowded around him was one impulsive old farmer, who, shaking him by the hand, exclaimed: "Mr. Adams, I'm very glad to see you. My wife when she was a gal used to live in your father's family. You were then a little boy, and she has often combed your head." "Well," said Mr. Adams, "I suppose she combs yours now." This extinguished the old fellow, and undoubtedly lost Mr. Adams at least one vote.

The worst enemies to the cause of religion are often those who simply try to take away the enthusiasm of Christians. Open opposition will inspirit rather than weaken a church, and it may grow all the abler because it has had its conflicts. Crossing Jordans, besieging Jerichos and fighting among the mountains will beget strength and heroism. When the spirit, the nerve of the Christian is gone, he is no longer an efficient helper in the good work.—United Presbyterian.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LISBON, Kendall Co., Ill., Nov. 1, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I yesterday preached here to the Congregational and Methodist churches, and have conditionally promised to return and explain to this people the nature of the Masonic lodge in their midst.

Good old Father McEwen some twenty years ago carried a testimony against the lodge which still stands on the records of the Congregational church and has kept Freemasons out of it. And could they have had a denominational paper, which would not suppress information on the subject of secret societies, and pastors who could and would explain to them the relation of the secret orders to Christ and Christianity, the church might have been a strong "body of Christ" to-day. There are in this church instances of cool self-denial and devotion to principle, such as I have scarcely, if ever, read of or seen. As the members of the church were depleted by migration, the survivors have raised their subscriptions to sustain their pastor until men of small or ordinary means in an agricultural district have paid and still pay annually as much as the average net income of Illinois farm yields! And, with a religious paper which withholds all intelligence and discussion of the secret orders and pastors who shrink from taking a stand in advance of The Advance and their denominational leaders, these noble men and women have for the most part kept their souls and those of their children free from the vile contaminations of the lodge.

But with the secret and ill-suppressed hatred of the lodge, their dear and venerable old church is trembling, like many other, on the very brink of dissolution. Let none of these good and holy men change their methods. Let them discard ignorance and indifference and set themselves to saving their young men from being sworn and swindled into the lodge, and the men and means now silently absorbed by the lodge will be turned by the grace of God into the church, and save it from extinction. But if the salt of the church shall continue to "lose its savor," there is positively no hope for the church. Churches which will stand by and see their citizens deceived and robbed of their money by the sale to them of secrets which have been revealed a thousand times; and bound by the loathsome folds of the Masonic anaconda, must not be surprised if the silent testimony on their church-book only makes them hated by the lodge and forsaken by the people.

Thanks be to God there is a better day coming for the churches and it is near.

War and the Bible.

BY JAMES BARNETT.

In the columns of the Christian Cynosure of Sept. 30, is an article with the above heading, commencing thus: "War transgresses almost every precept of Holy Scripture and all the commandments."

My opinion is, that this is likely to mislead. The Scriptures give instruction as follows, "With good advice make war." Proverbs xx. 18; and, "For by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war." Prov. xx. 6; and also in Num. xxxi. 6, 7, "And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas, the son of Eleazer the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand. And they warred against the Midianites, as the Lord commanded Moses, and they slew all the males." In the first chapter of Numbers we read, "And the Lord spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying, Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names every male by their polls; from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel; thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies." Then in Deut. xx. 5–7, we have those mentioned who (of those numbered) may be excused from serving in the war. The tenth verse requires to be made to the city a proposal of peace. The 12th verse reads thus, "And if it will make no peace with thee, but wilt make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it." In the book of Joshua, chapter eighth, first and second verses we read, "And the Lord said unto Joshua, fear not, neither be thou dismayed; take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai. And thou shalt do to Ai and her king as thou didst unto Jericho and her king."

The above quotations are sufficient to prove that God requires men to engage in war at times. But in this age of the world, while all nations of the earth are deceived by the "mother of harlots" and her daughters, it is otherwise. We have a prophesy in Rev. xvii. 16; "And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire." We think this not yet accomplished; but may soon be. The 17th verse mentions what has taken place and is the case at present: "For God hath put in their hearts to fulfill his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled." And so we have in the present generation the violation of all God's ten commandments. Therefore we should have no connection or membership with any people who compel their members to violate God's law. If this nation requires its members to go into its armies where they are required to do what is contrary to God's law, then we should take the position of an alien to this nation and maintain an allegiance to the Lord Jesus Christ; for it is inconsistant to profess to be a friend to Christ and at the same time to practice rebellion by trampling on his commands. This nation does not require anyone, personally, to blaspheme the name of God. But in many instances, nations are requiring the violation of God's law. This nation required the delivering up of the fugitive slave to the hands of the tyrant. And President Lincoln, in his inaugural address, professed a willingness to attend to the execution of that law; and the military force was under his command to be used for that purpose whenever needed in violation of the law of God, as written in Deut. xxiii. 15.

The founders of the United States Government, in seeking to exclude the corrupt union of church and state, have gone into infidelity in not receiving God in union with the State or national concerns; and for more than eighty years the doctrine has been to constantly inculcated that religion has nothing to do with political affairs, that this opinion has become so widely prevalent among the people, that even ministers of religion influenced by the popular opinion maintain this doctrine.

The Scriptures teach that, a nation, as a moral person, having a distinct personality of its own, has in this respect obligations of its own. It is not enough that the obligations of religion are acknowledged by the individuals composing a nation in their individual capacity in their private life. The state as a state, the nation as a nation, having its origin in divine institutions, and therefore the creature of God, existing for moral ends, having moral necessities of its own, ought, as a nation, to have a religious character and life of its own. It is under obligation to know and acknowledge, to obey and serve God and his Christ as the "Governor among the nations, who is higher than the kings of the earth." Ps. xxxix. 27.

By what criterion shall we judge of this nation's reverence of God, acknowledgement of his dominion, regard for his authority, and obedience to his laws? Shall it be the constitution it has established? What fairer criterion than this? It is its organic law, binding its members together in one body and making it a nation. It is carefully considered and deliberately established; it is the most formal and authorative expression of the mind and heart and will of the nation. No recognition of God or his law is there. No name of God in the oath of office. But there is in the Constitution an express prohibition of any religious test, even a belief in the existence of God, as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States. The Constitution prohibits Congress from making any law respecting an establishment of the Christian religion; but does not prohibit the profession of it, by the nation in the Constitution.

The openly wicked are allowed by the Constitution to bear rule; but the law of God requires that magistrates be men who fear God and hate covetousness. That they rule according to God's word. Moses was a man of that character; he said, as we have it in Deut. iv. 5–8: "Behold I have taught statutes and judgments, even as the Lord my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it. Keep therefore and do them; for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people. What nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon him for? And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day." King David, who is called "the man of God." 2 Chr. viii. 14, was called to subdue numerous enemies, but we have no account of his losing a battle.

Let Christians unite under the banner of the Lord of Hosts and not under the banner of his enemies, if they desire his blessings.

True Source of Prosperity.

When the church of the United Brethren in Christ adhered most closely and firmly to its great distinctive principles of reform, as from 1840 to 1850 or from 1850 to 1860, its ratio of increase was greater than it has been at any subsequent period. And this is true though two of the great evils which it opposed—slavery and secretism—were, during the latter period, in the very hight of their popularity, and were putting forth their most specious pleas and most beguiling forms. Why should this be so?

1. Earnest convictions and devotion to principle always give power. We instance Luther, Wesley, Knox, Otterbein, and their colaborers in support of this proposition; and we might further illustrate by the examples of Galileo, Fulton, Morse, Columbus, and Wilberforce. Earnest convictions even give power to errorists: as in the case of Loyola, Peter the Hermit, the Mohammedan Caled, and Miller the Advendist. How much more, then, do these give influence and power to truth.

2. Devotion to principle, accompanied with earnest conviction, commands respect and admiration even from enemies, and greatly increases influence over them.

3. This love of truth and loyalty to principle is acceptable to God, and his blessing is upon it to give success. God regards even those who honestly and reverently entertain mistaken views with more complacency than he does a slack conscience and lukewarmness concerning clear and important truths. So it is not strange that God should help and bless those who zealously and unitedly war with spiritual weapons for truth and righteous principles. It must be remembered that zeal and firm adherence to principle are not optionary with the children of God, but solemnly obligatory on them. It is better to be right than to be wealthy or popular. "Why do the heathen rage and the people imagine a vain thing?" "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Telescope.

The Bible in the Schools.

The Farwell Hall Committee to the Chicago School Board.

The undersigned have been appointed a Committee by a public meeting, held at Farwell Hall, on the 10th of October, to present to your Honorable body their protest against your late action in repealing the rule which has been in force in the common schools in Chicago from their earliest organization, requiring the reading of a portion of the Bible each day at the opening of the schools.

We are the more encouraged to hope for the reconsideration of your action for the reason that it was taken, as we are advised, without any petition therefor, and without any discussion of its propriety. The rule was established and has been maintained as the recognition of the basis of American civilization. The Pilgrim Fathers, who first enunciated and embodied in their form of government the vital principles of free government, the right of the governed to choose the governor, which underlies and animates our free institutions, and which has raised us as a nation to our present position of prosperity and power, established and cultivated a civilization founded upon the great moral precepts taught in the Bible.

That such a form of government as ours can only be maintained by a people enlightened by education guided and controlled by the highest principles of morality, was the conviction of those great and good men by whose devotion and wisdom our institutions were founded, admits of no denial. So deeply were they impressed with this sentiment that Virginia, in ceding her jurisdiction over the Northwest Territory to Congress, declared, as one of the articles of compact, forever to remain unalterable, unless by common consent, in Art. 3 of the ordinance of 1787, that "Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged." They regarded mere intellectual culture, unless controlled by moral principle, as liable to become a curse instead of a blessing. Hence, while requiring the encouragement of schools, they declared morality to be essential to good government, and impliedly required it to be taught in the schools; and, inasmuch as the Christian religion was the only recognized religion in the country, and which they also declared to be essential to good government, it was the morality taught in the Christian Bible which they had in view, and the teaching of which they made a condition of ceding jurisdiction over the State and the whole Northwest.

The civilization of the country is not that of Confucius, the Veda, or pagan Rome, nor is it the civilization of the philosophy of Greece, or of modern times. It is a Christian civilization,—a civilization founded on the moral principles of the Bible. All we are, and all we boast of as a people, we owe to the moral teaching of the Bible which embodies the only system of ethics calculated to elevate and purify a people. Those nations which have most faithfully practiced its precepts have become the purest, most prosperous, and happy of any other. Whatever of civilization and culture the enemies of the Bible possess, they owe to and have aqcuired from its teachings and influence. Our common schools and higher institutions of learning were established and nurtured by men who drew their inspiration from the Bible. If, then, our institutions and civilization, of which we so much boast, are the offspring of the teachings of the Bible, shall we forbid its reading in our public schools? Shall we lay a ban upon it by excluding it from our public schools, as a book unfit to be read in the presence of our children? Is it not an insult to our fathers, a violation of our compact with Virginia, an act giving countenance to the impression that morality is no longer worthy to be revered or practiced by our children?

The power to train the people in the use of arms, as a means of national defense, is undoubted. The confinement of criminals in reformatory institutions is conceded by all. The power and duty of a nation to train its subjects in the principles and practice of moral virtue, so far as is requisite to make good citizens, is as clear and imperatively demanded. Without the exercise of this duty no government founded upon universal suffrage can long survive. The results of the assaults upon our system of morals and civilization which its opponents have waged for some years past are seen in a weakening of the public conscience, the prevalence of crime, the defiant scouting of those social and moral laws on which society and government rests. They furnish no encouragement to you to give them countenance, by excluding the teaching to our children of those principles and commands which condemn such doctrines and practices. Who has made this demand upon you? What code of morals is proposed as a substitute? Disguise it as we may, the painful truth is manifest that the fiercest cry for some act of condemnation and contempt of the Bible and its moral teachings, comes from those who deny its authority and reject its morals.

To yield to such a demand from such sources is to give to the advocates of such license official and moral support. It is possible that this can be justified on the plea that it is demanded by public sentiment. If so, the bitter end is near. It is said that many who contribute to the support support of the public schools object to the reading of the Bible in the schools because they distrust some or all of its historical facts: and others because it is not accompanied by interpretations to suit their particular faith. One answer is sufficient for all these objectors. This is a Christian country. Ours is a Christian civilization. Our institutions and system of morals are based upon the Bible and its teachings. Our democracy is founded on the teachings of Christ. Neither those who have chosen to flee from the oppressions of the land of their birth to partake of the blessings of our Christian civilization, nor those who have sought our country to share with us the patrimony of our fathers, have any right to demand that we shall change or modify our institutions, our moral or social principles, laws or habits, and conform them to those born and cultivated under a different form of government, and substitute for them another system of civilization.

The laws, civil and moral, to which we yield obedience, they are bound to respect and obey so long as sustained by a majority of the population. None of these last objectors dare yet to q estion the system of morals taught in the Scriptures. All civilized peoples recognize that system as the purest and highest, and the Bible as its authorative text-book. Why, then, can they with any show of reason demand that their and our children should not be taught in its moral precepts?

In discharging the duties intrusted to us we have endeavored to convey to you the expression of the wishes of a large number the of citizens of Chicago, and to present to your consideration some arguments which seem to us conclusive against your late action. It is not necessary for us to enlarge on the question of public sentiment. Enough has been done during the past few weeks to assure you that the people of Chicago love the Bible, and that they would regard its banishment from the schools as a public calamity.

In framing an argument for your considerstion we have not unnaturally been led to raise the inquiry, why it was that you took the action referred to. It is possible that the members of your Board who voted with the majority were unfavorably disposed toward the Bible, and were anxious to have it cease to be a text-book. This we say is possible, though we prefer to take another view of the case, and this has, in a measure, shaped what we have had to say.

We are aware that there are men in this and other committees who, though personally desirous of retaining the Bible in the schools, nevertheless feel that they should make this concession to those who raise objections against its occupying this position. And we apprehend that this question now before our country is not whether the American people desire to retain the Bible in the schools, but whethor the majority of the American people should yield to the wishes of the minority, and exclude the Bible because some, either on the grounds of prejudice or conscientious convictions, are opposed to it.

In answer to this question we have taken the ground that this is a Christian nation, and that since the Bible is a recognized authority among Christians the world over, its use in the public schools is justified, and that no fair demand for its surrender can be made. Without abating aught of what we have said on this subject, we would at the same time remind your honorable body that this question may be discussed on a purely secular plan. The State having a right to provide education for the purpose of training good citizens, it has, therefore a right to train them in good morals, and if, in the judgment of the State, the Bible is deemed to be the most suitable book for such purposes, it is difficult for us to see why its use should be vetoed because some of the community are opposed to it. It must appear, we think, to your honorable body that the adoption of a principle which would exclude the Bible would likewise justify objections to any text-book in use. Indeed, it would make legislation impossible so far as education is con erned, for it would require a unanimous popular vote to give it the force of law.

It is not difficult to answer the objections against the use of the Bible in the schools made by those who say that the State has no right to teach religion; and it is just as easy on the other hand to defend the Bible from the charge made by those who say that it is a sectarian book.

If, however, for the purpose of the discussion, the Bible is treated simply as a text-book in morals, the two objections just referred to are irrelevant, and can be made with no more justice against the Bible than a work on geography or history.

We have but glanced at some of the reasons opposed to banishing the Bible from the public schools. We most respectfully but earnestly ask you to reconsider your action. And if you feel constrained to rescind a practice coeval with our national existance and its civilization by the exclusion from the public schools of the best book of private and public morals, we claim that those who revere the Bible and its code of moral truth have a right to ask of you what recent and imperative public exigency has compelled you to fix upon it your official seal of condemnation.

THE "SACRED ORDER OF UNITED IRISHMEN REDIVIVI."

[New York Herald, Oct. 27.]

About one year ago an organization was formed in this city, of a Communistic nature, by a man named Father McNamara, who had at one time been a Lazarist priest, and who had also officiated as a clergyman of his own persuasion in Raleigh, N. C. It is said that, owing to some irregularities, the Bishop of the Diocese in which Father McNamara preached, silenced him, depriving the clergyman of his functions. Since then Father McNamara has devoted his attention chiefly to organizing revolutions in the cause of the Fatherhood of Nations and the Brotherhood of Man. The ex-reverend gentleman wears a long sack overcoat with a velvet collar; his yellow hair hangs down on his shoulders, his face is always clean shaven, and his presence is a marked one whenever he appears in any of the streets of the city.

The organization formed by Father McNamara was called the Sacred Order of United Irishmen Redivivi, and had a number of lodges scattered throughout New York City with fearfully mystic titles. It was the design of Father McNamara to revive the organization at one time known as the Order of United Irishmen, and which had correspondence with the French Revolutionists of 1793. A number of earnest, fervent and enthusiastic young Irishmen, not at all deterred by the prospectus of the Association, which declared that Ireland could only be freed by a weekly subscription of twenty-five cents per man, joined the "Sacred Redivivi," and paid in their dues as became them. Each candidate was sworn secretly, his hands crossed over a basin of blood, and with a large sharp-bladed ax depending from the ceiling directly over his head. It was a fearful scene that some of the candidates witnessed, and three or four became light-headed immediately after the terrible and ghostly inaugural ceremonies. Ex-Father McNamara declared that, even if the Pope and Kaiser Wilhelm opposed the movement, he alone would free Ireland. The organization increased rapidly, until at one time the Redivivi numbered about 180 members in this city, all of whom were paying subscribers. One of the chief and most deadly conspirators was a vender of human hair, who is proprietor of a store on Canal street. This man possesses some money, and it is said that he had negotiated for a harbor steam-tug to proceed to Ireland with twenty Minie muskets, calibre 1857, when Father McNamara stopped his proceedings. There was also a poet named Callinnan in the organization, who had for a non de plume "Red Rain."

Among the recruits obtained by ex-Father McNamara there was a young man named Thomas J. McGeoghegan, a well-educated and good-looking young gentleman of 25 years of age, who is now teaching school in the Academy of the Christian Brothers, in Brooklyn. The pseudo-Father McNamara, who closely resembles a noted preacher in Brooklyn, having considerable conversational powers, did in some manner fascinate young McGeoghegan and finally induced him to join the Redivivi. The young man had written for the press, and, being largely gifted with imagination, he became one of the most earnest and zealous propagators of the revolutionary doctrines which the ex-priest had given his years to inculcate. The Redivivi generally met in Chatham street, over a weekly newspaper office, and sometimes a milkcan full of blood would be conveyed from the Thirty-fourth street slaughter-house, of which the Redivivi would partake freely, and thus seal their vows of loyalty and heroism. But young McGeoghegan began to have doubts of the honesty as well as the practicability of the organization of the Redivivi to secure the liberty of Ireland through the instrumentality of ex-Father McNamara, Being of quick intelligence, to use a politician's phrase, he "kicked," yet he did not fail to subscribe his weekly 25 cents. It seems, however, that Mr. McGeoghegan is a very strict Roman Catholic, and, after some months' connection with the Redivivi, he began to have conscientious doubts as to whether he should continue to be a member or not. Having, as a Catholic, to do what is known as the "Jubilee," he was informed by the clergyman under whose ministrations he sat that he could not receive absolution, unless he immediately left the Redivivi. Mr. McGeoghegan, feeling that he ought to be certain of the matter, and knowing that he would be sentenced to death if he were to become a traitor to the Redivivi, consulted two other clergymen, and they informed him of the spiritual penalties to be enforced should he continue as a Redivivist.

Now came the agony, and Mr. McGeoghegan found himself between two fires. He felt that he would have to endure the pains of hell fire if he were to remain in the Redivivi; but, should he dare to leave it, he knew that the organization would have him shot as a traitor to the cause of Ireland. The young patriot decided immediately, and chose everlasting bliss in the future to a paltry and indefinite existence as a school-teacher. Accordingly he dared his fate, and wrote a letter to the "National Chief" of the Redivivi, as ex-Father McNamara calls himself, resigning his position as a member of the Sacred Order. The letter was written at the peril of Mr. McGeoghegan's life, and is as follows:

In vindication of my character and honor, both as an Irishman and a Christian, I am compelled to give publicity to the annexed letter from Father McNamara, in reply to one of mine, resigning my position as a member of the Redivivi.

As Father McNamara and his adherents have both publicly and privately slandered me, and attributed base and unworthy motives to me on account of my resignation, I feel it due to myself and to my countrymen to make a public statement of the facts and to expose an organization that is an imposition, as can easily be recognized from the substance of his letter:

At the solicitation of Father McNamara, I joined the Redivivi, believing it to be an organization solely got up for the purpose of liberating Ireland. I soon found out my mistake, for, instead of being a truly national organization, it proved to be a despotic combination under the guidance of Father McNamara, having solely in view the pecuniary object of fleecing my confiding countrymen for the maintainance of a few unprincipled men. As an Irishman, a Christian, and a Catholic, I found I could not conscientiously continue a member of it. In performing my Jubilee duties I consulted my confessor, and he peremptorily ordered me to withdraw from "such a dangerous and villainous organization." Acting on this advice, I sent in my resignation, and in reply received the an-nexed letter from the Rev. Father McNamara.

I did not intend to give it publicity had he not personally assailed me on the Hamilton ferry-boat and abused me in the most insulting manner, and had not he and his adherents spread reports derogatory to my character as a Christian, a patriot, and a man.

I appeal to an impartial public as to whether I am justified in my actions or not, and publish his letter, so that they may judge of the blasphemous nature of the Redivivi and its founders.

Well, I must conclude by saying that the only tribute I intend to pay in future to such a person is the tribute of my silence,—I had almost said silent contempt; but I shall never hold the "cloth" in contempt, even though the wearer be debarred from the sanctuary.

Yours respectfully,

THOMAS J. MCGEOGHEGAN.

However incredible it may seem to the citizens of New York who live in a civilized and Christian community, and are supposed to obey the laws under which they exist, the "National Chief" of the Redivivi, on receipt of the letter, called a council of the mysterious organization, which met, as it was alleged, by summons of a dagger and cord delivered to each of the members of the "Supreme and Extraordinary Council," for so they are called. The number "seven" has always had mystic powers, and the "Council of Seven" met on the 7th of October at the hotel kept by O'Donovan-Rossa, in Chatham Square. The proprietor of the hotel knew nothing of the purpose of the seven men who called on him, headed by McNamara, and he readily allowed them to engage a room. Six of the men were partially disguised and were not known. They met in a room up-stairs, after ordering some ginger-beer, and locked the door so that no one should enter. No one except those present can tell what happened in the room; yet, incredible as it may seem, one of the seven, under the solemn obligations of secret oaths, was deputed to kill Thomas J. McGeoghegan, wherever found, no matter if it were in a church, as a traitor to Ireland and of the sacred order of the Redivivi. Our reporter discovered last evening that the name of the man who is to execute the sentence of death on the unfortunate McGeoghegan, is James Walsh, who was a bottler of champagne, and belonged formerly to the firm of Walsh & Peel, but, when not otherwise engaged, is a peddler of maps. Mr. McGeoghegan called last evening at the Herald office and declared that he was not a traitor to Ireland, but that, owing to his honest religious belief, he had to resign his membership in the Redivivi. He seemed a little frightened and declared that he did not know what the members of the Redivivi might do if they were excited. McNamara addressed the following letter to Mr. McGeoghegan in reply to his letter of resignation, and from its tone of concentrated fury some idea may be got of what will occur when the deputed Walsh meets McGeoghegan:

THOS. MCGEOGHEGAN, Esq.—SIR: Through some mistake, yours of the 16th inst. reached me only this morning. I have carefully noted the matter, and concluded to send you my reply. You are, of course, free to withdraw yourself from any of the meetings of the order, as you would be at liberty to absent yourself from any other honorable body that had no power to physically coerce you; but you have no power to withdraw from the Redivivi the allegiance you have sworn to that body for patriotic purposes. And no priest on earth has any power to exenorate you from the obligations you have there entered into, and the reason is because the Redivivi Association is simply a patriotic body; our obligations are simply those of Irish patriotism, and from these no priest, or bishop, or pope has any power to exhonorate you. Nay, God himself could not absolve you, because God could not make a traitor. Either you are a patriot or you are a traitor. There is no middle ground. A priest can give you no warrant to swerve from patriotism and become a traitor. Without saying more on this point, I will merely say I am astonished at the suddenness of your conversion. Your extreme piety is of very recent birth. I remember several expressions of yours wherein you conveyed the idea that such dictation as you allude to could have no force against your conviction of a man's right. But there's no accounting for men's convictions, except—well, let it remain unsaid. I am exceedingly sorry to peruse such a letter as this from you. I had given you credit for something better. I was even laying out for you some patriotic work that would suit your talents. Yet alas, poor Ireland! But be assured I do not wish to grieve you. I must honestly tell you, however, that you have no power to withdraw the allegiance you owe to the Redivivi. Be ready to appear before that body as soon as called, or they will proceed against you as a traitor. They will court-martial you, and, if necessary, expel you dishonorably and send your name and all about you to all parts. This is the way you will be dealt with. I take more trouble about you than I would for another. I had placed some confidence in you, and I do not wish to see you stamped as a slave, coward or traitor. Choose your course and take the consequence. Yours, etc., FATHER MCNAMARA.

A Herald reporter called at the District Attorney's office yesterday to know what steps would be taken by that official in case that McNamara should attempt to carry out his insane threat of executing the unfortunate McGeoghegan. Mr. Phelps was at the time busily engaged in trying Dolan for the murder of Mr. Noe, and could not be seen, but the officials in the District Attorney's office informed the reporter that the laws would protect Mr. McGeoghegan from the murderous attempts of the man McNamara, if he would apply in time for such protection. The "National Chief" McNamara met Mr. McGeoghegan in a Hamilton ferry-boat a few nights since, and, after abusing him in a savage way, solemnly sentenced him to be shot to death by James Walsh. The latter individual bought a Smith & Wesson seven-shooter last evening, it is supposed to wreak vengeance on the fated McGeoghegan, and it is quite possible that inside forty-eight hours our citizens may be startled by the news of a dreadful murder. The "chief," McNamara, was yesterday seen on Tryon row and other public places armed with a bludgeon, and on being appealed to for mercy stated very resolutely that he saw no reason to reverse the sentence pronounced, and that Mr. McGeoghegan must die at Sudden Death—Rev. D. R. Barker.

Rev. D. R. Barker, pastor of the Congregational church in College Springs, Page Co., Iowa, died very suddenly on the evening of the 22d of Oct., 1875. It was supposed that his death was produced by disease of the heart. He had eaten his supper in his usual health, and went in his usual good spirits to the post-office for his news. While standing on the side-walk talking with a friend, he suddenly fell dead, without either speaking or breathing. His funeral was held at his church on the following Sabbath at the usual hour of their services, 10 A. M. Rev. Marion Morrison, pastor of the U. P. church, at the request of the friends, conducted the funeral services. The following brief statement of his life and labors was read as introductory to the services. By request it is furnished for publication in the Christian Cynosure.

"Rev. D. R. Barker was born in the town of Hope, State of Maine, July 16th, 1813. He was consequently a little over 62 years old. He was born again in the 25th year of his age. He received his theological training at Oberlin, Ohio. He was ordained to preach the everlasting Gospel by the Oberlin Council in 1843. He had preached that Gospel for over 32 years. He commenced his public ministry in Johnston, Ohio. Preached for a time in Canfield, Ohio. He was elected as Financial Agent of the Oberlin Institute, and labored for a short time in that work. But feeling that it interfered with his cherished work of preaching Christ, he resigned. He organized a church in Mercer, Penn., on purely anti-slavery principles, and labored as pastor of that church for 17 years. He then was settled in Randolph, Crawford Co., Penn., for 5 years. He came to College Springs, Page Co., Iowa, in July, 1869, and has been pastor of the Congregational church of this place since that time. This pastoral relation was dissolved on last Friday evening by his dropping down dead on the street, without a moment's warning. His last sermon was preached on last Wednesday (Oct. 20th) on the occasion of the death of the child of Mr. Mead Johnson. His text was, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Those there present will remember his peculiar earnestness on that occasion. Near his last words in that sermon were, "Who will be the next victim of death in our midst! It may be some of you, or it may be I." His last earthly conversation was with Father Jaquis; and almost ere these words ceased to be uttered, he entered upon his converse in heaven. He was eminently a good man, full of faith and the Holy Ghost."

An immense crowd of people were present on the occasion of his funeral. Not one-half of them could get into the house. After the sermon remarks were made by other ministerial brethren. The regular services were suspended in all the other churches in the place.

scientious man, Whatever he thought to be sin he fought with all his might. He was a decided anti-slavery man when it cost much to be one. He was very strongly opposed to secret societies in all their forms. He did much to circulate anti-secret society literature in this community, He has gone to his reward. M. M.

Thanksgiving.—Proclamation of the President.

In accordance with a practice at once wise and beautiful, we have been accustomed, as the year is drawing to a close, to devote an occasion to an humble expression of thanks to Almighty God for ceaseless and distinguished benefits bestowed upon us as a nation, and for his mercies and protection during the closing year. Amid the rich and free enjoyment of all our advantages, we should not forget the source from whence they are derived, and extend our obligations to the Father of all mercies. We have full reason to renew our thanks to Almighty God for favors bestowed upon us during the past year. By his continuing mercy, civil and religious liberty have been maintained; peace has reigned within our borders; labor and enterprise have produced their merited rewards, and to His watchful providence we are indebted for security from pestilence and other national calamities. Apart from the other national blessings, each individual among us has occasion to thoughtfully recall and devoutly recognize the favors and protection which he has enjoyed.

Now therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do recommend that on Thursday, the 25th day of November, the people of the United States, abstaining from their accustomed vocations, do assemble in their respective places of worship, and in such form as may seem most appropriate in their own hearts, offer to Almighty God their acknowledgments and thanks for all his mercies, and their humble prayers for the continuance of his Divine favor.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington this 27th day of October, in the year of our Lord, 1875, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundredth. (Signed) U. S. GRANT, President.

HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

Directors' Meeting, N. C. A.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5th, 1875.

The board of Directors of the National Christian Association met at the call of the chairman in the Cynosure office.

Rev. A. D. Freeman of Downers Grove, Ill., led in prayer.

The minutes of the previous meeting were approved.

The action of Treasurer, with advice of members of the Board, in loaning $500 of the Publishing House fund was ratified.

The following resolution was also passed:

Whereas, the question has been raised as to the disposition of funds contributed for the Nat'l Publishing House provided that object is not secured, the Board of Directors decide that such funds shall revert to the donors, unless by their consent appropriated for the General fund of the N. C. A.

The Treasurer was requested to publish the state of the Publishing House fund in connection with the above.

Bill for tracts and envelopes furnished by E. A. Cook & Co., for distribution at the meeting of the American Board was ordered to be paid.

A paper on the organization of the National Christian Association was adopted and ordered to be published. [See eighth page.]

Adjourned.

H. L KELLOGG, Sec'y pro tem.

Third Annual Meeting of the Indiana Christian Anti-secrecy Association.

Pursuant to a call of the Ex. committee, the Association met in annual Convention in White's Hall, at Marion, Grant Co., Ind., on the 13th of Oct., 1875, at 9½ o'clock A. M., Vice-president S. L. Cook of Noble Co. presiding. The meeting was opened with reading the 54th Psalm, and prayer. Addresses of welcome to delegates was delivered by Rev. D. O'Ferrell of Marion, responded to by the chairman.

The following committees were appointed:

Geo. W. Champ, to invite the editors of newspapers published at Marion, to attend the meetings of the Convention and report the proceedings through their papers.

On enrollment: Isaac Elliott, and C. F. A. Gantzckow.

On nominations: J. T. Kiggins, H. Floyd, H. C. Miller, Wilson Milligan, and Jos. M. Darby.

H. Floyd, J. T. Kiggins, and C. H. Byrd, to draft resolutions and prepare an obitnary address relative to Rev. A. Butler, Pres. of the Association from its organization until his death, for publication in the Christian Cynosure.

Several delegates gave short experience of work in the cause, while the enrollment was being completed.

Afternoon session met at 2 o'clock. The meeting was opened with singing and prayer.

The committee on nominations reported the following, who were elected as reported:

President, Rev. Halleck Floyd of Dublin, Wayne Co.

Recording Secretary, Wm. Small, Xenia, Miami Co.

Corresponding Secretary, J. T. Kiggins, Portland, Jay Co.

Treasurer, Peter Rich, Westfield, Hamilton Co.

Executive Committee, Peter Rich, chairman, Asher Kellum, J. F. Phillips, B. F. Witt, and Eber Teter.

Vice-presidents; for Adams Co. W. S. Fields; Bartholomew Co., D. Shuck; Blackford Co., Wm. Whitsill; Clay Co. W. M. Givens; Carroll Co., Samuel B. Housten; Cass Co., Adam Surface; DeKalb Co., John Hogue; Delaware Co. Arthur Rector; Franklin Co., P. T. Jones; Grant Co., Isaac Elliott; Hamilton Co., H. C. West; Huntington Co., W. C. The Ex-Committee was authorized to fill vacancies for Vice-Presidents in other counties. J. T. Kiggins, H. Floyd and W. S. Fields were appointed a committee on programme.

Evening session commenced at 7 o'clock, opened with devotional exercises. Daniel Hill, Editor Christian Worker, spoke on the obligations and principles of secret societies. J. P. Stoddard followed with a few remarks, principally on the grange movement. The audience was of good size and good order prevailed throughout.

Oct. 14th, morning session met at 9 o'clock, devotional exercises conducted by Rev. S. Miller.

The minutes of the preceding day were read and approved.

The Committee appointed at the last annual meeting, to revise the constitution, presented a report, which after some discussion was re-committed to the Committee, with H. Floyd, and C. F. A. Gantzckow added to the committee, with a direction to report at the afternoon session.

The Treasurer reported as follows, which was adopted:

Amount taken in pledges, including pledges taken after the annual meeting at Dublin.	$460.00.
Amount paid on pledges.	$184.00.
Received outside of pledges,	$ 50.00.
Due the Association in pledges,	$276.00.

The Treasurer was authorized to correspond with those that have pledges unpaid, and request them to forward money to him soon. The remainder of the morning session was occupied by J. P. Stoddard; he spoke relative to the new Publishing House, at Chicago.

Afternoon session opened with devotional exercises. J. P. Stoddard was instructed to telegraph Past Master Ronayne, of Chicago, to be present and address the people of Marion, on tomorrow evening, (the 15th.) The Committee on revision of constitution again presented their report, which, after some discussion, was adopted as presented.

The Committee on publishing interests made report which was adopted as follows:

1st. That we regard the Christian Cynosure as our organ, and one of the most efficient means that could be employed for the permanent advancement of our reform, and urge the friends of our cause to circulate it, and the publications of the National Christian Association, to the extent of their ability:

2d. That we recommend the editors of the Cynosure to give more extended market reports.

Daniel Hill spoke about thirty minutes, in which he endorsed the action of the Association in this reform, bidding the people engaged in the work God-speed. The sincere and heartfelt thanks of the Association were tendered him for his attendance and labors with us.

The Committee on enrollment reported 20 counties represented by 102 delegates, 36 of whom are members of the U. B. church, 35 Friends, 16 Wesleyan, 2 Presbyterian, 1 Congregationalist, 1 Christian (Campbellite,) 1 M. E., and 10 not members of any church.

J. T. Kiggins was endorsed as our State Agent and lecturer, and S. W. Miller, S. L. Cook, and C. F. Wiggins were appointed lecturers under the auspicies of the Association.

Wm. Hall, Geo. W. Champ, James McConnell, Cornelius Alderman, John Hogue, H. C. Miller, and Chas. F. A. Gantzckow were appointed a committee on political action, and requested to call a political meeting in June next.

A collection and subscription of funds was taken up which amounted to $15.50 in money, and $200.00 pledges. $97.30 was raised previous to the meeting of the Association, by private subscription, all of which was placed in the hands of the Treasurer, to defray the expense of this meeting and sustain the lecture work the coming year.

Plainfield, Hendricks county, was designated as the place for holding the next annual meeting of the Association; the time for the meeting left with the executve committee.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the good people of Marion, and vicinity for their generous hospitality in entertaining the delegates.

Evening session met at 7 o'clock. Devotional exercises conducted by Rev. H. C. Miller. A large and apparently well interested audience listened to an able lecture by J. P. Stoddard. The Association adjourned with singing the doxology, and benediction by J. P. Stoddard.

HALLECK FLOYD, President,
WILLIAM SMALL, Secretary.

From the Illinois Agent.—Notes by the Way.

DEAR BRO. K.—Leaving Wheaton on the 20th, I visited Sycamore and enjoyed an attendance on Wesleyan General Conference until noon of the 23d. I then visited Ashton, when by invitation I preached on the Sabbath in the Christian church and lectured in the evening to a good congregation on the religion of secretism. After the congregation was dismissed one of the Masonic brethren lost his jewel and pretty thoroughly advertised my meeting for the nex night which was very dark and stormy. Still we had a considerable audience, including several of the fraternity, who heard attentively how a man is made a Mason. At the conclusion I was politely told that I was a liar and a scoundrel and that this was true of every Anti-mason in the land. This tirade of abuse, which lasted about fifteen or twenty minutes, showed to the audience just how much argument there is in favor of Masonry. It left a valuable impression. Bro. Milo Stark's testimony given at this place is still remembered with intense hatred by the Masons and gratitude by those who love the truth. I enjoyed here the hospitalities of Bro. M. Beach, who is a tried veteran in our reform.

From thence I came to Florid in Putnam Co., where I spoke last night in the old Wesleyan church to a larger audience than could be expected, considering the darkness and the rain. In this little church where Fathers Lumery and Harker had preached and where Lovejoy had made some of his earlier anti-slavery speeches, I felt a kind of inspiration and thought that it was good to be there. On the next evening I spoke in the same place to a quite full and attentive audience. On the next day (Sabbath) I preached by invitation in the Congregational church at Mt. Palatine and lectured in the evening to a good audience on the religion of Freemasonry.

The pastor, Rev. E. R. Robinson, M. D., made some very appropriate remarks, expressive of sympathy with the reform and advising an investigation of the subject. He was followed by Mr. John McNabb, who gave us his experience in this reform. Our meeting was a good one. The progress of this reform in Putnam county is very encouraging.—To-night I expect to speak again at Mt. Palatine. On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at Granville, and thus around to Peoria.

Yours for the Lord,
H. H. HINMAN.

The Michigan State Meeting—From the President.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The friends of our cause will be glad to learn that the State meeting at Ypsilanti, Oct. 27, 28, and 29 was a success. Though the attendance from abroad was not so large as was anticipated yet good solid work was done and its influence will be widely felt without doubt. That indefatigable worker, John Levington, was on hand, and as lecturer and as chairman of the committee on resolutions did much effective work. General Agent, J. P. Stoddard, was also there and by his wise councils and large experience placed Michigan reforms under great obligations to him.

The most important action of the meeting was perhaps the authorizing of Executive Committee to appoint a State financial agent. With the right man in that place it is believed that great good will result to the cause. Should the right man be found and put into the field it is hoped that every true reformer will ably second his efforts, so that the progress of the work shall not be hindered. The report of the Secretary of the meeting will doubtless soon appear, meanwhile let every lover of the cause get ready to give a long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull altogether. Yours truly, C. QUICK.

P. S. It is quite desirable that those who made pledges to the lecture fund at Fenton last March should forward their subscription or a portion of the same at once to J. H. Wilcox at Howell, Mich., treasurer, as the fund is already overdrawn. C. Q.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The following is a synopsis of a series of eleven resolutions adopted by the Mich. Christian Anti-secrecy Association. Freemasonry is the center of a fraudulent, deistical system, the essential facts of which are before the public, showing that it usurps the power "ordained of God" to the constant detriment of all honest citizens and especially Christians.

That it is the duty of the pulpit and the press to expose and oppose this system and that the people should withhold their support from those who are silent respecting this great evil and sustain more liberally those who speak out boldly.

That the administration of Masonic oaths is a violation of our civil law, and that in any way to indorse such lawless and oath-bound combinations is a gross abuse of legal power.

That the right of challenge should be granted in case where Masons and non-Masons are contesting in our courts; and that a political party uncontrolled by secret orders and more honest than either of those now in the field has become a necessity; and finally that it is improper for Masons or any other order or denomination to lay the corner-stone of buildings erected by taxation on the people.

STATE MEETINGS and County Conventions would lose half their efficiency if the national organ did not follow up the effect, week by week. Keep the fire glowing, the types clicking, and hundreds working for the reform and sending notes for their work in subscriptions, and letters for the encouragement of others.

Central New York.

The second annual meeting of the Groton Christian Association opposed to secret societies met at Summer Hill, N. Y., Oct. 13th, 1875. The attendance though not large when compared with popular gatherings, was sufficient to indicate progress and to give encouragement of future prosperity. Prayer was made a prominent feature of the forenoon meeting. Some five or six denominations of Christians were represented, but all seemed to harmoniously unite in opposing the common foe found in the principles of secret orders.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows:

President, J. B. Hart; Secretary, Edwin Barnetson; Treasurer, David Whipple; Vice-presidents, Rev. J. P. Pierce, Daniel Carpenter, Almond Trapp, Warren Hoaglin, Rev. C. P. Owen, Stephen Carpenter, Ira Ranney, George Allen, Rev. W. J. Betts, Aaron Walker, E. R. Rockwell.

The organization now numbers eighty-three members, and with the vitality indicated at this meeting it may hope to accomplish much in the cause of reform. Arrangements were made to hold quarterly meetings during the year.

An address in the P. M. by Rev. W. J. Betts was good, appropriate and well received. A good congregation, in the evening, listened with attention to a lecture by the Secretary.

A resolution was adopted endorsing the platform of the "American Party."

The ministers of the place rendered efficient aid in the work of the meeting.

The next annual meeting is to be held on the third Tuesday of October, 1876, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and the first quarterly meeting is to be held at McLean, on the third Tuesday in January, 1876.

EDWIN BARNETSON, Sec'y.

Correspondence.

Passed on Before.

I have just learned of the death of an esteemed brother in the ministry and true friend of our reform work, Rev. Alfred Freeman, whose decease occurred at Harmon Station, Ill., Oct. 3d, 1875, of typhoid fever. His last words were indicative of his whole Christian life. When he became conscious that his departure was at hand, he said to his wife, "You will stand by the truth," to which she assented; and his reply was, "That's right," and closing his eyes fell asleep in Jesus.

J. P. STODDARD.

Don't Drift.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—A remark by one who recently subscribed to your valuable paper is worthy of record to encourage you in your arduous and self-denying labors. When I called for the payment he handed it with this remark: "I find that I have drifted." "Drifted!" said I. "Yes," he replied, "fifteen years ago I held the views of that paper, and they are right, but I see them now as if I had forgotten, and now recovered them. Yes, I find that I have drifted. It is right, and I like it."

Let the friends of the Cynosure be active. There are many who have drifted from the charming islands of clear convictions and sentitiveness of principle to whom the Cynosure would restore delight therein. Truth and right are too precious to be tampered with. Better have bogus dollars than bogus principles. X.

One of a Thousand.

TERRYSVILLE, Conn.

Enclosed find P. O. money order for ten dollars towards the securing the very liberal offer of Mr. Carpenter, of a home for the National Christian Association. May the responses to the circular issued in the number of July 15th come in so rapidly and heavy laden, that the room for daily prayer-meeting (or so intended) may be speedily occupied for that purpose. And then may we not look for the friends of the cause to take courage and press forward and the fearful (to appearances a class very numerous) to come out of their hiding places.

Lately the craft (Freemasons) took a walk out, in Hartford, no doubt to please the boys, and scatter some bait. May the time soon come when they and their doings will, be better read and understood. Yours truly,

C. R. WILLIAMS.

OUR MAIL.

L. L. Martin, Somerville, Ind., writes:

"Your paper is just what the public wants. I am glad there is such a paper in circulation. But many of its readers would be surprised to find how many there are ignorant of its existence, who otherwise would be glad to subscribe for it."

Rev. A. Hard, Painted Post, N. Y., sends a donation to the Publishing House, and says;

"I marvel that the Carpenter subscriptions go so slow. What does it mean?"

H. W. Clark, Geneva, Wis., writes:

"I intend to canvass the town of Geneva, and get up a club of subscribers for the Cynosure. I should like to spend a good deal of time and money in the reform."

Samuel Bingham, Newark, Ind., orders the Cynosure to be sent to a subscriber in Marseilles, and writes:

"The lodge is very strong there, and is mostly made up of hard cases. One high Mason told me not long ago that the Masonic oath was higher and above all other oaths."

Dr. H. W. Marsh, Elmwood, Ill., writes:

"I am pressing the business in season and out of season but I find that the best way to work is to hunt up friends, save young men, and keep money out of the lodge, and waste no time in arguing with Masons or "jacks."

We think Mr. Marsh understands the case, and advise our friends to note the results of his efforts and go and do likewise.

James T. Russell, Rome, Pa., writes:

"We have had a convention in our new Wesleyan church in Vought Hollow, on the 22rd and 24th of Oct. Bro. Wheeler a seceding Mason of three degrees, was present and addressed the meeting, dealing heavy blows on Freemasonry. He said the books that were printed exposing Masonry were all true. We are gaining on the enemy in this part of Pennsylvania."

James Kilgore, Mercer, Pa., aged 77 years, writes:

"You have my best wishes and prayers for the success of the cause in which you are engaged. My soul shall pray for Zion still while life or breath remains."

Miss Charlier, Brattleboro, Vt., writes:

"New England and especially Massachusetts, from which Vermont takes its cue, is more devoted to Masonry, I think, than to its religion."

She asks for extra copies of the Cynosure to send to clergymen who belong to the lodge.

Asa Haskins, Thompson, Ia., writes:

"Our new county is overrun with secret society office seekers, but I do not vote for any man until I know he is clear of the halter. I am in for the political contest, so if I live to vote at the next Presidential election you may count me one for Audubon county."

Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake, Ind., sends five names and writes:

"I had six names; one was our circuit preacher (U. B.) When I obtained his name he seemed all right, but last Sunday he told me he could not take the paper. He said he was no secret society man, but didn't wish to do anything against them. The Master says, "He that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.'"

"Thos. Graefe, Berlin, O., writes:

"I receive your welcome paper regularly and would not be without it. It stands up for the truth and shows that not all have bowed the knee to that beast that maketh war with the saints. You may put me down as a life subscriber and soldier for the truth. I am trying to get some subscribers although secrecy is strong in this county. It would be a great help if some lecturer would visit us."

A. J. Weaver, East Sandy, Pa., writes:

"May God bless the Anti-masonic work.'"

C. F. Obermeyer, Farmington, Mo. writes:

"I am a pastor of a German Lutheran congregation of this place, and not only am I, but my congregation is opposed to secret societies in every shape or form. One paragraph of our constitution distinctly says, 'A member of a secret society cannot as such become a member of our congregation.' I will try to extend the circulation of the Cynosure. We need a paper like that in this town with five or six lodges. It will be up-hill work, but then you know there is nothing like trying."

Lesson for Nov. 21.—Jesus the King.

SCRIPTURE.—John xvii. 33-38. Commit 36-38; Primary Verse, 36.

33 Then Pilate entered into the judgment hall again, and called Jesus and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me:

35 Pilate answered, Am I Jew? Thine own nation and the chief priests have delivered thee unto me; what hast thou done?

36 Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

HIS KINGDOM.

1.—Its nature. vr. 36; Rom. xiv. 17; 1 Cor. xv. 50; vr. 37.

2.—Its subjects.

a. Are peaceful. vr. 36; Matt. xxvi. 52; Rom. xii. 19; 2 Cor. x. 4.

b. Hear his voice. vr. 37; John vi. 45; x. 26, 27, 47, 17.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

Many have confused notions of the trial of our Lord from missing the point brought out in this passage. The Jewish judges dealt with him on religious grounds; charges of blasphemy were brought against him, and sentence was given on those charges. See Matt. xxvi. 65 and Luke xxii. 71. But they could not put him to death; the Roman concurrence must be had. The Roman law, however, took no note of such matters (see Acts xxiii. 29), so they must bring some political or civil charge. Hence the shifting of their ground before Pilate. See Luke xxiii. 2. "This fellow perverting the nation and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar." This was another matter altogether, and their urging it was in pursuit of the plan to 'catch him in his words" described in Mark xii. 13–17, which see. It was moreover the basest hypocrisy. They care for giving tribute to Caesar! In the light of these facts only can we understand this momentous interview. . . .

(v. 38.) This is one of the saddest, but one of the most suggestive verses in the Bible. Pilate is a high official, a Roman, well educated, enjoying the ripest results of Greek and Roman research; and here he is in a supreme moment of his life, not in idle scorn, but in bitter despair, confessing that he had no hope of getting "truth." It is the best comment on 1 Cor. i. 19–23. "The world by wisdom knew not God." It is as if he said, "Oh, truth! where is truth? Everybody says he has it. It is everywhere, it is nowhere. It is the dream of the enthusiast. I cease to expect it." .

But a man otherwise innocent is not to lose his life because he still dreams this dream. So he goes forth to the Jews, and pronounces the verdict of his conscience. "I find in him no fault." This is the vindication of Jesus. He was no felon, or malefactor, as represented. He was indeed bearing the burden laid on him of his Father, for us; and this his Father showed him by saving him from a felon's grave, and placing him with the "rich in his death," (Isa. liii. 9, compared with Matt. xxvii. 57). . . .

What a moment in the life of Pilate! Christ is before him. He has the opportunity to learn the truth, to do justly, and to defeat cruel wrong. But he lost it for ever. How can we tell when an opportunity comes to us to choose between truth and lies, between the favor of men and that of God, between advantage to us from men and honor from the Lord? Who knows when his life is passing through such a crisis?—S. S. World.

Home and Health Hints.

Winter Underclothing for Women and Girls.

The simplifying of women's dress is a matter of very great importance, and touches the welfare of the family in a variety of ways. Health, wealth, and ease are all concerned in this matter, for the multiplicity of unnecessary garments worn by women through all stages of their existence interferes materially with all of these things. The first cost of material, the cost of making, which, if it is not paid for in money, must be in health, and the useless labor of washing a half dozen garments, where one or two are all that warmth or looks demand, make a large sum when you take it from all the weeks and years of a growing family's life—a sum of money and strength which hard-working parents can badly afford to waste.

Soft red flannel of good quality is the best material for the new undergarments, and is worn by women who pay much attention to the niceties of the toilette as well as by those who look only to utility and durability. By using red silk for bindings and white sewing silk for stitchings, this material can be made to look extremely well.

The combination garment can be made by using the ordinary undervest as far as the waist, and the underdrawers below the waist. The drawers should be made to fold around the knee, and long stockings should draw over them. If a child's dress is in question, a high-necked waist of cotton is the next garment, and it should be furnished with buttons at the lower edge to suspend the stockings and skirts. The stockings should have two loops of narrow tape sewed on either side of the top, and a band of elastic, with a loop at one end and an extra piece of elastic sewed on, about four inches from the other end, to form an A, with buttons upon each foot, to which the loops of the stockings fit, should be used to suspend them.

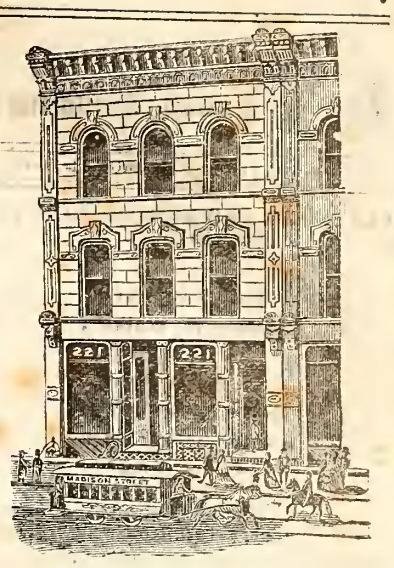
Next should come a woolen skirt of the same material as the drawers, and over that the dress. In this way your girls are as simply and as sensibly dressed as your boys, and that is an immense gain in time and trouble. Of course any mother of taste will see how easily she can make this underwear form part of a pretty costume. It is only necessary to have the stockings match the underclothes and the dress to be slightly looped or tucked-up over the scarlet flannel skirt, to make a charmingly effective peasant costume. The flannel can be varied in color to suit different requirements, but it would be safe to say that for eight or nine months in the year such a dress as we have described could be worn with comfort, substituting new and thick flannel for old and worn, as the weather grows cold, and the reverse for the opposite change. Two suits of scarlet flannel and one of blue would clothe a child as thoroughly and much more becomingly and healthily than the ten or a dozen suits of merino, pique, silk, cotton, and muslin which are now found to be necessary, and which are perpetually becoming unseasonable, or outgrown, or old-fashioned, or something which necessitates a total change in the wardrobe once in every six months, in spite of the unreasonable quantity prepared.—Inter Ocean.

Farm and Garden.

A Warning to Boys.—A little boy, eleven years of age, in Iowa, a few days since led a horse to water, and tied the halter strap around his arm. The horse took fright, ran away and dragged and kicked the little fellow until he died. It is never safe to place one's self in a position where if even a very improbable accident should occur, serious results are almost certain. Don't tie yourself to a horse or cow; don't stand in front of a reaper or mower; don't leave the traces until the last in taking horses from the wagon; don't trust too much to the quiet disposition of a bull.

Golden Rule.—The horse of a pious man living in Massachusetts happening to stray into the road, his neighbor put him into the pound. Meeting the owner soon after, he told him what he had done; "And if I catch him in the road again I'll do it again." "Neighbor," replied the other, "not long since, I looked out in my window in the night, and saw your cattle in my meadow, and I drove them out and shut them in your yard; and I'll do it again.

Measuring Corn in the Crib.—Let me give you the rule and the reason: 1,728 cubic inches make one cubic foot; 2,150 2-5 cubic inches make one bushel, or 4,300 4-5 of corn in the cob, allowing that corn of average quality will shell out one-half its bulk. Now take the fraction 1,728 divided by 4,300 4-5 and reduce it to a decimal, thus: 1,728 divided by 4,300 4-5 equals .4 and an inconsiderable trifle if carried out. So in average corn, get the solid contents in feet of your crib, and multiply by 4, cutting off one right hand figure for tenths, and you have the number of bushels in the crib; that is, there will be four-tenths as many bushels as there are solid feet of corn in the crib."



Upon the same subject E. C. H., writing from Marshfield, Ind., says: "I noticed in the Inter-Ocean a question asked by a subscriber from Irvington, Iowa: 'Why taking five-twelfths of the solid contents of a crib of corn gives number of bushels in same?' Does he mean solid inches, feet or yards? If he will take the solid contents of a crib of corn in feet and fraction of a foot, and take four-ninths of the product, he will then have the number of bushels, providing he figures twenty-seven inches to the bushel. I cannot give any rule or reason why four-ninths of the product of the solid contents of the crib will give the exact number of bushels, but I discover that it will do so.—Inter-Ocean.

African Slave-Trade.

In a chapter upon the slave-trade, Mr. Southworth, in his volume of African travels, says:

The statistics of the Northern African slave-trade are, unhappily, the most perplexing portions of the history of this atrocious traffic. Yet, from many sources, I think I may be safe in saying that the export of slaves from the country lying between the Red Sea and the Great Desert is 25,000 annually, distributed as follows: From Abyssinia, carried to Jaffa or Gallabat, 10,000; issuing by other routes of Abyssinia, 5,000; by the Blue Nile, 3,000; by the White Nile, 7,000.

To obtain these 25,000 slaves, and sell them in market, more than 15,000 are annually killed, and often the mortality reaches the terrible figure of 50,000. It is a fair estimate to say that 50,000 children are stolen from their parents every year by persons who have the names and reputations of being civilized and educated. I cannot stop here. The horrible figures must march on. The abduction of these 50,000 causes heart-burnings at home, and great mental suffering is, in Africa, the most potent cause of death. Need we again go forward and inquire to what extent these slaves spread contagion,—as to how far they are an unhealthy element in the country? If we extend the bounds of inquiry to the northern and western coasts, and wherever the sailing craft carry off their cargoes in defiance of law—if I include all Africa—more than 1,000,000 souls will be compromised in the number annually carried away, killed, or made broken-hearted by the slave-trade.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to the Treasurer, H. L. Kellogg 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The National Christian Association.

President.—Philo Carpenter.

Directors.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. K. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

Corresponding Secretary.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Recording Secretary and Treasurer—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Av., Chicago.

General Agent and Lecturer.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer, and drafts or P. O. orders made payable to him. The general correspondence, inquiries, etc., should be directed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY NOV. 11, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

For the information of all concerned and to correct any misapprehensions, the Board of Directors submit the following statement of facts concerning the history and objects of this organization.

THE MOTIVES WHICH LED TO IT WERE

(1.) To save legacies to the anti-secret cause. (2.) To create a fund for national use against the secret lodges which corrupt and endanger the church and nation. (3.) And especially, to secure a munificent donation offered by Philo Carpenter in the city of Chicago.

ITS HISTORY.

Such an incorporation having been urged and recommended in previous years, and in the conversation with individuals, Mr. Carpenter proposed, on certain conditions, to donate certain real estate to the cause. Whereupon, at the National Anniversary in Monmouth, in May, 1873, on recommendation of the Business Committee (L. N. Stratton, chairman) a committee on Incorporation was voted, and J. Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, and Joseph Travis were appointed as that committee. At the next business session (Friday morning, May 16th,) this committee reported recommending that the matter of incorporation be referred to the Executive Committee to carry out the wishes of the Convention and incorporate if practicable; which report was adopted.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee: Chicago, June, 7th, 1873: —The subject of the incorporation was referred to J. M. Wallace, C. R. Hagerty, and E. A. Cook. Further action was had in July, next month; also in December following; also Feb. 28th, 1874; April 24th, 1874; and May 23d, 1874, when the Committee reported the work completed, and the incorporation certified by the Secretary of State of Illinois.

The legal members of this incorporation are now the following, who have all equal rights and priviledges with each other:

Philo Carpenter,	J. Blanchard,
A. Wait,	O. F. Lumry,
J. G. Terrill,	C. R. Hagerty,
E. A. Cook,	H. L Kellogg,

In all forty-six men, composing some of the best and ablest minds in the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Methodist, Wesleyan, Free Methodist United Brethren, United Presbyterian, Reformed Presbyterian and one or two other denominations, of Christians.

OBJECTIONS.

All that have come to our knowledge are answered by the following statement:

The character of the forty-six members is a sufficient guaranty against local or personal interests. They are all men who have given time, money, and character to the cause. The suggestion that these forty-six men would pervert this great and holy cause to selfish or sinister ends is an unjust and serious misrepresentation. Thus far every one who has been nominated has been elected. The next annual business meeting is in June, 1875; it will then be in their power to add to their numbers, or inaugurate such amendments or alterations in the act of incorporation as they may choose.

Again, it is not, as has been alledged, "a close corporation." A close corporation elects its own officers, which are commonly permanent or nearly so; are answerable only to themselves, making reports only when they choose; and can if they choose, sit with closed doors; and is self-perpetuating, choosing its own members and filling all vacancies when they occur.

The National Christian Association differs from a close corporation in all these particulars:—1st. It is required by law to provide for a public anniversary, or popular meeting every year, which popular meeting officers itself, choosing a new set of officers by popular vote every year. 2d, The incorporation is compelled by law to report all its proceedings to this popular meeting every year; and in case of suspicion or dissatisfaction the anniversary can appoint visitors, or a commission to sit in judgment on and condemn or approve any part of the action of the incorporated body. The anniversary therefore, self-officered and manned, holds the life of the incorporation in its hands. The very fact that it is required to report to the anniversary, recognizes the dependence of the incorporation on the Christian masses represented in that annual meeting; recognizes also the right of that meeting to approve, censure, or condemn; and as it elects its own officers, they will entertain the motions of the assembled people, nd execute their will.

Nor is it a close corporation in the election of its members. The chairman of the anniversary, chosen by popular vote, becomes, from the instant of his election to the chair, a full member of the incorporation for that year, and until his successor is elected, thus bringing a new and able man into the incorporation every year from the popular meeting to represent and insist on the wishes of the people. And this member from the chair of the popular meeting is backed and sustained by any number of honorary members whom the popular meeting may see fit to elect; who have a right to sit in the meeting of the corporation, make motions, second motions, and speak at will. To say that a body so made up and managed from year to year is a "close corporation," is to misapprehend or misstate it. All that could be done beyond this would be to throw the management of the Chicago property into the hands of the annual popular meetings, wherever they may be held; which would be equivolent to dispensing with courthouses, State Houses, etc., and carrying on the affairs of society by the votes of a crowd.

The need of such a body is manifest. If we dispense with all corporations, we should dispense with the Free Methodist Academy (Mr. Robert's) at North Chili, N. Y., and the Wesleyan Book Rooms at Syracuse. If we leave the reform to "individual enterprise" we destroy it. If we unite in the National Christian Association we can change, alter, or amend its organization at will; then each Wesleyan, or United Brethren or other faithful minister will have the whole half-million of Christians represented in this body to stand by, second, and sustain every blow he strikes on the flinty ramparts of darkness and despotism.

The New York Observer thinks the liberality of some professed Christians who are willing to throw the Bible out of schools at the beck of some German infidel or popish prelate is the thinnest kind of sentiment. It says,

"If the people in any community object to the use of that, or any book, they may express their objection, and their voice is final. But there is no city, township, or district in the United States, of which we have any knowledge, where the people are opposed to the use of the Bible in schools. The Roman Catholics publicly and persistently declare they are not opposed to it. And those who are opposed are so few that they cannot insist that the majority shall give up to them. Therefore there is no argument in favor of casting out the Bible. It is just as proper to use it, if it is good for school purposes, as it is to use Wilson's History or Davies' Arithmetic If the people do not object, why in the name of its Almighty Author, we ask, do Christian ministers seek to cast it out?"

HON. J. B. WALKER on Saturday night, Oct 30th ult., replied at large to an infidel lecture by a Judge Booth of Chicago, before what is called "The Philosphical Society" in this city. The lecture of Mr. Walker is given entire in the Chicago Times, and is a most masterly production. No brief sketch could do anything but travesty or misrepresent it. We shall therefore attempt none. It is a cool, clear and philosophical demolition of the rehash of stale objections to the proofs of the resurrection of Christ, and the doctrine of salvation based on it. If Mr. Walker's lecture could be revised and reproduced in one of the Chicago dailies, and every evangelical church in the North-west would purchase a supply for its members, it would be a wise outlay.

PROF. DAVID SWING, it seems, is to leave Chicago. If so, six months after his departure he will have passed from the popular mind, leaving scarce one useful, substantial idea or principle behind him. But he will leave behind him the statement that our Christian Government whose Supreme Court at Washington swears its witnesses on the Bible "has no more right to teach the Bible than the Koran." He will pass away like a fog illuminated by moonlight; leaving a cold dark chill on the minds of his admirers, no two of whom will agree as to what he believed. And he will leave in them a general aversion to divine truth which he has confounded with the fag ends of expired errors like Indian arrow-heads which he has exhumed from the fields of dead controversies long past.

THE HOMEOPATHISTS: DR. E. H. PRATT. --We have read quite through the introductory lecture of Dr. Pratt Jr., of Wheaton to the 16th session of the Hahneman Medical College of Chicago, Oct. 11, 1875. We are tempted to insert this whole lecture for the pleasure and profit of our readers. It is indeed a rare production altogether above and beyond the ordinary addresses on such occasions. Take the following as a specimen:

"Do you think anatomy dry? I think it is fascinating. Are you inclined to sleep over it? You will certainly wake up over it before the close of the term. There is a veritable charm in using the scalpel upon bodies just like our own; in handling blood vessels that but a few days ago held human blood; nerves along which the vital forces so lately sped; muscles only just lifeless; eyes that so recently were windows of a soul; a brain where thought itself resided; a heart but lately stilled. We seem to be taking to pieces our friends, our very selves, and it is indeed a dull head that will nod in the brief time allowed for stooping over mortal remains."

There; if anatomy was ever set to music it is in the above musical periods. We predict a brilliant future for this young physician and so will every one who reads this "Introductory Lecture." By the way, though a townsman of ours, we have never heard his name connected with the Masons. But we cannot conceive that a physician who is at the same time a philosopher, should not loathe an order so wretched and contemptible as Freemasonry appears in the writings of the noble Dr. Rush of Philadelphia.

"A CHRISTLESS ORDER."—There is an excellent editorial with this heading given by The Christian Instructor, United Presbyterian. In the old-time Morgan Anti-masonic discussions though we read the papers of the time, we never recollect a single article with the above or an equivalent caption. The present reform, like that in Scotland from popery, promoted by John Knox, makes Christ "Crown Rights" the basis of the whole movement. That revolution of the popular faith from popery to Christ was accomplished without a drop of human blood; and no popular movement, so far as our reading extends, ever failed which was based on a national and scriptural assertion of the character and claims of Christ.

"ALL THINGS TO ALL MEN."

A lady criticises our consistency. She says, "You say you are a Covenanter, when with Reformed Presbyterians; a United Presbyterian, when with them; a Wesleyan with the Wesleyans; and the freest of Free Methodists when with them. How do you vindicate your consistency?"

I answer: As Franklin? deceived the British Ministry by stating the exact truth. Had I been in the Grey Friars church-yard, I would have knelt and signed the covenant with my blood, as many Covenanters did, to sustain "Christ's Crown and Covenant;" and I am now, with my life, which is my blood, upholding Christ's "Crown and Covenant" against the dark clutches of the lodge, which strips him of both. I am a "United Presbyterian" because they go with me to the polls and vote to snatch the Constitution of the United States, the court-house and the law from the same dark clutches. I was a Wesleyan before there were any Wesleyans; because before that interesting denomination was born I held and taught and suffered for all that drove them from the church ot their choice. And I am of the United Brethren, because I believe in that godly people and their godly bishops, who travel and "confirm the churches," as Paul did, in the love of Christ and the hatred of the devil's counterfeits and substitutes for his atonement.

I hope this lady who criticises us is answered. I belong to the Constitution of the United States, and would shed my blood for it; though I abhorred its old-time surrenders of fugitive slaves; and I now abhor its omission of God and Christ from its articles. So I belong to and would die with these beloved brethren of various denominatial names, because they belong to Christ and defend Christianity.

—The recommendation of the Indiana brethren about market reports will be attended to.

—Interesting reports from Elder Barlow, and Bro. Remington, Secretary of the Michigan meeting, are at hand for next number; also a good letter from abroad. We wish too, to say a word in response to Bro. Hankins' letter of last week if there is room.

—No one should fail of reading the veyr able appeal of the Farwell Hall committee of Chicago laymen to the School Board. It is a grand and manful address of men "Who know their rights,

And knowing dare maintain."

—McGeoghegan, the Irishman who has fallen among lodges in New York, is represented to be a person of some literary entertainments by a Louisville paper, which also informs us of a public address he once made in Kentucky in which he denounced the Freemasons; but, unable to withstand the opposition he aroused he left the State. The strong likeness of this case to that of Morgan is, we see, everywhere noticed, which is one proof that the revival of the history of that tragedy has not been in vain.

—Friend Millard of Comanche, Iowa, sends an interesting reminiscence of Dr. Fulton of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn: "I am pleased to hear that J. D. Fulton has come out in Brooklyn all right. I knew him when he was a young stripling, and also his father. His father was our pastor at Colorse, Oswego Co,, N. Y., in 1828 and 9, and one of the most devoted ministers of the Baptist denomination, and was thoroughly anti on Masonry and Odd-fellowship, and all other sins of the church. His name was John J. Fulton, and I think his son is a 'chip of the old block.' He is a powerful preacher and is doing all he can for reform. He preached an able sermon sermon some two months ago in his own pulpit on the subject of Common School Education. I think we shall yet see him on the walls of Zion speaking in thunder tones against all unrighteousness, whether it be Masonry or intemperance, or any other secret combined order."

"It will be," says The Nation, "a sore day for the United States when the people of this country allow themselves to be seduced into the belief that the church of Rome has become reconciled to republicanism, or to liberty of thought, or to anything else which recognizes the existence of any rule of conduct, in small things or in great, not furnished by herself, or that the Catholic clergy have the least intention of putting themselves on the same level with, or use the same weapons as the Protestant clergy on the school question, or any other question which is likely to affect their own power, either nearly or remotely, directly or indirectly.

News of the Week.

The Elections.

The election of Tuesday last was probably the most hotly contested Chicago has ever experienced. The well known determination of the Hesing mob to obtain the election cost what fraud it might was an incentive for the greatest exertions to protect the polls. Business was generally suspended and merchants stood by the polls all day to prevent fraud. Ballot box guards were armed and ready at nearly every precinct to maintain the rights of citizens, the police generally aiding the disreputable crowd. In spite of every precaution some illegal voting was done, but after all Hesing and his mob were clearly defeated by about 4,000 majority.——In nearly all the States where an election was held the Republicans gained the day. In Mississippi the Democratic victory was complete. In New York, Fred. Seward and Gen. Spinner were defeated by the Democratic candidates; but the Legislature is Republican in both branches, and the mob and ring rule in New York and Brooklyn was broken. Rice and Hartrauft were elected Republican governors of Mass. and Pa. respectively.

The Country.

Bishop Dagget, of the Methodist church, South, led in prayer at the unveiling of the statue which was set up in Richmond, Virginia, in honor of "Stonewall" Jackson, on Tuesday, the 26th ult. Governor Kemper made the introductory address, and General Joseph E. Johnston acted as Chief Marshal. The several negro organizations refused to participate.——The public debt statement shows a decrease of the national indebtedness of $4,096,015.69, for the month ending October 30.——Mrs. Lincoln, who is still stopping in Springfield, Illinois, walks out occasionally, and appears to have improved in health.——President Grant is not to abandon the peace policy towards the Indians. All rumors and fears to the contrary are, therefore, unwarranted. In reply to a protest by a delegation of clergymen who deprecated any return to the old extermination programme, the President said that he did not regard the humane method of dealing with the Indians as a failure, and that he is to pursue it during the period of his administration in such a way that it will become so firmly established that his successors must continue it as an unavoidable policy.——It is reported that many of the liquor dealers in Chicago will be arrested for violating the revenue laws. Warrants for the arrest of over ninety dealers were issued last Thursday.

Foreign.

Cardinal Antonelli, the Pope's Secretary of State and leading adviser, has written to each of the Romish Bishops in Germany, inquiring what means should be used to have a friendly understanding brought about between the Emperor of Germany and the Pope and Vatican.——Recent word from Mexico says that five of the wretched actors in the murder of Rev. J. L. Stevens at Ahualuleo have just been executed for the terrible crime.——In one of the recent terrible thunder storms in France, 596 sheep were killed out of a flock of 1,800, by one flash of lightning.——During the investigations of the vault beneath the Inquisition at Rome, five immured skeletons have been found, and skulls and fragments of bodies are frequently turned up.——Advices from Cape Palmas on the West coast of Africa, have been received up to the 11th of October. A Liberian force of nine hundred troops had attacked some native villages, but were repulsed, and were obliged to retire, losing twenty-four killed and wounded. They also abandoned their cannon. It is said that the disturbances result from the Liberian law prohibiting direct trade between the natives and foreigners.

Religious Intelligence.

—Gospel meetings similar to those in Vermont and elsewhere, are to be held through Maine by the Y. M. C. A. of that State.

—The Indian Commission of the Protestant Episcopal church is $10,000 in debt. The receipts of the commission have been larger this year than last year. Its indebtedness has been caused by the growth of its work.

—The congregation presided over so long by Dr. Bachus—the First Presbyterian Church of Baltimore—has accepted his resignation with great regret, and has constituted him an emeritus pastor.

—The voluntary system does not seem to be a success with the German Roman Catholics; since the contributions intended to replace the Government stipends which have been withdrawn scarcely amount to fifty per cent. of the required amount.

—The Rev. Dr. McLaren's confirmation as Bishop of Illinois is said to be assured, every Diocese which has voted as yet having consented. The only objection which has been raised against the Bishop-elect is the short time that he has been connected with the Episcopal church, but this, it is thought, will not weigh against him.

—At a crowded meeting held in Glasgow under the presidency of the Earl of Galloway, resolutions were passed declaring that the Vatican decrees, claiming supreme power, removed the Papacy from the domain of mere religion, and called for resistance; that the Papacy is a most perfect system of tyranny, and its reappearance in Britain demands the attention of every friend of liberty.

—A Protestant minister in France, M. Lacheret, has been fined 50 francs and costs for distributing tracts and holding an unlawful meeting at St. Aubin. The complaint was made by the parish priest. Three or four of the attendants at the service had not received written invitations, and an open window enabled passers-by to listen to what passed within.

—In the Micronesian Mission of the American Board there is on the island of Apaiang a village school under the care of Paul and Sarah, whose united salaries for the year will not exceed four dollars. The heathens furnish them some food, and the Christian natives pay the quarterly tax of one shell of cocoanut oil, worth five cents, to the King for the support of teachers. These two persons are certainly actuated by no selfish motive in their devotion to missionary labor.

—The revival meetings in Brooklyn under Moody and Sankey are continued with greatly increasing interest and a cordial union of the different pastors and churches in the work.

—Rev. J. D. Fulton has resigned the pastorate of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, not willing to further give occasion for strife to a minority of the members. It is hinted that his great plainness of speech and uncompromising position toward the infidel lodges.

—A Protestant mission was started in Madeira island last spring by a Scotch Presbyterian minister of Lisbon, a native of Madeira, who was spending the winter in the island. These are the first Protestant services in the native language of Madeira held since the persecution of 30 years ago.

Sabbath Rest.

Sabbath of the saints of old;
Day of Mysteries manifold,
By the great Creator blest,
Type of His eternal rest;
I with thoughts of Thee would seek
To sanctify the closing week.

Resting from His work, the Lord
Spake to-day the hallowed word,
And, his wondrous labors done,
Now the Everlasting Son
Gave to heaven and earth a sign
Of a wonder more divine.

Resting from His work to-day
In the tomb the Saviour lay:
Still he slept, from head to feet
Shrouded in the winding-sheet,
Lying in the rock alone,
Hidden by the sealed stone.

Late at even there was seen
Watching long the Magdalene;
Early, ere the break of day,
Sorrowful she took her way
To the holy garden glade
Where her buried Lord was laid.

So with Thee till life shall end
I would solemn vigil spend;
Let me hew Thee, Lord, a shrine
In this rocky heart of mine,
Where in pure, embalmed cell
None but Thou may'st ever dwell.

Myrrh and spices will I bring,
Pure affection's offering;
Close the door from sight and sound
Of the busy world around,
And in patient watch remain
Till my Lord appear again.

Four Suggestions to those who Read the Bible.

First.—Read it as God's message to you. Pause often at a passage—one, perhaps, that you do not understand fully; and think well, this is something my Father, the "Father of mercies," had in his heart to say to me; some word of love, or sympathy, or direction—I must get its meaning. Pause, especially at those precious passages that have become life to the dead—such as, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life;" or those, that have been an unspeakable solace to the dying, as "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." Pause, tarry, linger about them like that impotent man by the pool of Bethesda—an angel may come and stir the waters.

Second.—Search the Scriptures. Like the traveler lost in the forest, searching out his way; like the mariner, in dark and tempestuous and dangerous seas, searches his chart for sunken rocks, or dangerous headlands, that he may direct the ship in the safe channel; like the diver, who, with hazard and peril, searches for pearls and diamonds among rocks and shells, many fathoms down in the dark seas; like one who searches for hidden treasure, search in deep and tremendous earnestness and your labor shall not be in vain.

Third.—Cherish a love for it, and cultivate a delight in reading it. I have heard with astonishment, of a French nobleman, who read every day three chapters, with head uncovered and upon his knees; also of a poor blind girl of the same country, who having obtained the Gospel of Mark, in raised letter, and learned to read it on the ends of her fingers, till the sense of touch thickening and hardening, she cut it away in order to make it more sensitive, only to destroy it. At this sad discovery she pressed the Word of God to her lips, and in tears said: "Farewell, farewell, sweet word of my Heavenly Father—food for my soul, I must part with thee." But finding, to her surprise, that the lips, more sensitive than the fingers, discovered the forms of the letters, she read all night with a heart overflowing with love. Dr. Elliott, pouring over his Bible for hours together, at four, seven and five, says: "I am reading news." Augustine, after his conversion, loses all relish, even, for his favorite author, Cicero, and with love, enthusiasm and great joy, devotes himself to this new and wondrous book, reading it like a message of love.

Can we get this relish? Can we catch this spirit?

Fourth.—Live it! An Indian nobleman, Godless and Christless, having listened to some boys reading a chapter in the Gospel, in a mission school, said: "Well, if you only live that chapter as well as you have read it, I will never say another word against Christianity."

The life is the best of all testimonies for Christ. The "living epistle known and read of all men," are those that most effectually pursuade the unbelieving. Admiration for the innocent and godly lives of the saints, have led more than Justin Martyr to the foot of the cross.

Let not your walk be a lifeless book, but a living, speaking, acting Christ.—Christian Press.

A Revival Incident.

I had left Brownville, and was commencing labors in the neighborhood of Le Royville, when, of a sudden, the Lord bade me in a very urgent manner, to go to Governeur, as I understood immediately. I had two or three appointments to fulfill in the place where I then was; and, as Rev. Daniel Nash had just joined me, I requested him to go to Governeur, survey the ground, leave an appointment for me to preach there, and come back and report. He went; and returned, saying that he found some conviction on the minds of some professors of religion, but, on the whole, the state of religion was very discouraging. At my request, he returned immediately to Governeur, to attend a meeting of the church to prepare for my coming. Two or three days later I followed him, and arrived in the village an entire stranger, just as the meeting was about to be dismissed. I rode directly to the church, and entered just as Bro. Nash had risen to dismiss the meeting. He saw me come in, and paused. I went directly to him; and he took me right in his arms, and then turned and introduced me to the church. I preached that evening. The house was full, and the spirit and power of God were present. The next morning I found the village excited. I sallied forth to converse with whomsoever I should meet. In passing a tailor shop, I observed a number of persons within, and heard them conversing about the sermon of the night before. I stepped in, and found myself in the midst of a company of Universalists, headed by a Dr. Spencer, a hotel-keeper of the village. I proposed to discuss the question of Universalism with the Doctor; and after settling the preliminaries, the discussion commenced. The Doctor's friends rallied around him, and evidently anticipated a triumph. They soon saw their mistake, and went out, one by one, leaving their leader to get out of the difficulty as best he could. I followed him up till he subsided. His wife was a member of the church. Before night I learned that he went home so much agitated that his wife inquired what was the matter. He at first made no reply; but she said, "Doctor, have you not seen Mr. Finney?" He burst into tears, and replied: "Yes, and he has turned my own weapons upon my own head." He soon after obtained a hope in Christ. God was perfectly faithful in fulfilling the promise to pour out his Spirit, as he had assured me that he would. A revival commenced immediately, and went forward with great power.—Pres. Finney.

"Of an Evening."

"Of an evening." Never mind how the colloquial solecism came in. It can be explained without any grave imputation on the intelligence or morality of the English-speaking race. When a good mother mentions that a friend of her children came in "of an evening," she has an ellipsis in her own mind. It was not by formal invitation; not on the occasion of a party; not a sojourn at the house; it was an easy, friendly, unceremonious visit of one who knew he so stood to the family that he could drop in "of an evening" without taking or making much trouble. And a good deal of the grave business of life is done "of an evening."

The Browns have a little box of a place near the Thompsons and there are no other neighbors. That led to their coming "of an evening;" and Brown, who was in the "broker business," talked so hopefully of his doings, that years after, Thompson, getting tired of the slow and uncertain gains in "stuffs and prints," got out of them and turned broker. It led to more than that. Little Charlie Thompson thought Minnie Brown an angel in wisdom and beauty; he carried her image to boarding-school; he decided matters by her own opinions; enjoyed his holidays the most when she was around, and could run over "of an evening;" they were dull when she was not at home; and after many ups and downs of feeling, some coolnesses and quarrels, and some waiting on one another, Minnie will decide, years hence, to take "Old Charlie," for better or for worse.

A few young men from the same neighborhood and school are in business in the same city. They are occupied during the day, but they go together "of an evening." The leading spirit among them is a lawyer, rising in politics. They all look up to him. He is quick, smart and dashing. He introduces cards, wine and "friends of his" of doubtful character. He is proud to show "the fellows" something of life. Now please to read the following letter and comments:

"Charity Hospital.

Rev. Sir: The bearer of this is a poor man, who has been in this hospital for treatment, and I am sorry to say, without getting any good. He is a sound Presbyterian, and as he is without friends or money, and wants to go to Baltimore, perhaps you can aid him.

Yours truly,
Chas. P. Bowan."

The bearer represents the writer as an Episcopal clergyman. But there is no such place as "Charity Hospital" in this city, and no such P. E. clergyman as Chas. P. Bowan, The "poor man," in fact, wrote the letter himself. It was one of several, with slight variations, by the same hand. Indeed, he lives, or rather exists, by such devices. He used to be the companion "of an evening' of that rising lawyer. The lawyer has little practice, but he has made money. He also made the broken-down writer of the foregoing the wreck he is—and he did it "of an evening."

"But what can people do? The evenings are unoccupied. They want rest; they have social feeling, and must come together." Exactly; and that brings up the very point for the sake of which these paragraphs are written, how to be innocent and happy "of an evening." There should be a department for this special education in public schools. Chairs for the purpose should be endowed in the leading colleges. A national university—open to both sexes—would be well worth endowing, if a solution of this question should be gained. After all, however, the art cannot be taught separately any more than the art of getting on or the art of pleasing. Yet parents and others having the care of the young, when their attention is called to it, may move in the direction.

They can give the young ones the best accommodation the house affords, the best light and the most cheerful surroundings. To have nice rooms, swept and garnished, into which the visitors are ushered, while the sons and daughters of the home, like moles and bats, creep into dark and comfortless alcoves, is wicked. They crave for something more cheerful. Let them have it at home, and if their friends come in, let them be welcome. "My boys have a printing-press," said a wise mother, "and I let them and their friends have a whole floor." "But is not your stair-carpet ruined?" said her friend. "Well, better that than my boys," was the wise reply.

Give the young ones prints, books, music, innocent games and such material comforts as the circumstances admit and make proper. Healthy young people do not despise a bit of delicacy out of the routine of meals, and when a kind motherly hand offers and arranges it, the temptation is destroyed to smuggle "refreshments" in their rooms, or steal out to places where they are available. If a little group of young people will get "fun" out of even a jew's harp; if one of them can but whistle so as to entertain the rest; if a boy can give one of his school recitations; if they talk of objects rather than of persons; if the old folks can mingle with them with laugh and story, and cheery sympathy; if, at the right time (and if unexpectedly all the better) the fruit, or cake, or ice-cream is informally introduced, and the party breaks up with a general sense of that home being bright, happy, artless, simple, and its inmates sincere, great good is done—preventive and positive.

This subject is homely, but it is important. "Of an evening," the strong drink is sometimes consumed secretly in the rooms of boys and young men, and it is a surprise when they suddenly become unsteady. "Of an evening" in our great cities the garish lamps are lit that like the false lights of the wreckers lure to destruction. "Of an evening," the bad of both sexes watch about the corners, like beasts of prey for their victims, who ought to be in the safe shelter of cheerful homes. "Of an evening" the money-making "entertainment,"—more or less cheap—is provided, that decks vice in gay trappings, that suggests and inspires lust, and gives to awkward and shame-faced fledglings in sin a language they could not have invented, that familiarizes with crime, and facilitates impurity. "Of an evening" therefore, homes should be bright and happy, intercourse in them simple, easy and cheerful, and the atmosphere so full of truth, love, and purity, that the memory of it, when the head—now young and fair—shall be gray, would be a joy, a strength and a prophecy and image of heaven.—John Hall.

Finding one Wrong.

How many have an unholy pleasure in finding a brother in the wrong,—blazing abroad his failings, administering rebuke not in gentle forbearance and kindly expostulation, but with harsh and impatient severity! How beautifully did Jesus unite intense sensibility to sin along with tenderest compassion for the sinner! showing in this that "He knoweth our frame." Many a scholar needs gentleness in chastisement; the reverse would crush a sensitive spirit, or drive it to dispair. Jesus tenderly "considers" the case of those he disciplines. Reader, seek to mingle discipline in all your rebukes; bear with the infirmities of others; make allowance for constitutional frailties; never say harsh things if kind things will do as well; do not unnecessarily lacerate with recalling former delinquencies. In reproving another let us rather feel how much we need reproof ourselves. "Consider thyself" is a searching Scripture motto for dealing with no erring brother. Remember thy Lord's method of silencing fierce accusations,—"Let him that is without sin cast the first stone."—J. R. Macduff, D. D

The art of saying appropriate words in a kindly way is one that never goes out of fashion, never ceases to please and is within the reach of the humblest. The teacher who would be successful must cultivate the gift. If it comes hard, pray earnestly over it, just as you would for any other spiritual grace. It is one of your greatest means for doing good.

"We live," said Bishop Beveridge, ,in an age when elementary truths of the Christian religion are unknown to us who call ourselves Christians." The consequence of such ignorance is not removed in a day, and we still suffer from being in time past under teachers who were so careful in some matters to give no offense that, for that reason, they gave no instruction.

Service of the Master.

Christians acknowledge Christ to be their Master, and are disposed cheerfully to obey him; but sometimes find difficulty in knowing what to do. They would work in the Lord's vineyard, but do not discover any work ready for their hands. We suggest twelve paths of usefulness open to them.

1. They can pursuade neglecters of the sanctuary to attend it.

2. They can themselves be regularly present at the prayer meetings of the church.

3. They can be teachers in the Sunday-school.

4. They can converse with their impenitent neighbors and friends on the subject of religion, and endeavor to lead them to Chist.

5. They can drop an encouraging word in the ear of their pastor.

6. As Christians, they can speak often one to another on the things of the kingdom.

7. They can "visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions."

8. They can help forward the good cause of temperance, and benevolent enterprises generally.

9. They can aid same worthy young man who is just commencing business.

10. They can contribute to well furnish a large Home Missionary box.

11. They can imitate Christ, and show in their daily deportment what Christ wishes them to be. It is the best preaching in the world.

12. They can subscribe and pay for several copies of the Cynosure, or other religious paper and send them to some poor families who cannot afford to take the papers.

In these twelve ways—not to mention others—can they acceptably serve Him whose professed friends they are, and be blessings in their day and generation.—Adapted from Ex.

How a "Corner" is Managed.

A B and C combine their means and credits to make a corner in July. They therefore quietly begin in May to buy corn to be delivered in July. They gradually buy all the corn in the market, and, of necessity, must buy all that arrives, paying for the latter whatever is demanded. When a purchase is thus made, seller and buyer put up a margin, either in cash, or certificate, or deposit. As soon as the corner becomes known, there is an effort made to break it. The settlement takes place at 3 P. M., on the last day of the month. Those who have sold corn to the corner and have no corn to deliver, pay the difference between the price a which they sold, and the ruling price a the close of business on the last day. As the corner has thus purchased sometimes five times as much corn as there is to be had, amounting to millions of bushels, and the price has advanced ten cents a bushel, the profit is enormous. As the prices advance, additional margins are required. Those failing to put up the additional margins, lose what they had already put up. The anti-corner factions seek to so crowd sales on the corner as to exhaust its capital and credits, and render it unable it to buy at the advance prices. Thus, the corner is compelled to send out in the country and buy for cash all the corn in sight, to prevent having it rushed into Chicago at the last moment. These are exciting times. Corn at such a moment may be purchased of the corner for shipment, from six to fifteen cents a bushel less than it is selling for on 'Change for delivery during the month. Each time there is a crash, sometimes of the corner men, and at other times of the anti-corner men. The whole proceedings are of such questionable honesty, that the Legislature of Illinois has declared the operation of a corner a felony. It is nevertheless still practiced. Corners are attempted in wheat, oats, barley, pork, and lard, and some of them have been quite successful in a pecuniary way. It requires nerve, audacity, and money, or credit. Recently a bank here went into a corner, issuing its certificates of deposit for margins; the corner failed, and so did the bank, and the certificates have never been paid. —Scribner.

To do good to men is the great work of life; to make them true Christians is the greatest good we can do them. Every investigation brings us around to this point. Begin here and you are like one who strikes water from a rock on the summits of the mountains; it flows down all the intervening tracts to the very base. If we could make each man love his neighbor, we should make a happy world. The true method is to begin with ourselves and so extend the circle around us. It should be perpetually in our minds.

Children's Corner.

"I Pray into God's Ears, not his Eyes."

This childlike reply beautifully interprets the saying, four or five times repeated in the Bible, "There is no respect of persons with God."

Molly was a black girl, about eight years old, who lived in the family of our neighbor, Mr. Reeves. She seemed to be a child of rather uncommon abilities, and her quaint and decided remarks were sometimes very striking.

Mr. Reeve's oldest son, George, liked to ask her questions, pretending to hold different opinions from hers. He would endeavor to convince her something she had said or done was not right, but it must be confessed that he very seldom came off victorious.

"Molly, do you ever pray?"

She started with a surprised air, as she replied, "Yes, sir, every night."

"Do you suppose God hears you?"

"Yes, I know he does."

"Well, do you think he hears your prayers as quickly as he does those of white children?"

For full three minutes the child continued her work without speaking; then stopping in front of the lounge she slowly remarked:

"Mr. George, I pray in God's ears, not in his eyes; I reckon my voice is just like any other little girl's; and if I say what I ought to, God doesn't stop to think anything about my skin."

That was enough for George. He soon after left the room, and has never since taken the trouble to inquire into Molly's opinions.—Sel.

How Much we Talk.

It is well that all we say is not written down, not only because some of it might be rather against us, but because there would not be room for it (John xxi. 25). A curious Frenchman has lately been making a calculation, which is that a man talks on an average three hours a day, at the rate of about twenty-nine octavo pages an hour. This would make eighty-seven pages a day, about six hundred a week, which would amount to fifty-two good-sized volumes every year! And, then, multiplying this by the number of years in a man's life, what a library he would have if it all should be printed! And, too, how very little of the whole would be worth preserving, and how much he would be so glad if it had been left unsaid!—Youth's Companion.

A Good Excuse for Over-Sleeping.

The field was kept where the Mikir converts in Assam could work for their support. They were generally willing, active laborers; but at one time the missionary, the Rev. Mr. Scott, was obliged to call to account three or four of them for tardiness. They hung their heads in silence, and he was about to reprove them.

"Yes," said one, bolder than the rest, "it is our fault. We are ashamed; but last night, as we sat down to read and pray together before going to sleep, we found so many good words that we kept on reading and talking about them till the morning light came. Then we lay down and overslept our time."

On inquiry, he found that they often so spent half the night. Do you love the Bible as much as these heathen converts?

—The Bridgewater Baptist Association held its semi-centennial at Montrose, Pa., last August, and has published the interesting proceedings in pamphlet form. Elder A. L. Post, the staunch Baptist reformer of Eastern Pennsylvania, preached the sermon of the occasion on the theme: "The Faith Delivered to the Saints," in which he did not fail to use several excellent opportunities of contrasting the harlot worship of the lodge with the purity, peace and grace of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE Concluted.

A. They are the twenty-four inch guage and common gavel.

Q. What are their moral and Masonic uses?

A. The twenty-four inch guage is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to measure and lay out their work, but we as Free and Accepted Masons are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of dividing our time. It being divided into twenty-four equal parts is emblematical of the twenty-four hours of the day which we are taught to divide into three equal parts, whereby we find eight hours for the service of God and the relief nf a distressed worthy brother, eight foi our usual avocations and eight for refreshment and sleep.

The common gavel is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to break off superfluous corners of stones the better to fit them for the builder's use, but we as Free and Accepted Masons are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of divesting our hearts and consciences of all the vices and superfluities of life thereby fitting us as living stones for that spiritual building, that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Examiner:—Brother Jones, you will now make the Entered Apprentice step.

Candidate steps off one step with the left foot bringing the heel of the right to the hollow of the left (see page 35.)

Examiner:—You will now make the due-guard and sign of an Entered Apprentice.

Candidate makes the due guard and sign as explained on page 14.

Examiner:—(taking the candidate by the right hand as in ordinary hand-shaking) I hail.

Candidate:—I conceal.

Examiner:—What do you conceal?

Candidate:—All the secrets of Masons in Masonry to which this token alludes (presses the top of his thumb hard against the first knuckle of the examiner's right hand, see page 38.)

Examiner:—What is this?

Candidate:—The grip of an Entered Apprentice Mason.

Examiner:—Has it a name?

Candidate:—It has.

Examiner:—Will you give it to me?

Candidate:—I did not so receive it neither will I so impart it.

Examiner;—How will you dispose of it?

Candidate:—I will letter and syllable it.

Examiner;—Letter it and begin.

Candidate:—Begin you.

Examiner:—Nay, you must begin.

Candidate:—A.

Examiner:—B.

Candidate:—O.

Examiner:—Z.

Candidate:—Bo.

Examiner:—Az.

Candidate:—Boaz.

This ends the examination of the candidate who is now requested to retire into the ante-room there to await the further action of the lodge. After the examination the lodge is usually raised to the third degrce (see page—) the candidate balloted for if it be a stated meeting and the ballot being found clear and the lodge being again reduced down to the second, he is passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft as exemplified in the following chapter.

CHAPTER V.

SECOND OR FELLOW CRAFT DEGREE.

INITIATORY CEREMONIES.

One point of the compass above the square.

The second degree of Masonry is divided into two sections, the second of which is based upon the pretended tradition that at the building of King Solomon's temple 80,000 Fellow Craft workmen repaired on the sixth hour of the sixth day of the week to the middle chamber there to receive their wages. This chamber was reached by a flight of winding stairs as we read in 1 Kings vi. 8; "The door for the middle chamber was in the right side of the house and they went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber." But to suppose that 80,000 men went up those winding stairs once a week to be paid in corn, wine and oil, is as erroneous as every other part of Freemasonry, and that entire system is without any doubt the grandest humbug the world ever saw. Where did the 80,000 Fellow Crafts go to be paid before the middle chamber was built? Where were the supposed Junior and Senior Grand Wardens stationed before the outer and inner doors of the middle chamber were hung in their places? Brother Masons, why don't you inquire into the nature of these pretended traditions imposed upon you for pure truth, and judge for yourselves whether you ought to support such a monstrous system of error, falsehood and fraud. The reader is referred to the following pages for the Fellow Craft degrce in full.

For the ceremony of opening a lodge of Fellow Crafts "in due and ancient form," see page 16, but as the lodge in the preceding chapter is opened on the first degree, in order to proceed with the work in regular lodge form, it is necessary to "raise" it to the second degree which is done as follows:

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Warden, are you satisfied that all present are Fellow Crafts?

Senior Warden:—All present are not Fellow Crafts, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—All those below the degree of Fellow Craft will please retire. (The Entered Apprentices present having made the usual salute at the altar—the due-guard and sign—retire to the ante-room and generally at this stage leave the building.)

Senior Warden:—(Reports) All present are Fellow Crafts, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Warden, it is my order that we now dispense with labor on the first degree and resume on the second for work; this you will communicate to the Junior Warden in the South and he to the brethren present, that all having due notice thereof may govern themselves accordingly. The Senior Warden conveys this order to the Junior Warden in the exact words of the Worshipful Master.

Junior Warden:—(three raps) Brethren, it is the order of the Worshipful Master communicated to me by way of the West, that we now dispense with labor on the first degree and resume on the second for work; take due notice thereof and govern yourselves accordingly.

Worshipful Master:—Together brethren. (All the brethren in unison and looking to the East make the due-guard and sign of a Fellow Craft. See fig. page 19.) Worshipful Master gives two raps, the Senior Warden gives two, and the Junior Warden two.

Worshipful Master:—Accordingly I declare Keystone Lodge, No. 639, duly at labor on the second degree of Masonry. Brother Junior Deacon inform the tyler. Brother Senior Deacon, arrange the altar. (The Senior Deacon elevates one point of the compass above the square, and the Junior Deacon informs the tyler as in first degree, see page 15.) The Worshipful Master gives one rap and the brethren are seated.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will retire and ascertain what work there is in waiting.

The Senior Deacon taking his rod steps to the altar and facing the Worshipful Master makes the due-guard and sign of a Fellow Craft. (See fig. page 19.) He then proceeds to the ante-room and finding in waiting there brother Jones, who has already been initiated and balloted for the second degree and been examined in open lodge, as in page 45, he re-enters the lodge-room, approaches the altar, makes the due-guard and sign as at retiring, and reports as follows:

Senior Deacon:—Worshipful Master, I find in waiting brother Jones, an Entered Apprentice of this lodge to receive the second degree. He then retires to his seat.

Worshipful Master:—(rising) Brethren, brother Jones, an Entered Apprentice of this lodge is in the ante-room waiting to be passed to the degree of Fellow Craft: he has been balloted for and duly elected. You have just heard his examination and if there are no objections we shall proceed to confer the degree upon him (pauses for a few seconds). There being none it is so ordered. Brother Secretary, you will retire and collect the usual fee from brother Jones. Brother Junior Deacon, you will take with you the stewards (if more than seven members be present) retire, prepare and present brother Jones for the second degree in Masonry. Brother Senior Deacon, you will cross the hall, take charge of the door and attend to all alarms.

Brother Jones is ushered into the preparation-room and having handed over the usual fee (often as high as $25) to the Secretary who retires into the lodge; he is then duly and truly prepared for the Fellow Craft degree. The candidate takes off his coat, pants, vest, neck-tie, cravat, boots, stockings, in fact everything but his shirt. He then puts on an old and very often dirty pair of drawers. The right leg af the drawers is rolled up above he knee, the right breast of the shirt is turned back or folded in so as to expose the entire right breast; the right sleeve of the shirt is tucked up, exposing his right arm; a cable-tow (that is a stout rope) is passed twice around his naked right arm above the elbow, a slipper is put on the left foot and a hoodwink is carefully fastened over both eyes, a white apron is then tied on with the bib turned up as an Entered Apprentice and in this condition he is "duly and truly prepared" to be made a Fellow Craft. The Junior Deacon now leads him to the lodge-room door, upon which he gives three loud and distinct knocks. Should the lodge be at ease (that is, have recess) the Master by one rap calls the brethren to order and the Senior Deacon reports:

Senior Deacon:—Worshipful Master, there is an alarm at the door of the preparation-room.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will attend the alarm and report the cause. (The Senior Deacon as in the first degree proceeds to the door upon which he also gives three loud and distinct knocks, opens the door and enquires, "Who comes here?"

Junior Deacon:—Brother Septimus Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice and now seeks more light in Masonry by being passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft.

Senior Deacon:—Brother Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Senior Deacon:—Brother Junior Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified?

Junior Deacon:—He is.

Senior Deacon:—Is he duly and truly prepared?

Junior Deacon:—He is.

Senior Deacon:—Has he made a suitable proficiency in the preceding degree?

Junior Deacon:—He has.

Senior Deacon:—Who vouches for this?

Junior Deacon:—A brother.

Senior Deacon:—By what further right and benefit does he expect to gain admission?

Junior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Senior Deacon:—Has he the pass?

Junior Deacon:—He has it not but I have it for him.

Senior Deacon:—Advance and communicate the pass. (The Junior Deacon steps forward a few paces and whispers in the Senior Deacon's ear the word Shibboleth.)

Senior Deacon:—The pass is right. Brother Jones, you will wait with patience until the Worshipful Master is informed of your request and his answer returned.

The Senior Deacon closes the door, repairs to the altar, makes the due-guardof a Fellow Craft (see fig. page 19) and reports as follows:

Senior Deacon:—Worshipful Master, the alarm is caused by brother Septimus Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice and now seeks more light in Masonry by being passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, is this of his own free-will and accord?

Senior Deacon:—It is.

Worshipful Master:—Is the candidate worthy and well qualified, duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master:—Who vouches for this?

Senior Deacon:—A brother.

Worshipful Master:—By what further right and benefit does he expect to gain admission?

Senior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Worshipful Master:—Has he the pass?

Senior Deacon:—He has it not but I have it for him?

Worshipful Master:—Give me the pass.

Senior Deacon:—(making again the due-guard of Fellow Craft) Shibboleth.

Worshipful Master:—The pass is right; and brother Senior Deacon since the candidate comes endowed with all these necessary qualifications, it is my order that he enter this lodge in the name of the Lord and be received in due form.

The Senior Deacon taking the square from the altar unless otherwise provided, proceeds to the door which he opens wide up and says:

Senior Deacon:—Brother Jones, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you enter this lodge in the name of the Lord and be received in due form.

The candidate is led in by the Junior Deacon followed by the stewards if any, and conducted to about six or eight feet inside the door where he is met by the Senior Deacon who addresses him thus:

Senior Deacon:—Brother Jones, upon your first admission into a lodge of Masons you were received upon the point of a sharp instrument pressiug your naked left breast, the moral of which was at that time explained to you. Upon your first admission into a lodge of Fellow Crafts it becomes my duty to receive you upon the angle of the square (pressing the angle of the square to the candidate's naked right breast) applied to your naked right breast, the moral of which is to teach you that the square of virtue should be your rule and guide in all your future transactions with mankind.

The Senior Deacon then hands the square to the Junior Deacon who replaces it upon the altar, takes the candidate by the right arm and conducts him twice around the lodge-room, counting in all cases from the South, and as he passes the stations of the Junior and Senior Wardens for the first time and the Worshipful Master for the second time, each of these officers gives one loud rap with his gavel; on passing around the second time they give two raps each, and during this time also the Master reads the following portion of Scripture: "Thus he showed me: and behold the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumb line with a plumb line in his hand. And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumb line. Then said the Lord, Behold, I will set a plumb line in the midst of my people Israel. I will not pass by them auy more." Amos vii. 7, 8. The reading of this passage is so timed as to conclude just as the candidate reaches the Junior Warden's station the second time. Having arrived in front of the Junior Warden the Senior Deacon gives two raps on the floor with the end of his rod which is answered by one from the Junior Warden who rises in his place and says:

Junior Warden:—Who comes here?

Senior Deacon:—Brother Septimus Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice and now seeks more light in Masonry by being passed to the degrce of Fellow Craft

Junior Warden:—(facing the candidate) Brother Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Junior Warden:—Brother Senior Deacon. is the candidate worthy and well qualified?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Junior Warden:—Is he duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Junior Warden:—Has he made a suitable proficiency in the preceding degree?

Senior Deacon:—He has.

Junion Warden:—Who vouches for this?

Senior Deacon:—A brother.

Junior Warden:—By what further right aud benefit does he expect to obtain this favor?

Senior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Junior Warden:—Has he the pass?

Senior Deacon:—He has it not but I have it for him.

Junior Warden:—Advance and communicate the pass. (The Senior Deacon approaches closer to the Junior Warden, and whispers in his ear the word Shibboleth.)

Junior Warden:—The pass is right. You will conduct the candidate to the Senior Warden in the West for his examination. The Senior Deacon with candidate approaches the Senior Warden's station and gives two raps with his rod as before.

Senior Warden:—Who comes here?

Senior Deacon:—Brother Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice and now seeks more light in Masonry by being passed to a degree of a Fellow Craft.

Senior Warden:—(turning to candidate) Brother Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Senior Warden:—Brother Senior Deacon is the candidate worthy and well qualified?

Senior Deacon:—He is, etc., etc. Precisely the same dialogue takes place here as at the Junior Warden's station at the conclusion of which the Senior Warden says:

Senior Warden:—The pass is right. You will conduct the candidate to the Worshipful Master in the East for his examination.

The candidate is conducted towards the East and placed in front of the Master's chair, who in response to the Senior Deacon's raps, enquires in a deep tone of voice:

Worshipful Master:—Who comes here?

Senior Deacon:—Brother Septimus Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice and now seeks more light in Masonry by being passed to the degree of Fellow Craft.

Worshipful Master:—(turning to candidate) Brother Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified, duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master:—Has he made a suitable proficiency in the preceding degree?

Senior Deacon:—He has.

Worshipful Master:—Who vouches for this!

Seuior Deacon:—A brother.

Worshipful Master:—By what further right and benefit does he expect to obtain this favor?

Senior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Worshipful Master:—(in some astonishment) Has he the pass?

Senior Deacon:—He has it not, but I have it for him.

Worshipful Master:—Advance and give me the pass.

The Senior Deacon approaches close to Master's chair and whispers into his ear the word Shibboleth.

Worshipful Master:—The pass is right, and brother Senior Deacon, since the candidate comes endowed with all these necessary qualifications it is my order that you re-conduct him to the Senior Warden in the West who will teach him how to approach the East by two upright regular steps, his feet forming the angle of an oblong square, his body erect facing the Worshipful Master in the East. The Senior Deacon re-conducts the candidate to the Senior Warden whose attention he attracts by simply giving one rap with his rod on the floor.

Senior Deacon:—Brother Senior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you teach this candidate how to approach the East by two upright regular steps, his feet forming an angle of an oblong square, his body erect facing the Worshipful Master in the East.

Senior Warden:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will face the candidate towards the East. (The Senior Deacon taking the candidate by the arm wheels him around so as to have him face the Worshipful Master.) The Senior Warden then leaves his seat and approaching the candidate, says:

Senior Warden:—Brother Jones, you will now take the Entered Apprentice step (stepping off one step with left foot and bringing the heel of the right to the hollow of the left, see page 35.) You will now take one advance step with your right foot bringing the heel of your left to the hollow of your right. (Should the candidate not be able to do this or do it awkwardly, the Senior Warden instructs him.) Stand erect.

The Senior Warden then returning to his station and making the due-guard of a Fellow Craft, exclaims:

Senior Deacon:—In order, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(rising from his seat) Brother Jones, you are now standing before the altar of Freemasonry for the second time, but before proceeding any further in these ceremonies it becomes my duty as Worshipful Master of this lodge to inform you that it will be necessary for you to take upon yourself a solemn oath or obligation appertaining to this degree, one similar in its requirements to that which you have taken in the preceding degree, but I assure you upon the honor of a man and a Mason that there is nothing in the obligatinn that can conflict with any of those exalted duties you may owe to God, your country, your neighbor, your family or yourself. In your advancement thus far you have repeatedly assured us it was of your own free-will and accord, if you are still of the same mind and satisfied with the assurance I have given you, you will advance to the altar,

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its anthor, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolntion, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introdnction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Qnotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argumt. 425 pagenes,
Price. $1.35.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLÆ, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1.000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distributirn of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fnnd a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thns $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribntion of these tracts has already saved hnndreds of yonng men from the lodge, bnt there is a great lack of funds to snpply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosnre Tracts were gratuitonsly sent ont, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month, bnt funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in thiscause of God are poor men, who wonld be gladto circulate thonsands of pages of Antimasonic literatnre if they conld have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

C&N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

The Churches of Peoria.

BY MRS. E. A. COOK.

Forty-two years ago Peoria contained one log church, about sixteen by twenty-four feet, two or three frame houses and about thirty log cabins. At that time St Louis contained about five thousand inhabitants, and Chicago about five hundred. But now Peoria has, according to the last census, 25,000, and by the present estimate of business men, 30,000 inhabitants. The churches have increased with the size and prosperity of the city, and now number seventeen, besides the Universalist, three Roman Catholic, and three Hebrew synagogues. There are also several mission schools connected with them.

The Congregational church which entertained the recent Convention of the Illinois Christian Association opposed to secret societies, has a membership of about two hundred and fifty persons, and represents much of the spiritual and temporal wealth of Peoria. The congregation is erecting a finer church edifice than any now in the city. The new house will have upon its front side two dates, which will epitomize to those connected with it, rich experiences of Christ's love, great joys, and sorrows and persevering labors in the church; and to the casual observer they will illustrate the fact that life is a vapor which appeareth for a little time and then vanishes away. These dates are 1820, and 1875.

Rev. A. Stevens the successful pastor of this church has taken ground clearly and publicly against secret societies. We trust that the example of this church and its pastor will encourage other conscientious Christians who have not yet opened their churches or lips for this great reform to do so.

The Congregational Sabbath-school is in a flourishing condition, and has a weekly average of more than two hundred pupils. Mr. L. L. Day is its efficient superintendent. This church supports a mission Sabbath-school.

The Reformed Episcopal church and its pastor have a glowing Christian enthusiasm which is found in all true reformers. The church was organized in January, 1874. It has 182 communicants many of whom came to it from the regular Episcopal church, which in Peoria is languishing, the St. John's church having about expired. During the short time since its formation the Reformed church has received sixty persons on profession of their faith. It resembles the Protestant Episcopal church in retaining her form of prayer, i. e., the liturgy, although extempore prayer is encouraged; also in retaining bishops. However, the duty of a bishop in the new church is very unlike that office in the old, as he is in fact only a permanent moderator of meetings, Each society owns its church property and calls or dismisses its own pastor. The Reformed church differs from the Protestant Episcopal in three important particulars: 1st. The old church believes in the apostolic succession and gives its pastors the power of forgiving sins, or delivering men over to everlasting punishment, and recognizes no ministry except the priests of its own church. The Reformed church receives all evangelical ministers as brethren, and on coming into this church from other denominations they are not reordained. 2d. The old church regards (in its books) the baptism of infants as a saving ordinance. The Reformed puts belief before regeneration. 3d. The old church considers Christ actually present in the bread and wine. The Reformed church with most evangelical churches, looks upon the bread and wine as types of the body and blood of Christ.

In regard to local discipline, the young church has not yet matured its manner of proceeding; we hope that the bitter experience of Bishop Cheney in man-devised systems of church discipline will lead the guides of this promising church to say with King David, "Let us fall into the hands of the Lord. . . . . let me not fall into the hands of man," and to adopt a discipline prescribed by Christ in the New Testament.

The leading Methodist church is this year in the care of Rev. E. Morgan.

The Hale Chapel M. E. church has about eighty members. Its efficient and worthy pastor, Mr. Ayling, has been for eighteen months a reader of the Cynosure, and seems to realize the truth that a pastor should devote himself to labor for "Christ and his kingdom." The ladies of the church have a Foreign Missionary Association and also a Christian Union for promoting religion at home.

Rev. C. J. Thompson, pastor of the leading Baptist church reports about 180 communicants, and the church as being in an interesting and prosperous condition.

Rev. A. Kenyon, of the other Baptist church appears to be an earnest worker, whose labors for the overthrow of sin and the promotion of holiness are owned of God.

The Presbyterian churches, Rev. J. Edwards, Rev. J. Weston, and Rev. W. W. Faris, pastors, are letting their light shine, and men seeing their works are led to glorify God.

Our Foreign Letter.

GLASGOW, Sep. 4, 1875.

The time to enjoy a landscape is after an ocean voyage with a few stormy days in it. On the morning of the 2d inst. the glad word, "land in sight" was passed around, and though the hills of the North Irish coast, almost hid by the mist, were only as a few black clouds on the horizon, they looked beautiful.

Towards noon the curtain slowly rose and revealed some of the charms of the Emerald Isle; first the slopes and valleys with a carpet of green pastures and yellow fields, higher up the purple heather in full bloom, finally the black, bare summits of some of the smaller hills, and the cloud-veiled peaks of the larger. To complete the picture the reader must know that it is harvest; that green hedges divide the land into lots of ten to forty acres, some covered with grass, some with stubble, and others with grain in various stages of ripeness, and that groups of thatched and whitewashed cottages dot the hillsides and valleys.

The Bolivia sailed up Lake Foyle, by the ruins of the picturesque, ivy-clad Green castle, and left a number of the passengers on board of an open tug for Londonderry, and then resumed her course. One of the mates said we would pass near enough to the Giant's Causeway to throw a potato on it. The want of a potato was not the only reason this feat was not accomplished, still we had a fine view of this remarkable promontory, and could see the entrance to some of the caves. It resembles the Palisades of the Hudson, but does not extend along the shore in a long, straight line. There is an angle here, and horse-shoe bend there, and the walls have the appearance of immense columns crowded together with the fragments of ruins gathered around the lower half.

During the night we landed in the Frith of Clyde, twenty miles below Glasgow, because navigation from this point up is possible for ocean vessels only at high water. Next morning it rained (some say it does almost every day here) but cleared off at times to let us see the beautiful Scotch hills heather-clad and spread with plaids of various shades of yellow and green as in North Ireland. In the afternoon four tugs, two to pull and two to steer, helped us to Glasgow. We passed Dumbarton Castle standing on a rock which projects into the river and rises two hundred and forty feet above the level of the water. It is a point of historic interest. In 1309 Robert Bruce took it from the English; the infant Mary escaped from it to France, and afterwards the same Mary, Queen of Scots, was taken when escaping to it.

Ships are built all along the Clyde, and for the last three or four miles we were slowly piloted through one large ship-yard. We heard hundreds of hammers clanking on both sides until we were moored at the dock.

Glasgow has some 480,000 inhabitants. The streets are narrower and crookeder than in Chicago; the houses are built of stone, dark with age, and are roofed with slate. As many as forty or fifty tile chimneys set in rows are seen on an ordinary three or four story building. Everything about the city has an ancient look, unless it be the two story street cars, which looked quite modern to me. In the morning the shops are closed till 8 or 9 o'clock, and when they are opened, look quite different from American stores. Ladies are much more generally employed in stores and hotels, and little girls sell papers on the streets. There seem to be more drunken men in the streets than in American cities, and hardly any notice is taken of them by the police. The streets appear also in comparison to be less used and some of the steeper ones have grass growing between the paving stones.

One of the chief attractions for the tourist is the cathedral which was commenced just seven hundred years ago by St. Mango, whose well, with its supposed healing, properties is still in the crypt.

H. A. FISCHER.

—It is reported of Brigham Young that he fears the American public schoo more than the railroad or the intrusion of Gentiles on his paradise of lust, and has said that he must move his Mormons to some more remote corner out of the reach of common schools. Instead of their Jesuitical maneuvers and fighting against the cherished institutions of this their adopted country, let the Catholics follow Brigham.

Address of Rev. W. J. Betts.

Before the Groton Christian Association met at Sumner Hill, N. Y., Oct. 13, 1875.

Dear brethren and friends of the Groton Christian Association: One year ago was organized the Groton Christian Association, opposed to secret societies; and thus began the conflict with the minions of darkness. During this time but little has been done compared with our ability to do; we have not the spirit of sacrifice and self-devotion that we need to wage an aggressive warfare. Yet in other States the banner is being unfurled and soldiers of Truth and Liberty are wheeling into line all over this land of ours, wherever the character and principles of the secret order are made known; wherever the light of truth has penetrated, a feeling of indignation and opposition is aroused. A spirit of inquiry is being provoked by the circulation of Anti-masonic literature and by the pompous parade and public manifestation of the sons of darkness. The secular papers are also discussing with earnestness the character and claims of Freemasonry, and no longer tremble to mention the name of William Morgan, and charge the crime of his murder upon the self-styled ancient and honorable institution of Masonry. Are not these things the sure precursors of victory; surely the Dagon of Freemasonry with all its high-sounding titles and pretensions, must fall before the ark of truth and light. The clouds that have hitherto looked dark and ominous are lined with the golden light of victory and hope. For has not God said there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed and hidden that shall not be made known.

What we hear in the ear we are to preach on the house top and fear not them that can kill the body and after that have nothing more that they can do.

A few such men God has raised up as pioneers in our glorious reform, to brave the storm of persecution and slander and bear the odium heaped upon them by secret societies, as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. We see no better evidence that our cause is advancing and that we are publishing to the world the secrets, and laying bare the principles of the institution, than the extreme uneasiness on the part of some and the hatred of the fraternities toward those who dare to oppose them. A few years ago scarcely a man could be found who dare to speak against the secret fraternities, they were controlling in a large measure the affairs of government, monopolizing every office from State to town and laying corner stones of public buildings. It had grown in influence and power because it was let alone, while the thoughts of loyal men were turned toward the millions in human slavery and engaged in throttling the hordes that threatened the very life of our government. This mystery of iniquity raised its hydra head and became bold and defiant. It is seen stalking forth with its paraphernalia and high sounding titles to attract the attention of the people and win the public favor. . . .

Said Jesus, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in Heaven," and "He that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light lest his deeds be reproved." No institution having for its end the salvation of men and the glory of God—no institution with principles fit to be tolerated in a land like ours, need seek the cover of secrecy and darkness. No good cause needs the cover of darkness or penalties of blood; but they that revel revel in the night and they that are drunken are drunken in the night, men of evil thought and character naturally seek the darkness, while the Christian is a child of light.

The spirit of the secret fraternity, especially of Freemasonry, is particularly noticeable. According to Masonic testimony Masonry is incapable of change; but like the two false witnesses, who were suborned to convict our our Saviour of blasphemy, their testimony does not agree, for while some declare that Masonry is incapable of change, others when we speak of the claims of Masonry, assert that Masonry is not what it used to be. But we see no change in the determined opposition to truth and a firmer adherence to falsehood and darkness.

The spirit that tore from his family a peaceful and unoffending citizen, a man guilty of no crime and without trial or jury, put an end to his earthly existence, exists in the fraternity to-day. It has since exhibited itself and more than one has become the victim of Masonic vengeance. The persecution of seceding Masons, the slander and odium that is heaped upon them; the mobbing and stoning of lecturers in the darkness of night; the burning of houses and injury of property, shows most conclusively that the spirit of Masonry is unchanged, and that it is not a spirit of love and universal good will, but one of persecution and vengeance. We are aware that Masons of the better sort endeavor to apologize for and conceal the crimes, especially the murder of Morgan, by professed discoveries of his whereabouts. We do not wonder that men of character should try to conceal the crimes of Masons, or apologize for them, but the fact is undeniable and the records will ever stand as a living accuser of those who shed innocent blood.

The spirit of Freemasonry is further seen in its supreme hatred to Christianity, calling it a monster that must be put down, claiming to do for men all that Christ and his salvation does; claiming to fit men for heaven without Christ and his salvation. Thus virtually denying the atonement and impuguing the wisdom of God in the plan of redemption. It makes its oath and obligations paramount to allegiance to Christ and interferes with our salvation to God, with obedience to the commands of Christ and the performance of Christian duty. It excludes the name of Christ from the prayers and ritual of the lodge-room, thus becoming like paganism, a bitter foe and rival of Christianity. It is also a spirit of supreme selfishness; the very spirit that actuates the depraved heart of man, which is one of supreme selfishness, is the spirit that is seen in all the workings of Freemasonry. No spirit but that of selfishness would ever invent such an institution as Masonry; no one satisfied with what is equal and right, would, under the cover of secrecy, and because the opportunity was presented, take the advantage of another. It gives preferment to its own clan alone; it clutches at every office from President down and then boasts of its power and popularity. With its signs and lying wonders it entices men into the lodge-room that their own selfishness may be gratified and lodge superiors gloat over the spoils, making a great display of lodge trappings in public parade, while their mysterious and high sounding titles are trumpeted abroad.

There is also a spirit of deception. It claims to have secrets of great value, which it stands ready to impart to any who will enter the secret chamber and take upon himself the obligations they impose. Secrets which, with the exception of a few stale pass-words and signs, have been before the public for nearly half a century. The revelations of Morgan, Bernard and others, stand upon the testimony of many thousands as faithful and trustful expositions of the secrets of Masonry. None need become the victims of Masonic deception, with regard to these secrets, when for a few dollars at most, he may become familiar with them and without the horrid obligations and shameful ceremonies of initiation. They also deceive with regard to the character of Masonry. They invariably teach that Masonry is the highest type of religion and is all-sufficient in fitting men for Heaven, if its requirements are met and its rules strictly adhered to, and and at death such Masons, regardless of moral character or life, are by the ritual sent to the Grand Lodge above. Thus it teaches a salvation without Christ and thus are men deceived and drowned in destruction and perdition, by trusting in Masonry for salvation and not in the grace of God, and Masonry becomes a deceiver and an anti-Christ, a snare of the devil with all signs and lying wonders and deceivableness of unrighteousness, and moreover it lulls men to sleep in their sins, by teaching the sufficiency of lodge religion and another easier way of salvation, by obedience to Masonic laws and not to the laws of Christ.

Never was there an invention so completely in keeping with the natural inclination of the carnal heart, and so well calculated to draw men away from Christ, and make the Gospel of no effect as the teaching of Masonry. And may we not add the warning of Paul, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

In view, then, of the spirit and dangerous character of Freemasonry, we need a full consecration to the work and a heart of love, to labor for the emancipation of our fellowmen from the snares of the devil.

God accepts man's hearty desire, and the will instead of the deed, when they have no power to fulfill it.

What to do with Lodge-bound Churches.

Mr. Editor.—In response to Bro. Hankin's request, I send you a few thoughts for the Cynosure.

Bro. Hankins is in a similar predicament with many others seeking light. Let me say to him and others, do not go to man, as long as the true light shines. I conclude he is not seeking it blindfolded, by churchianity, man-fearing, nor man-pleasing; that he would not consent to be hoodwinked again as a seeker of light in the midst of spiritual wickedness in high places; that he has done with since he has taken the cross in breaking with the fraternity.

His conclusion is correct, that the preacher who is not a time-server should warn the people against the sin of Masonry as well as all other wrongs, and the more especially as they have practical knowledge of it. But will they do it? The action of the past says no, and we have no encouragement for the future as long as popularity is at stake (strange term in this connection!), for the fear of men with them is greater than the fear of God, and they consider their obligation to the fraternity greater than their obligation to their Redeemer. Further, they will oppose him and deny his statements in revealing Masonry according to their obligations, and so long as he labors with them in the pulpit he must be mum or interfere with the interest of the meeting. The devil is sure to get up a fracas whenever this pet of his is interfered with, and if he refuses to do God's bidding he will bring his own soul into darkness and danger. Such has been my experience. Although I never was a Mason, yet I have the revelations of Morgan, Bernard, Hankins, Riley, Ronayne and a host of other seceding Freemasons, all agreeing.

Now what can you, Bro. Hankins, expect to accomplish as a co-worker with such men. The unsaved in the church and a great many outside stand ready to believe them rather than you, and what will your efforts amount to as long as you remain in the church, the harmony of which depends on letting alone as vile an institution as Freemasonry.

Your inquiry is what shall I do? Let me say, follow the Lord. Turn to 2 Cor. vi. 14–17: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God: as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate saith the Lord and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord Almighty." Can you see any prospect of reforming the church without obedience on your part? It is God in you that must make life succesful. In order to do this you must break with and separate from all sinful associations where Christ is ruled out. I say this believing what Jesus said, "For that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." I here include all ungodliness and worldly lusts, regarded as needful by many professing better things, permitted by those in authority; yea, encouraged by those whose hearts seem to be exercised with coveteous practices; gilded over as helps in carrying on the work of God, christened festivals, sociables, and various other polite names. Have a general good time. You can have our good things for your money. The sensualist says, "You can have my money if you will let me enjoy myself." The devil says, "All the better for being in the name of Jesus."

I must close. My own experiences in these matters I may write out, if spared, and led so to do. Yours as a lover of righteousness and truth.

Ulster, Iowa. JNO. BALL.

The Work of Secretism.

"While the husbandman slept the enemy sowed tares." So now, while religious papers and preachers are debating points of doctrine, Satan is sweeping the choice young men of our land into the debasing vortex of oath-bound secret societies. Almost every town and village is cursed with one or more of these secret dens in which Satan is sucking the life-blood out of the veins of the church. "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," says the apostle, but many professed Christians, and even some ministers of the Gospel, bind themselves with horrid oaths to keep the secrets of the worst men in community. Churches without number are in virtual bondage to an oath-bound secret lodge. The lodge, in fact, often employs the minister and turns him away, and the church dares not resist. The Knights of the Golden Circle plunged our country into a civil war that cost half a million lives and burdened the nation with a debt which no man now living will see paid. The Ku-Klux Klan followed the war with secret assassinations, more barbarous than war itself. The White League—the same snake in another skin—continued its murders until arrested by the military arm. Aaron Burr, the traitor, carried on his conspiracy against the Government in the cypher of the secret lodge. Jefferson Davis and Andrew Johnson are said to have profited by Masonic aid when confronted by public justice. Masonry, the dishonored mother of the whole brood of secret societies, seeks to overawe the pulpit, the press, the judiciary, and the legislature. Hence, thieves walk off unarrested and murderers go unpunished. The arm of the law is paralyzed and many are led to despair of reform. The secret gangrene is destroying the country. It is at war with morality and justice, and of course with Christianity. Masons are busy hatching lodges of granges, Good Templars and Odd-fellows, because those, though of no great account in themselves, afford a rich harvest of lodge men who will ultimately find a home in the bosom of the harlot mother, Masonry. They also serve to take away the testimony of all who join against secrecy. The oaths and obligations of all these societies have been authentically published, and can be had of almost any book seller, and yet there are multitudes who are duped into the belief that there are some valuable secrets in store for those who barter their manhood and integrity for the tomfoolery of the Masonic lodge. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."—S. C. S. Kimball in Bible Banner.

Death Strokes.

LETTER FROM SAMUEL N. SWEET.

I am beginning to feel lonely. The strong men who have marched side by side with me for nearly half a century in opposition to false and aristocratica Freemasonry, the members of which put William Morgan to death in 1826, for disclosing their miserable secrets, are passing away. On the 28th of last December, Gerrit Smith's sun went down full orbed to rise in brighter heavens. We say of him as Halleck does Marco Bozzaris:

"We tell thy doom without a sigh,
For thou art freedom's now and fame's,
One of the few, the immortal names
That were not born to die."

Not long since the Rev. Charles G. Finney found a resting place at the right hand of the everlasting throne. I heard his first discourse at Adams, Jefferson Co., N. Y., fifty-three years ago; and, during the long, intervening period, he has been such a faithful minister and follower of Christ, may we not imagine he heard, in view of the near approach of death, voices more than human, warbling through the air, as they opened the gates of the happy regions for his admission:

"Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood,
Stand dressed in living green?"

Mr. Finney assigned the reasons why he seceded from the unhallowed Masonic institution in his published letter, embodied in a book. The fraternity now, doubtless, feel to exclaim with poor old Job, adding only the adverb of negation: "Oh! that mine enemy had [not] written a book." On the 3d day of August, 1863, the Rev. Geo. W. Eaton, D. D., L. L. D., president of the Madison University, a nobler man, a truer Christian than whom never lived, fell asleep in Him to whom the morning stars sing praise, and heard from the lips of his Almighty King, in a voice melting as the music of the skies, "Servant of God, well done." In the Spring of 1830, I exhibited the ceremonies of Freemasonry, exactly as I witnessed the exhibition by C. A. Blanchard of Wheaton College, in the city of Rochester before the State Anti-secret Society Convention, December 13, 1871. When the Rev. Mr. Eaton then Principal of "Union Academy" at Bellville, Jefferson Co., N. Y., witnessed the degrading forms of initiation, the hoodwink and cable-tow, the red breeches and leather button; the miserable doggerel of the braggart order:

"We three do agree to raise the living arch,
We three do agree the Sacred Word to EARTH."

The death, burial and resurrection of Hiram Abiff, whom Masons laid stiff, he perversion of the sacred Scriptures the scenic misrepresentation of Deity in the burning bush, and the heaven-daring ceremonies, by which life eternal is prefigured in a ridiculous farce, he exclaimed with sparkling eyes and a countenance beaming with celestial radiance: "I am not disgusted with Freemasonry, but I look upon it with deep and lasting indignation!"

It seems but as yesterday when Milton Woodward of Adams, Jefferson Co., N. Y., one of the oldest and strongest Anti-masons in the State, closed his eyes on earth to open them in heaven. On the 24th of October, John D. Gillette of Bishop Street, town of Henderson, Jefferson Co., whom I have known long and well as a man of strict and even incorruptible integrity, died in the triumphs of that faith in Christ which was productive of good works through a long life. Like Milton Woodward, he lived fifteen years beyond the heavenly period of three score and ten; and as he lived to do good, always acting on the noble principle of live and help to live, in opposition to Freemasonry, whose "direct object is to benefit the few at the expense of the many, by creating a privileged class in the midst of a community entitled to equal rights and privivileges." His last moments, doubtless, brought to his generous heart the sweet assurance that he had laid up not alone the perishing treasures of earth, but also an inheritance in heaven. His last words were: "Now I can lift up my head exulting and behold a blessed re-union in the world to come." Sweet be his rest. Bright and lovely as the mountain rose be the flowers o'er his grave. "Men die, principles never." Opposition to all secret societies glows in the bosom of every true American, like the vestal fire of the Roman virgins. Perseverance alone is the infallible pledge of our success. Cheered by the example and approbation of great and good men, we will never

"Bate one jot,
Of heart or hope, but still bear up and steer,
Right onward."

JOHN JONES OF PENNSYLVANIA.

PHEONIXVILLE, Pa., Oct. 31, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We have been called upon to suffer the loss of our highly esteemed brother in Christ, and our most zealous worker in the cause of this great reform of secret societies. I conversed with him last Sunday as he lay upon his couch, expressing a hope that he might be spared yet a little while to help push on this cause to victory. He expressed a strong desire for a pure Gospel untrammeled by secretism, and he did not cease praying earnestly for the success of the cause. Bro. Jones was the father of the Anti-masonic cause here, as he attended the first convention held in Pittsburgh, and subscribed liberally to the work. He also attended the meeting at Wilkesbarre. Now we have lost our main human pillar and I do not see who is to take his place. He was of the Baptist church and will be buried to-morrow. His age is 79 years. Bro. Blanchard will remember him well as he stayed with him when he lectured here.

WM. BANKS.

Is this True?

Brother Dubs, Editor of the Christ. Botschafter, says concerning my reports in the Christian Cynosure, the following: "Brother Hampe misrepresents the relation of our church in reference to Freemasonry, etc. He is in want of the true knowledge of things. By his reports he creates a false opinion by the publication in the Cynosure concerning the Evangelical Association, which for the interest of the Christian truth he should hinder."

Now will brother Dubs please read and answer in the Christian Cynosure the following questions.

1st. Are not Freemasons and Odd-fellows among the membership of your church?

2d. Are there not in the ministry and even in high places of trust some who belong to those societies?

3d. Are not those of the ministry who oppose those things cautioned and admonished in private to let those societies alone?

4th. Is not the press of your church for the sake of peace, comparatively silent on this subject?

5th. Did the church at its last general conference of 1871, positively declare those societies sinful and call to repentance from those things?

In order to put the readers right and to know the true state of these things in the church please answer these simple questions at your earliest convenience. I am yours truly, etc.,

H. W. HAMPE.

"We believe in the man or woman who has enemies. This does not sound sound, but it is sound. Your milk-and-water people, who content themselves with simply doing no harm, at the same time never do any good. They are mere negatives in the world. Your man of force, who does not wait for a stone to get out of the way, but manfully rolls it over, may unintentionally hurt somebody's toes in the act; but thousands who have to travel that way will thank him for clearing it. The man who has no enemies is generally a cowardly creature, caring for no one but himself—smirking and creeping his unchallenged way to the obscurity he merits. He adds nothing to the common stock; does no good in the world, and is lowered into his six feet of earth without one sincere regret from any one."—Banner of Holiness.

Our strength often increases in proportion to the obstacles which are imposed upon it. It is thus that we enter upon the most perilous plans after having had the shame of failing in more simple ones.

—The Spanish government in its present negotiations with the Vatican, desires a modification of the concordat of 1851. The first clause in the concordat is as follows: "The Catholic, Apostolic, Roman religion, which to the exclusion of every other creed, continues to be the sole religion of the Spanish nation, shall always be maintained in the states of her Catholic majesty, with all the rights and prerogatives which it ought to possess, according to the law of God and the clauses of the holy canons."

Religious Intelligence.

—The United Presbyterian churches of Western Pennsylvania are celebrating the centennial of the commencement of preaching and organizing churches of that denomination in that section. Interesting services were held in Canonsburgh and North Buffalo, during the first week in November.

—The Dacotah Mission conference of the United Brethren in Christ held in Beloit, Iowa, lately, resolved, "That, inasmuch as our church is opposed to secret, oath-bound societies, and as they are antagonistic to the church of Christ, therefore we will strictly adhere to our book of discipline and will in no case suffer Christless organizations to monopolize us and our laws." The same body will also appoint a delegate to the next State Convention of Iowa, to be held at Western, Linn county.

—The Rev. Dr. Henry M. Storrs, Secretary of the American Home Missionary Society, has been called to the pastorate of the Broadway church in Norwich, Conn.

—A "Southern Tract Association for the Promotion of Holiness" has been organized, with its head-quarters at Spartansburg, S. C. An "organ" named The Evangelist has been already issued by the Association.

—At the meeting of the General Council of the Evangelical Lutheran church of North America at Galesburg, Ill., the Rev. C. P. Krauth, D. D., was elected President, and the Rev. S. Laird, English Secretary. The Council adopted an important paper on the exchange of pulpits with non-Lutheran ministers, which concludes in the following words: "The rule which accords with the Word of God and the confessions of the church is, Lutheran pulpits for Lutheran ministers only; Lutheran altars for Lutheran communicants only."

—Late religious news from Germany is as follows: Dr. Folk, Prussian Minister of Worship, has been on a tour of inspection through Schleswig-Holstein, where he was warmly received. The clergy of Schleswig-Holstein are strong Lutherans, and were for a time much opposed to the Falk legislation. The General Synod of the Evangelical church of Germany is to meet Nov. 1st. By legal notice the Catholic clerical school inspectors in East Prussia ceased to exercise the duties of their office Oct. 1st. The Protestant clerical inspectors were continued in their positions. A mixed French and Prussian Commission is sitting at Frankfort to settle the boundaries of the border dioceses of the two countries according to previous treaty agreement. The Catholic Theological College at Bonn has been closed by the Government, and its archives and furniture have been transferred to the authorities of the University. The college was opened Oct. 22, 1827. Its first President, Prof. Achterfeldt, is still living. —Witness.

—Father Taylor, the English evangelist, who has traveled and preached in nearly every country on the globe, is holding revival meetings in the First Methodist church block in this city with some success. He has been recently preaching in Rockford, Ill.

—Weekly union meetings for the promotion of holiness are being held in Wheaton, Ill., and this week the Holiness Association of Northern Illinois begins a series of meetings there in which all the churches unite, and the professors of the College are deeply interested.

—A case of discipline recently came before the United Presbyterian Synod of New York, involving a plain question of admitting a member of a secret order. Such an act was heartily condemned, and the testimony of the church very decidedly maintained.

—Mrs. Tholuck, wife of the well-known Professor Tholuck, has started a Sunday-school in Halle, Germany, assisted by a Danish and an American student. The whole city containing 50,000 inhabitants, has only two Sunday-schools.

—Dr. J. D. Fulton's church has voted by a strong majority not to accept his resignation, and as he has shown a Christian spirit in efforts to put away the troubles of the church it is hoped all parties will follow, and peace and harmony prevail.

—The revival services continue in Brooklyn, without abatement. Mr. Moody closes his labors there this week, but the churches will doubtless carry it on, as they seem to be thoroughly roused to the importance of saving souls. Conversions are reported from many of the churches and Sabbath-schools in connection with the regular services.

Notices.

PAST MASTER E. RONAYNE, of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, will hold himself in readiness to lecture and publicly work the degrees of Masonry wherever his services may be needed. A fair compensation and traveling expenses is all that is required. Address him at the office of this paper.

Call for a New Hampshire Anti-masonic State Convention.

We, the undersigned, believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, hereby unite in calling a New Hampshire State Convention to be held Nov. 23, 24, 1875, in the Baptist church at Lake Village, to expose the evils of oath-bound secret societies and to form a State Association auxiliary to the National Christian Association.

ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION.

PEORIA, NOV. 9TH AND 10TH.

Preliminary devotional exercises of an interesting character inaugurated the second anniversary meeting of the State Christian Association in the Congregational church of Peoria on the morning of Tuesday, Nov. 9th. The convention was afterward called to order by the President, Hon. J. B. Walker, and Rev. H. H. Hinman led in prayer for the Divine blessing.

The Secretary, I. R. B. Arnold, being absent, J. P. Stoddard was appointed to act temporarily. H. H Hinman, J. P. Richards and S. L. Fay were appointed Enrolling Committee, and J. P. Stoddard and S. Mills a committee on business. Mrs. E. A. Cook was appointed assistant secretary but was afterward at her request excused.

On recommendation of the business committee, devotional exercises were held until 10:30, opened by Rev. H. Avery and participated in by Pres. J. Blanchard, E. Ronayne and others. At 10:30 Rev. H. H. Hinman, State Agent, presented his report of work for the year, which was ordered to be printed.

On suggestion of the business committee a discussion was opened by Pres. Blanchard on "the importance of extending the circulation of Anti-masonic literature." He gave an outline history of the Cynosure, its present condition, the obstacles in the way of its success and urged the importance of securing for it a more extended circulation. Mrs. E. A. Cook reported the circulation of the Cynosure as about thirty-six hundred and thought a subscription list of about five thousand would meet present expenses. The publishers desire to improve the paper as soon as the receipts will justify increased expenditures; and if those already taking the paper would make suitable efforts it might very soon be put on a paying basis. Isaac Preston followed with very cogent reasons why the Cynosure should be sustained and every friend should do his utmost to introduce it among the people.

G. L. Arnold, of the Reformer and Free Press, remarked at some length, referring to what had previously been said as needing modification. A paper to be successful must have adequate funds. The Cynosure must not go down. The nation needs it. He gave a hopeful account of his own paper and wished to work in harmony with others in promoting the common cause.

J. P. Stoddard spoke of the Anti-masonic Herald, and also said he had been asked what he thought of starting another paper in Michigan. Dea. T. Perkins called attention to the Christian Radical published at Polo, Ill., by Parker Hurless; and some very encouraging facts were given in connection with the enterprise. Isaac Preston said that business and professional men in Lockport were afraid to have an Anti-masonic paper seen on their counters or desks. Dea. Luther Birge suggested that the Cynosure might be made more acceptable if the name was changed. Rev. A. Worman thought not. Bro. McKnab spoke of the efforts to introduce the paper into Sabbath-schools. H. H. Hinman offered a resolution commending the paper which was referred to a committee on publications, on which the chairman appointed Messrs. Stoddard, Arnold, Preston, Birge and Richards; Bishop Dixon and Pres. Blanchard were afterward added.

A recess was then taken until 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON.—The chairman not having arrived the convention was called to order and Rev. J. P. Richards took the chair by request. "All hail the power of Jesus' name" was sung and Rev. A. Worman led in prayer. Bishop Dixon being present was introduced and made a few remarks. Others related personal experiences and instances of lodge interference with civil and ecclesiastical affairs. A letter from W. H. Robinson of Yates City was read expressing his interest in the meeting. A committee on finance was elected consisting of Moses Pettengill, S. Mills and Samuel French.

Bishop Dixon was elected chairman by acclamation.

A committee on nomination was chosen of Messrs. Marsh, McCulloch, and J. Blanchard.

The General Agent, J. P. Stoddard, spoke on the progress of the reform throughout the country and he was requested by vote to publish his remarks.

EVENING.—The convention assembled at 7:30 Bishop Dixon in the chair. Rev. M. Ambrose offered prayer. Hon. J. B. Walker being introduced delivered a very able address showing that Freemasonry is at war with every righteous principle in civil or social life. He was followed by Prof. C. A. Blanchard who spoke in his usual eloqent manner and with more than customary freedom.

WEDNESDAY.

After devotional exercises, business was resumed. A general discussion on the relation of the minor secret orders to the church occupied part of the forenoon. Rev. H. Avery led and various members participated.

At 10:30 Isaac Preston, Esq., of Lockport, read an able paper on the Influence of the Lodge on the American System of Jurisprudence, which was voted to be published.

The committee on finance reported recommending a collection and subscriptions for the State work for the year. This business was immediately attended to and a total of cash and subscriptions amounting to $100.00 received.

AFTERNOON.—After prayer by Rev. A. Wimset of Streator, the committee on publications reported the following resolutions which were adopted after discussion:

Resolved 1*st*. That we are gratified at the ability and earnestness with which the Christian Cynosure, our national organ, is conducted.

Resolved 2*d*. That we will do all in our power for the increase of its subscription list and endeavor to secure for it that extended circulation which the self-sacrificing zeal of its publishers, and the importance of our cause demands.

Resolved 3*d*. That the raising of the Carpenter Fund so far as to obtain possession of the Chicago building and its rents is a matter of the first and most pressing importance; and that the General Agent is requested to give it his first attention and earnest endeavors till the object is accomplished.

WHEREAS: Objections have been raised in certain quarters to the incorporated Christian Association opposed to secret societies: And, Whereas, the Directors of said Association have prepared an official answer to such objections, Resolved 4*th*. That further consideration of the subject be postponed till we read said official statement of the directors.

The following was also discussed and adopted.

Resolved, That in the judgment of this Association the money raised to secure the donation of the Carpenter building should be a permanent fund, the interest of which shall be used for publications and lectures.

The Treasurer not being present his report was read by the Secretary as follows:

TREAS. REPORT, NOV. 19, 1874, TO NOV. 9TH, 1875.

RECEIPTS:

Collections on p'edges made at Chicago,	$ 366 33
" at Chicago Con.,	35 26
	$401 59

EXPENSES:

Hall rent for Chicago Con.,	$ 75 00
Postage for notices, etc.,	5 00
Printing bills,	4 75
Paid Treas. N. C. A. for salary of Ill State Agent,	316 84
	$401 59

A vote of thanks was unanimously and heartily passed:

Resolved, That the thanks of this convention are due and heartily tendered to the trustees and pastor of the church in which we have gathered and also to the people of Peoria for their large-hearted hospitality.

The place for the next State convention was fixed at Jacksonville; and the time the first Tuesday and Wednesday in September, 1876.

The report of the nominating committee was then read and adopted, Bishop Dixon of Decatur, having been already elected Preeident:

Vice-presidents: Rev. J. P. Richards, Bowensburg; Samuel French Esq., Chapin; Dr. H. W. Marsh, Elmwood.
Secretary, Rev. J. H. Snyder, Westfield,
Treasurer, H. L. Kellogg, Chicago.
State Agent, H. H. Hinman, Wheaton.

A resolution endorsing the different publications co-operating in the reform was presented and adopted in this form:

Resolved, That we recognize as worthy exponents of the Anti-masonic cause all those publications favorable to the National Christian Association, and will aid in extending their circulation as we have opportunity.

EVENING.—The last session of the convention was held in Turner Hall, and Mr. Edmond Ronayne of Chicago gave an exhibition of the third degree in matchless style before a large and attentive audience.

The convention then adjourned.

Report of the Illinois State Agent at Peoria.

My report for the last year extends from Oct. 1st, 1874, to Nov. 7th, 1875, during which time I have been engaged in the work of the Association except about fifteen weeks of sickness of myself and family. I have lectured in and partially canvassed 28 counties, viz., La Salle, Livingston, Kane, DeKalb, Ogle, McHenry, Boon, Bureau, Fulton, Peoria, Jo Daviess, Lee, Woodford, Putnam, McLean, Ford, Iroquois, Vermillion, Champaign, Clarke, Crawford, Edwards, Washington, St Clair, Perry, Randolph, Marion, Richland; besides thirteen lectures in Indiana, and seven in Ohio.

The whole number of lectures delivered is	142.
Sermons about	20.
Expenses have been for salary 219 days at $2.	$438.
Traveling expenses including journey to Pittsburgh,	213.20
Total expenses	$651.20
Collected in the field for the general work,	274.56
Due from the Treasury of Association	376.64
Received from Treasurer	$376.64

Besides this there has been collected for the Publishing House in cash, notes, and pledges the sum of $516.

So that the total collections over all expenses are $139.36. I may add that a lecturer cannot be always a successful collecting agent. He cannot and ought not to visit those places only where there are most friends of this reform, and for this reason will often fail of meeting more than current expenses, and sometimes not even that. It cannot be assumed that much more than traveling and other expenses will be collected on the field, and the support of the lecturer will fall largely upon the contributions of the friends of this reform.

In the prosecution of my work, I have formed warm friends in every part of the State, and in every denomination of Christians. With singular unanimity these friends are members of the evangelical churches. They are those who love our Lord Jesus Christ, and abhor the lodge because it is anti-Christ. The fields most accessable and easiest of culture are the small villages and the rural districts. Wherever the overshadowing and blighting influence of the lodge is least felt, there do we find the most Christian candor and faithfulness.

We must, as in the past, appeal to the public conscience. We must show to the people that secretism in all its forms, and especially that Freemasonry violates the principles of morality and Republicanism. We must show to the church that it destroys Christian simplicity, promotes dissimulation, hypocrisy, and lying, and is inconsistent with true Christian worship. We must point out its intrinsic selfishness and show that it enslaves the conscience by binding the soul to unknown obligations; and lastly that its engagements are immoral and profane, and hence of no binding obligation. In prosecuting this work we must take for our example the prophets and the apostles; especially shall we do well to heed the words of the great apostle to his brethren in Corinth, (2 Cor. vi. 4-10.) "In all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings. By pureness, by knowledge, by long suffering, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report, as deceivers and yet true. As unknown, and yet well known, as dying and behold we live, as chastened and not killed, as sorrowful yet always rejoicing, as poor yet making many rich, as having nothing yet possessing all things."

Thus laboring and praying our triumph is sure.

The Michigan State Convention,

Pursuant to call of the Executive Committee, the first anniversary of the Christian Association opposed to secret societies of the State of Michigan was held at Light Guard Hall, Ypsilanti, Oct. 27, 28, and 29. Meeting was called to order by President Cornelius Quick, opening by prayer by Rev. A. H. Springstein, followed by Rev. J. P. Stoddard; after which the usual proceedings, such as reading minutes and appointing committees, were the proceedings of the afternoon of the first day. In the evening we were favored by listening to that veteran and unflinching worker in the anti-secrecy cause, John Levington; subject, Masonry. He made it very uncomfortable for the Masons and jacks.

The forenoon of the second day was spent in reports of committees and general work. Afternoon address by J. P. Stoddard, General Agent, who filled the place previously assigned to Past Master Ronayne, who did not put in an appearance as expected; but the time was profitably spent in listening to that noble worker who always exhibits so much interest in the cause of the reform. In the evening John Levington gave a full and accurate description of the first degree of Masonry which was delivered with telling effect, making the Masons ashamed of themselves and their institution.

A good portion of the third day was spent in considering the preamble and resolutions presented by the committee: John Levington, A. H. Springstein, John C. Taylor, which were taken up and considered article by article and adopted. [A synopsis of the resolutions were published in the Cynosure last week.—ED.]

The meeting closed its sessions with a glorious triumph over the Masonic power in the exhibition of the initiation of the so-called Rev. Elder Mulkar by Past Master Ronayne of Key-stone Lodge, who showed his great powers of initiating candidates, which unquestionably is the best method of showing up this great and gigantic fraud.

C. B. REMINGTON, Recording Sec'y.

Jottings from the New York Field.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 2, 1875.

DEAR K.—My last epistle was dated at Cobleskill, a beautiful village, situated on the Albany and Susquehanna R. R. about 45 miles from Albany in a southwesterly direction. I should judge it has a population of some 2,000, and is a busy, thriving place with many somewhat costly residences, as well as public buildings, among which are hotels, churches, etc. I reached the place on Saturday, October 2d, soon after dark. I had been commended to the American hotel, as a stopping place, and just as I rose to leave the cars I came in contact with mine host, Van Patten, the proprietor, who, on seeing my preparations to stop, inquired if I would try the "American?" As this was what I intended to do, I answered in the affirmative, and for that and several other nights made his hotel my home, nor had reason to regret my choice, though there were other houses of greater pretensions in the place.

After supper I inquired for a gentleman whose name had been sent me, supposed to be friendly to our cause. He was easily found, and at first manifested some interest in my work. After some conversation he left me, with a promise to call in the morning and pilot me to his place of worship, the Lutheran. At time appointed my friend made his appearauce and I went with him to the Sunday-school. Just before entering we met his pastor, Rev. Sylvanus Stall, a young gentleman of very pleasing exterior, and whom I found, on further acquaintance, to be both genial and intelligent, who asked me to fill his desk in the evening, which I subsequently consented to do. His morning service was a "Memorial" for a beloved teacher, a short time dead. The pastor did well his work and gave utterance to sentiments which were a credit to his head and heart, and which caused me to "take to him" at once. The Lutheran house of worship here is an imposing edifice, more richly appointed than is usually found outside of cities; but alas! with an incumbus upon it in the shape of a heavy debt which proved in this instance a temptation and a snare to their trustees.

At the close of the evening service, the pastor was quite willing I should have the roomy and well-appointed basement of the church in which to give the lectures I intended to deliver, and which he permitted me to announce from his pulpit to a large congregation. One of the trustees was present and seemed quite willing I should be admitted, could consent be obtained from the other two, one of whom was a Mason and not a member of the church. In the morning I called with a friend on the trustee whom we had seen the night before, and found at first sight that his face was changed toward us. It was with evident reluctance he went with us to see another trustee living near. When we made known our matter to him, he replied, "Yes! I believe in free discussion." But here he was interrupted by the "party of the first part," who suggested, "as we are in debt," etc., "we had better go and see

Mr. Kilmer," the Masonic member of the board. I then knew the result as well as when they had returned after having rubbed against a little Masonic backbone, and with great firmness said, "We have decided that you must get a hall." And so the Lord Jesus, as against the lodges was denied a hearing in a house professedly given unto him. These men said, "Our church is in debt, and—and—," "Yes," said I, "you are afraid you will lose a few Masonic dollars! Did it ever occur to you that the Lord Jesus might have some interest in this concern, and that his favor might be worth something in the lifting of your burden?" But this did not weigh a feather. The Masons, and their leper kin, were an ever present power and their vengeance was a sure thing, whether their favor was or not; while the dear Lord Jesus was afar off, and no certain help when it came to a big lift. Of course, these men spake no such words, but if they do express the language of their acts, then I am a poor interpreter. When will professedly Christian men begin to have as much faith in God as they manifest in the almost omnipresent devil of the lodge? When?

So to a hall we went, but ill-seated, for which we were indebted on easy terms, to a hotel keeper, who made no pretensions to the piety which refused me a hearing for my Lord. Secrecy is a power in Cobleskill; but it received a staggering blow as the truth was poured into attentive ears respecting its blasphemous claims to be a saving religion; its lying history; its swindling operations, in selling for a high price secrets which are no secrets; its barbarous oaths; its indecent and degrading ceremonies of initiation; and its false claims to superior benevolence, for three nights in succession.

I spoke two nights, also, in Barnerville, a village some three miles away. Here I had the use of a house of worship, and large and attentive congregations; and have reason to believe much good was done. Here I was the guest of Dr. Werner, who was, I found, a Free Methodist. I learned that my cause was prejudiced before I came there at the invitation of a Free Methodist! I am not a Methodist of any of the kinds so-called, and until I entered on this work knew very little of the people to which my friend, the Doctor, belongs. I have seen a good many of them since; and it is my candid conviction that I have seen people whose piety did not seem to me of any higher grade than I saw in my friend of Barnerville. At all events the Doctor with his kind family gave me a Christian home, as have others of his faith, and when I forget it may my right hand forget her cunning. All here said of Free Methodists is true of Wesleyans. They are hated for their stand against the anti-Christ of the lodges. I am ready to suffer this reproach with them and all others like-minded of whatever name. Vale, Schoharie County.

The Chautauqua Co. Society held their semi-annual meeting in Fredonia on the 19th and 20th ult. But few were in attendance, as some of our best men were in waiting on the courts, and were only set at liberty on the last day of the meeting. Here, also, with all the culture boasted, is one of Satan's seats. Secrecy reigns supreme. The President of the Society, Geo. W. Lewis, whose guest I was, here has his home, and all his family conspired to make it home to me. On the last evening I spoke to a fair audience among whom was a Masonic clergyman of twenty-four degrees, with several other craftsmen. At the close of my remarks I asked them to deny a single point I had made, and paused for a reply and it was such a pause as is not often seen in a public assembly. It was a pause which might be felt. But no reply came. I will send you the resolutions discussed and passed without dissenting vote. J. L. Barlow.

Past Master Ronayne's Work.

Lanark, Ill., Nov. 8, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Presuming that some tidings from this section would be of interest to the readers of the Cynosure we give you a few items concerning the anti-secret movement here.

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of last week, Past Master Ronayne addressed large audiences in Sherwood's Hall. On Tuesday evening he initiated "Rev. Septimus Jones" into the first degree of Masonry, and on Wednesday evening raised him to the sublime degree of Master Mason. Mr. Ronayne's arguments were clear and decisive; he repeatedly called on the Masons present to gainsay any of the charges he brought against them; but they, thinking discretion the better part of valor, held their peace and left him complete master of the field. The familiarity with which he handles his subject, and the defiant manner in which he challenges any contradiction, leaves no doubt in the minds of any as to the truthfulness of his expositions; and all who would see that fraud called Freemasonry exposed in all its ridiculous absurdity, we commend to the exhibitions of Mr. Ronayne.

We have an organization here which is increasing in numbers, and the neighboring towns are also becoming interested in this work of reform. The Cynosure comes on its weekly mission, and we hope it may prove a power for good. We shall endeavor to increase its circulation, and by bringing this subject continually before the public, we may finally succeed in purging our pulpits, legislatures and courts of justice from the abominations of secretism.

G. A. Crinklaw.

ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT

writes of these meetings in Lanark: We have had three lectures here in little less than a year. Mr. Ronayne's have had the most effect from the fact that the people were able to both see and hear, and some of us felt when Grand Master Hiram Abiff went staggering into the blanket from the blow of Jubelum. I am confident that there are many who have been convinced that secret societies are the cause of the bad condition of affairs in church and nation.

There are efforts being made to have a course of lectures at Shannon, Lanark and Mt. Carroll this winter by some one of the lecturers of the National Christian Association.

I am sorry that we have not a delegate to send to the Peoria meeting, but the hearts and good wishes of many of us are with the brethren there.

Yours for victory,

N. R. Corning.

STILL ANOTHER

writes of these interesting lectures: After the first degree the Masonic brethren set various rumors afloat concerning the conversion of Mr. R. to Anti-masonry, stating that he had stolen lodge funds, was a Catholic and could not remain a Mason, etc., all of which he proved to be false by producing the true bill brought against him by the lodge. Mr. Ronayne has accomplished a good work here and all the cause needs is a more thorough organization. The anti-secret element is strong, though never so firm and outspoken as at the present time.

The Odd-fellows were jubilant over the first degree given in public and denounced it as immoral; and some said if the initiation in the Odd-fellows were as indecent and foolish, they would leave them. But on the second night Past Master Ronayne gave a short history of his experience in the order known as Odd-fellows, which made them howl; and their joy turned to sorrow.

The appeals made to the Masonic ministers were truly impressive, and the Anti-masons present could be heard to say, Purge the churches of this accursed thing.

I see in reading the Cynosure that there are thrusts made at the Methodist churches and ministers, because of the members belonging to the lodge. There are a few godly ministers in northern Illinois belonging to that church who are doing a good work, advising all whom they meet of the pernicious influences of the lodges, and the anti-Christian character of the same. May God speed the day when all the Christian churches shall be united against this enemy of Christ, of decency, and good morals.

Yours, C. A. Mastin.

[Thank the Lord for a few! In all the land there are many. May their numbers be multiplied.—Ed.]

Washington's Testimony—An Old Lady Remembers It.

Atlantic, Iowa, Oct. 23, 1'75.

As I am more than half inclined to offer my testimony for Washington, please excuse my liberty.

In 1811 the school teacher desired me to read in a book called the "American Preceptor." In that book was "Washington's Farewell Address to his Countrymen." In that address he says, "Beware of secret societies." As I remember secret combinations were to be more watched and guarded against at home than foreign foes.

OUR MAIL.

Joseph Wren, Sturgis, Mich., writes:

"I prize the Cynosure highly. Times are hard with me but I must have it. I have not voted for twelve years; hope I shall get a chance to vote for your nominees the next election."

J. P. Richards, Bowensburg, Ill., writes:

"I have taken the Cynosure seven years and the older it grows the better, and I do not mean flattery. A paper having so much pluck deserves, and I hope, will have, success. It seems so strange to me that so many Anti-masons fear to take it. A physician told me a few days since that his good old father took the Cynosure and after he had read it sent it to his son. After having received two or three copies he requested his father not to send any more as it injured him in his practice as physician. Such men's moral courage needs tuning up. It makes me almost ashamed of the profession when I meet so many professed ministers of Christ, who so readily give me the Masonic grips, and sometimes I return them just that they may know the secrets of Masonry are out and we "cowans" know it."

Lemuel Flint, Coburn Corners, Ind. writes:

"The Cynosure as it is published is the nearest to the Gospel of any religious paper that I get hold of at present, and my prayer is for its success till the works of darkness shall be overcome by the Saviour."

H. Johnson, Delavan, Wis., writes:

"I am fully in sympathy with the principles you advocate. I am of the same mind as at first, that the Almighty is moving upon the minds of his servants to overthrow the works of darkness. My faith in the cause is not in the least abated, because I believe the Lord is on our side. I have dropped all other papers, both religious and political, because they refuse to open their columns in opposition to the evils of secretism."

David Nelson, Remington, Ind., writes:

"I have canvassed the town and succeeded at last in obtaining the club of ten. Would be glad to send more names. I found several almost persuaded to subscribe but thought they could not just now. I think a good Anti-masonic lecturer is very much needed here."

W. Burr, Oberlin, Ohio, writes:

"It is a hard place to get subscribers for your paper in this reputed place of reform. It reminds me of the passage 'Soon has the gold become dim.' But I feel that in God is our strength."

Isaac Jackson, Harrison, Me., writes:

"There are a good many secret societies here but I think something can be done for your cause. Here is some good timber if we can bring it into the building."

John Wright, Park's Corners, Ill., writes:

"We have a Masonic Post-office, since they took the office from the old Post-master. He had a deputy two or three years that was a Freemason, and all that time I had to send my letters to other offices or they would not be forwarded."

J. H. Middlekauff, Adeline. Ill., writes:

"While in Maryland a few weeks ago I represented the Cynosure and think subscriptions can be obtained. The people in that section of country have never heard the merits of secrecy. There are a number of anti-secrecy people in that region, among the Tunkers especially, and others."

J. E. Irish, Delavan, Wis., writes:

"You may rely on me as a subscriber for life. The Cynosure is the last paper that I shall give up. May God bless you in your efforts in exposing secretism."

Lesson for Nov. 28.—Jesus on the Cross.

SCRIPTURE.—John xix. 25-30. Commit 26-30; Primary Verse, 30.

25 Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son!

27 Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour the disciple took her unto his own home.

28 After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop and put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head and gave up the ghost.

1.—"He saved others, himself he cannot save." To save himself is not what he came for. He found his life in losing it for the sake of others. He came to save the very ones who derided him. "He saved others"—he could have saved them—he can save me. Jer. xxiii. 6; Matt. i. 21; xviii. 11; John i. 29; iii. 16; xii. 47; Acts iv. 12; v. 30, 31; x. 43; 1 Tim. i. 15; Tit. ii. 14.

2.—"His hour" at last had come. But how much more like his enemies' hour it seemed than his own. They indeed had their hour but it was a short one. The hour of Christ with whom a day is as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day, was not to be counted off on the dial plate of any Jewish clock. His hour meant all eternity. The centurion was the first to announce that his death was a triumph, and soon the news spread that the crucified was risen. His hour of reign had begun, and that shall never end. Ps. xxii. 27, 28; Dan. ii. 34, 35, 44; vii. 13, 14, 18, 27; Zech. xiv. 9; Rev. xi. 15.

3.—"Weep not for me, but weep for yourselves." The sinner's doom is worse than was the Saviour's. Prov. i. 24-33; Is. ii. 18; Hos. x. 8; Rev. vi. 17; ix. 6.

4.—They hated Christ—and they "hated him without cause." Speaking prophetically the Psalmist said, "They that hate me without cause are more than the hairs of mine head." Ps. lxix. 4. "For my love they are my adversaries," "They have rewarded me evil for good and hatred for my love." Ps. cix. iv. 5. When asked: "What evil hath he done? they cried out the more, Crucify him! Crucify him!" So men would hate God just in the same way—did hate him in the person of Christ. John xv. 24, 25; Rom. i. 30; viii. 7.

5.—Is there nothing for us to crucify? Is there not something that should take the place left vacant by Christ on the cross? Paul says, "I am crucified with Christ." Gal. ii. 20. "Our old man is crucified with him that the body of sin might be destroyed." Rom. vi. 6. "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." Gal. v. 24.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

Every teacher will find points in this lesson on which to dwell, for the subject is inexhaustible; but we may indicate as specimens the following:

(a) The worth of man in God's view, when Christ died for him.

(b) The completeness of God's plan, and of the Bible, the Old fulfilled in the New Testament.

(c) The evil of sin, when it demanded such an atonement.

(d) Our helplessness in the law's hands. Who of us could say, "it is finished?"

(e) Our safety in Christ. He has "finished" all.

(f) The ground of our New Testament worship. The shadows have passed away—we have the substance.

(g) Our security in death, and for ever, for "Christ died for us."—S. S. World.

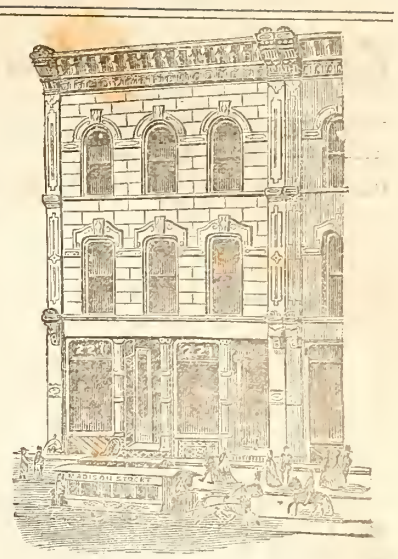
Farm and Garden.

Coal Ashes.—I have known a light dressing of coal-ashes to increase the crop of grass at the rate of more than two tons of hay per acre, over and above the previous light yield of half a ton per acre. I purchase all the coal-ashes that can be obtained within convenient distances of my farm, and spread them around fruit-trees, berry-vines, and bushes. Last spring a watermelon-plant came up in the coal-ashes that were spread around a fruit-tree. It received no attention except that the weeds were kept down. To-day (the 16th of September) that one vine covers an area of more than sixteen feet in diameter, and there are on it eighteen melons, several of which will weigh fifteen pounds each, and the smallest one is not less than five inches in diameter. This vine had no other fertilizing material applied except the ashes. For several weeks it grew in nothing but ashes. The stem near the root is nearly as large as a man's wrist. This is a fact in favor of coal-ashes as a fertilizer which all the analyses in the world cannot controvert with any sort of success. I say, let every one save his coal-ashes and apply them to fruit trees, to grape-vines, to strawberry-vines, to blackberry-vines, to pasture-fields, to meadow-land, and to the soil where any sort of grain is cultivated. —Ex.

Brine that Preserves Butter a Year.—Among the many devices for keeping butter in a manner that preserves the rich, rosy flavor of new, with all its sweetness, is the following from the Dutchess Farmer, which is said to be entirely successful: To three gallons of brine strong enough to bear an egg, add a quarter of a pound of nice white sugar, and a tablespoonful of saltpeter. Boil the brine and when it is cold strain carefully. Make your butter into rolls, and wrap each separately in a clean muslin cloth, tying up with a string. Pack a large jar full, weigh the butter down, and pour the brine until all is submerged. This will keep really good butter sweet and fresh for a whole year. Be careful not to put upon ice butter that you wish to keep for any length of time. In summer, when the heat will not admit of butter being made into rolls, pack closely in small jars, and using the brine, allow it to cover the butter to the depth of at least four inches. This excludes the air, and answers very nearly as well as the first method suggested.

Advantage of Small Farms.—It is one of the most foolish things a farmer can do to try to cultivate more land than he can do profitably. It is a source of delight to gather fine crops, and in no way can it be done to more advantage than to limit ourselves to a small number of acres, and to repay the land well with a good supply of fertilizing matter after the exhausting season of cultivation is over. As an illustration of this, a gentleman was telling us that he has a garden of about three acres from which he has gathered his farm produce for the winter, realizing a handsome profit for his labor. He said he planted about one eighth of an acre of corn, the cut worms destroying some portions of it, which he afterwards went over and put in beans, where the corn was destroyed, and realized a good yield of corn and four bushels of nice shelled beans; from less than half an acre he dug one hundred and twenty-five bushels of fine table potatoes. Proving that a "little farm well tilled" is of more profit than more acres half cared for.—Vermont Farmer.

Home and Health Hints.



Headache and its Remedies.

Headache is a very common complaint. In fact, so common is it, one or more members of nearly every large family suffer from it. As it is an affection that gives uneasiness and suffering, and those whom it afflicts do not think it necessary to call to their aid, in the majority of cases, the services of a physician, a few remarks concerning it may be timely. To some it comes periodically, like chills and fever, whilst others are seldom entirely free from it. Headache is a prominent symptom in all fevers, and in many nervous diseases. It may occur from weakness or exhaustion of nerve power, or a lack of the proper functions of the digestive organs. Sometimes the pain extends over the whole head, with a sense of heaviness, and the sight is often dim, and the hearing dull and the memory defective. This is produced by irregular circulation of blood in the head, by violent mental passion. Headache arises from so many different causes that it is in many instances very difficult to cure, and some cases baffle the skill of the very best physicians. To cure headache you must remove the cause. Not unfrequently it is a difficult matter to ascertain the cause, and after you have learned it you may not be able to remove the cause and cure the patient. The pains are nearly as various as the causes. Bilious headache, or such as arises from a disordered condition of the stomach, usually affects one side of the head only, most commonly over one eye, and increases to an acute and often throbbing pain. It is often accompanied with a feeling of sickness and vomiting, producing languor and depression of spirits. Rheumatic headache is commonly caused by exposure to cold, and the pain is of a shifting nature, shooting from point to point, and is felt most at night.

Different kinds of remedies have been made use of for headache. Bitter tonics are usually prescribed for that coming from a weak stomach; one of the very best is quassia, if persevered in for a few months. The plant grows in South America, and was first employed by a colored man as a specific. Quassia chips are soaked in water, and a few sips taken two or three times daily. Gentian root, taken in the same manner, is also highly effective.

In all cases of headache arising from nervous irritability, soothing and strengthening measures and out-door exercise are to be adopted. In some cases of headache, cold applications to the head, leeches to the temple, or cupping of the back or the neck, with spare diet and active aperients are effective. A very fruitful cause of headache is bad habits—being out late at night and overloading the stomach with food and liquids of various kinds. Some persons are afflicted with pains in the head whenever they drink malt or spirituous liquors to excess. To keep in good health and mental vigor a person should be industrious and regular in his habits.—Selected.

In heating a church the janitor should see that his Fahrenheit is sixty-five degrees four feet from the floor. At the close of the service, also, the doors and windows should be open two or three hours, so that the immense volume of impurities and human emanations may be carried off. Otherwise these odors solidify in part and dry on the walls, glass and wood-work; and when the temperature again rises they, like birds of ill-omen, fly down from their roosts to pollute the air again.—*Springfield (Mass.) THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to the Treasurer, H. L. Kellogg 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The National Christian Association.

President.—Philo Carpenter.

Directors.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. H. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

Corresponding Secretary.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Recording Secretary and Treasurer H.L.Kellogg, 13 Wabash Av., Chicago.

General Agent and Lecturer.—J. P Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

—The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer, and drafts or P. O. orders made payable to him. The general correspondence, inquiries, etc., should be directed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY NOV. 11, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT.
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PEORIA, Nov. 8, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am here to attend the Illinois State Christian Association's Convention which meets in the Congregational church to-morrow morning for a two day's session. Delegates are already here from Polo, Lockport, Wheaton and elsewhere. The health of Mr. Pettengill's family is improved and friends of the cause here are earnest and hopeful and prayerful.

Yesterday morning I preached on the national recognition of Christianity, and endeavored to show that "ours is a Christian and not a heathen government." I read from Saturday's Chicago Tribune the declaration of Rabbi Felsenthal submitted to the Chicago city government; that,

"These dangerous attempts" (viz., to recognize Christianity as the American religion) "engendered by ignorance, bigotry and fanaticism, must therefore be withstood; they must be crushed; they must be killed off in the beginning. Our country, our laws, our literature, our whole civilization must remain where they are, unchristian."

Herod and Pilate friends again! Here is a Jew claiming the United States as "our country"; fraternizing with the Romish apostacy which has killed nine-tenths of all the Jews who have died by persecution; and with infidels and atheists who agree with him in nothing but in hating Christ. Here is a Jew willing the United States Republic should be popish, atheist, anything but "Christian!" Surely here is the ring of the old clamor, "His blood be on us and our children!" But the Republican victories in Ohio where (35,000) thirty-five thousand of the population were lately induced to petition to have the idea of God wiped out of their constitution, would seem to indicate that the Democrats will forsake the priests, as they deserted the slave-holders, when it comes, in the language of Douglas, to be "A question of ceuntry or no country." Douglas knew that A. H. Stephens' "Empire with slavery for its corner stone" was equivalent to "no country to fight our partisan battles in," and he walked over and stood beside Lincoln till he died. Will this Jewish priest tell us what "country" the Jesuits have ever given to the people! What peace has there been in Mexico, France, or Spain for the last half century but the peace of the volcano between eruptions? "There is no peace saith my God to the wicked," who are "like the troubled sea which cannot rest." There is rest for men and nations in Christ, and nowhere else.

I last night attended worship in the Mission Church here established and sustained by Mr. William Reynolds. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Weston, preached an earnest and useful sermon to a crowded congregation and the Holy Spirit manifestly filled the house. The importance of this movement in this city cannot well be over estimated. It is kindling the fire of salvation at the bottom of the human grate; and as Christ's movement was directly on the human masses, these Moody and Reynolds movements are tokens of his second coming. After sermon Mr. Reynolds conducted a very interesting meeting in an ante-room, giving clear, ound instruction to such inquirers as emained.

J. B.

PLEASANT ECHOES:—Cash received for the Cynosure, Nov. 11th, foot up for the day $73.85, and the day following $49.30; making the echoes of the Peoria Convention one hundred and twenty-three dollars and fifteen cents. We learn also that good Mr. Bailey is getting up a club of ten at Knoxville, where there has never been a lecture, and that the lady of one of our Supreme Judges is one of the club. We called at this place on Wm. H. Holcomb, Esq. one of the oldest citizens of Knoxville, and one of the best men in the world. We had heard that Mr. Holcomb had lost his sight, but were glad to find him cheerful and good company as ever; and, what astonished us, harnessing his own horse and riding out with some excellent friends to drive for him, to visit and induce his neighbors to aid in the reform! "Verily they shall still bring forth fruit in old age."

THE PEORIA CONVENTION.

The proceedings of this body should be carefully read. It was a Red Sea triumph; and we feel like shouting with Miriam and her damsels; "Sing ye unto the Lord forever! for he hath triumphed gloriously."

Peoria has a long time been bewitched by the sorceries of the lodge. It was one of the most hopeless points during the slavery grapple; and the only church which stood for Christ there had been "as a cottage in the wilderness or a lodge in a garden of cucumbers." But the promise of God to him who "considereth the poor," has been working for them. A good pastor has ventured to speak from his pulpit against the secret orders; and good men are slowly rallying to their communion, as good men rallied to the ark of God, when it blessed the house of Obed Edom, after David and his dancing Christians had dropped it in terror and disgust.

One family in Peoria, who are of God's nobility, if he has any on earth, have stood firm and pure against the contagions of the lodge. But their health was frail, and some of them positively sick. They have been healed and held up as by miracle, and our Peoria Convention, has, under God, been the work of their hands.

"The fearful and the unbelieving" of course shrank from us and hid in Mount Ephraim till they should see how the battle would turn. A mere handful came together and drew near and called on God, and there was a steady accumulation of moral power till the Convention closed with a meeting crowded to a jam in Turner's Hall to hear and see Mr. Edmond Ronayne. This gentleman is already familiar to our readers. Hon. J. B. Walker, and Prof. C. A. Blanchard had addressed a respectable audience in the Congregational church the night before, in their clear, convincing style; and the spirit of God in answer to the earnest prayers of the few veterans who came in early, brooded over us like an illuminated cloud. The ministers of the city had come in to listen; and Rev. Mr. Wilson of the Reformed Episcopal church had seen the identity of the human and Satanic ritualism of the lodge with that against which his church is protesting. "We were at Pihahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, but the waves parted and we came through on dry land."

Mr. Stoddard, the Secretary of the Convention, and Mrs. Cook, who had preceded the Convention, and prepared the way for it by calling on the pastors of the city, and other prominent persons, will give our readers the first an authentic business report, and the second, her light touches which read like the voices of angels ministrant; but the Peoria Convention as daguerreotyped on the memories of those who were part of it, can neither be put on paper or pictured on canvass.

The church of the United Brethren were there by one bishop, (who was elected our President by acclaim) by two Presiding Elders, and several earnest and able ministers: A group of white-haired apostles of God and goodness. Isaac Preston Esq., of Lockport, with his clear, strong speech which is to be printed; Deacon Perkins, from Polo, and the venerable Geo. Bohrer from Bloomington; all these above eighty years of age; Father Birge, of Farmington, Mr. Fay, of Princeton, and others whose record follows close after, form a pleasing group, reminding one of Him of the Apocalypse whose "head and his hairs were white, so as no fuller on earth could white them." And flanking these good brethren, Richards, Marsh, Worman, and French, with a sprinkling of young men like Pettengill, looking like that loving young "disciple who leaned on Jesus' breast," and swift as he to do the will of Christ. But hush! I have said the Convention cannot be painted and why should I attempt. The invisible photographers of God were there taking the portraits of every soul which mingled in council, or went up in prayer; "And they shall be mine saith the Lord in the day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."

N. H. STATE CONVENTION.—It will be seen by the formal call in another column that the N. H. State Convention will be held in Lake Village, Nov. 23d, and 24th, to commence Tuesday, A. M. at 9 o'clock. Free entertainment will be provided to the extent of the ability of the friends of the reform in that vicinity. Brethren from neighboring States are earnestly invited to attend. Bro. D. P. Rathbun who has hazarded his life for righteousness sake will be present, and show "How a Man is made a Mason." Bro. J. P. Stoddard, also is expected to assist in our deliberations. Let the friends of reform make a grand rally and we will form a nucleus around which all New England may crystalize for the truth. This is an important crisis, and let us not grudge a little time and money for the sake of liberating the church and state from the evil influence of the secret lodge. A better time will never come to secure deliverance from this hindrance to pure religion and just government. The God of heaven will cause the right to triumph.

S. C. KIMBALL,
Chairman of State Com.

A CORRECTION.—In the Editorial letter on the first page last week a serious error occurred in the last paragraph. "Let none of these good men change their methods, should read, "Let now these good men, etc."

In the Illinois Convention there seemed to be a determination on the part of the delegates to work earnestly for the increased circulation of the Christian Cynosure. If this feeling becomes general we will receive many clubs of ten before January first.

One blind man was trying to secure a club of ten; had found three, but was having hard, discouraging work. Another friend of the Cynosure hearing of this went with him to a rich judge who subscribed for the paper for his wife. Since the judge's wife takes the paper no one else in that locality is now afraid of it and they say the club of ten will soon be here. Help one another.

NOTES.

—News from the Indiana and Wisconsin agents waits for room till next week.

—Rev. Halleck Floyd reports the Indiana meeting in the Telescope. He highly commends the addresses of the Convention. Of friend Hill of Ohio and his address he says: "The Convention was favored by the presence of Daniel Hill of Vienna, Ohio, editor of the Christian Worker, a very able and evangelical paper of the Society of Friends. His address, on Wednesday evening, was listened to with marked attention and interest, and was highly appreciated by the large audience. The kind, Christian spirit coupled with the clear and conclusive arguments of friend Hill were calculated to overcome the rigid tension of the opposition to this reform and prepare their minds for the reception of the light which was scattered so bountifully during the convention."

Bro. Floyd also gives the representation by churches. "There are twenty-two counties represented by 102 persons. Of these, 35 were of the Society of Friends, 16 of the Wesleyan Methodist church, 2 of the Presbyterian, 1 of the Congregational, 1 of the Methodist Episcopal, 1 of the Christian (or Disciples), and 36 of the United Brethren church. The remaining 10 were not members of any church."

—The United Brethren conference of Dakota passed the following strong endorsement of the reform at its late meeting. We second the commendation of the Telescope, whose editors and contributors have a righteous ambition to present the best and newest thoughts against the lodge:

"That we recognize in the National Christian Association a powerful agency for the advancement of the anti-secrecy reform, and assure its friends that in the name and strength of God we will cry out against all those secret foes of Christ until they are swept from the land.

That we recommend the Religious Telescope, and "Plain Thoughts on Secret Societies," by John Lawrence, to all who need light on dark subjects.

—J. B. McCullough, a St. Louis journalist of the free religionist sort, is naugurating a course of Sunday lectures in that city. He is also actively engaged in defense of the St. Louis liquor dealers now under indictment for defrauding the government.

—The people of Nicaragua are beginning to calculate the loss which the Catholic church imposes on them. There are eighty-two feast days set down, and, says, a local writer, this, calculating the laborers in Nicaragua at fifteen thousand at thirty cents a day average, gives an annual loss to agriculture, to the crops, etc., which cannot fail to make the loss amount to five or six millions, besides the sickness, killed and wounded which generally attend such feast days.

—The receipts of the Grand Lodge of New York were over $100,000 last year, nearly one-fifth the sum raised by the American Board for the expense of all its vast mission work.

—The local papers seem much grieved with Mr. Ronayne's exposition in Lanark. The Mt. Carroll Mirror is full of holy indignation that a young man should be brought in a half nude condition before a mixed audience. The Carroll County Gazette editor thinks the Hiram Abiff performance "simply disgusting," and affirms positively that Mr. R. never was an Oddfellow, thereby admitting his own affiliation. The trouble with these shallow scribblers is their lack of generalization. They fail to perceive that the lodge only is responsible for their feelings of repugnance.

—A Grand Lodge of colored Masons has been organized in Indiana and held its last meeting in Indianapolis in September. The Grand Master's report contained several items of consolation such as the origin of the society with King Solomon, its universality, and religious nature. "To-day, Masonry can and does justly claim all the divine attributes of religion and immortality." Colored lodges came about in this way: "Their color had been a barrier against admission into the Masonic lodge of the white man in America; but, crossing the ocean, they had met with a friendly greeting from their English brethren. They subsequently organized a lodge in Boston, Mass., which was not recognized by the American lodges. From this lodge others had been formed distinct and separate from the white Masonic lodges." This is the second time England has been instrumental in spreading this curse in this country. But how sweetly fraternal these lodges are in America!

—The Western Rural says: "The Husbandman each week publishes full reports of the discussions held by the Elmira Farmer's Club. There is in the same place a flourishing grange. Why should it be that no discussions on agriculture are held by it?" Simply because to discuss agriculture is one of the least of its objects. It has a prior work in setting farmers to grinding through a foolish and stupefying set of rites, the machinery of falsehood and devil-worship.

—Wm. Pinckney, appointed assistant bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Maryland in 1870, a while since entertained the Columbia Commandery of Knight Templar Masons in the Trinity Church of Washington City and preached them a sermon. He was assisted by a half dozen other "reverends" in giving honor to a society which dishonors the religion and Saviour he professes to serve.

—In Brooklyn and Newark, N. J., temperance Brotherhoods of Christian churches have been formed for the purpose of calling attention to the laws against dram-selling and securing their enforcement, as well as to use more personal means to reform the drunkard. In Brooklyn 120 complaints have been made by the society for violations of the Sunday closing law and 42 licenses revoked. The society is not secret, partisan, or sectarian, forty-eight churches of twelve denominations belonging to it. In Brooklyn the decrease in licenses for the year closing Oct. 1, 1875, was 947.

—The General Agent after a course of lectures in Homer, Mich., will go to Massachusetts and New Hampshire; probably holding meetings in Connecticut on the way, as Bro. Conant has written urging that he do so. He will attend the New York and Pennsylvania State Conventions with Mr. Ronayne.

—Friend McConnell of Ligonier, Ind., has a list of twenty-five subscribers under full headway. He will send them in soon. How many have a praiseworthy emulation to equal this? There are subscribers to be found if they are sought out.

—Bro. Ball responds to Bro. Hankins' request for advice in relation to the pastor of the Mason City M. E. church. There may be two ways of relieving differences in the church on moral questions. Those who are unfaithful to truth may be won over to be its champions, or separation be made from them. In any case prayer and labor for the first end should be had with all earnestness; and separation, it seems to us, should be only a final. In this case the pastor may be brought by Divine grace to see his false position as a watchman, and the Spirit of God must be the agent in this work. We believe that through persevering prayer he can become strong for the truth; or, the Lord will lead him to another work where his influence in this direction will not be felt.

—At the last meeeting of the "Supreme council" of the "ancient and accepted Scotish Rite," in Portland, Me., several Illinois Masons took the 33d degree: De Witt C. Cregier ("Blessed Charity") Chicago; James A. Hawley, Dixon; Jacob S. Kenkle, Chicago, James S McCall, Freeport; John C. Smith, Galena. The first two have served two terms each as Grand Master.

—A friendly correspondent sends the following clipping which is valuable as a matter of curiosity only, any regard for its historical value being out of the question. The lodge has already overdone the matter of disposing of Morgan:

"E. G." contributes to the Portland Advertiser a brief note about the Morgan mystery, in the course of which he says: "During the Anti-masonic excitement—about the year 1832, I think—a letter was published in the Kinnebec Journal, and copied into the Portland Advertiser, written by Ezra S. Anderson, then residing in northern Aroostook, or on the border of New Brunswick, stating that the venerable Morgan was alive and dwelling in those parts. The Journal stated that it had testimonials of the good character of the writer, sufficient to justify the publication of the letter."

—How the Romanists do it is experienced by the people of East St. Louis, an environ of St. Louis on the Illinois side of the river. The Romanists and their friends have managed to secure a majority of the school board. They also owned an old wooden church building which cost when new only about $4,000. This the obedient directors bought for $9,000 for a schoo house. The priest then in funds built a fine church on one side of the town, and the basement was rented for $1,200 a year for additional school room though not needed. The teachers are all Romanists and every morning march the children up stairs to mass. So not only are these teachers paid out of the public funds to do this Romish work, but that church is actually paid $1,200 per year for the privilege of having their own work done in their way, in their own house! This work is carried on in the face of the new constitution of the State which expressly forbids one cent of the public moneys to be paid, directly or indirectly, to any sectarian school whatever.

News of the Week.

The City

Mr. Thomas, a machinist, has invented a motor, or generator, on the same principle of the Keeley motor of Philadelphia, of which so much has been said. Water and air are the only elements claimed to be used, and the resultant force is claimed to be 75 times that of steam.——The School Board last week took what they professed to be final action on the Bible question. Numerous petitions brought up the discussion, which was carried on with a bitter and infidel spirit by a majority of the members. Only three voted in defence of the Bible, ten to perpetuate the expulsion.

The Country.

Mrs. Moulton and Dea. West have been precipitately expelled from Plymouth church because of their position towards Beecher. Bowen still remains and there is a reluctance to meddle with him.——The New York and Brooklyn association of Congregational ministers at a meeting in the New England Congregational church, Brooklyn, and after a long and earnest conversation, a committee was appointed to investigate the charges of Tilton and Moulton against Mr. Beecher, and to determine whether the Association ought to retain Mr. Beecher in fellowship.——Joyce, the supposed chief of the St. Louis Whiskey ring has been sentenced to a fine of $300 and three years and a half in the penitentiary. It is believed he was anxious to secure this light punishment, as indictments which would have confined him thirty years were waiting, and he is also prevented from giving valuable testimony against others of the ring.——Vice-president Wilson was taken suddenly ill last week and for a short time it was feared his disease would terminate fatally, but his physician promises a speedy recovery.——The great house of Claflin & Co. of New York has been found guilty of concealing smuggled goods, facilitating their transportation and aiding their sale. They bought some smuggled silks of a New York dealer.

Ocean Disasters.

The Steamer Pacific with some 200 persons on board, passengers and crew came into collision with the ship Orpheus, and sunk off the coast of Oregon, and only two persons have been rescued. The Orpheus was badly damaged and soon after struck a reef, but her officers and crew reached the shore and were rescued by a government vessel.——The Steamer City of Waco from New York for Galveston, while lying in the harbor of the latter place, caught fire and was totally consumed, and all on board, over fifty souls are given up as lost. The vessel was loaded with oil contrary to law, and when the fire caught it spread immediately over the deck. Other veasels near were unable to give aid on account of a raging sea.——A mutiny is reported to have taken place on a British ship off the coast of France. The captain, mate and boatswain were murdered. The vessel has been captured,

The Home Circle.

The Sabbath.

A bright spot, an oasis
Amid earth's desert drear,
The sweetest bud that blooms
Upon the rose-tree of the year.
A miniature of Heaven hung
Upon a chain of days,
Worn on the breast of Father Time,
To cheer his weary ways.

A soothing poem written in
A volume of dull prose,
A waft of soft Spring melody
Heard at the winter's close;
The golden clasp that binds the leaves
Of six days' episode,
That God's own finger shall unloose
Across the Jordan's flood.

Beauty of Holiness.

It is not decent for a Christian, much less for a virgin, to lay any stress upon the beauty of the flesh, or the comeliness of her person, but to es eem the Word of God above all things, and to value those advantages which, like that, will abide forever. Or if any glorifying in the flesh can become a Christian, it is then when it is firm enough to endure torments for the sake of Christ and for the acknowledgement of his religion; when even female w akness is enabled to tire out the strength and patience of masculine tormentors, —when it can stand the test of fire, and sword, and racks, and the fury of wild beasts in the way to its desired crown of martyrdom. Wounds and scars thus got are the truest ornaments of the flesh, and better far than the most costly necklaces or bracelets.

All the gawdiness and pomp of life will become insipid and jejune to you when once you are convinced that your care should rather be employed upon yourself, and your soul be adorned with the graces of the Gospel; that the house which God hath vouchsafed to make i is temple, and in which the Holy Spirit is pleased to settle up his abode, should be fitted up to receive him with a concern proportioned to the dignity of the guest expected. Let innocence and righteousness adorn this habitation for him. These are ornaments which no length of time will decay, no accidents of weather tarnish. The embellishments of human art will be soiled and withered with age, nor can any man depend upon the continuance of things which are in their own nature so obnoxious to change. But the beauty, the ornament, the splendor of the house, whereof I have been speaking, is permanent, and will abide by you; time and accident can make no disadvantageous impressions on it; only the time will come when it shall be renewed with great advantage, and be clothed with a more durable and better covering."—St. Cyprian.

Endorsing Men.

Be careful who you endorse. You may endorse a note for any one you please, provided you are wiser than Solomon, and are able and willing to pay it in full at maturity; but endorsing men is a much more risky business. You know what a note is, and all it is, or ever will be,—but a man's present and prospective character is very much less certain.

"I never could get that man under my jacket," said a minister, when speaking of the secret distrust he had felt concerning one with whom he had been publicly and privately associated, and whom he had thus endorsed in spite of the cautions of his friends, and the warnings of his own conscience; and who had now, in his estimation, proved himself unworthy of Christian confidence.

"Well, he has got him under a good many other people's jackets by endorsing him," said one man. "If he could not get him under his jacket, he has spread his cloak over him," said another; while others said, He has endorsed that man, knowing him, and we propose to hold the endorser responsible.

On the other hand the party referred to, said, when speaking of this endorser, "I paid that man compliments that he never deserved, and I am afraid he never will;" which was just what discerning people thought, when they heard him complimenting, praising, and electioneering for him, for they knew the praise was unmerited, and they believed it to be insincere; for "he that flattereth his neighbor speadeth a net for his feet." And so, with hollow compliments on one side, and insincere endorsements on the other, what else could result but growing and lasting contempt, followed at last by open warfare, with accusations as current as compliments ever were, and mud spattered as thick as the untempered mortar was ever daubed, causing honest souls, long beguiled by this unworthy church-craft, to open their eyes and learn to "cease from man," and put their trust in the Lord God.

Such illustrations of the results of mutual duplicity and dishonor, convey lessons too valuable to be lost. Let those who are not too old to learn, give heed to them, and see that by no word, nor act, nor association, they lend their endorsement to men of doubtful character or uncertain course.

Take care whom you endorse. Let no considerations of policy lead you to give public or private countenance to any one whose honesty you question, or whose fidelity you distrust. Deception, roguery, and change are everywhere. Be careful lest even your passive and silent endorsement and association make you a partaker of other men's sins. Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Keep clear of the flatterer's net, and avoid the complications of worldly policy. Stand free in Christ, and be neither a fool, blinded by hypocrites, a tool, used by knaves, nor a rascal winking at sin in hopes of personal advantage. Know what you commend and whom you endorse, and if in any way you have lent the countenance of your name even for a day, to any unworthy or uncertain man or scheme, deliver thyself as a bird from the snare of the fowler. Break away from the entanglement, and withdraw your commendation as publicly as you gave it, and choose rather to confess yourself a fool in having been duped and deceived, than to prove yourself a knave by allowing the deception to continue and extend to others.

The great day alone can reveal the amount of deception, and swindling, and stock-jobbing, and rascality, and rottenness, and sin, that is covered up under the endorsements of pious men, benevolent associations, and religious papers sent forth to the public under honored names, but edited in truth by worldlings, skeptics, free-thinkers, void of principle and integrity, who have wormed themselves into places of influence and trust, and who want peace at any price except the sacrifice of their own honor and emoluments, and who stand by all who will support and compliment and flatter them. The lust of praise, and power, and wealth, are destroying men on every hand; and the common people are led on to ruin by such guides, as sheep are led to the slaughter. After months and years of this deceptive daubing and smoothing, at length the hidden wickedness bursts forth, and destroys and desolates on every hand; overwhelming in shame and infamy the hypocrites who have made lies their refuge, and stumbling many a simple soul who has been beguiled by their craftiness. Away with all these sleek abominations, these pious deceptions, these partial and hypocritical evasions. Be just, be merciful, be faithful, but keep thyself pure. Away with smooth words, and soft sayings, and whispers of "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful work of darkness, but rather reprove them." In your eyes let a vile person be contemned, while you honor them that fear the Lord. "Cry aloud and spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression, and the house of Israel their sins . . . . Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward." Is. lviii. 1–8.—The Christian.

The Husband's Duties.

The first duty of husbands is to sympathize with their wives in all their cares and labors. Men are apt to forget, in the perplexities and annoyances of business, that home cares are also annoying, and try the patience and strength of their wives. They come home expecting sympathy and attention, but are too apt to have none to give. Frequently they are too morose and peevish, and give their attention to the newspaper, or leave the house, and seek the companionship of men at the club or the hotel, while their wives are left alone and sad, borne down with family cares, and longing for sympathy and affection. A single kindly word or look that tells his thought of her and her troubles, would lift half the weight of care from her heart. Secondly, husbands should make confidants of their wives, consulting them on their business plans and prospects, and especially on their troubles and embarassments. A woman's intuition is often better than all his wisdom and shrewdness, and her ready sympathy and interest is a powerful aid for his efforts for their mutual welfare. Thirdly, men should show their love for their wives in constant attentions, in their manner of treating them, and in the thousand and one trifling offices of affection which may be hardly noticeable, but which make all the difference between a life of sad and undefined longing, and a cheery, happy existence. Above all, men should beware of treating their wives with rudeness and incivility, as if they were the only persons not entitled to their consideration and respect. They should think of their sensitive feelings and their need of sympathy, and "never let the fire of love go out, or cease to show that the flame is burning with unabated fervor." —Rev. Dr. W. Aikman.

Unjust Suspicions.—A True Story with a Moral.

Some years ago I went to a neighboring city to perform a wedding service. I received a fee of fifty dollars. It was a soft note placed inside a small, delicate envelope. I returned home in the evening, and laid the envelope containing the note upon the bureau of my bed room. No one was in the room but my wife and one servant, who had been with us for years, and was implicitly trusted. In arranging the room she took up the note and asked about the wedding. Making some playful remark about the fee, she laid it down again on the bureau. In a few moments she went to her own room, and we saw her no more that night. The other servant was in the kitchen. She did not, to our knowledge, enter our room at all. The children were in an adjoining chamber asleep. Two friends who were visiting us were in another part of the house. Turning down the light, and closing the door, we left our room for an hour's chat with our guests. When we returned the note could not be found. It was certainly there when we left. Nothing else had been disturbed—but the note was gone. Thorough search was made for it; everything on the bureau was carefully examined. The floor was swept—the clothing shaken out. The closest scrutiny revealed nothing. Nearly an hour was spent in the search, but all in vain. The girls had long since retired; the children had not awakened; save the friends in whose company we had been, no one else was in the house. No one could have entered without ou knowledge. Here was a mystery; what could have become of the note? It could not have made way with itself. Such a note able suicide was impossible! Could one of the girls have slipped into the room in our absence and stolen it? We were too sure of their honesty to entertain the thought. But there was the stick—how else could it have disappeared? With uneasy thoughts we gave it up for the night.

The next morning the search was renewed. Every part of the room and everything in it was carefully examined with the same result as before. They affirmed positively that they had not been in the room or seen the note. The loss was nothing beside the mystery. Not a word of suspicion was expressed, though it was hard to refrain from thoughts. Down stairs we found the girls in great distress. Though unaccused, they felt that circumstances pointed to them as the guilty ones. We assured them that we had all confidence in their integrity, and concluded to await revelations.

Later in the day I determined to solve the mystery if possible. I shut myself in the room and went at it with the precision of an experienced detective. I found at length a small cutting at the base of the chimney fire board. Removing the board I discovered a mouse hole between the brick floor and the wall. I then got a chisel and pried up the brick, and lo, underneath it was the envelope with the note inside! The gum was eaten off, the envelope was crumpled up, but the note was intact! The story was now plain enough.

During our absence from the room, the mouse had come out seeking what he could devour—had climbed up the lace curtains beside the bureau, attracted by the seed in the bird cage above—had jumped on the bureau—found the gummed envelope, and had dragged it down the curtain to the floor, through the opening in the fire-board to his nest under the bricks, for a future meal. I called in the family and explained the circumstances, to their great relief.

Now how strong the facts were against the girls! How natural to have called in a policeman and had them arrested, and their characters gone forever afterward, and we ourselves made unhappy and doubly suspicious in all the future!

My little mouse preached me a good sermon, and his text was, "Judge not, lest ye be judged. Remember the charity that believeth all things; and hopeth all things—good and not evil." —Ex.

Cultivating a Pure Expression.

Every word that falls from the lips of mothers and sisters especially should be pure, and concise, and simple; no pearls, such as fall from the lips of the princess, but sweet, good words, that little children can gather without fear of soil, or after shame, or blame, or any regrets to pain through all their life. Children should be taught the frequent use of good, strong, expressive words—words that mean exactly what they should express in their proper places.

If a child, or young person, has a loose, flung-together way of stringing words when endeavoring to say something, he should be made to "try again," and see if he cannot do better.

It is painful to listen to many girls' talk. They begin with a "My goodness!" and interlard it with "oh's!" and "sakes alive!" and "so sweet!" and "so queenly!" and so many phrases that one is tempted to believe they have no training at all, or else their mothers were very foolish women. There is nothing more disgusting than the twaddle of ill-bred girls; one is provoked often into taking a paper and reading, and letting them ripple and gurgle on; like brooks that flow they know not whither.

My heart warms with love for sensible girls and pure boys; and, after all, if our girls and boys are not this, I fear it is our own fault—that this great trust rests in the hearts and hands of the women of our land. If we have a noble, useful purpose in life, we should infuse the right spirit into those around us.—Exchange.

Children's Corner.

Heathen Children.

How many little ones are bowing
To heathen idols grimly dumb,
And know not of the dear "Our Father"
Who blesses them with rain and sun!

How many little ones are striving
By heathen rites to be forgiven,
And know not of the blessed Jesus
Who for this end came down from heaven!

How many little ones are straying
In ways of sin and paths of vice,
And know not of the blessed Spirit
Who leads our feet in paths of peace?

To all these little ones so needy
We reach our helping hands of love:
In pleasant pastures we would lead them,
And share with them our home above.

For all these little ones so needy
We raise our hearts in faithful prayer
In thy fold, O gracious Shepherd,
Gather these lambs with tenderest care.

Sweet-Scented Gums of the Bible.

As we gathered around the library table after supper, a few nights ago, Ned took from his pocket a little package done up in white paper, and, opening it, displayed some yellowish tear-shaped drops.

"You cannot guess what this is," said he, handing them around for examination.

"It is hardened gum of some sort," said I, holding mine up to the lamp and discovering that the light penetrated it dimly.

"It smells like balsam," said mother; and Susie, with her true spirit of investigation, thrust the piece she held into her mouth, but hastily took it out again with an exclamation of disgust.

"What is the matter, isn't it good?" asked Ned, laughing.

"Good! Its horrid, for it is as sour and bitter as it can be."

"What is it, Uncle Ned?" asked Annie.

"Olibanum."

"Frankincense?" I exclaimed.

"Yes. The genuine frankincense of the ancients; no modern imitation."

"But how did you get it? I did not know it was ever brought to this country except for medicine."

"It rarely is, even for that purpose," he answered. "Will Orcutt, who has just come home from Calcutta, brought some and gave me these pieces to add to my little collection of curiosities. It grows, you know, among the mountains of India, and is exported from Calcutta. Very little is sent to America, for it is not as much used as formerly for medicine, being seldom employed, except for plasters and fumigations—purposes for which cheaper substitutes will answer."

"I should hope it would never be given people to swallow," said Susie, suppressing a wry face at the remembrance of her disagreeable experiment.

"I thought it was still used as incense by the Roman Catholics," said mother.

"Possibly it may be on great occasions," was the reply; "but it is too rare and costly for ordinary use. The frankincense commonly employed for such purposes now, is obtained from the Norway spruce, and a cheap substitute for even that is found in white turpentine from our southern pine forests, which, when old and hard, answers in the place of the European gum."

"From what tree does the genuine gum come?" asked Annie.

"From the Boswellia Serrata, a large timber tree, bearing small leaves and pinkish blossoms. When the bark is pierced, this gum flows from the opening, diffusing a delicious fragrance, but it quickly hardens by exposure to the air. The tree grows in the mountainous parts of Central India, and on the coast of Caromandel, and, perhaps, in other parts of the East, but it is so rare, as to give the gum a high value. Similar species, which yield a coarser variety of resin, flourish in different parts of Asia, but this is believed to be the genuine old frankincense which has been used in religious ceremonies ever since the dawn of history."

"How universal the use of spices and perfumes seems to have been in the Eastern worship," said mother.

"Yes," said Ned, "and I suspect that the offering of sacrifices had much to do with the custom. The burning of incense long preceded the organization of the Israelitish worship, being practiced by the early Egyptians and other nations of antiquity."

"The Caravan of Ishmaelites, to whom Joseph was sold by his brethren, were carrying balm and myrrh into Egypt," said mother.

"Both were largely used there for medicine," said Ned, "and the myrrh in embalming the dead. Its great value is attested by the fact that it was one of the presents sent by Jacob to the governor of Egypt, the supposed stranger who proved to be his own son, Joseph. It seems to have been a favorite present at the East, as were other perfumes and sweet spices."

"I think frankincense was not mentioned in the Bible until some time later," said mother.

"I do not recollect the name before the flight from Egypt," replied Ned. "When the tabernacle was built, Moses was directed to use it, with sweet spices, in making an oil to be burned as incense. So sacred was this oil that no person was allowed to use it for any other purpose, or to use it elsewhere than at the altar, under the penalty of being cut off from among the chosen people. The oil for anointing the priests was made of myrrh, cinnamon, calamus and cassia, but there was no frankincense in it."

"It was used in the sacrifices," said I.

"Yes," he replied, "in meat offerings, but not in the sacrifices for sin."

"What is a myrrh?" asked Susie.

"A gum not unlike frankincense, gathered from a tree belonging to the same general tribe. It is a dwarf, however, beside the mighty Boswellia Serrata, being a scraggy little thing, with whitish-gray bark and scanty leaves. The gum oozes from it in drops, and gradually hardens. It comes from Arabia and, perhaps, also from Abyssinia. At any rate, it is much more abundant than frankincense and is much used by us as a medicine."

"I hope I'll never have to take any of it as bad as this," said Susie, holding up the drop that she had tasted.

"I presume you would like it no better, for it is said to be very bitter," replied her uncle, smiling.

"How about the balm of Gilead? What is that?" asked mother.

"Another balsamic gum. It is obtained from a low shrub of the genus amyrus, which grows in Abyssinia and Syria. The branches are low and crooked, bearing bright green leaves arranged in groups of threes. The flowers are white and the fruit is an eggshaped berry, enclosing a smooth nut."

"I have read," said I, "that when the Queen of Sheba made that famous visit to Solomon she presented him with a balm of Gilead tree."

"That is one of Josephus' statements," answered Ned. "I know of no reason for discrediting it, as the balm of Gilead was among the foremost of the perfumes which ranked with gold and precious gems, and a tree which would produce the liquid might well be considered a more valuable present than the gum itself."

"You speak of the balm as a liquid," said mother, "does it ooze from the bark, or is it obtained by cutting?"

"The trees are tapped, much as our sugar maples are, when the sap is most abundant. The juice is caught in small earthen bottles and each day's produce is emptied into larger bottles and carefully corked, as the delicious fragrance of the balm is quickly lost on exposure to the air. But as, it is said, no tree ever yields more than sixty drops a day, the gum collects very slowly and is exceedingly costly. So rare is it, that it is almost impossible to procure it pure, even in Constantinople."

"Is it ever brought to America?" asked Annie.

"Probably not in anything like a pure state. The gums from other trees are sold under the same name. Canada balsam, that clear gum which we use in putting up specimens for the microscope, is obtained from a tree sometimes called the American Balm of Gilead."

"Is the real gum used as anything but a medicine?" Susie asked.

"Oh! yes. The Turks value it as a cosmetic, although it is difficult for us to understand how it can beautify the skin, as, to that of persons not accustomed to it, it is exceedingly irritating, often causing the face to be swollen and inflamed for days after its application. It is also taken as a stimulant in small quantities, diluted with water. Its chief use however, is medical, and the many allusions made to it by ancient writers shows that, in their times, it was regarded as a sovereign remedy for almost every disease."

"Well," said I, as he laid the drops of frankincense in a little box and put them in one of the drawers of his cabinet, "I think we have all learned somelearned something to-night about the sweet-scented gums of the Bible; I must confess I had very vague ideas concerning them before."

"I do not think you can have any very definite ideas now," replied Ned; "but if you have gained an interest in them you will soon learn more. A little knowledge attracts more, as a magnet does steel filings."—N. Y. Observer.

FELLOW CRAFT DEGREE Concluded.

(The Senior Deacon now leads the candidate towards the altar) kneel upon your naked right knee, your left forming a square, your right hand resting on the Holy Bible, square and compass, and your left forming a right angle supported by the square. (The Senior Deacon of course places him correctly in each of these positions.) In some lodges the candidate in raising his left arm so that the angle of a square is formed at the elbow is made to take hold of the Senior Deacon's rod placed perpendicular, while in others his left arm is supported by a square held in place by the Senior Deacon. The Worshipful Master now gives three raps which is the signal for all the brethren except the Senior Warden to arrange themselves in two ranks on either side of the altar, the Master removing his hat, approaches the kneeling candidate and continues:

Worshipful Master:—In which due form you will say "I" with your name in full and repeat after me (See page 23.).

Candidate, beginning with "I," and giving his name in full as in the first degree he repeats after the Worshipful Master the following:

OBLIGATION.

I, Septimus Jones, of my own free-will and accord, in the presence of Almighty God and this Worshipful lodge erected to him and dedicated to the holy Saints John, do hereby and hereon (here the Master places his right hand on that of the candidate) most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear that I will always hail, ever conceal and never reveal any of the secret arts, parts or points of the Fellow Craft degree, to any person or persons whomsoever, except it be to a true and lawful brother Fellow Craft, or within a regularly constituted lodge of Fellow Crafts; and neither unto him nor them until by strict trial, due examination, or legal information I shall have found him or them as lawfully entitled to the same as I am myself.

I furthermore solemnly promise and swear that I will stand to and abide by all the laws, rules and regulations of the Fellow Craft degree so far as the same shall come to my knowledge.

Furthermore that I will answer and obey all due signs and summons sent to me from a lodge of Fellow Crafts or given to me by a brother of this degree if within the length of my cable-tow.

Furthermore, that I will aid and assist all distressed worthy brother Fellow Crafts, they applying to me as such, so far as their necessities may require and my ability permit without material injury to myself.

Furthermore, that I will not cheat, wrong or defraud a lodge of Fellow Crafts nor a brother of this degree knowingly, nor supplant him in any of his laudable undertakings.

To all of this I most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear with a firm and steadfast resolution to keep and perform the same, without any equivocation, mental reservation or secret evasion of mind whatever, binding myself under no less a penalty than that of having my left breast torn open, (See sign of Fellow Craft, fig.) my heart plucked out and given as a prey to the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air [formerly some had it, "My heart plucked out and placed on the highest pinnacle of the temple there to be devoured by the vultures of the air;" others, "My heart and vitals taken from thence and thrown over my left shoulder and carried into the valley of Jehosaphat, etc., etc.] should I ever knowingly or willingly violate this my solemn oath or obligation as a Fellow Craft Mason, so help me God and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Jones, in token of your sincerity and to make this obligation more binding you will detach your hands and kiss the holy Bible which lies open before you. (Candidate removes his hands and kisses the book.)

Worshipful Master:—(resuming his hat) Brother Senior Deacon, you will now release the brother from the cable-tow as he is bound to us by an obligation, a tie stronger than human hands can impose. (Senior Deacon removes the rope from off the candidate's right arm.)

Worshipful Master:—(stepping back eight or ten paces) Bro. Jones in your present condition what do you most desire?

Candidate:—(prompted by Senior Deacon) More light in Masonry.

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Senior Deacon and brethren, stretch forth your hands and assist me in bringing this brother from darkness to light in Masonry.

The two stewards now raise their rods bringing their points together over the Master's head, thus forming a sort of triangular arch. See Entered Apprentice degree, page 24.

Worshipful Master:—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters and God said, Let there be light, and there was light." And now in humble commemoration of which ancient event, I Masonically say, let there be light. (The Master and all the brethren in unison make the due-guard of a Fellow Craft, retaining their hands in the position for a few minutes, at the same time as quick as the Master utters the word "light" the Senior Deacon standing behind the candidate snatches off the hoodwink, the entire scene being intended to make a deep impression on his mind and give him an exalted idea of the beauty and grandeur of Masonic light. The Master and brethren after a few minutes let their hands drop and the Worshipful Master says:)

Worshipful Master:—And there is light.

Worshipful Master:—(approaching the candidate still kneeling) Bro. Jones, on being brought to light in Masonry for the second time, you behold before you the three great lights in Masonry as before by the aid of the three lesser lights, but with this difference, that now one point of the compass is elevated above the square which is to signify that as yet you have received light in Masonry but partially.

The Worshipful Master again steps back a few paces and the stewards crossing their rods as before, the Senior Deacon addressing candidate, says:

Worshipful Master:—(to candidate) An Entered Apprentice steps off one step with the left foot, bringing the heel of the right to the hollow of the left and is called the first step in Freemasonry (Master makes the Entered Apprentice step.) This is given you as the due-guard (makes the due-guard) and this the sign (makes the sign) of an Entered Apprentice. (See fig. .) A Fellow Craft steps off one step with the right foot bringing the heel of the left to the hollow of the right (again he makes the step of Fellow Craft) and is the second step in Freemasonry. This is the due-guard (makes the due-guard of Fellow Craft) and alludes to the position in which your hands were placed while taking your obligation, (see fig. page 19). This is the sign (makes the sign of Fellow Craft) and alludes to the penalty of your obligation wherein you have sworn that sooner than violate any portion thereof you would suffer your "left breast to be torn open, your heart plucked out," etc., (see fig. page 19.) These signs are given together and are used as a salute to the Worshipful Master upon entering or retiring from a lodge of Fellow Crafts. Stepping to the altar where you now kneel and making this sign, (due-guard and sign together) after which you will be permitted to take your seat or retire as the case may be. And now in token of the continuance of friendship and brotherly love I have again the pleasure of presenting you with my right hand and with it the pass, token of a pass, grip and word of a Fellow Craft Mason but as you are yet uninstructed, brother Senior Deacon will answer for you. (The Master takes the candidate by the right hand as in ordinary hand-shaking, pressing the top of his thumb hard against the first knuckle joint of the first finger, the candidate returning a like pressure on the Master's right hand knuckle joint which is the grip of an Entered Apprentice. (See fig. page 38.)

Worshipful Master:—(to candidate) You take me as I take you. This you will remember is the grip of an Entered Apprentice. We get from this by saying, will you be off or from? (turning to Senior Deacon.)

Senior Deacon:—(standing near the candidate) From.

Worshipful Master:—From what and to what?

Senior Deacon:—From the grip of an Entered Apprentice to the pass-grip of a Fellow Craft.

Worshipful Master:—Pass.

Senior Deacon moves the candidate's thumb from the first knuckle of the Master's hand to the space between the first and second knuckles, the Master at the same time moving his thumb to the same space of the candidate's right hand.

Worshipful Master:—What is this?

Senior Deacon:—The pass-grip of a Fellow Craft.

Worshipful Master:—Has it a name?

Senior Deacon:—It has.

Worshipful Master:—Will you give it to me?

Senior Deacon:—I did not so receive it neither will I so impart it.

Worshipful Master:—How will you dispose of it?

Senior Deacon:—I will letter or syllable it.

Worshipful Master:—Syllable it and begin.

Senior Deacon:—Begin you.

Worshipful Master:—Nay, you must begin.

Senior Deacon:—Bo.

Worshipful Master:—Shib.

Senior Deacon:—Leth.

Worshipful Master:—Shibbo.

Senior Deacon:—(pronouncing) Shibboleth.

Worshipful Master:—(to candidate) The name of this grip, my brother, is Shibboleth, it denotes plenty and is represented by a sheaf of wheat suspended near a water-fall. (In some lodges the word is given by the Senior Deacon in full at once but the foregoing is the most general and correct method.)

Worshipful Master:—(turning to Senior Deacon) Will you be off or from?

Senior Deacon:—From.

Worshipful Master:—From what and to what?

Senior Deacon:—From the pass-grip of a Fellow Craft to the real grip of the same.

Worshipful Master:—Pass.

Senior Deacon removes the candidate's thumb to the second knuckle of the Master's right hand, while the Master removes his thumb to the second knuckle of the candidate's hand.

Worshipful Master.—(to Senior Deacon) What is this? (pressing his thumb hard).

Senior Deacon:—The real grip of a Fellow Craft.
Worshipful Master:—Has it a name?
Senior Deacon:—It has.
Worshipful Master:—Will you give it to me.
Senior Deacon:—I did not so receive it neither will I so impart it.
Worshipful Master:—How will you dispose of it?
Senior Deacon:—I will letter or syllable it.
Worshipful Master:—Letter it and begin.
Senior Deacon:—Begin you.
Worshipful Master:—Nay, you must begin.
Senior Deacon:—A.
Worshipful Master:—J.
Senior Deacon:—C.
Worshipful Master:—H.
Senior Deacon:—I.
Worshipful Master:—N.
Senior Deacon:—Ja.
Worshipful Master;—Chin.
Senior Deacon:—(pronouncing) Jachin.

Worshipful Master:—(to candidate) The name of this grip, my brother, is Jachin; it denotes festablishment, and is represented by the right hand pillar at the entrance of the porch of King Solomon's temple. You must always take the necessary precaution in giving it in the same manner that you have received it and invariably beginning on the letter A. You will now arise [assisting him to his feet] and salute the Junior and Senior Wardens as a Fellow Craft Mason.

The Master retires to his seat, gives one rap and the lodge is seated. The Senior Deacon then conducts the candidate first to the Junior Warden's station in the South, who rises in his place and makes the step, due-guard and sign of a Fellow Craft, the Senior Deacon and candidate doing the same. He is then conducted to the Senior Warden's station in the West where the the same thing occurs and is slowly re-conducted towards the East and as he approaches on a line with the altar the Worshipful Master, giving one rap, enquires:

Worshipful Master:—(to Junior Warden) How do you find it in the South, brother Junior Warden?

Junior Warden:—(rising and making the due-guard) All right in the South, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(to Senior Warden) How in the West, brother Senior Warden?

Senior Warden:—(rising and making due-guard) All right in the West, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(to Senior Deacon) Brother Senior Deacon, you will re-conduct the candidate to the Senior Warden in the West who will teach him how to wear his apron as a Fellow Craft Mason and return to the East.

The candidate here should not be led round the altar but simply re-conducted to the Senior Warden's station where the Senior Deacon gives one rap on the floor with the end of his rod as usual which brings the Senior Warden to his feet and the Senior Deacon says:

Senior Deacon:—Brother Senior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you teach this brother how to wear his apron as a Fellow Craft Mason.

Senior Warden:—(approaching candidate and turning down the bib of his apron) Brother Jones, Entered Apprentices wear their aprons with the bib turned up, Fellow Crafts with the bib turned down; you will therefore wear yours in this manner while working with us on this degree.

The Senior Deacon now re-conducts the candidate to the East where he is placed standing in front of the Master's chair, the Senior Deacon taking his seat. The Worshipful Master, rising says:

Worshipful Master:—(addressing candidate) Brother Jones, being clothed as a Fellow Craft you are now entitled to your working tools. The working tools of a Fellow Craft Mason are the plumb, square, and level. (The Master here produces a set of miniature tools made of wood and sometimes very richly ornamented, especially if the lodge is a silk stocking or aristocratic one. In poorer lodges they are compelled to be satisfied with poorer and less costly implements.)

Worshipful Master:—The plumb is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to try perpendiculars, the square to square their work and the level to prove horizontals [hands the working tools to candidate) but we as free and accepted Masons are taught to make use of them for more noble and glorious purposes. The plumb admonishes us to walk uprightly in our several stations before God and man, squaring our actions by the square of virtue, and ever remembering that we are traveling upon the level of time to that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns. [Receives the working tools from candidate.] Brother Jones, you will now be re-conducted to the place from whence you came and there be invested with what you had been divested of, and upon your return agreeably, to an ancient custom adopted and practiced in all regular and well governed lodges of Fellow Crafts it will be necessary for you to make a regular advance through a porch up the representation of a flight of winding stairs consisting of three, five and seven steps, to a place representing the middle chamber of King Solomon's temple, there to receive your first instructions relative to the wages and jewels of a Fellow Craft.

The candidate is conducted to the altar by the Senior Deacon where he is taken in charge by the stewards or in their absence by the Junior Deacon and having made the usual salute in this degree, due-guard and sign, they attend him to the preparation room where he gets on his own clothing as speedily as possible. This ends the first section of the degree.

While the candidate is dressing the lodge is usually called from labor to refreshment, or in common, every-day language the members have a short recess. This is announced by the Master saying, "The lodge will be at ease until the sound of the gavel in the East, or "The lodge will be called from labor to refreshment until the sound of the gavel in the East." During this short recess the lodge is prepared for the second section of the degree or as Masons technically term it, "the middle chamber work," which is done as follows:

In every lodge there are two large pillars from eight to ten and sometimes fifteen feet high permanently fixed inside the "preparation-room" door and about five or six feet from it. These pillars represent the two celebrated pillars at the entrance of the porch of King Solomon's temple and of which mention is made in 1 Kings vi. 8. They are only brought into requisition in the second section of this degree.

Some brother, generally the Senior Deacon, gets out three pieces of oil-cloth which he lays on the floor about five feet apart and so arranged as to very faintly represent a flight of winding stairs.

On the first piece is painted the representation of three steps and the letters E. A., F. C., M. M., that is Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason, also the letters W. M., S. W., J. W., denoting Worshipful Master, Senior Warden, and Junior Warden.

On the second piece of canvass is a representation of five steps also five pillars or columns to denote the five orders of architecture and the letters H. S. F. S. and T., to signify the five human senses, hearing, seeing, feeling, smelling and tasting, whose initials these letters are.

On the third piece are represented seven steps and the letters G. R. L. A. G. M. A., the initials of Grammar, Rhetoric, Logic, Arithmetic, Geometry, Music and Astronomy, comprising the seven liberal arts and sciences and which Freemasonry among its numerous other bombastic claims professes to teach to its members.

Every thing in the lodge being properly arranged, and the candidate having finished his toilet, the Master calls the lodge to order and the Senior Deacon taking his rod places the candidate immediately inside the door of the preparation-room and commences the second section or "middle chamber" work of the Fellow Craft degree, as follows:

SECOND SECTION.

Senior Deacon:—(standing by the side of candidate inside the door) Brother Jones, Masonry is considered under two denominations, Operative and Speculative. By Operative Masonry we allude to a proper application of the useful rules of architecture whence a structure will derive figure, strength, and beauty, and whence will result a due porportion and a just correspondence in all its parts. It furnishes us with dwellings and with convenient shelter from the vicissitudes and inclemencies of the seasons and while it displays the effects of human wisdom as well in the choice as in the arrangement of the sundry materials of which an edifice is composed, it demonstrates that a fund of science and industry is implanted in man for the best, the most salutary and the most benificent purposes.

By Speculative Masonry we learn to subdue the passions, act upon the square, keep a tongue of good report, maintain secrecy, and practice charity. It is so far interwoven with religion as to lay us under obligations to pay that rational homage to the Deity which at once constitutes our duty and our happiness. It leads the contemplative to view with reverence and admiration the glorious works of the creation and inspires him with the most exalted idea of the perfections of his Divine Creator.

Our ancient brethren worked at both operative and speculative Masonry, we work in speculative only. They worked at the building of King Solomon's temple besides various other sacred and Masonic edifices. They wrought six days before receiving their wages but did not work on the seventh, for "In six days God created the heavens and the earth and rested upon the seventh day." The seventh therefore, our ancient brethren consecrated as a day of rest from their labors, thereby enjoying more frequent opportunities to contemplate the glorious works of the creation and to adore their great Creator.

Brother Jones, in your advancement to the "middle chamber" you will meet with various objects of interests that will more particularly attract your attention, the first of which is a representation of two brazen pillars [Senior Deacon points to the pillars] one on the left and the other on the right. The one on the left (pointing to it) is called Boaz and denotes strength; the one on the right is called Jachin and denotes establishment. When taken collectively they allude to a promise made by God to David that in strength he would establish his kingdom. These pillars were cast in the clay grounds on the banks of the river Jordan between Succoth and Zaredatha [where all the holy vessels of King Solomon's temple were cast] by one Hiram Amon, or Abi, a widow's son of the tribe of Naphtali. They were cast hollow to serve as receptacles for the archives of Masonry and the better to guard against accident by inundation or conflagration.

They were thirty-five [35] cubits in height, twelve in circumference or about four [4] in diameter, and were adorned with two chapiters of five [5] cubits each, making in all forty [40] cubits.

These chapiters were ornamented with a representation of net-work, lily-work and pomegranates, denoting unity, peace and plenty. The net-work from the intricate connection of its parts denotes unity; the lily-work from its whiteness and the retired position in which it grows denotes purity and peace, and the pomegranate from the exuberance of its seed denotes plenty.

These chapiters were further adorned with two pommels or balls and on each to represent the celestial and terrestrial globes, representing God and denoting the universality of Masonry.

Levington's Key to Masonry.
This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:
"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."
The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:
"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."
This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pagenes,

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLÆ, Pastor, German M.E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distributirn of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fnnd a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of yonng men from the lodge, bnt there is a great lack of funds to snpply the constautly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

Dnring the year ending Jnly 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosnre Tracts were gratuitously sent ont, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month. bnt funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of onr most earnest workers in thiscanse of God are poor men, who wonld be gladto circulate thonsands of pages of Antimasonic literatnre if they conld have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLETRACT FUND?

THE CYNOSURE WILL BE SENT ONE YEAR POST PAID TO

CLUBS OF 10 OR MORE

SENT AT ONE TIME WITH THE CASH.

FOR

$1.50 each.

To Clubs of 5 to 9 at $1.75 Each.

A Club of Five or Ten can be raised in nearly every town by persistent earnest effort.

Now for "a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together."

Prospect for Clubs.

W. Sperry, Waupun, Wis., writes: "We expect to make out a club of five soon." Another friend writes: "I spent a day recently to solicit subscriptions but without success." Persevere. Another, "No subscriber can I get yet but hope on." This is the right spirit. Another, "I have been waiting to get subscribers. Hope to get two or three in a few days." John Duffee, Rio, Wisconsin, writes: "Enclosed is the result of my spare minutes." He sends a club of ELEVEN SUBSCRIBERS. C. A. Blanchard brings in a club of twelve subscribers from the Peoria meeting and Samuel French a club of twelve from Jacksonville, Illinois. So the prospect is not all light nor wholly dark. Do not postpone working for subscribers unless necessary. If all our readers would, like Mr. Duffee, spend their leisure moments in canvassing for the Cynosure, clubs would come in fast. Thus far we have received three clubs of ten or more from Illinois, two clubs from Iowa, one from Indiana, one from Michigan and one from Wisconsin. We congratulate these States on having active workers in the Anti-masonic reform, and ask Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and the rest if they are going to make up for their delay in sending in clubs by sending in a great many before long? We hoped instead of having eight clubs of ten by this time to have had at least eighty. Remember our present offer to clubs of ten (15.00 post paid), expires January first. If you do not succeed well alone, get some active friend to help you. Where is the next club coming from?

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING Nov. 15, 1875, FROM —E Bradbury, D Brown, S Bedford, J R Baird, J A Brennaman, C Batt, J A Bingham, G B Carpenter, S Chrimes, V R Cary, J Cranson, G Cowley, C A Blanchard, Mrs. M E Cook, W Depue, W Edgerton, D Edwards, C G Fait, A W Green, J Gardner, J Gamble, J Gibson, Mrs. E Garte, C Gray, J Green, P Howe, A R Huntley, J D Harris, H H Hinman, C F Hawley, J E Irish, H Kumler, Rev. Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

C & N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

Topics of the Time.

To-day in ten thousand homes the gray-haired father

"Sees round his board
The old broken links of affection restored,
When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more,
And the worn matron smiles where a girl smiled before."

Our young folks' story teller has the floor to-day and will not fail to interest of old and young alike, reach their hearts and prompt them to works of like humanity and love. A revival of this spirit in all our communities will add a new joy to the day and perpetuate its memories where the rewards of self-denial are added to the gratitude of piety and holy affection. A change from the usual programme sermon is advocated by some so as to throw the burden of discourse on the people by calling them out singly to tell over the mercies of the year. A great improvement, doubtless, but yet doing good is the more honest and blessed way of commemorating this THANKSGIVING DAY.

The movements of the vast ice-fields of Switzerland was for a long time doubted until Agassiz proved the fact by planting a stake in a glacier and marking its annual descent to the lower valleys. The religious denominations have seemed for generations fixed in their various forms of worship and administration, and whatever change might be observed has seemed largely toward worldliness in spirit and formality in worship. No doubt there has been on the whole progress toward the sunshine and warmth of Gospel grace, but it needed the eye of the philosopher to discover it. The National Holiness movement with its auxiliaries in various States is a cheering token of an onward movement in Christian life, and there is now in the Methodist church an undercurrent moving the mass toward better forms of administration. The conferences are being opened to laymen and the individual churches are calling for independence in the matter of the pastorate, which is truly consistent with the American spirit and Bible practice. The Congregational system has also been burdened with a most unscriptural and unwise system, known as the parish society, by which all who attended the church and paid for its support had an equal voice in its management. No doubt this union of the world with the church has had more to do with the unsettling of pastors than any other single consideration. The inquiry is now made from the denominational centers whether this system should not be dropped entirely. These modifications prove the operation of a Christian spirit in the hosts of the Lord to unify and strengthen them for victory.

"In New York, at the last election, 9,802 voters threw away their ballots by casting them for prohibition candidates," says the Chicago Tribune; and it might have added that 13,244 votes for Robert Audley Browne for Governor, and 12,468 for Elijah F. Pennypacker for Treasurer of Pennsylvania were also squandered in a very un-American manner. The New York Times joins the outcry with the charge that the Prohibitionists have played into the hands of the Democrats and by not voting the Republican ticket caused indirectly the defeat of several candidates of that party. If it is contended that a vote is thrown away simply because it is on the losing side, then a minority vote is always lost, and those who cast it have, as voters, no rights which the majority is bound to respect. Such a conclusion no political party will dare to openly endorse, for it practically disfranchises the minority and the meanest and wickedest politician has learned that even minorities may have their day of retribution. But to hold that a freeman's ballot is but so much weight in the scale of fortune is as erroneous as it is subversive of American principles. In the reckoning of the Great Judge of all affairs no ballot can be lost when cast on the side of truth, although alone; but it is worse than lost if given for falsehood and wrong though it is numbered with millions. The Prohibitionists of New York and the Prohibitionists and Anti-masons of Pennsylvania were the least prodigal of any voters in those States on Tuesday three weeks ago. Every ballot they cast was a protest against the corruption of the liquor ring whose poison has eaten through to the hoops that bind the old parties together, and party leaders acknowledge the fact with trembling.

Our Common Schools.

BY WILLIAM OLAND BOURNE.

AIR, "Star Spangled Banner."

Come, come to the call, for the conflict is near;
And the clarion is heard through the breadth of the nation,
And we rise from our sleep for the cause that is dear.
While we rally as one for our Free Education;
O ye sons of the free! Let the temple be bright,
On the rock of the Truth, with its pillars of light,
While the blessings of Freedom shall roll o'er the land,
And the School with the Bible unshaken shall stand.

Let the people be taught in the truth that we love,
In the schools of the free, and the glories of union,
As we catch the pure beams from the fountain above,
And march on in bonds of a holy communion;
Let the doors open wide! Let them ever abide,
As we build the fair temple with hope and with pride;
Till the dome shall be lost in the blue of the skies,
And the songs of the free round the altars shall rise.

Then down to the future the trust shall be given
And age unto age keep the temple forever,
While glory and peace, with the radiance of heaven,
Shall smite the bold hand that our birthright would sever;
Then come to the call! for the conflict is near!
Gird on the strong sword for the cause that is dear,
And swear by the altar where freemen have trod,
The vow of devotion to truth and to God.

Shackled in Conscience.

BY D. B. TURNEY.

It is an awful thing to be shackled in conscience and fettered with a vow of blind concealment. Yet what Freemason can possess an unshackled conscience? Freemasonry, with invariable certainty, degrades and demoralizes man. Do you ask, In what way? Why in this way: It takes from him the independence of expression, the dignity of openness, and the high and precious motives which can excite the soul to deep and holy action, by placing a seal of silence and concealment upon the lips, by putting him under vows of blind subjection, and by requiring submission to a humiliating and disgraceful ceremony of initiation. It withholds from him all that constitutes the true ascendency of manhood, and substitutes the mummeries and dumb show of regalia and display for the power of thought and wealth of research.

It is a great misfortune to be shackled in conscience. A man thus circumstanced is under a grinding yoke. Can he assist in the diffusion of truth and the unfoldment of sound principles? He must first hesitate long enough to satisfy himself that the diffusion of this particular truth will be no violation of his oath of concealment; for if it be a violation of his oath to reveal the relations of a particular truth, the conscience-shackled man must not even dare to tell the truth. But a failure to tell the truth, where God requires it to be told, constitutes an implied crime against the sovereignty of heaven and the well-being of mankind. Who can fail to see that the commission of such an implied crime must darken and pervert every pure and holy principle of the soul? The despotism of Satan over a shackled conscience is absolutely terrific. How can such a man claim that his tongue is his own? He has sold his soul for less than "a mess of pottage." A man who binds his soul with an oath that shackles his conscience, virtually sells himself to the devil. Has any man any civil or moral right to do that? Surely not.

It is a moral crime in the sight of God to be shackled in conscience. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty,"—2 Cor. iii. 17. What Paul calls elsewhere, "the glorious liberty of the children of God,"—Rom. viii. 21. Well may we ask, as did the great apostle, "Why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience?"—1 Cor. x. 29. "Our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus;" "the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free," by which "we have been called unto liberty,"—Gal. ii. 4; v. 1, 13. The word "liberty" in these passages is the Greek term eleutheria, and a very strong term it is, expressing the very opposite of any concealment or vow of blind compliance at subjection. The gospel of Christ honors true manhood, and it teaches men to have unshackled consciences. "Ye are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men,"—1 Cor. vii. 23. Do we not see that any man who enters into such an order as that of Freemasonry violates both the letter and spirit of the injunction just quoted? Certainly. He violates the letter, by promising to obey the ancient rules and usages, which oath makes him emphatically a servant in the sense of the text. He violates the spirit of the injunction, by the barter of his manhood, in yielding to he disgusting ceremonies for the sake of initiation into a so-called fraternity of men. Anything that God forbids is a moral crime; but God has forbidden this enschacklement of conscience. Should Christians deliberately countenance the commission of what they know to be a moral crime in the sight of God, by silently neglecting to point out the evils of Freemasonry and kindred bodies?

It is a judicial crime in the eyes of the civil law to participate in the administration and reception of extra-judicial oaths. These conscience-shackling societies all resort to these extra-judicial oaths, and they are so far defiant of the very government of the nation. With "all the deceivableness of unrighteousness," they persuade their deluded votaries to believe that the oath of concealment taken in a Freemason lodge is quite as binding and authoritative as any oath of the civil law can be. Civil law swears the man to "tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth;" and the extra-judicial oath of Freemasonry has sworn him to conceal a portion of the truth under no less penalty than death. If he violates his civil oath, he is guilty of the crime of perjury; and if he violates his Masonic oath, his life becomes insecure and a dread of death from the offended fraternity will haunt his sleeping hours. Thus, life is put in peril, and the stability of civil law is impaired by these midnight oaths of secrecy that so shackle the conscience and blunt the moral sensibilities of so many. No wonder every clear-headed friend of the civil law must recognize, in one form or another, that it is a judicial crime for a man to be bound by an extra-judicial oath. Every wise and prudent law assumes that any oath of blind compliance is null and void in the very nature of the case, and that men do wrong to pledge themselves to concealments. An unrepealed statute of Moses stands on record in Lev. v. 4, "Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him, when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these." Solomon, the wise king, seems to have been mindful of the law, when he says, Prov. xxviii. 10, "Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way, he shall fall himself into his own pit.' The same Solomon says, Prov. xviii. 13, "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it (which every candidate for admission into Freemasonry does), is folly and shame unto him."

It is injurious to a man's religion for him to be shackled in conscience. He loses his honor, and with it his reverence for God and the Bible. It is so well known that Freemasonry is productive of a disregard for the Bible, that I need not take up any special instances for general review. Freemasonry claims to possess the key to quite a portion of the Bible. Of course, then, that part of the Bible is comparatively worthless to us benighted outsiders, as it can only be interpreted through the traditions of Freemasonry, which traditions are not to be revealed to any who are not in the fraternity. Hence the Scriptures, in this aspect of the case, are not an authoritative rule at all. They are imperfect, except as Freemasonry furnishes the key by which to unlock and interpret the same. The Freemasons say this. Why do they thus insult the Christian world? Oh, the reason is this: They wish to bind professed Christians with their unlawful oaths, and then exultingly, by slow degrees, induce a surrender of the true light of life for the fictions of Freemasonry. The lodge system does not impart one single correct view of personal religion. Not one. It has all Freemasons at death transferred to the celestial lodge. Faith in Christ, spiritual grace in the soul, and holiness of life, are nothing; but membership in the lodge and fidelity of extra-judicial oaths, are everything. All gifts and graces are disregarded and spurned, unless found inside the fraternity. Masonic teaching has saving efficacy, but no other teaching can amount to a row of pins toward a preparation for the hereafter. If you are a Freemason, whatever else you may be, you will enter the celestial lodge at last; otherwise, if as meek as Moses, as holy as John, and as wise as Solomon, you cannot be saved. Masonry has already represented that men of the most desperate and debased characters have been fitted and qualified through Freemasonry for entrance into the highest and best circles of life. The statistics collected and published by the late Gerrit Smith, establish the fact that human life is more uncertain and insecure in a Masonic community than in any other. Murders, assassinations and deaths from unknown causes, are very frequent in most Masonic communities, and very rare where Freemasonry does not flourish. We cannot, to be sure, hold or declare that the lodge system lies at the bottom of these crimes; but we can point to the Smith statistics and allow every man to form and express his own convictions. Why do so many men mysteriously come to an end in certain communities? And why do we have in our midst an order that teaches her deluded votaries the falsehood that men have been taken by death into the celestial lodge, simply because they were Freemasons, while she has sought to blast and consign to hell every true man who has refused to obey her behests and use his dagger in her service? The blood of the murdered stains all her raiment.

It is dangerous to our government for the existence of Freemasonry to continue. When men have taken the oaths required of them in the Freemason's order, the self-invoked penalties are wielded with awful influence. Of what value to the U. S. Government can be the allegiance and support of men who owe a sworn fealty to a midnight conclave? The self-invoked penalties keep the spirit subjected to Freemasonry, and that which rules the spirit rules the man, and may ultimately will to destroy the nation. Can we, dare we trust Freemasonry?

[Concluded next week.]

Wise Cautions.—"The Protestant church is not necessarily nearer to heaven than the Roman Catholic. Mere 'protesting' against error will never save any man's soul. Mammon worship is much more dangerous than Mariolatry. A man may not believe in the infallibility of the Pope; but if he believes instead in his own infallibility. I do not know that the matter is much mended. He may laugh at transubstantiation; but perhaps he cuts himself off from the Lord's Supper. He may sneer at penitence and fasting; but gluttony and drunkenness, and enervating luxury, are, I suspect, worse devils, after all, than asceticism. He is not so foolish as to confess his sins to a priest, but, perhaps he does not acknowledge them even to God; and unconfessed sin is more dangerous to the soul than the Romish confessional. And one would rather, surely, be the poor girl devoutly telling her beads, than the profane and silly fool who would insult and mock her at her prayers."—T. C. Finlayson.

"War and the Bible."

Under the above caption is an article by James Barnett in the Cynosure of the 11th inst., objecting to one in that paper of the 30th of 9th month, commencing thus: "War transgresses almost every precept of the Holy Scriptures and all the commandments."

When we take into consideration that the Holy Scriptures embrace the Old and New Testaments, we must admit that the expression is too sweeping. I was however well pleased with the main tenor of the article criticised, and if the writer thereof had stated that war transgresses every precept of the Gospel and its commandments, the position would have been invulnerable.

Friend Barnett evidently thinks he has proved that war is justifiable because it was authorized under the old dispensation in the days of Moses, Joshua and Solomon. But if that proves it, then it is clear that a man may rightfully "put away his wife for every cause;" but Christ said very differently. "Moses," said he, "for the hardness of your hearts gave you this precept, but from the beginning it was not so." He prohibited all divorce except for one cause only, thus countermanding the Mosaic law. Who will say that a man now should be allowed to put away his wife for anything he should take a notion so to do; whenever he should get tired of her and would rather have some other woman? If war is right now because it was once authorized, then so would this be! But we would recoil at any such idea. And Christ quite as pointedly prohibited all war. "Ye have heard that it hath been said of old time, thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy; but I say unto you, love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you," etc. What is said of an "old time" command about hating your enemies has reference to the law or command of Moses to follow up and exterminate the Amelekites, the enemies of Israel; but we see Christ countermanded it, with everything of like spirit and character. "But I say unto you love your enemies." Does any one think he can do good to a person, love him and pray for him, and at the same time thrust a dagger to his heart, or blow him to pieces with a blunderbuss? Nothing could be more absurd?

Under a former dispensation men were allowed a plurality of wives. See the account of Abraham, Jacob, and their wives; also the prophet Nathan's interview with David. If war is right because it was then allowed, so is polygamy.

The law of Moses required parents who should have a son who should curse them or be disobedient to them, to "stone him to death." Does any one believe it is right for parents to serve such a child that way now, because it was commanded then? Nay, all good Christians would consider it a terrible crime. Then why not consider the laws and customs authorizing war in the same light?

It is quite evident that the prophet saw clearly into the character of the Spirit which should rule in the Gospel day, when he described that day as a time when "nation should not lift sword against nation, neither should they learn war any more."

If professed Christians could but see the utter inconsistency of all war with the benign principles and spirit of the Gospel, they certainly would not go back to that "law which made nothing perfect," for proof that it is right for one set of men to butcher another for any cause whatever. Then might we hope, with their consistent action, for the arrival of that blessed day, when "wars shall have ceased to the end of the earth," but not till then. Let them look to it, they are at present responsible for the untold, the inexpressible horrors of the battle field, and the consequent fearful extent of all manner of crime throughout the civilized world, originating through that means.

Walter Edgerton.

Spiceland, Ind., 11th mo. 15th, '75.

B'nai B'rith.

The order of the Benai Berith is a Jewish secret society, modeled after Freemasonry, and is, in fact, a Masonic creation, as its character and pretensions plainly indicate.

The inherent and indispensable nature of all secret societies is to imagine themselves far removed in origin, purposes and attributes, above all natural and divinely appointed institutions, and to instil into their members the idea that they are a superior race of beings, elevated in morals and intelligence above ordinary humanity, and peculiarly favored by the Almighty, more than the rest of his creatures. The names of many secret societies, and the personal appellations of all, are in consonance with this egotistical and self-righteous sentiment. No careful observer can fail to perceive that the members of secret societies, even the most petty, assume an air of superiority over all outsiders, and evince a feeling of contempt or pity for those not associated with them.

In Masonry, the lodge is called a "sacred temple," the floor is designated as "holy ground," the fraternity is dignified by the appellation, "Sons of Light," and all outsiders, Christians and sinners alike, are styled "profanes," while the whole Masonic brotherhood unite in singing "Hail! Masonry Divine!"

Similar societies among the Jews are not unlike Masonry in this respect. We all believe, at least the Christian world, that the whole Jewish nation are the children of promise, the sons and daughters of the covenant. The idea of separating Israel into two classes, one being the covenant people, and the other being no better than Gentiles, never could have occurred to any Jew, unless suggested by the subtle Masonic devil and propagated in a Jewish Masonic lodge. The name "Benai Berith," assumed by the Jewish Freemasons, signifies "Sons of the Covenant," and its adoption by any irresponsible and unauthorized body of Jews, open or secret, is a virtual and presumptous denial of the covenant relation of all Israel not favored with membership in the highly pharisaical order. Indeed the plain inference is that the privileges and blessings of the Abrahamic covenant inhere solely in that order, and can be shared only by its members. Such gross assumption by Jewish Masonry is an unpardonable insult to the great body of Judaism, and a high offense against Israel's God; as the similar assumption of heathen Masonry in the Christian world is a vile reproach and insult without palliation to all Christianity.

Such exalted and blasphemous pretensions by Jews and Gentiles can by no means escape the hot indignation of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the Father of our Lord and Savious, Jesus Christ. The wrath of God against such heaven-defying institutions may in mercy be delayed for a while, but when he bares his arm to strike, he will terribly shake the earth, and make a full work of their destruction.

A correspondent of the West Earl (Pa.) Banner, and a subject of this Masonic usurper of Israel's preogatives, furnishes the following items relative to the society:

"The order 'Benai Berith,' which means 'Sons of the Covenant,' is a beneficial one, and numbers now in membership twenty-five thousand. There are in the States over two-hundred lodges.

"There is one United States Grand Lodge and several District Grand Lodges, with regular lodges in nearly every large city from Portland, Maine, to San Francisco, California.

"The objects of the order are very similar to Odd-fellowship, and our motto is 'Benevolence, Brotherly Love and Harmony.' Our duties are to visit and care for the sick, to bury the dead, to educate the orphans, and to support the widows and families of our deceased brethren. We have also an endowment fund, raised by a slight taxation among our members, which pays to the wife or family of a member on death $1,000. This we do to keep the widow and orphan from want, when their supporter through life is called to his home. Our order teaches us charity to all mankind. Through the assistance of our order, there have been established some of the finest hospitals and orphan asylums in the country, viz.: the Mount Sinai Hospital, New York; the Jewish Orphan Asylum, New York; the Philadelphia Hospital for all Nations, at Philadelphia; the Home for Aged Members, at Cleveland, Ohio; and hospitals at Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, and other large cities.—Anti-masonic Herald.

The Pope's household at the Vatican numbers 537 persons. The Pope, Cardinal Antonelli, the Major Demo. Grand Almoner, and other officers, number 14; the Pope has one valet and six servants; the police administration includes 15 persons; the Secretary of State's Department numbers 29; the secret printing office, 8; the apostolic ante-chamber has a dean, 23 couriers, 3 servants, and 3 orderlies; and the Swiss Guard and the Pontifical Gendarmerie number 200 men.

Manna.

A THANKSGIVING POEM.

'Twas in the midnight that manna fell,
That fed the hosts of Israel.

Enough for each day's fullest store,
And largest need—enough, no more.

For willful waste, for prideful show,
God sent not angel's food below.

Still in our nights of deep distress
The manna falls our hearts to bless.

And, famished, as we cry for bread,
With heavenly food our lives are fed.

And each day's need finds each day's store
Enough. Dear Lord, what want we more?

The Commandments in the Scales.

Sketch of one of Moody's sermons in Brooklyn from the Daily Witness.

Mr. Moody took his text from the words in the chapter he had read: "Thou art weighed in the balance and art found wanting." He said he had tried the previous night to prove that we are all sinners and have come short of God's glory; and he intended to follow out the same line again. Said he: "I have no doubt if you had asked Belshazzar forty-eight hours before this occasion whether he was ready to be weighed, he would have said 'all ready.' And so I suppose there are thousands in Brooklyn, who, looking with their own sight, will say to-night if I want to put them in the scales

'ALL READY!' 'ALL READY!'"

He proceeded to describe the festal scene in Belshazzar's palace, as he would imagine it, its interruption by the hand tracing words on the wall, wall, the terror of the king, and Daniel's coming to interpret. Said he: "Daniel gave him a good sermon before he told him the meaning of the words. He was faithful with him. Some people might say, 'What! are you going to compare me with that heathen king!' They are worse than that heathen king, for he never had the light they have, and if God dealt so sternly with him, what will he say to them? A man said at the inquiry meeting last night, in answer to a question: 'I guess I am as safe as other people are.' That seems to be the prevailing idea—'I'll be saved if other people are.' Just suppose there are a pair of scales here hanging from the ceiling. I'll put you in them like Belshazzar and weigh you.

Let's take the Ten Commandments. Take the first commandment, 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me.' Is there a man or woman before me that has no other god? Some make a god of business, some of self, some of friends. Many never have God in their thoughts, at the family altar, or in the closet. Put them in one scale, and this commandment in the other, and up they will fly.

Then the second commandment. If you haven't actually made any graven image your heart has done as much.

The third commandment forbids swearing. Is there a profane man here? Step into the scales and how quick you will go up. You didn't mean anything? God means something when he tells you not to do it. It's a question in my mind if men would ever swear at all if God didn't forbid it. He says, 'Thou shalt not swear,' and then men begin to swear."

The attention of the audience here became intensely fixed on the speaker's words.

"Take the fourth commandment. Think of the Sabbath-breakers in America! I don't know what's going to become of this country. If God don't give us a revival, and beat back the waves of Sabbath desecration we will suffer as a nation for our sin. The politicians talk about reform. I don't pick up a paper but I find something about reform. I tell you, friends, there will be no true reform until you strike at the root of the matter. God must be honored and the Sabbath day must be kept, and the railways must quit running on Sunday. You may laugh and scoff at the idea, but God will have his own way somehow. He told the children of Israel to give the land a Sabbath by not working it every seventh year. They wouldn't do it, and they were carried up in captivity to Babylon. Look at France! In Paris you see building going on and everything the same as on any other day. England and France are side by side, and people have been looking to see which would get ahead. And now France has gone down. A nation that won't obey the word of God will soon go to pieces. There must be a good many Sabbath-breakers here to-night. Get into the scales.

Honor thy father and mother is the fifth mandate. I suppose you think I'm talking to little children now but I'm talking to grown persons. I have traveled a good deal, but I have never seen a young man who didn't care for his parents, or a young lady who would get married against the wishes of her father and mother ever to prosper.

'Thou shalt not kill.' You say you have never murdered any one. Have you never got so angry at a person that you wished him dead? God looks at the heart, and in his sight you have killed the man you wished were dead.

The seventh commandment forbids adultery. Don't think you can indulge in sinful pleasure and then it will all be well at the end." The speaker quoted many passages of Scripture to show the enormity of the offense in the sight of God. "If there is any one present living in adultery let him forsake it and repent or meet the vengeance of a just God. The cry is now that God is a God of mercy. So he is, but he is likewise a God of justice. How about the man that outraged and murdered that girl in New Hampshire, and hid away her head? When he is hung, I suppose he will go straight to the shining streets of Heaven! Do you think such pollutions have any place there?

'Thou shalt not steal.' There is, perhaps some young clerk here just beginning to take money from the till down there in the store. Perhaps he wanted to go to the theater and hadn't enough money. If you ever expect to get to heaven you must repent and make restitution. You think you are all by yourself when you put your hand in the drawer, but God's eye is on you. The religion of Jesus Christ says don't touch what don't belong to you. Get into the scales with your theft unconfessed and up you will go.

The ninth commandment means, 'thou shalt not lie.' I wonder if there is any one here who likes to slander a neighbor or to spread a scandal. And though you find out it isn't true, don't you go on publishing it round, because you don't like that neighbor very well?

'Thou shalt not covet.' Have you never coveted your neighbor's money?

Yet, perhaps some of you will say, like the young man in Scripture, 'All these have I kept from my youth up.' What about Christ's commandment: 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy might, with all thy soul and with all thy strength?' I don't think that any of these ministers here could say they did that. When I hear any one say he is perfect, I consider that an evidence that he isn't. A man once said in Mr. Spurgeon's presence, 'I am perfect.' Mr. Spurgeon said, 'We all thought so till you told us so.'

Then Christ's second commandment, 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' And none of us do that. Some of you may say, 'You'd better preach to yourself.' I admit it. The Son of God only ever kept that law."

WASTED POWER.—It sometimes happens in a mill, that a piece of shafting which has done its work so perfectly as to attract no attention, becomes bent or broken, or has a bearing displaced. Then, all at once, there is a great manifestation of power. The building shakes, machinery breaks or spoils its product, while the defective shafting, entirely unfit to do its proper work, makes more noise, attracts more attention, and to an unpracticed observer, manifests more power than before.

There is a certain class of men, who remind one of the broken or bent shaft. There is noise, and a running together of a curious multitude, who shout, "See what wonderful power!" while it is plain enough that the apparent power comes from a want of ability to do efficient labor in harmony with others. To refer to the mill again for illustration, the shafting is bent, or the bearings are out of place, so that all the force is spent in noise,—a mere shaking of the mill, and breaking of machinery or spoiling of products.—Pres. Chadbourne.

Delay not repentance one moment for if you repent not this present day, you will have a day more to repent of, and a day less to repent in.

As an example of true humility, it has been remarked, that in A. D. 59, soon after Paul's conversion, he declared himself "unworthy to be called an apostle." As time rolled on, he grew in grace, in A. D. 64, he cried out, "I am less than the least of all saints;" and just before his martyrdom, when he had reached the stature of a "perfect man in Christ Jesus," in A. D. 65, his exclamation was, "I am the chief of sinners." The bows and branches of trees which are most richly laden with fruit bend downward and hang lowest.—Day of Days.

Wisconsin.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will be held in the Wesleyan Methodist church at Sugar Creek, Walworth Co., Wis., on Wednesday and Thursday, the 2d and 3d of Feb., 1876. Elkhorn is the nearest rail road station. Teams will be in readiness, after the arrival of trains, to carry delegates to the place of meeting. Efforts will be made to secure able speakers for the occasion.

By order of the

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Michigan Notice.

The friends who subscribed to the lecture fund at the Anti-secret Association of the State of Michigan held at Fentonville, 30th of March last, and subsequently, will please forward the same or a portion of the same to me at Howell, Mich., at once, as the lecturer is in need of the same and has an order drawn on me for some over ninety dollars and no money in the treasury to meet it. Hoping that you will remember that the laborer is worthy of his hire and respond promptly to the above, I remain yours respectfully,

J. H. WILCOX, Treas.

PAST MASTER E. RONAYNE, of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, will hold himself in readiness to lecture and publicly work the degrees of Masonry wherever his services may be needed. A fair compensation and traveling expenses is all that is required. Address him at the office of this paper.

THE PORTLAND MEETINGS—A FALSE BROTHER—XENIA—A HORRIBLE AFFAIR.—LA FAYETTE.

Nov. 6, 1875.

After the State meeting at Marion, I drove home and made arrangements for Bro. Ronayne to speak in the large hall in Portland. In due time he came on with our dear Bro. Stoddard, who spoke on Saturday evening in the College chapel at Liber, to a fair audience which had assembled on a few hours notice, and a very manifest interest was excited to hear him again. On Sabbath he preached three times with a power which reached the hearts of the people and caused some to say, "Oh, if we could only have more of such preaching!" On Monday evening according to announcement, Mr. Ronayne took the neophite through the intricacies, into the refulgent "light" of the Entered Apprentice degree, in the presence of a very large audience. Several attempts were made by Masons and cowardly "jacks" to disturb and annoy the audienee; but his rebukes were well-timed and to the point, and never failed to quell the cowardly spirit of the lodge. Next evening the hall was procured by paying an extra five dollars,—the owner being a Mason! This time Hiram displayed his unparalleled courage and fidelity by refusing to give "the Master's word," and died a martyr to truth (!) Noble fellow! Then we sat and watched and waited until the fifteen days were passed, and the eventful period had arrived when the "lost was found and the dead was alive;" and then with a breath of relief we dispersed, ready to sing, Hail nonsense supreme! O, how revolting is the ugly thing in its reality!

After repeating the dose at Fairview chapel Bro. Stoddard spoke at—not in—a school-house three miles north from Portland, with his usual eloquence, and on Friday the two "ruffians" who came so far to waylay and kill poor Hiram, departed carrying with them the prayers of many of God's people for their usefulness and happiness. God will keep his faithful ones. blessed be his name.

Having remained at home until Wednesday, the 3d inst., on account of my wife's ill health, I hitched up my faithful "Bill," and started on a six weeks campaign. I ate my dinner at Balbec, and spent a few pleasant moments with good Bro. Paxson, who, on parting said, "Hit them a blow for me and I'll help pay your way." How few think of this very necessary feature of the work! How many that read these lines will think, "Our State lecturer is hitting these great evils A BLOW FOR ME, I must help pay his way!" As many as do may send their donations to my address at Portland, Ind., and request me to "hit the blow," in this practical way. But I digress.

In the evening at about five o'clock I drew up in front of the very fine residence of "brother" Bevington. He and his wife are members of the Wesleyan Methodist church at Hickory Grove, and having stopped with them a year ago, I was kindly entertained. But I learned he and his wife had joined the grange, and were too poor to take the Wesleyan. We had some argument, but there seemed to be no particular feeling. In the morning they invited me to call whenever convenient. So on this invitation, standing for a year, I called on Wednesday evening. Sister B. kindly asked me to put my horse out, as the men were away at work; which accordingly I did. In a short time Bro. B. came up and I went out to the yard to meet him; he said, "Good evening," in a very surly tone, and passed by me into the house, I followed in, whereupon he arose and went out and engaged in unloading some corn. I followed and said, "Mr. Bevington, am I to understand that my call is considered an intrusion?"

"Not much," he answered, half gruffly, half confusedly."

"I am sure I do not wish to intrude at all," said I, "and so I'll go."

Suiting my words I started to the barn, when he said, excitedly and remorsefully, "O, what did you say? Yes, you can stay if you want to; of course you can stay!" I walked to the barn, hitched Bill to the buggy, and started away just at dusk, and in the rain! I did not know a soul for ten miles further on my route, but I knew the good Lord would not allow me to suffer too much, and drove on some three miles further, where I put up with a young farmer by the name of Bachelor, a son of the treasurer of Wells county, whom I found to be a genial, intelligent, manly fellow, though a Freemason. We talked very freely, and in the morning refusing to accept anything for my entertainment, he invited me to stop whenever passing. I trust in the Lord that our friendly talk on Masonry will do him good, for he is an honest man.

Yesterday evening I arrived at Xenia, where I stayed with Bro. J. M. Darby, till this morning. I met our honest and clear-headed Quaker Secretary, Wm. Small, and altogether had a pleasent call at X. Brother Darby and family are always ready to assist in the good cause. Joseph Mills, whom I did not see, is also a staunch and large hearted friend at this place. God bless these good faithful men and women.

To-day, while stopping for dinner I learned of one of those strange, which are sometimes committed. David Robertson, a farmer in moderate circumstances, for years a resident of this (Howard) county, a member of the United Brethren church, well known as an honest and kind-hearted man, never known to quarrel in his family, on last Wednesdry evening, after the family had retired, murdered two of his children, (his oldest son, and a daughter,) and attempted to kill the wife and remaining child, who only barely escaped. The terrible deed was performed with a revolver; and, as if it were not enough to shoot the poor things dead, they were terribly mutilated besides. The wife and child having escaped, he fled for his life. Coming to Kokomo, he took the train for Indianapolis, but at an intermediate station fell from the platform and was crushed to death by the wheels of the coach. This sad affair occurred about nine miles east of Kokomo, and one mile from where I took dinner. The tripple funeral of the murdered and the murderer took place to-day.

UNACCOUNTABLE MURDERS,

I am stopping to-night at New London, with Sneed Thomas, a Quaker, and a friend to our cause; there have never been any lectures against the lodge in this county, but I think there will be soon, for we have some here who are as true as steel. To-morrow I go on to La Fayette, D. V., where you may hear from me again.

THE TUNKERS—A DYING FRIEND—LECTURES AND SERMONS.

Nov. 18th, 1875.

On Saturday morning (Nov. 6th), I was up, and just as the sun began to touch the curtains of night with the white tips of his fingers and to come in at the "gateway of the day." I bid farewell to the kind family of Sneed Thomas, who had sheltered and fed myself and horse, and was on my way to LaFayette. How superbly grand was nature in her beautiful silver attire of frost, which sparkled on trees, stones, houses, barns, fences and fields in its own diamond livery on that beautiful morning! How grand nature always is! But such is our stupidity that we fail to discover its grandeur, excepting in special manifestations.

At noon I stopped at Edna Mills, about twelve miles east of LaFayette, to feed my horse and eat a lunch which the good sister Darby had given me the day before. I observed a large number of horses, buggies, wagons and carriages hitched about the place, and upon enquiry found that the Tunker brethren were engaged in holding a meeting in a church hard by. I entered the house which was more than comfortably full, and found Bro. Jesse Calvert of Kosciusko County in the stand introducing the exercises. He preached one of the best sermons it has been my privilege to hear in a long time, from the language of the young man who came to Christ and asked, "Good Master, what must I do to inherit eternal life?"

He showed: 1st, That there is something for men to do; 2d, That keeping the moral law is not sufficient; 3d, audience, with some liberty, and good interest on their part. On Monday and Tuesday evenings I spoke to good congregations in the Wesleyan church at Montmorenci. Brother Lacy, the Wesleyan pastor, was away filling appointments and only Bro. Brown and some strange friends seemed interested. I received nothing for my services, but the assurance of having sown good seed, to be garnered in eternity.

On Wednesday evening, according to arrangements made by Bro. Steinspring, I spoke in the granger's hall, and was a good deal annoyed by interruptions by secret society rowdies, who were led on by a Mr. Freels, who acts as sexton of the hall, and who was very careful to have a collection taken for himself. He is a half-United-Brethren, half-granger, whole-"Jack" sort of man, calculated to do any cause he joins more harm than good. It is well he's in the grange. I commend him to the Masons and "Red Men."

Thursday I went to LaFayette and met brother Lacy on his way home. I met an old friend of by-gone days and That all have something to lay aside. Christ said, "Sell what thou hast, give to the poor," etc; and 4th, That all must in addition "follow" Christ. O how the shams and fooleries of the world melt away before such heaven-indited truths as this dear brother presented, with all the fervor of a true prophet in Israel! If the church and its ministry would exemplify the plain honest truth of the Gospel in theory and in practice, how it would wither and blast the hollow, pretentious humbuggery of the world!

In the evening I arrived at LaFayette, a fine, active city, claiming a population of twenty-five thousand. Here is located the State Agricultural College, in a beautiful situation on the West side of the Wabash, on the Oxford road. The buildings are large, commodious, and of a fine type of architecture. I found my friend and brother, George Layton, who had invited me to speak here, lying very sick of typhoid fever. He has since crossed the river, and is reaping the reward of a life devoted to Christ. He was a member of the U. B. church.

On Sabbath, the 7th, I went up to Montmorenci, some eight miles west, after having spent most of the night at the bedside of Bro. Layton. I stopped with Rev. John Robinson, an old minister of our Wesleyan connection, and after dinner we attended Sabbath-school near by in a granger's hall. I was called upon by the superintendent to open the school and make some remarks. Here I had the pleasure of taking the left hand of my good young brother Jacob B. Steinspring, who, like myself, has the misfortune to be destitute of a right hand.

At the request of a number of persons, I made arrangements to preach in the hall in the evening. I stopped with Bro. Steinspring and his parents who are readers of the Cynosure. They are members of the Tunker Brethren Society, and were first induced to subscribe for it by Bro. Calvert, who is a noble worker in this good cause. In the evening I spoke to a fair had a pleasant hour's talk; then came to Buck Creek station, where I found the United Brethren people in the midst of a protracted effort, and instead of delivering a lecture as had been arranged, I preached from Isaiah xlii. 4, "He shall not fail or be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law." I endeavored to show the work of God in man's behalf, and the utter wickedness of all attempts on man's part to do what God alone can do by the Gospel. That Freemasonry and secret temperance societies are attempts to supplant Christ in the heart of man; and the reforms of the day never can succeed out of Christ. God was with us very graciously, and I hope lasting impressions were made for good. Friday evening I spoke in the Associate Presbyterian (seceders) church, six miles from Delphi, Carroll county, to a very good audience of attentive listeners. Rev. S. G. McNeil is pastor and President of the Theological Seminary of the denomination. I am stopping with our good friend and brother, Rev. S. B. Huston, one of the Theological students. He and his good wife are ardent supporters of our cause. Bro. H. proposes to raise a club of ten for the Cynosure, which I am satisfied he can do here. Here are the Caruther's, the Malcolms, Millers, Johnsons, Andersons, Montgomery, Boyd, Galloway, and others, all warm friends to our cause.

MONDAY, THE 15TH. I attended service yesterday in the Seceder's church, and heard Mr. McNeil preach. He has attended one of my meetings, and I one of his, but so far I have not had the pleasure of speaking to him. I am told he is a radical anti-lodge man. One peculiar feature of this church is its "non-inter-ministerial communion." More anon, JOHN T. KIGGINS.

—A sure way of supporting our Agents and Lecturers is to become interested in their work by reading their journal of toils, struggles, hardships, encouragements and victories. Those who enter heartily into the labors of these devoted, self-denying men will not be slow to help them as the Lord gives them means and opportunity. Read the paper and help the agents.

From Wisconsin.—Agent's Report of Work.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I have now been in the State about three weeks, spent some time in getting things in motion for our State meeting, and for lectures. Have spoken four times in the Baptist church at Spring Prairie, Walworth Co. There are some earnest friends of the cause there. Some of the brethren of the "mystic tie" were considerably disturbed; one of them, Walter Durthick, made himself quite notorious by so frequently losing his "jewels," and the congregation had several hearty laughs at his expense.

Arrangements having been made for work in the town of Linn, on my way there, I stopped at Springfield, and took a box from the depot, and put it into my buggy. There were two men near by; one of them stepped up to the side of the buggy and looked at the long box, with some curiosity, and asked, "What do you carry in there?" I said, "Dead Masons. I have Hiram in there."

In a low voice he asked, "Abiff!"

I said, "Yes, Hiram Abiff."

The other asked, "Can you raise him?"

I said quickly, "Yes, upon the five points of fellowship."

He spoke Masonically of the rubbish of the temple, to which I assented; and then said, "When we find the sprig of cassia, and it comes up easily, has no root, and the ground is soft, we shall know where he is buried, and find him. We will give him the Entered Apprentice grip, and if the skin and flesh comes off, will try the Fellow Craft grip, and if that fails, (raising my hand in true Masonic style, to show how offensive the dead Hiram had become) Solomon will come and give him the strong grip of the lion's paw, and if that don't fetch him saltpeter won't save him."

Said he, "I guess you have been there."

I said, "If I haven't, who has?" and quickly raised my hand, gave the due-guard of the Entered Apprentice, to which as quick as thought they both responded; and I drove away, much amused at what had passed. They would be willing, no doubt to swear at any time that I am a true son of Hiram. But if they had known that my "dead Masons" were paintings to show up the ridiculous inside workings of the Masonic lodge, instead of drawing their hands across their throats, they probably would have wanted to draw a knife across mine.

Sunday last preached in Linn, in what was a Baptist church, but one man, who is an Odd-fellow and a Mason, and a Masonic minister have broken it entirely up, and the building was sold at auction and bid off by a Methodist. Have given four lectures there this week. There was a little rowdyism the last evening. After leaving the house, and getting away a little distance, the rotten egg argument was used, but no harm was done. The congregations have not been large. The farmers are very busy harvesting their corn, and then there are some that talk a great deal of devotion to the cause, but don't act it.

For the war, P. ELZEA.

From the Pacific Coast:

WOODLAND, Yolo Co., Cal., Nov. 10, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I will write a few lines at this time to keep you and the readers and friends of the National Association informed of the progress of the cause in this State. I cannot report much as our cause is moving rather slow as yet, having had at the best but a feeble beginning. But we have some live men in the State, if they are but few. Our agents have not accomplished much yet, as one is not well and has been at home most of the time since the organization; he is the one, too, that could lecture some occasionally. Though in feeble health, the other is keeping on hand and scattering Anti-masonic literature wherever opportunity presents itself. What we want most now is an able lecturer, sent on by the Association, or otherwise; for we will accept the services of an able man, who will offer himself to do the work. I do not doubt that such a man will get a good support.

Secrecy is more bold and fortified here than in the Eastern States, as a greater proportion of the population belong to secret orders, and almost all the State and county offices are filled by them, to a greater extent at least, I believe, than in most Eastern States. I understand that our chairman of the committee is at present in correspondence with the Association East, to secure a lecturer as soon as possible. May the right man be found to fill the important place of exposing the doings and influences of the power of darkness and secrecy and thus helping on the cause of true freedom and Christianity. A great many persons are afraid to act themselves, while still they wish the cause to go on, because (as a brother told me when I asked him to take the Cynosure, he was afraid of stirring up the wasp's nest) of the opposition, and possible ridicule and excitement they might be exposed to; but is that the right spirit? The Lord grant that all such may not only discover the necessity of the cause, but obtain of him also the moral power to act according to their conviction, regardless of the buzzing of the wasps. If we sit still, what will become of our children? They will all be lured into those secret dens and clans, to wear the shackles of tyranny and slavery forever. But if we stand firm, fight the battle according as the Lord gives us light, understanding and strength, our influence will grow, the movement will command respect, the powers of darkness will be overcome, and the buzzing of the wasps will cease.

Respectfully yours,
PHIL. BECK.

Correspondence.

Note from Samuel D. Greene on the Third Jury over Morgan's Body.

An article in the issue of the 7th of October, by "G. W. H." brings to my mind something of the history of Bates Cook and the connection of Ebenezer Griffin with the third examination of the body of Morgan at Batavia. In reading Thurlow Weed's article in the Cynosure and recollecting that a Mason took an accurate description of every article of the clothing found on the body of Morgan at Oak Orchard, I hastily sat down and wrote the article that was published, and used Mr. Cook's name where I am now reminded I should have used Ebenezer Griffin's. In relation to the buttons on the pants it seems clear to me now that the man pointed out to me as Bates Cook asked the questions; and it may have had reference to a question put by Griffin previously. I did not personally know Bates Cook, Thurlow Weed, or Griffin. The whole affair at the examination of the body of Morgan at Batavia was a confused mess; and although my recollections of the trial and the many contradictions and Masonic fabrications, I am surprised that in general I am so little mistaken.

I removed from Batavia in 1829 and did not know anything of the further history of Bates Cook.

Skeleton in a Box!

Skeletons, skulls, cross-bones and coffins are indeed a fitting symbol to that institution which swears its members to the penalty of throat-cutting, tongue-eradicating, bowel-carving, brain-smiting, etc. The supremely savage genius of the craft would very naturally suggest "bloody heads," mangled hearts and vitals of slain human victims, on the altars of its midnight orgies.

But my purpose in this writing, was, to add another case of the ludicrous kind to the skeleton list of Masonic worship, in connection with the O. F's. of Jackson, Susquehanna Co., Pa. I will tell it as told to me, not pledging for its absolute correctness; but for its substantial accuracy.

Not long since the building in which the Odd-fellows worship, took fire and put in peril their "sublime symbols" in the lodge-room. In their consternation they fell to work to lighten the ship. Pell mell, out went the precious stuff to seek safety in the air and light to which it had been so unused; and, O, shocking to relate! the unsanctified eyes of the rude "cowans," and "profanes" fell on the furniture of the lodge-room The prying eyes of little children fell on these precious things, of course desecrating all they touched. Human eyes and God's light will desecrate any lodge interior, more than the death of a thousand Morgans, by the consecrated hands of the "faithful!"

Behold a little coffin! What's that for? And here's a sword, etc. Just at this fearful crisis, in consternation up rushed the little cripple with a long-skirted coat, whether cut for the purpose or not it was surely the very thing to cover the little coffin from the light, and the rude eyes of children. (Men know better than to look at lodge stuff when it can be seen.) When our little lame friend got the little coffin from the light, and saucy eyes of those "profanes" who witnessed the sight, he presented, with his sable trophy, a most risible spectacle as he limped away with the coffin under his long coat.

We heartily congratulate the Jackson O. F. lodge in having so devoted and daring a son in this dire emergency, with a coat so well fitted to the task. May he long live to serve that sublime order, and the long coat be sacredly preserved as a lodge relic long after all the profanes have learned not to use their eyes, or the light or any organ of body or mind to the exposure of the "orders." NATHAN CALLENDER.

The Grand Master of Illinois and his Corner-Stone.

WEST UNITY, O., Oct. 23, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

As the Masonic rebels of Winnebago county, Ill., and the Southern Wisconsin Agricultural Association have failed to procure the services of His Excellency Jeff. Davis, to speak at their fairs; and as we think the suggestion of Hon. Chas. G. Williams to get some one to pronounce "a eulogy" on Wilkes Booth not quite the thing (as lions to impress the crowd should always be exhibited alive), we would suggest the propriety of procuring the services of Hon. Albert Pike; in fact, it is our opinion that he would be a decided success, probably more so than Davis himself; for though he may not be much of an agriculturist, yet we think that no friend of the "Lost Cause" would fail to listen while the hero of Pea Ridge told what he knew about raising scalps.

But we took up our pen to examine Past Grand Master Hawley's defense, or apology, or whatever it may be called, in reference to the Chicago corner-stone laying. He starts out by telling us that he laid the corner-stone "assisted by R. W. Lounsbury, D. G. M., R. W. Joseph Robbins, S. W. G., and the Masons of this and sister jurisdictions." He also stated that in point of numbers it was unsurpassed by any similar event of our time. Whether the old adage that "too many cooks spoil the broth" is applicable to Masonic stews we are not prepared to state. He tells us that these "ancient ceremonies are universally respected," yet a "few fanatical bigots" (he did not state the number), "who may be well informed on other subjects but whose ignorance and misconception of the designs and claims of Freemasonry are entitled to pity" etc., did actually forward remonstrances to the authorities at Washington against the Masons being permitted to perform the ceremonies.

From the above we learn two facts: 1st, that these ceremonies are universally respected; and 2d, that they are not. Which we leave for Past Grand Master Hawley to reconcile at his leisure.

We also learn that they never foist these ceremonies before the public unless especially invited to do so. This he claims to be a well known characteristic of this society. We fail to see the necessity for spending time to state what was already well known, unless for the simple reaaon that not one in a thousand ever knew it. But when we consider that these especial invitations usually come from Masons themselves, it makes the statement a little clearer, and we think it would be as well to have it something like the following: The Masons in office invited the Masons not in office to lay the corner-stone of the Chicago Custom-House.

Well he at length comes to the antiquity of the order, and he makes it appear in this way: "Notwithstanding this action [our remonstrances] the National Government, through its proper officers, without any solicitation on the part of the Masonic fraternity, formally invited the Grand Master of Masons of this State to lay the corner-stone of this national edifice; thereby recognizing the antiquity of our Masonic institution, perpetuating the custom pertaining thereto, and acknowledging the appropriateness of its ceremonies." Whether this made it clear to the minds of his hearers we of course don't know, but it is the best, or at least as good evidence as we have ever heard offered on the subject. But what is good evidence in one case certainly should be in another. Let us try it.

We have in our place a barber probably 35 years of age. Suppose some day he should take it in his head to become "ancient" and should proclaim to the world that he was one thousand years of age, of course no one would believe it, not even himself. Well I am in town some Saturday afternoon and conclude to get shaved. The barber's enemies remonstrate, but I with characteristic willfulness have my own way, and the next week we find the following in the papers: The barber's claim to antiquity proved beyond a doubt, on last Saturday afternoon J. G. Mattoon went to his shop and was shaved!

Now the proof is just as good in one case as the other, and if patronizing a thing is to be taken as evidence that all of its claims are true, we think it should be a sufficient warning to honest men not to patronize lying institutions. The Chicago Times as early as April said, "They have even gone so far in their unwarranted and illegal impudence as to declare that this secret society shall take possession of this government building on the day on which its corner-stone is to be laid, and shall hold possession to the exclusion of all taxpayers who are not members of this secret society," etc.; and afterwards in the same article adds, "Notwithstanding that these services are excessively odious to an immense number of the taxpayers." As the two statements "Exceedingly odious to an immense number" and "Universally respected" cannot be true of the same thing, one of course must be false, and as the Grand Master admits of the opposition, we think he might as well admit the falsehood.

But if the Chicago Times could brand the whole farce as "illegal impudence," what kind of impudence would he call the following? We have not the room for it all but this is the substance: The part in the ceremonies performed by Hon. H. W. Blodgett had been assigned by the Grand Master to the President of the United States. Here we find the Grand Master of Masons of Illinois assigning to the highest officer in our nation the work of spreading a little mortar on the stone, while he and Lounsbury and Robbins and the Masonic fraternity laid the corner-stone. We wonder why this Grand Master did not assign to Vice-President Wilson or Chief Justice M. R Waite the position of hod carrier.

But he closes by telling us that the statement "is not intended as a reply to those fanatical busy-bodies who have sought to make themselves conspicuous, but to correct misapprehensions the Masons of this and other grand jurisdictions have touching the same." So it appears that even the lodge is divided on the question of corner-stone laying. For the war,

OUR MAIL.

Walter Edgerton, Spiceland, Ind., writes: "Our people are so near all committed to some form of secret organization that it hard to do anything for the paper amongst them. I send three names and will try further and if I get any subscribers I will send on."

Mrs. E. Garte, Palmyra, Wis., writes:

"I live in a place like unto Sodom, the people are given to idolatry. Masons, Odd-fellows, Templars, and the like are in most every house. But I have taken a paper and tract to nearly every one and am working and praying."

Henry Kumler, Dayton, O., writes:

"My effort to get a new club has failed. I am sorry that it is so. But my efforts will continue for the Cynosure as it is an honest voice against the capital folly and vice of our land. For secretism sells its pretended mysteries for something when in reality it is nothing but a bore!"

J. A. Brenneman, Davis, Ill., writes:

"The friends to the cause in this town are few, at least those who have the courage to say a word against secret societies. Having myself battled in the ranks of the glorious cause of Masonry, for some years, I have faith in its ultimate success by the help of God, who rules all things for good."

Julius Cranston, Raymond, O., writes:

"I have destributed circulars and papers and think I have kept some out of the lodgs. I have not voted for more than one Mason in the last forty years, and have not been to hear one preach to my knowledge. My age is such as to prevent me from doing as much as I would like to do for your cause."

Mary C Mahan, Lexington, Ill., writes:

"It is more than meat and drink for me to work for this holy cause."

L. A. Cass, Schenectady, N. Y., writes:

"I am the only one in the college which I am attending who takes your paper, but my copy goes through many hands."

Van R. Cary, Freeport, Ill., writes:

"I am trying to get new subscribers and think I will succeed. You may count on me for one that will stand by you."

Artemas Bassett, West Chazy, N. Y., writes:

"I send you one new subscriber which is the result of seed sown over three years ago by my son in giving the Cynosure to a lady who was here on a visit."

This should encourage others who distribute our papers. Seed may grow after three or four years of waiting.

Jas. Bicknell, Stanwix, N. Y., writes:

"I wish I could do more for this blessed cause, but my means are very limited and so I can do but little in a pecuniary way I pray God to open the hearts and hands of those who have abundance that they may help in the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan."

S. M. Doane, Nunda Station, N. Y., writes:

"I like your paper very much. I don't know how I could get along without it as long as I am able to read."

James Mathews, Jordan's Grove, Ill. writes:

"One said to me that his preacher put in too much powder and shot too high. I don't think you do. You hit the mark every time. Light must penetrate the darkness. Your work and national reform must and will go together. Twice we have attempted to have Prof. Blanchard speak in Marissa, and twice been defeated. I do hope the next time any of your men come to south Illinois it will not be so. The devil must be met on his own grounds. My boys want you to send them Freemasonry Exposed by Capt. Wm. Morgan and the History of the abduction and murder of Morgan."

These books are just the thing for every intelligent boy. We hope more will be called for.

Chas. Mulholland, West Lorne, Ont. writes:

"The Cynosure is in my opinion just the paper needed in every family circle to open the eyes of all to behold the hideous monster called Masonry, that is stalking through our land comparatively unmolested and unnoticed. May God bless the N. C. A. and its organ in their great and glorious work, is the humble prayer of my heart."

Mrs. Reuben Rogers, Mauston, Wis., writes:

"I intend to take your paper as long as I can see to read."

Lesson for Dec. 5.—Jesus and Mary.

SCRIPTURE.—John xx. 11-18.—Commit 11-18; Primary Verse, 17.

11 But Mary stood without at the sepulcher weeping; and as she wept she stooped down and looked into the sepulcher,

12 And seeth two angels in white, sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni, which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father; but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

International Lessons for 1876.

The committee to select the lessons of the International Series, have agreed upon and submitted to the public their report for 1876. The lessons alternate quarterly between the Old and New Testaments. The following are those chosen for the first quarter beginning with January:

1. Saul rejected. 1 Sam. xv. 10–23 Commit to memory vs. 17–23. Golden Text: "When he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected." Heb. xii. 17.

2. David annointed king. 1 Sam. xvi. 1–13. Commit vs. 7–13. Golden Text: "And the Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward." 1 Sam. xvi. 13.

3. David and Goliath. 1 Sam. xvii.

38–51. Commit vs. 45–49. Golden Text: I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Phil. iv. 13.

4. David in the palace. 1 Sam xviii. 1–16. Commit vs. 12–16. Golden Text: "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." Prov. xvi. 7.

5. David and Jonathan. 1 Ps. xx. 35–42. Commit vs. 41, 42. Golden Text: "There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." Prov. xviii. 24.

6 David sparing Saul. 1 Sam. xxiv. 1–16. Commit vs. 9–15. Golden Text. "Recompense no man evil for evil." Rom. xii. 17.

7. Saul and his sons slain. 1 Sam. xxxi. 1–6. Commit vs. 3–6. Golden Text: "The wicked is driven away in his wickedness." Prov. xvi. 32.

8. David established king. 2 Ps. v. 17–25. Commit vs. 17–21. Golden Text: "Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established. 2 Chron. xx. 29.

9. The ark brought to Zion. 2 Sam. vi. 1–15. Commit vs. 6–11. Golden Text: "The Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation." Ps. cxxxii. 13.

10. God's Covenant with David. 2 Sam. vii. 18–29. Commit vs. 27–29. Golden Text: "Of this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus." Acts xiii. 23.

11. Absalom's Rebellion. 2 Sam. xv. 1–14. Commit vs. 1–6. Golden Text: "The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.' Prov. xxx. 17.

12. Absalom's Death. 2 Sam. xviii. 24–33. Commit vs. 29–33. Golden Text: "He that pursueth evil, pursueth it to his own death." Prov. xi. 12.

13. Review; or, A Lesson Selected by the School. Golden Text: "Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it." Ps. xxxvii. 34.

Farm and Garden.

Kansas Crops.

Prof. J. A. Bent of Wheaton, writes a very cheering letter from Kansas to the Daily Witnes. He has traveled at different times during the year throughout the State and his description can be relied on. He says:

About a year ago I sent you an article setting forth the need of aid for the pioneers on the Western frontier. The generous response made to such appeals was of most saving effect, not only in diminishing suffering in the severe winter, but in encouraging even the poorest to try again. Seed wheat was furnished or loaned in many instances, and thus the corn fields stripped by locusts being in fine condition, were sown last fall. Now this whole frontier laughs with abundance. Having just returned from an extensive trip to the borders of settlement, it is a pleasure to be able to report so favorably. Ordinarily, new settlers in this region make the corn crop the main dependence, but the seeming disaster of last year has proved a blessing, teaching them to diversify their industry. Rye is found to be a most excellent crop, both for winter pasturage and the grain. Many instances have come to my notice where milch cows in this region were kept fat on it, and gave abundant milk for the whole winter. The crop of rye also did not seem to be diminished. The excessive rains that did such damage to the wheat and oat crop in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri last summer did not prevail on the frontier; here it was warm and sunny with gentle rains, just sufficient to make all the crops in growth and harvest perfect. In Central Kansas there is a broad belt of country of the magnesian limestone formation. This is a beautiful, light-colored, easily-quarried and most workable kind of rock. Even the poor can afford to build marble houses. In Lincoln, Chase and adjoining counties, not a small portion of the homesteaders live in such houses. But what is more important, the soil in all that region is found to be remarkably well adapted to the growth of wheat and grass. So surprising were the accounts of heavy crops, that I have taken pains to go to particular localities to be sure that no mistake was made in the areas and in the quantity. I will give a few of the very best crops. Wm. Kellison, of Marion Centre, Marion county, Kansas, raised on a 2 1-2 acre tract 60 bushels per acre of winter wheat. This was on the bottom land of the Cottonwood valley. Great care was taken in the estimation, as a bet had been made on the yield of the field. The straw stood very even and over five feet high, and so dense were the heads that a felt hat slung on the field would be upborne. Capt. A. D. Lee of Cowley county, Kansas, had 1,100 bushels from a twenty acre field. His wheat weighed 63 1-2 pounds to the bushel, Early May variety of winter wheat. Jerial Wilcay, of Augusta, Kansas, raised on a 6 1-5 acre tract in the bottom at the forks of the Whitewater and Walnut, 365 bushels of machine or rounded measure. This reduced to the legal bushel of 60 pounds, amounted to 62¼ bushels per acre. I measured this tract carefully, weighed the wheat, and found that a machine bushel weighed 64½, and a struck bushel weighed 62 1-4 ponnds. This is the largest yield I have heard of. The ground had been sown for several years to wheat, and was not manured or fertilized by artificial means. The crop was drilled, and the variety brought from Southern Illinois, was called "Gold Dust," a small berry resembling. but a little longer than the Early May. I saw a sweet potato at Wichita Eagle office that weighed 5 1-2 pounds, and a gopher, or mole, had apparently gnawed out a habitation in it.

There is a squash, in color resembling the Hubbard, on exhibition at the office of the Land Department of the Atchinson, Topeka and Sante Fe Railroad, that weighs 190 pounds. Thus are we taught our dependence on him who causeth his winds to blow and locusts to cover the land; anon His winds bring abundant rains, and the land is weighed down with plenty.

Home and Health Hints.

Equalization of Clothing.

It is now the season of the year when people should observe great care in their clothing. How often is it that clothing thrown aside during a "warm spell" is not replaced until it is too late, or catarrh takes possession of the frame, often becoming chronic? But just as bad a habit is the one of overloading one part of the body with clothing whilst another part is scantily supplied. Particularly is this the case with females; often they are seen wearing heavy shawls, and have on their feet light slippers, a small hat or bonnet, with a feather stuck in it, as a covering for their heads. Children are seen in very cold weather partly clothed, being bareheaded, limbs naked, with a thick round-about, and perhaps an overcoat.

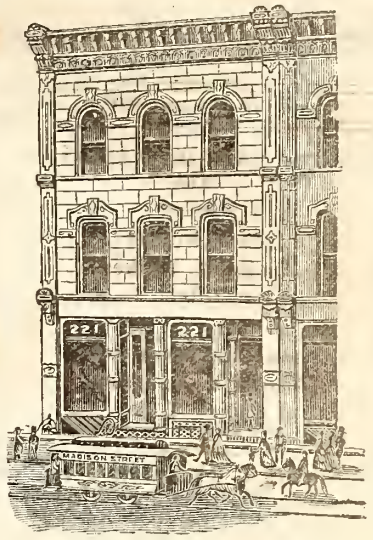
It is also true that tight fitting clothes are a serious evil; but a far greater one is their unequal distribution upon the person. One part over-clothed, and another not half-clad, is a very common condition, especially among women and children. Women are governed by fashion; children are governed by women; and it is the great resource of fashion to produce new effects by piling on the textures, now here, and now there, and by leaving other parts exposed. If the declared purpose were to induce disease, no surer or more effectual way could be found to do it than this. The derangement of the circulation is direct and immediate. Its healthy equilibrium is destroyed; the thinly dressed lose their blood to the more vascular; and internal derangements give rise to various chronic bodily ailments; such as scrofular, phthisic, pneumonia, consumption and death.—Selected.

Consumption.

Consumption is not a disease of the lungs, but one of the system, showing itself in the lungs. If you fully comprehend this, you are for the common sense treatment.

Avoid all that local treatment by inhalation, all the panaceas, including whiskey and cod-liver oil (fashionable to-day, exploded to-morrow), employ those natural methods about which wise doctors have never differed.

1. Walk, in all kinds of weather, two or three times a day. If too weak for this, begin with the saddle.



2. Hang by the hands in rings suspended from the ceiling above the door, swing backward and forward, sideways and in a circle. The effect on the walls of the chest is very remarkable. I have known such swinging to reduce the pulse very sensibly in a week. In each exercise continue until slightly fatigued.

3. Wash the entire skin with tepid water and good neutral soap every morning, on returning from the first walk, and rub the skin to redness every night on going to bed with a sharp hair glove. Lawrence's English patent gloves are the best. All druggists sell them.

4. Sleep much, retire before nine, adding a nap in the middle of the day. Never forget that good ventilation during the hours of sleep is vital in every case of diseased lungs.

5. Eat for breakfast and dinner, oatmeal, cracked wheat, beef, mutton, plain bread, potatoes and other vegetables, except tomatoes. Use no pastry or other trash. Eat no supper.

6. Cultivate jovial people. Laughter is the most precious of all possible exercises for chronic long suffering.—Sel.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to Treasurer of the N. C. A.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

COR. SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard.

TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg.

GEN. AG'T & LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard.

—The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations (drafts or P.O. orders) should be sent to the Treasurer; general correspondence, etc., direct to the Corresponding Secretary. Address both at 13 Wabash Ave. Chicago.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY MOV. 11, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT.
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

"FAS EST AB HOSTE DOCERI."

Mr. Edmond Ronayne appeared to those of us who heard him at Peoria, a truly wonderful personage. Our readers will remember that he was born of Romish parentage in South Ireland; and has made his way, led as we believe by the angel of God, as Peter did, out of the prison of popery to where he now stands. He seems to have been born with two leading qualities in him, viz.: honesty and fearlessness; and as he has found his way among Christians fearless and honest like himself, he seems to respect a Christianity which dares, as Christ did, to assail popular evils; and his tone has improved from meeting to meeting, and our subsequent acquaintance with him has more than justified our first announcement of him as the possible John B. Gough of the anti-secret cause. For Mr. Ronayne's benefit, and to show our readers how little the Mason's "jacks" can say against him, we insert the following cowardly notice of him from the Peoria Transcript:

"The Masonic Expose.—Turner Hall was crowded, last night, with an audience gathered to witness a Masonic expose, by Edmond Ronayne of Chicago. The speaker is evidently an Irishman, apparently about fifty years of age, and speaks so rapidly that it was next to impossible to understand him. Previous to the Masonic ceremonies, he delivered an address principally devoted to a defense of himself, and explaining why he left the order and is now working against it. He was exceedingly bitter against Masons and Masonry. We stayed only a few moments after the expose began, and have only to say that if the ceremonies gone through with were a true representation of those occurring in Masonic lodges they are good, but awful dull."

This beggarly notice is from an editor who says he never was a Mason, and that he believes Freemasonry to be selfishness. He said, too, he would have a reporter for his paper at our meeting. But the low growl of the lodge intimidated him, and he gave next morning the above flat and silly paragraph about a meeting which stirred up Peoria as it seldom was moved before.

But Mr. Ronayne is now about where Moses was when he slew the Egpytian who abused an Israelite. Moses felt sure, as Mr. Ronayne does, that God had sent him to free the people from that priestly imposture and oppression of which the lodge boasts itself the descendant. But he had not yet learned that "The wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God," and that "Without Christ we can do nothing." Christ alone is Master of the spirits that rule the world's darkness; and "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his."

A WORD FOR THE WAVERING.

Franklintown, York Co., Pa., Nov., 1875.

Enclosed please find $2.20 for the Cynosure for past year. "Am much obliged for past indulgence." I am in the midst of a glorious revival of religion at an appointment called Mt. Victory in Cumb. Co., Pa., on York Spring Circuit, Pa. Conference. Eighteen persons have professed conversion; there are still a number seeking salvation. I have no difficulty in getting the people into the church (the United Brethren in Christ), though I invariably tell them that we will not admit them unless they sever their connection with secret societies. This you will observe is the circuit on which we had the anti-secret lectures near two years ago and our churches are open for more of the same sort. At our camp-meeting held in Adams Co., Pa., there were some excellent remarks made by Father John Fetterhoff of Chambersburg, Pa., which met with a hearty response from the entire membership; and were looked upon with approval by others. Even lodge men acknowledged them timely and sensible. We have two very energetic young men working in the interest of this great reform, H. Herman and I. Vanscoyoe. May the Lord bless them both and make them very successful. Yours truly as ever in the Lord, L. A. Wickey.

No more convincing argument can be made to put courage into the souls of weak brethren in reform churches than such testimony as this and others like it frequently coming to the notice of our readers. It is the Lord speaking by the visitation of his Spirit and proving again the promise often quoted to cheer steadfast souls in 2 Cor. vi. 14–18, closing: "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate sai h the Lord. and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

This letter leads naturally to a consideration of those individuals in the United Presbyterian, United Brethren, Free Methodist or other testifying churches who do not stand by their brethren in upholding church covenant and discipline. A few who have taken this position may be insincere and unworthy persons who have mistaken their religious impressions, and while in the church are acting "the liar's part;" others may err through ignorance in advocating the lodge; but the great number are weak in faith and stumble through the fear of man which "bringeth a snare." The first class will fall upon their faces, confess their sin and repent, or else separate themselves from godly men, when the wavering souls fairly meet the promise of the Lord and take an open stand for Christ against every system or suggestion that does not honor him.

The Bible in Schools.—The following we clip from the papers:

"Philadelphia, Nov. 10th.—The church congress of the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States, reassembled, to-day. Papers on the best methods of procuring and preparing candidates for the ministry were read at the session yestarday. Rev. Clement M. Butler, D. D., of Philadelphia, in speaking af the school question, said: We should abandon the irreveren farce and desecration of the perfunctory reading of the Bible in our public schools."

Does it seem possible that this can be the utterance of a Doctor of Divinity of that church for which Cranmer and Latimer suffered in the flames! When this Protestant Episcopal priest "regenerates" a babe by the "perfunctory" use of an absolete or absolescent ritual, he comes much nearer an "irreverent farce," than when young children, in schools, read, as Sir William Jones read, in a "public school," the angel pictures of the Apocalypse, which that great scholar cited in his whole after life, as the very acme of the sublime.

National Reform.—The National Association, organized to maintain existing Christian features in the American government, and to secure the Religious Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, met in Philadelphia, on the 9th inst., for the transaction of its annual business. The Hon. Felix R. Brunot, of Pittsburgh, President of the Association, occupied the chair. Steps were taken to secure articles of incorporation, under the name of the National Reform Association. The maintenance of Sabbath laws, the retention of the Bible in the common schools, the defence of the judicial oath and other Christian features of the government, and the securing of suitable religious acknowledgements in all new State Constitutions, were expressly recognized as among the objects of the society. The next national Convention was appointed to be held in Philadelphia during the last week in June, 1876.

A convention for promoting holiness noticed elsewhere in this number has just been held at Wheaton, Nov. 15th to 19th. The ministers who conducted it were Rev. Mr. Carnahan (Baptist) of Dixon; Rev. Mr. Kent, President of the Western Holiness Associaton, Lacon, Ill.; Rev. Mr. Brooks, editor of The Banner of Holiness, Bloomington, Ill.; and Rev. J. J. Fleeharty of Neponset, Ill. The last three ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church. A notice of the convention more at large may be expected next week. An article on "The Bible Doctrine of Holiness," which will also be in the next number, was read as a part of a sermon in the College chapel on the Sabbath evening before the convention.

Iowa Lecturers.—The Christian Expositor thus notices the Rev. J. M. Dosh, a minister of the United Brethren church. and an ex-Mason, who was appointed Bro. Haukins' assistant in the lecture work:

Our friends who are desiring the services of a lecturer upon anti-secrecy, will do well to confer with Rev. J. M. Dosh, State Lecturer of Iowa. We have not consulted Rev. Dosh, but feel warranted in saying that he can be engaged for a reasonable compensatons. He is a lecturer of whom the friends of reform may well feel proud. He is competent to give faithful expositions of the workings of the Masonic order, having once sat in the councils of the mystic circle. Why not engage at once upon an active campaign against secrecy? In the next few months, telling blows might be struck for the cause of, truth, if our efforts are properly concentrated. If the principles of the lodge are properly presented to the people of Iowa, there will be a wonderful awakening from the deep sleep into which they have gone, through the soft lullabys of the dark orders. Bro. Dosh can be addressed at Van Meter, Iowa.

—The General Agent was speaking last week in Homer and other points in Calhoun county, Mich. We expect to hear next from him in New Hampshire and other points in New England.

—There may be good and sufficient reasons for the necessity which led Bro. Wilcox, treasurer of the Michigan State Association, to insert the notice which will be read elsewhere. It is due to a charitable judgment to suppose there are. But will not the brethren interested look over the Lord's account and see that it does not run behind. Make haste to put this arrearage out of sight forever.

—A like difficulty, but perhaps worse, exists in New York. The Wesleyan notices the close of Elder Barlows labors for the year, and the notable deficit of over two hundred and forty-five dollars. The brethren round about Syracuse have lifted to the last pound. Where is the faith that pledged the meager salary last year at Lockport, or the works that prove the faith? Asleep? Dead? Has the Lord so fulfilled his promises toward any brother in New York? Don't be afraid to look this matter fairly in the front and remember the words of the Master:

"With what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again." Remember, Bro. M. Merrick of 148 East Rail road St., Syracuse, is the State treasurer, and will be glad to receive your donations to the State fund.

—A blessed forerunner of the New Hampshire State meeting at Lake Village this week is reported. A general revival of religion has been in progress there and will without doubt receive a new impetus from the short visit of Christian men from all parts of the State who are willing to endure all things for the Gospel's sake. It is said that business is being generally suspended in order to give all persons an opportunity to take part in the gracious work.

—The papers state that Mr. Spurgeon has taken strong ground in a recent speech against the exclusion of the Bible from public schools. He said: "Why should that which ought to be an essential part of education not be believed in on account of half a dozen infidels? Why should the reading of the Bible be given up to please them, making infidelity the national religion of England? and badly as I think of the present religion, I certainly prefer it to having Mr. Bradlaugh Archbishop of Canterbury, and his doctrines taught as the religion of the age. One thing is certain, the churches must feel that the religious education of the people rests entirely upon them, and they must be doing their work."

—Among the notables at the last meeting of the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows in Indianapolis, was Mr. W. C. Park, an American by birth, but for twenty years a resident of the Sandwich Islands, and now chief marshal of that kingdom. He is also a prominent Mason, and can probably tell by what persuasions King Kalakaua was induced to become subject to the false oaths of secretism.

—The following item from the United Presbyterian throws light on the troubles in Brazil between the Masons and the papists and also confirms the idea that the Marquis of Ripon when leaving his place as Grand Master of England for the ranks of Rome fell naturally that way because the papacy was the only antagonist of the order with which he was acquainted: "Colonel Forney, in writing from Europe, says that in Catholic countries the Freemasons and Catholics are hostile to each other, and that the lodge is the most active enemy the Pope has. But he also says the fight of the Masons against the Pope has the effect not of making them seek some other religion, but of depending on their Masonry and making that a religion. This is the case in this country and everywhere else. When the lodge can get into a church that will foster it, it may or not do so, as it thinks best; but rather than let a church pursuade it to obey the law of Christ, it will set its face against the church and say it has religion enough in itself."

—The nation is again called to mourn. Vice-President Henry Wilson died at his room in the Capitol at Washington on Monday morning soon after 7 o'clock. His disease, the apoplexy, had a sudden and fatal termination.

Important Notice.—New York.

It is of the utmost importance to the progress of "The New York State Christian Association opposed to secret societies," that its friends should meet in council in Corinthian Hall, Rochester, in goodly numbers on the 7th and 8th of December next, to take into consideration the subject of ways and means, and the best plans for future aggressive action against the common foe. We have no election; we must fight; and our warfare must be aggressive, or we shall be driven from the field. We have aroused the enemy and drawn his fire and have learned his power, and know that in God we are mightier than he, if in his panoply and strength we press the battle to the gates. To go forward is victory—simply a question of time. To withdraw our forces and give up the contest, is cowardice, infamy, defeat, loss of self-respect, the contempt of the world and the displeasure of God.

Arrangements are making for a "feast of reason and flow of soul!" Men will be present with "thoughts that breathe and words that burn!" But we do not ask you to come merely to be feasted with what others say and do. You are wanted for stern work; you are wanted for sacrifice. We want the wisdom of your heads, the love and courage of your hearts, the money from your purses, and the faith in God that moves mountains. We want to see the men "whose heads have been made bald and their shoulders peeled" in bearing burdens against the fortresses of sin, and who will not flinch at sight of even greater burdens, knowing that in due time their full reward shall come.

Come up, ye strong ones! We want to look you in the face—give and receive strength. Come up to the meeting, ye faint-hearted, and be made strong! Come every lover of Christ and hater of anti-Christ! Come ye who know the evil in the lodges, and come to swell our ranks against the secret foe. Come, you who are ignorant, and learn your danger while it may be overcome, and help us drive from its lurking-places, Freemasonry and its mongrel whelps, now devastating all the fair fields of our God-given church and state.

Come one, come all! Friends, who have entered on this warfare, and who, though faint, are yet pursuing, call you with a Macedonian cry. A beleaguered church calls you. An imperilled government calls you. Justice, driven from her sacred halls by a secret foe, calls you. God calls you. Let nothing but duty keep you away from Rochester on the days above named. There has never been a time when your presence and assistance was more needed than now; never a time when you could do the cause more good. In the meantime make supplication unto God, with full consecration to all God's work.

Religious Intelligence.

—One of the main causes of the outbreak in the Herzegovina was their feeling of indignity offered to their religion. Many of the Mohammedans are Christians who have changed their faith. The Mohammedans take advantage of every opportunity offered to insult and ridicule the Christians in their worship and religion, by mock processions in priest's vestments, etc. In a paper presented by the insurgents to the International Commissioners, the burden of complaint was that Christians could obtain no justice before a Turkish tribunal.

—From the monthly report of Bible work in Chicago, conducted by Miss Dryer and others, it appears that, besides a great amount and variety of other work, ninety-four cottage prayer-meetings were held during October.

—The last census of the United States shows that there is one church for every 522 persons; that while from 1850 to 1870 the population increased 66 per cent, (we lost a million lives by the war) the churches increased nearly 90 per cent.

—The religious denominations of Philadelphia are getting ready for the coming of Moody and Sankey. A large building at the corner of Thirteenth and Market streets is being fitted up for them. Much interest is shown in the prayer-meetings which are now held in anticipation of the coming of the evangelists. Rev. E. P. Hammond is preparing the way by holding meetings in West Philadelphia.

—A letter from Rev. William Winans, a reformed sailor preacher, says that there is quite a revival of religion and temperance in West Woodstock and Pin Hook, Oxford county, Maine. He visits from house to house with his Bible; reads and prays, and invites the family to meetings in school-houses, where he preaches and lectures on temperance.

—The English revisers of the Old Testament held their 34th annual session October 8. The first revision of Isaiah was completed, and that of Jeremiah carried as far as chapter ii., verse 31. The New Testament revisers held their 58d session October 12. Their work extended to the middle of the 9th chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians.

—The State Congregational Association of Nebraska met at Omaha, Oct. 29. The present number of Congregational churches in the State is eighty-one, an increase of ten in the year.

—Rev. Thomas P. Hunt, a member of the Presbyterian Synod of Philadelphia, brought before that body at its meeting, a few days since, a resolution calling for such a course in the Theological Seminaries as would lead students of theology to a more thorough study of the Bible.

—The Presbyterian Board of Education is receiving a large number of candidates for the ministry at each of its semi-monthly meetings. At the last meeting there were 146 whose recommendations were satisfactory. The total number already received this Fall is 276.

—Mr. Moody is expected to be present at the dedication of his North Side Tabernacle in January. The building is nearly completed. Over $20,000 were received for it from the publisher of Sankey's hymn book, the copyright of which was given him by the evangelists when they went to London, with the condition that all the proceeds should be used in some way to advance the kingdom of Christ.

—At the late Wesleyan General Conference a new agency in the church was created, that of General Evangelist. Bro. N. Wardner of New York has been chosen to undertake the work. He labors among the churches in every part of the country without salary or support except such as the generosity of the churches prompts.

—Moody and Sankey closed their Brooklyn meetings on Friday night with undiminished attendance and the blessings of hundreds. They took train Saturday morning for Philadelphia where they will begin with a week of meetings especially for Christians. They are expected to return to Chicago about New Year's.

—A Holiness Convention of great and permanent interest was held in Wheaton, Ill., last week, closing on Friday. The various churches united and crowded meetings were held. Ministers of the Baptist, church conducted the meetings, assisted by Pres. Blanchard, Dr. J. B. Walker and pastors of the place, some of whom with members of the College faculty with students and citizens in considerable numbers are seeking or have received the blessing of holiness.

News of the Week.

The City

Mr. H. H. Taylor, a wealthy manufacturer, died recently and left by will the bulk of his property in the hands of trustees to found a new charity which is most needed and will do the most good and least harm; or, if no new charity is needed the Home of the Friendless receives the legacy which will amount, it is believed, to $500,000 or more.——On Friday evening Martine's Dancing Hall, a large frame structure was totally destroyed by fire and six firemen were severely injured by the falling of the building.——The county commissioners have heretofore constructed the law to allow the county treasurer a salary of $10,000 beside some $2,000 commission. Since the late election and defeat of the Hesing-thief combination they find that $4000 is the limit of the law for the new treasurer.——The county-ring board is also defeated in its plan to capture the new court-house and defraud the city with an unsightly, poorly built structure at enormous cost. The protest of citizens and prospect of the work being taken from their hands by process of law is enforcing some regard for former agreements between city and county with a prospect of a fine building.

General.

Senator Ferry of Connecticut died at his home in Norwalk on Sunday.——Two men were frozen to death in Maine last week.——Another great storm has occurred off the east coast of England which was most disastrous to fishing craft, and many lives were lost.——In the negotiations now proceeding for the settlement of the troubles in the Turkish provinces, the programme put forward by Austria includes a comparatively high degree of self-government for the Christian communities in Turkey. Russia seems to demand only more faithful adhesion to the promises of reform already made by the Porte.——More than one hundred priests and nine canons of Rhenish Germany have given submission to the ecclesiastical laws.——Many of the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine are expecting to emigrate to this country and will settle in Pike county, Pa.——The body of Guiford was buried at Montreal last week without any riot. The police and military were out in force, but beyond a few insults the Catholics made no resistance. The coffin was encased in a large quantity of cement which solidifying will protect it from desecration.

The Home Circle.

Thanksgiving.

An old red house upon the hill,
Half hidden 'mong the beeches,
A quaint old barn whose gable still Above the house top reaches:
An orchard old but fruitful yet,
Which lines the meadows even,
A deck stone well above whose curb
A long sweep points to heaven,
A barn-yard wide where feathered tribes
In unison are dwelling,
Where noble fowl of every breed
Their daily loves are telling;
Where meek-eyed kine await the maid
Who comes with pails a-gleaming,
Just when the glories of the sun
Across the meads are streaming;
A polished floor beneath the roof,
And chairs of braided willow,
And beds so high that any one
Must climb to reach the pillow;
And curious portraits on the walls
Of grandsires stiff and hoary,
Whose good old souls long years ago
Passed peacefully to glory;
And paper curtains bright and green
Tied up with strings of cotton,
And grandma's chair beside the hearth,
'Twill never be forgotten:
For tho' her three-score years and ten
Have passed and gained increase,
She lingers still, a link between
Our cares and heaven's peace;
Ah, me, this room so quaint and queer
Is memory's dearest chancel;
'Tis hung with fancies which the years
May never, never cancel;
They fill with joy my solitude
When silence sets me dreaming,
For in my heart no cares intrude
When their glad light is beaming.
To-morrow's dawn, thank God, once more
I'll see the homestead olden,
And greet again around the board
The gray heads and the golden;
Will take from out the year of care
One day for peaceful living,
One day for rest and praise and prayer
And hearty true thanksgiving.

"Not an Enemy in the World."

It is occasionally said of an individual, "He has not an enemy in the world." I have often thought that such a man is much to be pitied; yea, more, to be blamed. A case of this kind reminds us of that Scripture which saith, "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you."

How can an individual live in this sinful and selfish world; and faithfully discharge his duties in carrying forward every benevolent and moral enterprise of the day, and have no enemies? Can he oppose infidelity, intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and many other evils with which our land is filled, and have no enemies?

I pity the man who has so little energy of character, who is so wanting in independence of thought and action, who so invariably floats with the current of popular sentiment, as to live in the world without an enemy. Such a man is a slave to popular sentiment. He has no opinion of his own, nor does he act from a sense of duty, but to please others. If such a man is happy, his happiness does not arise from a consciousness of having done right, but from the simple fact that he has no enemies. His is a kind of happiness that men of good sense will scorn. He who has so little character, so little energy and enterprise as to live without an enemy, is easily led, but will never be a leader. Such a man would hardly dare to change the color of his house without general consent. In buying and selling he will consult the opinions of others, and governs himself accordingly.

This man has no opinion of his own; at least none to express, hence he never gives offense. When unjustly opposed, he makes no manly and dignified resistance. If individuals plan the destruction of his temporal interests, and dictate to him terms disastrous to his welfare, he makes no serious objections. He is considered as of no consequence in the world, and he acquiesces in that opinion. If he dies without an enemy, it is because he never lived like a man. The true spirit of men, a noble, generous, independent, persevering spirit was not in him. There is nothing in such a man to create in the minds of others emotions of hope or fear. Such a man is without point, position, argument or conclusion, with reference to any and every question that agitates the public mind. There is nothing in such a man to oppose; no wonder he has no enemies.

I should rather have two enemies to one friend, and be a freeman, and enjoy a consciousness of my freedom, than to live and die without an enemy, and without being a man in the world. Even if an individual is poor, he can and ought to be a man—a man of independent thought and action. The poor man has a right to his political and religious opinions; he has a right to select his own business in life, and to prosecute it with energy, provided it does not conflict with the principles of the moral and civil law. If enemies oppose, let them show their strength; if envy frowns, let it alone, and it will become its own tormentor. If the dogs bark at the moon, all the moon has to do is to shine on.

A man of principle, of noble independence, will treat others with all the respect their conduct merits, but he will not throw himself away, and repudiate his very manhood. He may renounce a profession, a calling, or any pursuit in in life, but he will still be a man, and claim the rights and privileges which God has given to man, irrespective of age, color, or position in society. Such a man will not bow down to a childish and fancied aristocracy to secure friendship and win smiles, which are of no practical or permanent value when secured. If a man does right, and in a lawful manner pursues his calling, if he labors diligently, and like a free, unbribed man pursues his course with manly independence, having due respect to the legal and moral rights of others, it is barely possible that Haman may prepare a gallows, but God will prevent the execution.

Let no young man seek to make friends and retain the friendship of the world at the sacrifice of himself, but rather let him strive to be right, and cultivate in his heart a determination to be a man, and a disposition to retain his rights as a man. He should do it at all times and under all circumstances regardless of consequences personal to himself. Such a man will make his mark in the world, and secure the confidence, respect, and friendship of every man whose influence will contribute to his wealth, reputation, or happiness.

The best men in the world—men who have had an opinion of their own, and the moral courage to express it, men of enterprise and improvement—have had enemies in life and death. They lived for their own good and the good of others, and never dreamed of permanent rest and universal friendship, short of that world "where the weary are at rest, and the wicked cease from troubling."—Bible Banner.

Religious Languor.

In a private letter from London, occurs a mention of a sermon recently preached by Mr. Spurgeon, in which he expressed the belief that the reason preaching was not more effective, was because the truths were not sharply enough believed by the preachers. The effectiveness of Mr. Spurgeon's preaching certainly suggests that a deep wrought conviction is a great element of power. The same remark applies to nearly all great preachers, to the old English divines, the reformers, and the great evangelists. "According to your faith-be it done unto you," is a truth every minister should have engraved on his heart. And that faith is not enthusiasm or hopefulness or courage. It is the prostration of the soul upon the truth. It is a conviction pressed into the life by experience and passing through the whole being, like the iron through the blood. It is the assimilation of God's truth into mortal manhood. Then preaching will not be making a sermon. It will be the irresistable impulsion of faith. It will be the outgoing of the man in the doctrines that are his life. "I believe, therefore, have I spoken." Faith is the only good reason for religious speech.

But the relation between conviction and power, applies not only to speech. It applies as plainly in Christian life. Is the church often a powerless witness in the world? Is it often hard to draw the line between those who love God and those who love him not? We will find the reason in the lack of faith not only in God, but in the truth we profess to believe. The difference between belief and faith is only this; by the former we hold the truth; by the latter it holds us. The former has no determining influence on character, but faith in proportion as it is real, commands the entire life. The truths we hold are grand and awful enough to sweep every thought, affection, and purpose before them. Holding them in a feeble faith we are standing on the bank of a historic stream and seeing how finely and strongly its waters move at our feet. But when those truths pass into our being, we are like one who is caught in the central current of a great river, and borne smoothly on its way. Why do we ask languidly in prayer for things over which our souls should be in agony? Because our conviction is only a sentiment. Why do we drift into the world-conformity when we should shun of the very appearance of evil? Because the Master's call for separation comes feebly, muffled in hearts that feebly hold the truth. Why, instead of earnestly contending for the faith in daily conduct is our Christian life more a parade than a battle? Because our faith in God is held more as an ornament than as a shield or a sword. Why is the world full of sneers at the church? Because they see no deep conviction, no intensity of life that burns in the words, shines in conduct, and even marks and bends the countenance to its mighty behest.

Getting comfortably to heaven is more to us than living valiantly on earth. Old Lyman Beecher used to say, "Eloquence is logic on fire." A Christian life should be the Son of God on fire in a human heart. We believe glorious and dreadful things, so glorious, so dreadful, the world could not resist a life that would faithfully reproduce them. Let us hide the Word of God in our hearts, till it melts into our experience, till it reappears in new forms in our prayers, our actions, the tenor of our lives, and then we will understand that the depth of our faith measures the breadth of our influence. —Interior.

Burying Ground of Giants.

The Carlisle, Kentucky, Mercury says: On the farm of Mr. Harrison Whaley, near Moorfield, in this county, is a skirt of wood which possesses characteristics of deep interest. About three inches beneath the surface of the entire tract, may be found innumerable bones, evidently the remains of a distinct species of the human race. Several mounds are also in the woods, and in one which has been partially explored, were found skulls and bones, which, from their size, must have belonged to a race of beings far more gigantic than the race which now inhabits the earth. In this mound were also found many utensils; also arrow heads cut out of the solid rock, and pipes of the same material.

Such a memorial of the past starts many inquiries. Was the place once a battle ground, where the aborigines fought to maintain the glory of their representative tribes? or was it a common burial ground? The first seems to be the most plausible theory, inasmuch as the whole tract, covering at least fifteen acres, has a multitude of human bones but a few inches beneath the surface. It is evident that they were never buried, but originally lay exposed to view, until the accumulated deposits of time formed the black, rich soil that covers them. But whatever theory may be adopted, it is certain that these bony memorials anti-date history, and furnish another proof of how little is known of the races and tribes who flourished, it may be, centuries ago.

Secrets of the Inquisition.

The correspondent of the London Daily News describes the visits he has paid to the many small, dark, and damp dungeons of the Inquisition at Rome, which has lately been thrown open to the public. The correspondent says:

"The officer in charge led me down to where the men were digging in the vaults below; they had cleared a downward flight of steps, which was choked up with old rubbish, and had come to a series of dungeons under the vaults deeper still, and which immediately brought to my mind the prisons of the Doge under the canal of the Bridge of Sighs at Venice, only that here there was a surpassing horror. I saw imbedded in old masonry, unsymmetrically arranged, five skeletons in various recesses, and the clearance had only just begun; the period of their inser tion in this spot must have been more than a century and a half. From another vault, full of skulls and scattered human remains, there was a shaft about four feet square ascending perpendicularly to the first floor of the building, and ending in a passage off the hall of the chancery, where a trap door lay between the tribunal and the way into a suite of rooms destined for one of the officials. The object of this shaft could admit of but one surmise. The ground of the vault was made up of decayed animal matter, a lump of which held imbedded in it a long silken lock of hair, as I found by personal examination as it was shoveled up from below. But that is not all; there are two large subterranean lime-kilns, if I may so call them, shaped like a beehive in masonry, filled with layers of calcined bones, forming the substratum of two other chambers on the ground floor, in the immediate vicinity of the the very mysterious shaft above mentioned."

There is faith which tends to idleness, trusts God to do all, and leaves the soul stupid and powerless. There is a faith that worries, and works, and hopes that God will help. And there is a better faith, that works mightily, because it loves fervently, and never worries because it never fears. Love will, must work, and cannot be idle; it comes from God, breaks out in prayer, praise and service, like springs which cannot be suppressed. It is spontaneous, and grows by use. Faith that works by love is a tonic to the soul, girding it by bold endeavor, making it like God in active doings, in every service which can assuage a grief, relieve a pang, or impart a joy.

Across the Street.

A THANKSGIVING STORY.

Such a cold, gloomy day as it was, with the wind sweeping in strong gusts through the dusty streets, while the low gray clouds sailed along in great sullen-looking masses, promising snow by and by. But in spite of the dreariness of the weather, there were many happy hearts on that bleak November morning, for it was the day before Thanksgiving, and preparations for that time of rejoicing were going briskly forward in nearly every home in the great, busy town.

There was one house, however, in which there was none of this pleasant, unusual bustle; the kitchen fire was performing no more exalted duty than boiling potatoes, and the shelves of the little pantry were quite bare, instead of being loaded with golden pies and snowy cake, as they usually were.

Up stairs the father was lying where he had been for weeks, ever since he had fallen from a house where he was at work, injuring himself severely, though not fatally, as it was feared at first. After long days of suffering and danger he was slowly climbing back to health and strength again, but he still needed almost constant attention, and his wife scarcely ever left him, as was testified by her thin, worn face, which was pale and weary-looking, in spite of the brave, cheerful smile which was always ready when her husband looked that way.

Down stairs the rest of the family, a girl of nine and a boy of seven, were standing by the sitting-room window, looking at the crowds of people as they hurried by, and sometimes gazing at the house across the street, where through the windows of the basement kitchen, they could see busy forms moving about, none seeming busier than three children, who appeared to be everywhere at once.

"O, Elsie," sighed the boy disconsolately, "doesn't it seem too bad that everybody else is going to have Thanksgiving but us? There are the Grahams that'll have turkey and everything, and we just won't have nothing."

"I know," said Elsie; "it seems as if I couldn't hardly stand it sometimes; but then, Willie, mamma says it isn't just the dinner that makes the Thanksgiving day, and that we ought to have it more than anybody else, because God has given papa back to us again."

"Well, I am glad of that," said the boy; "but Elsie, there's George Graham that's going to have a good dinner, and his papa too, and I don't see why we can't."

"I don't know why," said Elsie, looking troubled, "but God does, Willie, and if it was best for us he'd give us our dinner too; maybe if we had it you'd get sick—you know you did last time."

Evidently this was a rather mortifying recollection for Master Willie, for his face grew very red, but he said: "O, I was little then, and didn't know any better. I wouldn't eat too much now."

"Willie," cried Elsie, while her face grew fairly radiant, "I wonder if God wouldn't give us our dinner if we'd tell him how much we want it, let's ask him and see."

This proposition did not seem at all strange to Willie, for Mrs. Murray had tried to teach her children the same simple faith in our Father's promises that she had herself, and the two little ones knelt down side by side, and began their prayer.

"Dear Father," said Elsie, "we are so thankful that our papa is getting well; but, since he's been sick, we've grown very poor, and mamma says she hasn't money enough to get anything good for dinner. We can't help getting a little tired of bread and potatoes, so if you would please send us a turkey we would be so glad." "And cranberries," broke in Willie earnestly, "and pies, and everything." "And if it isn't best for us to have these things," conclude Elsie softly, "please help us to bear it, for we're only little children, and we do want them so much."

"Do you really think he will send them, Elsie!" asked Willie when they were again at their post by the window.

"I know he will, if it's best," said his sister confidently; and for the rest of the day the two little faces were unclouded sunshine.

Thanksgiving dawned through a veil of snowflakes, and the streets of the town were decked in white, as for a holiday. A merry party gathered around Mr. Graham's breakfast table, chattering like a bevy of magpies, the mother said. Suddenly there was a ring at the doorbell, which Georgie answered, returning with a telegram which had just arrived for his father.

Mrs. Graham turned pale for a moment, but was speedily reassured by a laugh from her husband, who proceeded to read his dispatch aloud. "Tom here," it said, "come over to dinner; be sure to bring Betsy." There was an uproarious burst of delight from the children, while their mother bowed her head in tearful thankfulness; the message was from her father, who lived in a neighboring town, and Tom was a dear younger brother who had been away from home for two years.

Betsey, who had come with Mrs. Graham when she was married and left her father's house, was called in and made glad by the announcement that she was to go with them to see her boy, as she persistently called Mr. Tom Davis, though he towered full six feet three inches, and wore a most formidable moustache. Frantic preparations were at once commenced for a departure by the ten o'clock train, when suddenly Betsy reappeared, with a puzzled face to know what should be done with the dinner which was standing just ready to be cooked.

"O, it will keep till to-morrow," said Mrs. Graham, while George and little Belle cheered vociferously at the prospect of two Thanksgiving dinners. Thoughtful Jessie alone was silent; and, at last, her mother noticing this said, "What's the matter, dear?"

The little girl colored, as she always did when called upon to express her thoughts, but her mother's smile gave her confidence, so she said bravely: "Mamma, you know you told us last night that a great many people would have no good dinner to-day, and I was just wondering whether the best way to thank God for bringing Uncle Tom home again wouldn't be for us to send our turkey and things to some body that hadn't any."

Mrs. Graham's eyes filled with tears, as she listened to her earnest little daughter, but she turned to her husband saying, "And what does papa say?"

"Papa votes for it with both hands," said Mr. Graham heartily; "now, to whom shall we send a Thanksgiving dinner?"

"If you please, sir," said Betsy, "I was over yesterday afternoon to Mr. Murray's to take him some jelly, and I went in the back way. Mrs. Murray wasn't in the kitchen, so I stepped into the pantry, and, sir, there wasn't a bit of pie or cake, nor even a duck or a chicken on the shelves. You know he's been laid up a long time, and I s'pose they've no money to buy such things."

"Thank you Betsy," said Mrs. Graham. "I think that is the very place; now we must get the things ready and send them over."

"Please may I help?" asked eager little Belle, dancing around on the very tips of her restless little toes. "And I?" chimed in the others, "mayn't we too, mamma?"

"Yes, my darlings," said Mrs. Graham, "every one of you shall help to make a glad Thanksgiving day for the little children across the street."

"Won't they be glad?" said Jessie; "there they are at the window now," and the three pressed eagerly forward to nod and smile at Elsie and her brother. They, poor children, had very little breakfast that morning, and, although they had watched till bedtime the night before, and had been gazing from the window all the morning, there were as yet no signs of the expected dinner.

"Do you think it'll come, at all, Elsie?" asked Willie, rather despondingly.

"I don't know," said his sister, "but I think it will."

"Maybe God has forgotten," suggested the boy.

"Why, Willie Murray!" exclaimed Elsie in horror, "don't you know that God never forgets? Maybe he doesn't think its best for us to have a good dinner, but he hasn't forgotten, anyway."

"Do you see George Graham nodding at us?" said Willie. "O, yes, said Elsie. "and there's Jessie, too, and dear little Belle. I wonder what they're all looking so pleasant about."

The little Grahams disappeared from the window, but in a few moments the great front door opened, and quite a procession emerged therefrom and came across the street. Mr. Graham was in front, carrying a huge basket, while Belle trotted beside him, hugging a can of oysters tightly in her chubby little arms; Mrs. Graham and Jessie came next, with their hands quite filled, while Betsy brought up the rear, with another large basket, of which Georgie was fully persuaded he carried the heavy side. They went in at the gate, and, by the time they entered the kitchen, Elsie and Willie were standing there, with eager faces, almost afraid to believe in their own good fortune.

"We brought you your dinner," said Belle; "ain't you glad? there's pies in papa's basket, but he wouldn't let me carry none, for fear I'd break them; I brought the oysters, though; don't you like oysters?"

Before the bewildered children could reply, their mother came in, and then, after a brief explanation, the dinner was unpacked. Such a lovely dinner as it was; there was a great turkey, whose death must have thrown the whole barnyard into mourning; there Belle's oysters, and chicken salad, crisp, snowy celery, and cranberries which sparkled like rubies; there were mince pies with tender, flaky crust, and a great golden sponge cake, which was a fitting accompanyment for the quivering mass of amber jelly with which one dish was filled. Poor Mrs. Murray could scarcely express her thanks, while the two children seemed almost as much surprised as pleased, which was explained by Willie, who said to Jessie, in wondering tones, "How did God tell you?"

"I don't think I quite know what you mean," said the puzzled little girl.

"Why," pursued Willie, "we asked him to please send us our dinner, and there's every single thing we asked for, and more too. It seemed so long to wait, that I was afraid maybe he had forgotten, but Elsie said she knew he hadn't."

"No, dear," said Mrs. Graham, laying her hand softly on the little girl's head, "he never forgets, and he sent us here with your dinner because you asked him; always remember that."

They were all silent for a moment, then Betsy said something about the train, at which the Grahams all rushed away to get ready for their journey, and I don't believe there were two gladder families in all the goodly land of ours than the one which went whirling away on the cars, to see "dear Uncle Tom," and the one to whom their thoughtful, heaven-directed kindness had given a happy Thanksgiving day.

FELLOW CRAFT DEGREE Concluded.

These globes are two artificial, spherical bodies on the convex surfaces of which are represented the countries, seas, and various parts of the earth, the face of the heavens, the planetary revolutions and many other important particulars. Their principal use besides serving as maps to distinguish the outward parts of the earth and the situation of the fixed stars is to illustrate and explain the phenomena arising from the annual revolution and the diurnal rotation of the earth around its own axis. They are invaluable instruments for improving the mind and giving it the most distinct idea of any problem or proposition besides enabling us to solve the same. Contemplating these bodies we are inspired with a due reverence for the Deity and his works and are induced to encourage the studies of Astronomy, Geography, Navigation, and the arts dependent upon them by which society has been so much benefited.

Senior Deacon:—(to candidate) Let us pass on. (They pass out between the two pillars and proceeding a few paces arrive at the first piece of oil-cloth which is supposed to be the foot of the winding stairs, where they stop.)

Senior Deacon:—(to candidate) We next arrive at a representation of a flight of winding stairs consisting of three [3], five [5] and seven [7] steps. The number three alludes to the three degrees of Ancient Craft Masonry, the Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason. It also alludes to the three principal officers of the lodge, viz., the Worshipful Master, Senior Warden and Junior Warden.

Senior Deacon:—(to candidate) Let us pass on. They move on a few paces more, the candidate being made to walk over the supposed three steps and having arrived at the second piece of oil-cloth they again halt and the Senior Deacon proceeds:

Senior Deacon:—We next arrive at a representation of the five steps. The number five alludes to the five orders in architecture and the five human senses.

By order in architecture is meant a system of all the members, proportions and ornaments of columns and pilasters, or it is a regular arrangement of the projecting parts of a building which united with those of a column form a beautiful, perfect and complete whole.

From the first formation of society order in architecture may be traced. When the rigor of seasons obliged men to contrive shelter from the inclemency of the weather, we learn that they first planted trees on end and then laid others across to support a covering. The bands which connected those trees at top and bottom are said to have given rise to the idea of the base and capital of pillars and from this simple hint originally proceeded the more improved art of architecture.

The five orders in architecture are thus classed: namely, the Tuscan, the Doric, the Ionic, the Corinthian and the Composite.

In some lodges, and especially in cases where the Senior Deacon is desirous of exhibiting his superior attainments in Masonic knowledge, he here gives the candidate a lengthy description of the different orders, all of which however he has memorized from the Monitor and is therefore termed monitorial work. In country lodges this is scarcely ever done and indeed in the best of city lodges it is never more than tiresome and meaningless to the candidate and a bore to the members generally. The following therefore is all that is usually repeated and indeed all that the lodge wants to listen to:

Senior Deacon:—(to candidate) The ancient and original orders of architecture, however, as revered by Masons are no more than three: the Doric, the Ionic, and the Corinthian which were invented by the Greeks. To these the Romans have added two, the Tuscan which they made plainer than the Doric, and the Composite which was more ornamental if not more beautiful than the Corinthian. The first three orders alone, however, show invention and particular character and are essentially different from each other; the two others have nothing but what is borrowed and differ only by accident; the Tust can is but the Doric in its earliest state and the Composite is only the Corinthian enriched with the Ionic. To the Greeks therefore and not to the Romans are we indebted for all that is great, judicious and distinct in architecture.

The human senses to which this number five has a further allusion are hearing, seeing, feeling, smelling and tasting; the three first of which namely hearing, seeing, and feeling have always been considered as peculiarly essential to Masons for by hearing we hear the word, seeing we see the signs and feeling we feel the grip whereby one Mason may know another in the dark as well as in the light.

Here as in the case of the orders of architecture the Senior Deacon wishing to "show off" repeats a lot of trash, dilating on the five senses which he learns from some Monitor (see Sickles' Ahiman Reson pp. 138-145; also Mackay and Web).

Senior Deacon:—[to candidate) Let us pass on.

They then move on a few paces further and arrive at the third piece of oil-cloth where the candidate is again halted by the Senior Deacon, who says:

Senior Deacon:—We next arrive at the representation of the seven steps. The number seven alludes to the seven liberal arts and sciences, which are Grammar, Rhetoric, Logic, Arithmetic, Geometry, Music and Astronomy.

A Senior Deacon possessed of the spirit of egotism and vainglory, having learned his part from Sickles, Moore or Mackay, would, especially if prominent visitors were present, rehearse here a pedantic and unintelligible essay on the beauty and usefulness of the liberal arts and sciences, while at the same time he may know no more (and indeed never does) of what he is repeating than a North American savage does of the transit of Venus, but as the whole matter is printed and accessible to every member the silly vanity of the Senior Deacon is very seldom tolerated and hence he almost always contents himself with the following:

Senior Deacon:—I will however call your attention more particularly to the fifth science or Geometry, being that which is most highly esteemed among Masons.

GEOMETRY.

Treats of the powers and properties of magnitudes in general where length, breadth and thickness are considered, from a point to a line, from a line to a superficies, and from a superficies to a solid.

A point is a dimensionless figure, or an indivisible part of a space.

A line is a point continued, and a figure of one capacity, namely, length.

A superficies is a figure of two dimensions, namely, length and breadth.

A solid is a figure of three dimensions, namely, length, breadth and thickness.

THE ADVANTAGES OF GEOMETRY.

By this science the architect is enabled to construct his plans and execute his designs; the general, to arrange his soldiers; the engineer to lay out grounds for encampments: the geographer, to give us the dimensions of the world, and all things therein contained; to delineate the extent of seas, and specify the divisions of empires, kingdoms, and provinces. By it also, the astronomer is enabled to make his observations, and to fix the duration of time and seasons, years and cycles.

In fine, geometry is the foundation of architecture, and the root of the mathematics.

Senior Deacon:—(to candidate) Let us pass on.

Having walked over the last strip of oil-cloth representing the seven steps the Senior Deacon continues:

Senior Deacon:—We next arrive at a representation of the outer door of the middle chamber of King Solomon's temple which we shall find strongly guarded by the Junior Warden in the South who will demand of us the pass and token of a pass of a Fellow Craft. Let us attempt to pass.

By this time they have arrived in front of the Junior Warden's chair where the Senior Deacon gives three raps with the end of his rod on the floor. The Junior Warden rising to his feet, says:

Junior Warden:—Who comes here?

Senior Deacon:—A Fellow Craft on his way to the middle chamber.

Junior Warden:—How does he expect to gain admission?

Senior Deacon:—By the pass and token of a pass of a Fellow Craft.

Junior Warden:—Give me the pass.

Senior Deacon:—(answering for candidate) Shibboleth.

Junior Warden:—What does it denote?

Senior Deacon:—Plenty.

Junior Warden:—How is it represented?

Senior Deacon:—By a sheaf of wheat suspended near a water fall.

Junior Warden:—Whence originated this word as a pass.

Senior Deacon:—In consequence of a quarrel which long existed between Jephthah, judge of Israel, and the Ephraimites. They being a turbulent and rebellious people whom Jephthah long sought to subdue by wise and lenient measures but without effect. Being highly incensed and fraught with vengeance at not being called to fight and share in the rich spoils of the Ammonitish war they gathered together a mighty army and crossed the river Jordan to give Jephthah battle, but he being apprised of their intent assembled the men of Gilead gave them battle and put them to flight and to make his victory more complete he ordered guards to be placed at the different passes of the Jordan and commanded them, saying, "If any should pass that way say ye unto them, say thou shibboleth," but they being of a different tribe could not frame to pronounce the word right and said sibboleth, which trifling defect proved them to be enemies and cost them their lives. And there fell at time forty and two thousand of the Ephraimites. Since which time this word has been adopted as the pass by which to gain admission into all regular and well-governed lodges of the Fellow Crafts.

Junior Warden:—(to Senior Deacon) Given me the token.

Senior Deacon taking Junior Warden by the right hand presses the top of his thumb hard against the space between the first and second knuckle. See fig. page.

Junior Warden:—The pass is right, the token is right; pass on.

Senior Deacon:—(to candidate, moving on slowly. We shall next arrive at a representation of the inner door of the middle chamber of King Solomon's temple which we shall find more strongly guarded by the Senior Warden in the West who will demand of us the grip and word of a Fellow Crafts. Let us attempt to pass. (About this time they arrive in front of Senior Warden's chair where the Senior Deacon gives two raps as before calling the Senior Warden to his feet.)

Senior Warden:—Who comes here?

Senior Deacon:—A Fellow Craft on his way to the middle chamber.

Senior Warden:—How does he expect to gain admission?

Senior Deacon:—By the grip and word of a Fellow Craft.

Senior Warden:—Give me the grip.

Senior Deacon taking Senior Warden by the right hand, presses the top of his thumb hard against the first knuckle of the second finger (see fig).

Senior Warden:—What is this? (pressing his thumb on the corresponding knuckle of Senior Deacon's hand.)

Senior Deacon:—The real grip of a Fellow Craft.

Senior Warden:—Has it a name?

Senior Deacon:—It has.

Senior Warden:—Will you give it to me?

Senior Deacon:—I did not so receive it neither will I so impart it.

Senior Warden:—How will you dispose of it?

Senior Deacon:—I will letter or syllable it.

Senior Warden:—Letter it and begin.

Senior Deacon:—Begin you.

Senior Warden:—Nay, you must begin.

Senior Deacon:—A.

Senior Warden:—J.

Senior Deacon:—C.

Senior Warden:—H.

Senior Deacon:—I.

Senior Warden:—N.

Senior Deacon:—Ja.

Senior Warden:—Chin.

Senior Deacon:—Jachin.

Senior Warden:—What does it denote?

Senion Deacon:—Establishment.

Senior Warden:—By the right hand pillar at the entrance of King Solomon's temple.

The Senior Deacon and candidate moving slowly from the Senior Warden's chair towards the East the Senior Deacon says:

Senior Deacon:—(to candidate) Brother Jones, we are now within a representation of the middle chamber of King Solomon's temple, where you will find the Worshipful Master in the East who will give you your first instructions relative to the wages and jewels of a Fellow Craft. (The candidate is by this time in front of the Master's chair where he is left standing by the Senior Deacon who takes his usual seat.)

Worshipful Master:—(rising and addressing candidate) Bro. Jones, you are now within a representation of the middle chamber of King Solomon's temple where you will be received and recorded as a Fellow Craft. (Turning to Secretary) Bro. Secretary, you will please make the record.

Secretary pretending to write, answers:

Sec'y:—It is so recorded, Warshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(to candidate) Brother Jones, in your advancement hither you met with various objects of interest which more particularly attracted your attention: the first of which was a representon of two brazen pillars, one on the left the other on the right, which were explained to you by brother Senior Deacon. You next arrived at a representation of a flight of winding stairs consisting of three, five and seven steps, which were also explained by your conductor. Having passed the winding stairs you arrived at a representation of the outer door of the middle chamber which you found partly open but strongly guarded by the Junior Warden in the South who demanded of you the pass and token of a pass of a Fellow Craft which were given by brother Senior Deacon. You then arrived at the inner door of the middle chamber which you found more strongly guarded by the Senior Warden in the West who demanded of you the grip and word of a Fellow Craft and which were in like manner given by your conductor. You are now within a representation of the middle chamber where you have been received and recorded as a Fellow Craft and are entitled to the wages and jewels of a Fellow Craft. The wages of a Fellow Craft are corn, wine, and oil, emblematical of the corn of nourishment, the wine of refreshment, and the oil of joy; denoting peace, health and plenty. The jewels of a Fellow Craft are the attentive ear, the instructive tongue, and the faithful breast. The attentive ear receives the sound from the instructive tongue and the mysteries of Masonry are safely lodged in the repository of faithful breasts.

Worshipful Master:—(pointing to the letter G, continues) My brother, I will now call your attention to the letter G, which you will find invariably suspended over the Master's chair in all regular and well governed lodges of Fellow Crafts. It is the initial of

GEOMETRY.

Geometry, the first and noblest sciences, is the basis on which the superstructure of Freemasonry is erected. By Geometry we may curiously trace nature through her various windings, to her most concealed recesses. By it, we discover the power, wisdom and goodness of the Grand Artificer of the universe, and view with delight the proportions which connect this machine. By it, we discover how the planets move in their respective orbits, and demonstrate their various revolutions. By it we account for the return of the seasons and the variety of scenes which each season displays to the discerning eye. Numberless worlds are around us, all framed by the same Divine Artist, which roll through the vast expanse, and are all conducted by the same unerring law of nature.

A survey of nature, and the observation of her beautiful proportions, first determined man to imitate the divine plan, and study symmetry and order. This gave rise to societies, and birth to every useful art. The architect began to design, and the plans which he laid down, being improved by time and experience, have produced works which are the wonder and admiration of every age.

The lapse of time, the ruthless hand of ignorance, and the devastations of war, have laid waste and destroyed many valuable monuments of antiquity, on which the utmost exertions of human genius have been employed. Even the temple of Solomon, so spacious and magnificent, and constructed by so many celebrated artists, escaped not the unsparing ravages of barbarous force. Freemasonry, notwithstanding, has still survived.

The attentive ear receives the sound from the instructive tongue, and the mysteries of Masonry are safely lodged in the repository of faithful breasts. Tools and implements of architecture, and symbolic emblems most expressive, are selected by the fraternity, to imprint on the mind wise and serious truths; and thus through a succession of ages, are transmitted unimpaired the most excellent tenets of our institution.

But my brother this letter (pointing to the G) has a higher and a holier significance (gives three raps calling up the entire lodge) It alludes to the sacred name of Deity, before whom all from the youngest Entered Apprentice who stands in the North East corner of the lodge to the Worshipful Master who presides in the East together with all created intelligences should with reverence most humbly bow (the Master and all the bretbren bow, he gives one rap and the lodge is again seated).

Worshipful Master:—This my brother, concludes the second or Fellow Craft degree in Masonry and nothing more remains but to give you the charge of a Fellow Craft.

The Master then repeats from memory the following charge. If he prides himself on being a good worker he of course learns the charge by heart and repeats it without the book, but if he is dull, as many Worshipful Masters are, he reads it as best he can.

CHARGE OF A FELLOW CRAFT.

BROTHER:—Being advanced to the second degree of Freemasonry, we congratulate you on your preferment. The internal, and not the external qualifications of a man, are what Masonry regards. As you increase in knowledge, you will improve in social intercourse.

It is unnecessary to recapitulate the duties which as a Fellow Craft you are bound to discharge, or to enlarge on the necessity of a strict adherence to them, as your own experience must have established their value. Our laws and regulations you are strenuously to support; and be always ready to assist in seeing them duly executed. You are not to palliate, or aggravate, the offenses of your brethren; but in the decision of every trespass against our rules, you are to judge with candor, admonish with friendship, and reprehend with justice.

The study of the liberal arts, that valuable branch of education, which tends so effectually to polish and adorn the mind, is earnestly recommended to your consideration; especially the science of Geometry, which is established as the basis of our art. Geometry, or Masonry, originally synonymous terms, being of a divine and moral nature, is enriched with the most useful knowledge; while it proves the wonderful properties of nature, it demonstrates the more important truths of morality.

Your past behavior and regular deportment have merited the honor which we have now conferred; and in your new character, it is expected that you will conform to the principles of the order, by steadily persevering in the practice of every commendable virtue. Such is the nature of your engagements as a Fellow Craft, and to these duties you are bound by the most sacred ties.

The foregoing together with the ceremonies used at opening and closing constitute the second or Fellow Craft degree. As in the Entered Apprentice degree so also in this when a brother is passed he is turned over to some other brother to be posted, and having learned the ritual of the first section, he is afterward publicly examined in open lodge and being found proficient and the ballot being found clear he is ready to be raised to what is termed the "sublime" degree of a Master Mason.

CHAPTER VI.

The following is the portion of the ritual of the Fellow Craft degree which must be earned before seeking advancement and in which as already stated the candidate is examined either by the Worshipful Master or more generally by the brother who has done the posting.

LECTURE.

Q. Will you be off or from?

A. From.

Q. From what and to what?

A. From the degree of an Entered Apprentice to that of a Fellow Craft.

Q. Are you a Fellow Craft?

A. I am, try me.

Q. How will you be tried?

A. By the square.

Q. Why by the square?

A. Because it is an emblem of morality and one of the working tools of a Fellow Craft.

Q. What is a square?

A. An angle of ninety degrees or the fourth part of a circle.

Q. Where were you prepared to be made a Fellow Craft.

A. In a room adjacent to a regularly constituted lodge of Fellow Crafts.

Q. How were you prepared?

A. By being divested of all metals, neither naked nor clad, barefoot nor shod, hood-winked and with a cable-tow twice around my naked right arm, in which condition I was conducted to the door of the lodge by a brother.

Q. Why had you a cable-tow twice around your right arm?

A. To signify that as a Fellow Craft I was under a double tie to the fraternity.

Q. How gained you admission?

A. By three distinct knocks.

Q. To what do they allude?

A. To the three jewels of a Fellow Craft.

Q. Which are the three jewels of a Fellow Craft?

A. The attentive ear, the instructive tongue and the faithful breast. The attentive ear receives the sound from the instructive tongue and the mysteries of Freemasonry are safely lodged in the repository of faithful breasts.

Q. What was said to you from within?

A. Who comes here?

Q. Your answer.

A. I, "Septimus Jones" who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice and now seeks more light in Masonry by being passed to the degree of Fellow Craft.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pagenes,
Price $1.35.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M.E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month. but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in thiecause of God are poor men, who would be gladto circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them frec.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLETRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosure Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimitednumber of his tract addressed "To THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." It is anexcelent tract, bearing the printed endorsement of Executive Committee of the National Christian Association1 He has furnished the public over 150.000 pages ofthese tracts during the past year.

Now for "a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together."

Prospect for Clubs.

There is about one month more of 1875 in which to work, and we trust it will be improved by our many readers who desire the enlarged circulation of the Cynosure. If all will do as much in proportion to their opportunities as the lady who wrote the following from West Salem, Ohio, the Cynosure will soon have a paying mail list:

Nov. 17th, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I have been endeavoring to raise a club of ten subscribers. I spent three days and a half and got two subscribers, one for a year and one for six months. I tried to do all in my power for the cause of anti-secrecy. I traveled around about ten or fifteen miles trying to get subscribers. I found a great many who say they will vote when it comes to that.

Another agent says: "I am already at work to bring my three month's subscribers to annuals. I expect to send you a large club by New Years." The more such New Year's presents the Cynosure receives the better. A third, John Fetterhoff, writes: "I came to this place on a visit, but I have not forgotten the Cynosure, therefore I made an effort in this place to get subscribers, and succeeded in getting seven." We call this a good visit. Rev. H. S. Limbocker, Litchfield, Mich., has sent in a club of eleven subscribers this week. How many clubs of ten or more can we report next week?

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING Nov. 25, 1875, FROM S Aldrichs, G Allen, J Bicknell, J Bell, A Bassett, P Barnard, A Bichard, W Cheetham, G Camp, S M Doane, J T Davis, J Finney, J Fetterhoff, M Good, P L Goss Mrs G W Hanks, J S Hickman, T Hodge, W H Herrington, P Kribs, J T Kigains, Rev H Kinsley, Low, J Lautz, C M Livesay, W N Lowell, G Leaming, J Levitt, H S Limbocker, R McClelland, A Mitchelson, C Mulholland, P McWilliams, J P Morr, H W Marsh, A Mitchells, R D Nichols, D Platner, L E Packard, L Perry, Mrs R Rogers, Miss H A M Reid, J Reid, B F Seagles, J Simons, J Strubble, J Strock, S H Skinner, P S Snyder, Mrs M J Wheaton, W Whittin.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

C & N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California.

Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota. One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton. Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

Topics of the Time.

The National Grange met in Louisville, Ky., last month, and among its transactions was the adoption of a marriage ceremony. The order is thus self-confessed to be a religious institution which worships some divinity after its own self-projected ordinances, or else it proposes to make a farce of a solemn ceremony. What with lodge burials and baptisms and marriages any Divine supervision of these affairs will soon become needless for secretists.

Princeton College, New Jersey, has long had a rule against the nuisance of college fraternities, and all students agree before matriculation to observe this rule. The lodge influence however stole in and began to show its incontinent head. The faculty has acted bravely and expelled twenty-two recalcitrant students, eighteen of whom are seniors. It is safe to say that neither the college will suffer in purse or reputation nor the remaining students in scholarship or character from this prompt action.

—The Masonic Jewel of Memphis, Tenn., has learned that three Masons, "without fear of Grand Master Bell, or the Grand Lodge of Arkansas before their eyes" have been making Masons in Crittenden county, Arkansas. They were in need of a new lodge, and not having the necessary number of Masons to secure a charter, began to manufacture them to meet the exigency. But, though these Masons were thereby violating all their obligations as much as any seceder ever did or could, the Grand Master of Tennessee, who edits the Jewel, has no rebuke for them, but considers the matter a good joke. Now Mr. Ronayne does the same thing, i.e., makes Masons without asking leave of the Grand Lodge. He, moreover, does this with an infinitely higher object. The Arkansas Masons wanted to set up a permanent night school where they proposed to rob consciences of their integrity and turn kind-hearted men into Hessians. Mr. Ronayne, animated by the desire that all men shall know the truth and abhor deception, avarice and irreligion, is explaining before crowded houses the fraud and darkness of the lodge by making Masons in the most public manner, and the most approved style established by the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Why should not all worthy men and Masons second his efforts?

The trial of the whiskey ring at St. Louis beside being a victory for the government, has brought to light an extensive conspiracy by which the government was methodically defrauded by distillers and revenue officers. The same conditions apparently exist in Milwaukee, but so far the courts have not succeeded in breaking the ring The transactions of the ring were carried on with all the secrecy and safeguards used by the lodge and though the direct connection of the two were kept from sight, there is little doubt of their active co-operation. A few years since a gentleman who had been proprietor of a distillery near Chicago, and had in that connection become intimate with all the details of the ring in this city, said that Freemasonry was closely and directly connected with all its operations. This he knew from personal knowledge. An active Mason in Wheaton Lodge, No. 269, and for some years a gauger in Chicago, has been indicted for defrauding the revenue of over fifty thousand dollars. If he chose to do so, he could, no doubt, tell of the double fraternity of the ring. The attempted intimidation, threats of personal violence, or of burning property of liquor manufacturers not in the ring are unmistakeably Masonic. The whole business from first to last is such as men whose consciences are seared by contact with the lodge would find congenial. While it adds materially to the revenue, yet the enormous frauds, and expensive official machinery kept up to prevent them, subtract largely from the gross receipt. And so long as the Government practically licenses the trade without discrimination of its purpose, whether for the arts or for the dram-bar, it will be a fruitful source of fraud and bribery.

The Bible Doctrine of Holiness.

[The following paper was read as a part of the printed programme before the Elgin Congregational Association at Huntley, Ill., by the Senior Editor of the Cynosure. in October last. It was favorably noticed in the Advance. The subject of the paper makes it very important.]

Absolute holiness, infinite opposition to all moral evils, belongs only to God. In men, holiness is conformity to the nature and will of God, or freedom from sin. Since men have been on earth, it has been obvious to all but the morally blind that they are fallen; and the great problem of morals to the Enochs and Elijahs of the race has been how to reverse the fall; and their followers have, in all time, substantially copied their ideas, and adopted their methods. They have sought to restore men by contemplation or by action; by "walking with God;" or by assailing the idolatries of men. The first class, of which Jacob Behmen and George Fox were types, have sought by one doctrine or other, to absorb men into the nature of God. They are the Quietists and Mystics of all ages; while reformers and iconoclasts have been followers of Elijah. Both of these orders have furnished men worthy of being translated as were their great prototypes. Fenelon and Madam Guyon sought to cleanse man's inner temple by the indwelling of God; Wickliffe, and Huss, and Luther, sought to reform the outer world by assailing the idolatries of nations. Both classes too have furnished men of defective mind and character who have stained history and dishonored their cause by their follies, vices and crimes. Monks and mere mystics represent one of these sort of persons, and Jehu and Sampson, mere iconoclasts, the other.

When our Saviour came on earth his name, Jesus, declared his mission, to save men from their sins i. e., to make men holy, and as his cotemporaries understood him, in this present life. When the angel made this annunciation to Joseph, the presumption is, that "Just man" had not a thought of salvation from sins in any other world but this. Nor it is probable that he had any such question in his mind as that of entire or partial sanctification. The prophets had all along taught that national calamities followed national sins, and in the then wretched state of his nation under Rome, and the monster Herod, the promise that Christ should "save his people from their sins" was a message to thrill a patriot's heart with joy. And when Jesus entered on his public work of cleansing the Temple and reforming religious abuses, he was acting, as the Jews hoped he would, as a national Saviour.

But he was a personal Saviour as well. When the motley and miserable crowd came about him, "He healed them every one." The blind got eyes, the lame feet, the deaf hearing, and the maimed and mutilated limbs. "They were made whole every whit." They were not half healed, but "whole." They were "complete in him." And Matthew Henry says, "Christ's method of dealing with men's bodies showed his plan of dealing with their souls." And surely it were a trivial errand for the Son of God to restore limbs and lives which were soon, as they afterward did, to lie down in the grave. The salvation which he brought was of the soul as well as of the body; eternal as well as complete.

The question raised by the sanctification discussion is: Does the mission of Christ include, and does his Word promise complete deliverance from sin now in this present life? And if so, how shall we make it available?

This discussion, we may remark in passing, is assuming enlarged proportions. It has been more or less agitated since first men began to believe in and attend to personal experience in religion. One hundred and fifty years ago, the Moravian brethren, and with and after them John Wesley and his followers, speculated and interpreted Scripture on the subject. At this present time the United Brethren, with a membership of 150,000; the Wesleyans and Free Methodists, both young denominations, teach more or less earnestly an entire sanctification from sin, as the privilege of believers in this life. Thirty years ago a very large proportion of the students at Oberlin College were organized into praying bands something after the idea of Mr. Wesley, seeking the blessing of entire sanctification, and many believed themselves to have obtained that blessing. The well-known prayer-meeting in New York City attended by Mrs. Palmer and her friends, originated in the same idea. "The Evangelical Association," an excellent and strong denomination, have now a publication distinct from their regular church papers, advocating the holiness of Christians. The Banner of Holiness, a respectable sheet, printed at Blooming on, Illinois, and mostly sustained by Methodist Episcopal preachers in conference connection, is the organ of the "Western Association for the Promotion of Holiness." This Association, which is undenominational, holds conventions on the subject where they are called. A few years since a Methodist Episcopal preacher by the name of Inskip, while standing in a Baltimore pulpit, believed himself the subject of remarkable divine influence. He has left the regular conference work, and devoted his energies to the promotion of holiness ever since in connection with national camp-meetings under the supervision of a committee of their General Conference. The Earnest Christian of the Free Methodists, and the Wesleyan, Advocate of Holiness and Bible Standard as also the books of Prof. Upham, Mr. Boardman and others are well known. And these, with other agencies, pressing the single point of personal sanctification on the minds of American Christians are a sign of the times which Christians should discern, if they will be "workers together with God."

As the object of this paper is entirely practical it would be absurd to attempt in the time allotted, a discussion or review of the metaphysics or exegesis of the doctrine of holiness. Mr. Wesley disavowed the theory of a "sinless perfection," preferring the phrase, "Christian perfection." President Finney used the phrase, "Permanent and entire consecration." President Fairchild, his successor, criticises Mr. Finney, insisting in a late paper, that a man cannot know that he is permanently consecrated, because his consciousness does not project itself into the future; and, therefore, present consecration is all that any one can know or do. The late Albert Barnes told me that he astonished his people by telling them that he had not consciously done a wrong act for three years. Without bringing forward a theory of my own, or a criticism on the theories of others, I shall conclude this paper with a series of independent propositions bearing on the Bible doctrine of holiness and its discussion, with a view to practical duty and results:

PROP. I. Discussing sanctification, though necessary to a proper understanding of it, is not receiving sanctification; which must be received by faith.

II. In the whole history of the discussion, if we except quietists and mystics, those who have concerned themselves in seeking it, like Moravians and Methodists have received a profound and observable impression on their moral and spiritual natures, whatever theory they have adopted.

III. Christ was neither quietist, nor, like Jephthah, Sampson, or Jehu, an iconoclast, yet he promised "rest to the soul," and inculcated ceaseless activity, and aggression on the world's evils.

IV. The early Christians were called "saints," i. e., holy persons; they were addressed as "them that are sanctified;" in short were regarded as persons now are who profess entire sanctification or holiness. See 1 Cor. i, 2, and vi, 11.

V. The promises of holiness to Christians are all given in general and unlimited terms. Thus they are promised "rest," not partial or perturbed rest, but "rest," and "rest to their souls." They are, moreover, encouraged if they "walk after the Spirit," that there will be "no condemnation" to them (Rom. viii. 1). And Paul prays that their "whole spirit, and soul, and body may be preserved blameless unto the coming of Christ," and adds, "Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it."—1 Thess. v. 23.

VI. Christians are commanded in express terms to "be holy" and to "follow holiness without which no man shall see the Lord."—Heb. xii. 14.

VII. In the 51st Psalm David prays not only that his actual transgression may be blotted out, which he committed in the murder of Uriah, but also that he may be "washed thoroughly" from the original or birth sin, that is to say the sin in which he was conceived; and asserts that if so washed he shall be "whiter than snow." If this prayer was proper for him, then also for us.

VIII. There are two correlative propositions which bear strikingly on this subject: "If we ask any thing according to his will he heareth us." "And this is the will of God, even your sanctification;" not partial sanctification, but sanctification.

IX. Now the proofs that the ordinary, average Christianity in the churches of the present day is in a deplorable apostacy from the Bible standard are melancholly and abundant. The very fact that separate papers are springing up to advocate holiness, outside of the regular church journals shows that these church journals which reflect the sentiments and moral state of the churches do not advocate sanctification in earnest. If they did, whence the necessity of others?

X. The devotion to fashion and conformity to the world, and the consumption of time and means in dress, equipage, etc., in the churches, fully equals or excels that of the world, as a whole.

XI. The almost entire absence of fasting, which is so much insisted on throughout the Bible, and sanctioned and enforced by the example and precepts of Moses and the prophets, and Christ and the Apostles, shows a fearful apostasy in the church-life, from the Word of God.

XII. The shameless effrontery with false doctrine and no doctrine is proclaimed in pulpits and church journals claiming to be orthodox and evangelical, proves a general apostacy from Bible holiness in the churches.

XIII. The general, if not well nigh which universal neglect of discipline in the churches, proves the same departure from the Word of God. The lamentable failure of the churches on the slave question, and on popular evils generally, proves that American Christianity is not following Christ who twice drove out worldly abuses from the temple at the obvious risk of his life; nay, with certain loss of his life, for it was for that they crucified him.

XIV. These painful propositions are more than sustained by facts, records and circumstances which might be given and authenticated to any extent, and if so they surely prove the necessity of a general turning to God, and seeking after holiness, without which neither men nor churches shall see him in peace.

But it is objected that error and fanaticism have followed and marred the efforts of those who have sought for entire sanctification. This is partly true. But it is equally true of those who first insisted on credible evidence of regeneration as a qualification for the communion supper. Even as late as Whitefield, and the "Great Awakening," a synod of Congregational ministers in Boston scouted, and by resolution, condemned as fanatics those who professed and insisted on regeneration by the Holy Ghost as a basis of church fellowship. Insisting on sanctification now is regarded and treated almost precisely as insisting on regeneration was treated then, and our remedy must be the same.

The ministers of that day who went with Edwards, the Tennants, Whitefield;—with the "Great Awakening" as it was called;—fasted, prayed, met together in conventions, preached and applied the Word of God. They could not surely know who were converted, any more than we can pronounce who are sanctified; but they knew that the Holy Spirit was promised to regenerate souls, and we know that "the will of God is our sanctification." Rest assured, we shall not stumble into holiness by ignorance or mistake. If at all, we must be sanctified "through the truth," and truth taught, believed in and applied. Let us sanctify fasts. Let us call solemn assemblies of the people of God. In short, let us treat this matter of holiness as we treat other grave and solemn matters, and our sins shall be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and the pure in heart shall see God.

Shackled in Conscience.

BY D. B TURNEY.

It is certain that Freemasonry fosters a law of caste that is most unfriendly to all the great interests of society and the general good. From the selfishness, folly, and expensiveness of Freemasonry, I see very little reason to doubt that the lodges and synagogues to Satan, to be shunned by Christians as they would shun the black plague. Can it be otherwise than injurious to our interests, moral, social, and civil, for these lodges to spring up and flourish? Does not this formation of a government within a government have a tendency to divide the allegiance and confidence of the people, by constantly continuing to bring the law of the order and the law of the State into conflict? These interests of the State and of the lodge are not the same. They often clash. And past experiences and history, even in our own country, have shown that a Freemason will not permit the interests of the order to suffer. The lodge system is the most awful evil of the day. It engenders social divisions, and sows discord even in the family circle. It cultivates and encourages a great crop of animosities, and chokes every spirit of open, frank, honest investigation.

Look at the men who have been elevated to place and power through the manipulations of lodge intrigue. Many of them are corrupt knaves, put into stations of honor and emolument which they in no wise merit. There is a great distinction and difference between prejudice and principle; but many of these men cannot be made to think so. Because they have not yet risen to manhood, they will not put away the childish things of the lodge.

Ah, it is sad—sad indeed—to be shackled in conscience, and aware that you are shackled; but it is a much worse thing to be shackled in conscience without knowing that such is the case. Ignorance is terrible.

Whenever a good man favors Freemasonry and speaks of the a order in tone of commendation, he is probably shackled and not aware of the enshackelment, deluded and not conscious of his delusion; dreaming, and yet thinking himself awake.

Shackled in conscience! Shackled in conscience!! May the shackles be broken before it is too late. If we are not careful Freemasonry will yet throw its folds around our institutions, and crush them, even as the mythological ocean serpents crushed to death the sons of the Laocoon.

I have no right under any law of God in nature or revelation to be shackled in conscience. I cannot, therefore, subscribe to the oaths and obligations of compliance and concealment required and imposed in Freemasonry, having been taught in the word of God and apostolic example "to have always a conscience void of offense toward God and toward men." Acts xxiv. 16. What right can any man have to bind himself with an oath concerning what is hidden from him till he has sworn to conceal and never reveal it? If this be not answering to a matter before hearing it, the philosophy of language cannot find what is.

1st. A man who is shackled in conscience cannot realize the practicability of true soul-liberty, just as one who is born blind never knows the value of eyesight.

2d. He cannot consult the laws of benevolence, where those laws seem to interfere with the interests of his order, but only where they harmonize with those interests. It limits his liberality.

3d. He becomes a tool for the dirty work of others, and is used by the order to the advancement of its own ends and aims—a cat's paw to get the monkey's chestnut out of the fire.

4th. He cannot expose the falsehoods of his order, escape from the participation in its abominable and disgusting ceremonies, and denounce the barbarity and indigestibility of its oaths, coupled with their inhuman and bloody penalties.

5th. He must consent, in silence, to a great deal that his judgment would repudiate as wrong; must witness without remonstrance a corruption of the church and the inculcation of dangerous theology.

6th. He is enmeshed in the bonds of fellowship with men for whom he can have no moral respect, and is selfishly required to yield his obedience to their mandates, without knowing in advance what those mandates may involve.

7th. He is made to violate his marriage vow, by curtaining his heart from her that lieth in his bosom. What can he know of the sweets of domestic happiness and peace? Does he not imperil every sacred obligation of matrimony, by having secrets to be guarded and kept from his wife?

8th. He submits to an abrogation of the authority of God over his soul, or at least disregards that authority, by binding himself with penalties that involve the surrender of all real manhood. A man cannot serve two masters. When the lodge requires one thing and God forbids it, he cannot serve both.

9th. He discovers the immoral bearings of his order upon society, and yet continues his connection with the order and thereby participates in the evil.

10. He encourages treason against his country by holding up the hands of a fraternity that violates law without scruple. It violates civil law by requiring the administration of extra-judicial oaths, by assuming a jurisdiction over the lives of its members, by exacting unlawful penalties, and by pretending that its own oaths and obligations are as binding as the oaths of civil law.

11. He subverts religion by a failure to rebuke the dissoluteness, frivolity, ostentation and immoral practices of his order.

12. He wastes money, loses time, neglects business, trenches upon the hours for sleep, and misdirects energy, to give favor and popularity to an order that raises up falsehood, by a reversal of all the principles of the law of God.

Surely a man cannot afford to be hackled in conscience. Who wants the seeds of death to be sown in his own soul? Who desires to have his manhood pulverized and his moral perceptions blinded?

Say, is it not a fearful evil, a terrible sin, an awful shame, a wicked crime to be shackled in conscience?

The Romanising section of the church of England are moving faster than the world imagines. A large convent connected with St. Clement's Boscome, Bournemouth, was formally opened on Sunday, after high celebration in the parish church. The officiating priest was the Hon. and Rev. E. F. Russell of St. Alban's, London, who, wearing a cope studded with jewels, headed a long procession through the several rooms of the convent.

The Roman Catholic Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland have issued a pastoral address which was prepared at the late National Synod at Maynooth. After referring to the Synod of Thurless and its decrees, the pastoral takes up the subject of education. If necessary, it says, the struggle for religious education against the present "mixed system" of education will be kept up as long as the struggle for Catholic Emancipation was kept up. A Catholic training school for teachers is to be established under the control of the Vincentian Fathers. The pastoral says, "The Catholic University has bravely sustained, for twenty-five years, the unequal struggle against religious education. It is forming in its own spirit the professors and masters who in a few years will have the intermediate education of the country in their own hands."

Our Foreign Letter.—Edinburgh.

A day is a very short time to see the sights of Edinburgh, but when one has an intelligent guide he can learn much of the place even in so short a time. I do not mean a professional guide who has a story about each point of interest which he relates in a dull monotone very much as a parrot talks, but a Scotchman (and a Highlander at that) who, though he has a respectable business, counts it a pleasure now and then, to show the city to strangers. When we left St. Andrews we found ourselves in the same compartment with such a gentleman with whom first acquaintance was formed by questions about the route. He perceived we were Americans and took especial interest in us for that reason. It seems as though the work of Moody and Sankey had enlarged the already large heart, full of hospitality for the American, which the Scotchman carries in his bosom. Whatever may have been the reason for his kindness we shall remember it.

In our walk next day we first crossed Calton Hill crowning which is a peculiar monument. From a distance one might fancy the ruins of the Greek Acropolis in sight before him, but a closer view shows that the immense marble columns are part of an unfinished building. Below the hill is Holyrood, the royal palace of Scotland with Burns' monument on the way. In the latter we saw letters, manuscripts and other interesting memorials of the poet. Persons interested in the political history of Scotland should not fail to visit Holyrood when in Edinburgh. In the picture gallery are life-size representations (if not likenesses) of the kings from the great Bruce to James VI. (James I. of England), under whom the crowns were united, together with others of earlier and later date. The rooms of "poor Mary," as the Scotch lovingly call her, are kept as she left them. The faded tapestry, and costly, worm-eaten furniture tell a story of departed grandeur. The stains of Riccio's blood on the floor and many other things remind the visitor of the unfortunate Queen. From the palace we walked up through the streets of the "old town" towards the castle. The parliament houses, Knox's grave, St. Giles' church where he preached, the house where he lived, the old and new church assembly rooms, and Guthrie's Ragged Schools are all on this interesting walk. We spent some time visiting these places but stopped longest in the New church assembly rooms where Moody and Sankey held most of their meetings. They have left, but we saw the fruits of their meetings in the earnest prayers and exhortations and American hymns at the noon-day prayer-meeting which was just in session. At the castle we enjoyed, among other things, the fine view of the city and country about it, and then walked down the hill to the antiquarian museum where our kind friend left us in charge of one of the officials, but we were almost too tired to enjoy the many interesting objects there. The stool which Jennie Geddis hurled was there, but we were grieved to learn that the story must be classed, as the official expressed himself, with the story of the 'three black crows.' A circular tour on top of a two-story train (street car), formed an agreeable and restful close to the day's wanderings. The beautiful monument erected to the memory of Scott is omitted in this description because it must be seen to be understood. The most interesting days' excursion from Edinburgh is the one that includes Abbotsford the home of Scott, Dryburgh Abbey, the resting-place of his remains, and Melrose Abbey, immortalized by his "Lay of the Last Minstrel." The ivy-covered ruins of the latter fully warrant the eloquent words the great poet used in describing them.

Anti-Slavery and Anti-masonry Yokefellows in 1835.

GARRISON AND GREENE.

The following interesting and remarkable letter was occasioned by an account of the Boston mob which attacked and dispersed a small meeting of the Female Anti-slavery Society in Boston, Oct. 21st, 1835, forty years ago. The mob turned on Garrison who fled and hid for a short time in a carpenter shop, but was finally seized and dragged through the streets with a rope about him, until finally at the order of the Mayor, lodged in Leveret Street jail to save his life. His newspaper sign was torn down by the Mayor's order, and broken up, and tracts and papers torn up and thrown into the street upon the howling assailants. The city authorities and nearly every daily and religious paper joined in praising the lawless crowd.

To the Boston Herald:—

Having my attention drawn to an article describing a slavery mob which transpired in the city of Boston, forty years ago to-day (October, 21st, 1835), my mind recalls some facts that I do not recollect ever seeing presented to the public in relation to William Lloyd Garrison, showing their devotedness to the cause he had espoused, the overthrow of slavery.

In 1831, Mr. Garrison and a man by the name of Knapp, both very poor, came to Boston; took a room in Merchants' Hall, in Congress street, over the Post Office, where another society had two free presses warring against a powerful institution, grown up in the United States unsuspected until it deigned to usurp authority adverse to the laws of the nation, and to punish by death a man who had not violated a known law, but had assumed to perform the right of a free citizen. At this time (if I recollect aright) there were two large rewards offered for the person of William Loyd Garrison; one in Pennsylvania for two thousand dollars, and another in the State of Georgia, by one Nesbit, of five thousand dollars for him dead or alive. Here was a very natural and fit place for him and his companion to resort to commence or continue hostility to a powerful institution which had usurped and also absolutely held in its grasp the political power of the nation; and where, too, another power had, in this boasted free and independent country, usurped with authority to administer its laws and had a power so great as to shut the mouths of a boasted free press and free speech (and still does) so far as was in its power. Here was the commencement of the overthrow of these two powers; the one holding a large proportion of its inhabitants in chains, the other corrupting the church of God, usurping authority over the political, civil and judicial power of the nation. Here in this room Mr. Garrison and his companion slept, and lived principally on bread and milk and such articles of food as they could obtain from their scanty means. They had no press and but little type to commence the Liberator, and feared also those two advertisements offered for Garrison. They were permitted to use the type and press of the Anti-masonic Christian Herald, then published by myself and David Campbell in an adjoining room; and, to screen Mr. Garrison, the Liberator was for a few months published and circulated from our office before Garrison and Knapp obtained type and prepared to assume the full publication and circulation themselves. Under these auspicies commenced a press moved by the power of God, which has resulted in enlightening the nation and the overthrow of slavery. There, too, in that same hall was commenced under the same Almighty power, an additional print for the overthrow of another institution, although not distinctly named, but which George Washington, the Father of our country, in his farewell address described thus with the ken of a prophet, Freemasonry: "All obstruction of the laws, all combinations and associations under whatever plausible character, with the real design, to direct, control, counteract or awe the regular deliberations and actions of the constituted authorities are destructivef of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency."

Now, as shown in the history of our country, Freemasonry and the power it assumes, Washington fully described; and like slavery, its cherished companion, the Hon. Charles Sumner says it must be overthrown if our country is to be the land of the free as our ancestors designed it; andlike which, it seems, God, in his righteous judgment is moving his beloved people for its overthrow.

Now another incident and I am done. I was a member of that small party of anti-slavery men and women which assembled on the 21st of October, 1835, forty years ago, and was routed by a mob in the city of Boston, and Garrison was lodged in jail. I followed the rabble to the carpenter's shop in Wilson's Lane. The Atlas says, a rope was fastened under Garrison's arms and about his neck and he was let down by means of a ladder to the ground. This is not correct. Mr. Garrison gives the right version. After Mr. Garrison was landed in the Lane near State Street, he was borne along in the mob by two stout men one on each side, and soon, while on State street below the old State House, a man made his way to Garrison and put his forefinger into the white handkerchief he had about his neck and twisted the handkerchief so tight that Garrison's tongue was out of his mouth. Seeing it I forced myself into the crowd and caught hold of the man's coat collar, and by a powerful pull tore his coat in twain and liberated his fingers from Garrison's handkerchief and saved him from choking to death. If that man is now living and should happen to read this he may know who tore his coat. I followed Garrison until he was got into the carriage which the mob tried to overthrow, and assisted in keeping it on its wheels, and with others ran to Leveret street, and saw Garrison safe in jail.

SAMUEL D. GREENE.

Henry Wilson's Career and Death.

The death of the Vice-President was to the national capitol and the nation itself sudden and startling. Although for some time his enfeebled health gave warning of the end, and his last attack was of so serious a nature, yet the promises of his eminent physician of speedy recovery had cheered every heart. On Saturday, Nov. 20th, he had seemed much better, and on the next evening it was reported that he would be able to leave Washington for the North in a few days, hence his sudden death on Monday morning was quite unexpected. From various reports we have taken the folfowing account of the last hours of Mr. Wilson and his interesting public history:

The Vice-president went to bed at an early hour and slept tolerably well during the night. In his waking intervals he asked for water. About midnight he got up and walked around his room. Then, going to his table, he took up a little book of poems entitled, "The Changed Cross," with the motto, "Not as I wilt, but as Thou wilt," and read three verses from it, one of which is as follows:

Help us, O Lord, with patient love to bear each other's faults,
To suffer with true meekness.
Help us each other's joys and griefs to share,
But let us turn to Thee alone, in weakness.

Other verses had been marked in the book among them the following:

What if poor sinners count thy grief
The sign of an unchastened will;
He who can give thy soul relief,
Knows that thou art submissive still.

This volume belonged to his wife, and contained a photograph of her and their son, both deceased. He treasured it beyond value, and always made it his companion, from which he seemed to derive much comfort. After reading the verses, he spoke with gratitude of the kindness of his friends during his sickness, and of the widespread sympathy in his behalf. He then returned to bed, in a happy mood, and slept. At 3 o'clock this morning he awoke, complaining of pain his stomach. One of his attendants rubbed it, and, being thus relieved, he again fell asleep. At 7 o'clock he awoke, remarking that he felt better and brighter than at any time previous. He said that he was going to ride out to-day, as his physician, Dr. Baxter, advised him to do so, if the weather was fair. At 7:29 o'clock he said he would get up and take breakfast. He then called for "bitter water," which had heretofore been prescribed, and having drank it, he laid down, with his left side on the pillow, as if with sudden exhaustion, breathing heavily, but uttering no words, and in a few moments he died, without a struggle.

Mr. Wilson, like Abraham Lincoln, was born in poverty and obscurity, and, like him, he rose to eminence by forces inherent in himself, which no discouragement or opposition could repress. He was born in Farmington, N. H., February 16, 1812. At ten years of age he was apprenticed to a farmer in his native town, with whom he remained until he was twenty-one, receiving in the whole eleven years only about twelve months' schooling. Though not much in school, however, his education went on by means of reading, for which he early acquired a taste. During his apprenticeship he read, on Sundays, and in the evenings by firelight and moonlight, not less than one thousand volumes, borrowed from a private library in the neighborhood of his residence, and in this way, no doubt, gained no small amount of the information which fitted him so well for his public career. His apprenticeship being ended, he left his native place, and, with all his earthly possessions in a pack upon his back, walked to Natick, Mass., where he spent a few years in mastering what Whittier so happily calls "the gentle craft of leather." Having earned a small sum of money, he returned to his native State, and resolved to seek the education of which he felt the need. He had not long enjoyed the opportunity for instruction afforded by academies in Stratford, Wolfboro', and Concord, when the failure of the person to whom he had entrusted his savings compelled him to abandon his cherished plan and return to Natick, where he resumed his work as a shoemaker.

His good habits and his natural abilities, however, made him conspicuous among his associates, and in 1840 he was enlisted in behalf of Gen. Harrison's election to the Presidency, he making a great many speeches. From that time to the present he has been conspicuous in American politics. He was almost continuously a member of either one or the other branch of the State Legislature, and frequently the presiding officer. He was an active Anti-Slavery man, and opposed the annexation of Texas. In 1848 he left the Whig National Convention, when it rejected the Anti-Slavery platform, and united with the Free Soil National Convention in Pittsburg. In 1853 he was the Free-Soil candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, but was defeated. When the Know-Nothing organization elected Gardner Governor of Massachusetts, Mr. Wilson was a member of that party, but when that party subsequently rejected an Anti-Slavery platform, he abandoned it. In 1855 he was elected to the United States Senate in place of Edward Everett, resigned, and continued by successive elections a member of that body until 1873, when he resigned to become Vice-president, to which place he was elected in 1872.

Michigan Notice.

The friends who subscribed to the lecture fund at the Anti-secret Association of the State of Michigan held at Fentonville, 30th of March last, and subsequently, will please forward the same or a portion of the same to me at Howell, Mich., at once, as the lecturer is in need of the same and has an order drawn on me for some over ninety dollars and no money in the treasury to meet it. Hoping that you will remember that the laborer is worthy of his hire and respond promptly to the above, I remain yours respectfully,

J. H. WILCOX, Treas.

PAST MASTER E. RONAYNE, of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, will hold himself in readiness to lecture and publicly work the degrees of Masonry wherever his services may be needed. A fair compensation and traveling expenses is all that is required. Address him at the office of this paper.

Reform News.

Good News from Southern Ohio.—Important Local Societies.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 19, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

On the 16th, 17th and 18th inst. we had an excellent and profitable meeting at Greenfield, Highland Co., Ohio. On my way there I called on Rev. Mr. Richey, secretary of the Western Tract Society in Cincinnati, where Finney's letters are published. He related to me an incident which recently occurred in that city. There is a Mason there who hates President Finney so much that he is very ready to call him a liar. Dr. Aydelott came along and said to this gentleman, "Our old friend is dead." "Who?" he inquired. "Our old friend, President Finney," said the Dr. He replied, "He is not my friend. He is a liar." "Hold," said Dr. Aydelott, "don't be too fast, my friend." "Yes, he is a liar," he repeated. Whereupon Dr. Aydelott told him that he had himself been a Mason in former life, which utterly silenced the battery and discomfited the Mason by learning that the Dr. had seen the inside of the fraternity and knew therefore the correctnees of Finney's statements. Our meeting began on Tuesday evening at Greenfield. Stoddard and Ronayne had been here before me, pioneering the way. The first evening the attendance was small; they could not get the pulpits to announce the meeting and I was late in arriving in the train; but the interest grew with each successive meeting, until on Wednesday evening we had a considerable congregation and a fine interest. We had three meetings at the church on Wednesday. Who can beat that? On Thursday morning we organized a local society opposed to secret orders and it has every appearance of being effective; almost every one present joined, including some of the best, most active and pious men in the community. James Watt was elected President; John W. Baird, Vice-president; D. S. Coyner, Secretary, and C. O. Beatty, Treasurer. Bro. Axtell is looking after subscribers for the Cynosure. You will hear from him before long. He is a faithful member of the M. E. church and worker in our cause. We have a local organization in the city of Dayton with Rev. John Kemp at its head as President, which holds monthly meetings. It has among its members some strong defenders of our cause, such as Dr. Davis, Professor in Union Biblical Seminary, Rev. M. Wright, and W. O. Tobey, editors of the Religious Telescope. Our meetings are good and edifying to all, only such as do not want the orders hurt. Pray for us in Ohio, that God may prosper his work of reform. WM. DILLON.

Past Master Ronayne at Elmwood, Ill.

ELMWOOD, Ill., Nov. 22, 1875.

BRO. K.—Perhaps it may be of interest to the readers of the Cynosure to know that Mr. Ronayne has given the people of our thriving village a course of lectures and expositions of Freemasonry in his inimitable manner, the immediate effect of which is to open the eyes of the people to the inconsistencies and frivolous foolishness of the so-called "hand-maid of religion." The further effect we hope for is to keep young men out of the silly trap, and draw some conscientious men who have been led into the bondage of the lodge to renounce it and free themselves from its corrupting influences.

When it was found that Mr. R. was coming I was approached and advised that I was doing myself injury by bringing such characters to our peaceable town; that I was dependent upon the public, etc., etc., all of which I heard, of course. I was assured that the man was a "perjurer, a liar, an embezzler, a Roman Catholic, a man without character or friends, and—and—in fact, how can such a man be believed after taking such oaths voluntarily and then violating them."

Well, Mr. R. came Thursday, the 11th inst., and the first evening initiated a candidate as an Entered Apprentice before a crowded house, and as far as I have yet heard not a Mason present. There are two stories out accounting for this absence of the craft; one is, that they met and agreed to stay away, and another that the Worshipful Master ordered them to stay away; but be this as it may we got along nicely without them, and they missed such an opportunity of sitting for a portrait as they may never have again.

Friday evening we had the ceremony of making a Master Mason, with the tragedy of slaying the "orphan," which was so complete, that al hough the place was ill-suited for such a performance, yet all, or nearly all, went away satisfied that Mr. R. was a master workman. He also gave us an account of, and the reason why he left the lodge, with the action of the lodge in expelling him, together with some account of the Masonic "blessed charity" after the great fire.

Saturday evening Mr. R. gave us some incidents of the charity and benevolence of the lodge as they had come to his knowledge, with part of the Fellow Craft degree and an epitome of Chapter Masonry.

During the three evenings the room was filled beyond its seating capacity, and I hear that many went away unable to gain admission. The last evening a few of the craft were present. Although the seats were uncomfortable, and the lectures were over three hours each in length, yet the audience did not seem weary and many were surprised when told how long they had been kept.

I judge from the Cynosure that we have been and are still only getting the stereotyped Masonic argument—or want of it—which consists in loud and long vociferations of "He lies!" "He's a liar!' "You can't believe him—and —and—."

One of the craft who did not deny anything, said there was a beautiful symbolism underlying those ceremonies which the Anti-mason could not see. I think that is probably the case but I doubt whether any one can see it. One Mason did not want to be seen in such company. I did not learn whether he would be ashamed of the company or the company be ashamed of him. The respectable Christian portion of our community was largely represented. Mr. R. seems thoroughly versed in Scripture, and made so many and such apt quotations to prove his positions, that it was nearly impossible to hear him and not be convinced that Masonry is a delusion and a snare. These meetings have caused much discussion on a subject that had almost become one of the interdicted questions. One Mason in apparent candor assured me that Masonry (i. e., the "real secrets") had never been written or printed, and never could be. I assured him that if he meant by the "real secrets" that feeling of contempt and utter degradation which a man must feel for himself stripped, blindfolded and sold for naught, I was almost willing to agree with him.

Another thing has been brought to the surface, the fact that people are so generally afraid of the "sublime" institution, although but few are willing to own their fears. Masons studiously circulate the idea of the extent of the order and seek to inspire not so much a fear, as assurance of the ability to do good to its friends, and people seem to think its power to hurt its enemies is equally great, and there is not a doubt but what that power has been largely exerted in every place where a lodge exists and many have felt its withering blight, and this conspiracy against society is one of the great reasons why good men should rally to its destruction.

We do not propose to stop here, but follow up the advantage already gained, until we prove that there is not, and can not be, an institution in this country that may not be freely discussed and its merits or demerits fully known. "So mote it be."

H. W. Marsh.

At Farmington.

Farmington, Ill., Nov. 20, 1875.

Dear Cynosure:—Our slumbers here have been broken in upon this week by brother Ronayne for which we feel disposed to thank both him and the Lord. Assisted by Bro. H. W. Marsh, he initiated a candidate into the first and third degrees of Masonry, showing not only that its ceremonies are a ridiculous farce, but that its oaths make it a dangerous institution in our republican government; while its observances paralyze the piety of its church-going members. Few, if any, listened to his lectures without being convinced of the truthfulness of his exposure; and a healthy agitation now seems to pervade our community. Some who have been members endorse the statements of Bro. Ronayne and speak freely of its baleful influence upon themselves. Those who have been friends of this movement, but silent, are now speaking freely. Surely a brighter day has dawned upon us.

Yours, P. P. Chapman.

Brother Hinman's Report of Work.

Roseville, Ill., Nov. 22, 1875.

Dear Bro. K.—After an interesting series of ten meetings in Putnam Co., I attended our State Convention at Peoria, and am now hearing some of the echoes. The following article, cut from the Galesburgh paper, shows the spirit in which the fraternity meet our arguments. I will add that I have heard the most bitter denunciation and vilification of Mr. Ronayne from the Masons and unqualified praise from those not ensnared by the lodge. Amidst abounding opposition our cause is onward.

I have during the past week lectured five times in Stark Co., viz., twice in Duncan, twice at Pleasant Valley, U. B. church, and once at Wyoming. I hope soon to be able to send you a club. I expect (D. V.) to spend some two or three weeks lecturing in this part of the State. Yours for the Lord,

H. H. Hinman.

The following is the notice referred to above:

What is termed the "Illinois Christian Association" met in Peoria on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week led by Blanchard. The chief object of this association is opposition to Masonry, Odd-fellowship, etc. The call for the meeting especially invited seceders from Masonry, and said the work of the degrees would be given publicly. In other words, while professing to be working in the interest of Christianity, they really are working in the interest of the devil. They violate their solemn obligation, and make liars and perjurers of themselves. While professing to be the saints of the earth, they become the condemned and despised of all men who regard the sanctity of an oath. They become meaner than the meanest dog that walks the earth. But let them continue their assaults upon Masons, Odd-fellows and other secret societies. By so doing they add to the strength of those associations, and create a desire among the people to unite with them.

And on Monday and Tuesday of next week, these sweet-scented individuals propose to hold a meeting in Farmington. A "Past Master" will be present and a "full and fair exposition" of Masonry will be given. Who proposes to be the rascal in that party? Is it the "Past Master?" The man who would do that would, in our opinion, steal your pocket-book, if he could do so without you knowing it.—Canton Ledger.

Calhoun County, Michigan, Visited.

Litchfield, Mich., Nov. 18, 1875.

Bro. K.:—We have had a rich feast of sound, logical, convincing anti-secret doctrine for a few days past from Bro. Stoddard. We had been trying to prepare for his coming, and had a fine field of work laid out for him, which he entered as a hero (though in the midst of a furious snow storm) and left as a victor. He arrived Saturday, the 13th, at Homer, was taken six miles in the severe snow storm to his first appointment at a school-house that evening, where he also preached Sabbath morning; went three miles and preached at 2 P. M., where he was met by Dea. Andrus, and went seven miles to the Free Baptist church on Cook's Prairie where he preached at 7 P. M. on the religion of Masonry.

Monday we went back to the place of beginning, and in that vicinity he lectured Monday afternoon and evening, and Tuesday 2 P. M., and then went 8 1-2 miles in a severe snow and wind storm to Homer village and spoke in the evening in the Presbyterian church, and Wednesday evening, 17th, at the M. E. church, Litchfield village, and left on the 11 o'clock train P. M.

Though the weather and going were unfavorable, we had good congregations generally, and I think we can say with all truthfulness and great satisfaction, secretism was well ventilated, the candid convinced and others cowered down so they could not even bite or kick, and a deep and favorable impression left. There are three Masonic and some other secret lodges on the ground canvassed, and a goodly number of the mystic tie were at nearly if not all the meetings, day and evening. Some at the beginning of the lectures were quite sure one who had not been stript, hoodwinked, haltered and aproned could know nothing about Masonry; but I am quite sure before Bro. Stoddard left they had decided that one such man did know something of secretism.

May the divine blessings follow the labor, and this great reform be hastened on. Yours for the right,

H. S. Limbocker.

Working Steadily On in Pennsylvania.

Uniondale, Pa., Nov. 18, 1'75.

Dear Cynosure:—Since my last statement of work on this field, I have lectured at the following points, all in Susquehanna county: Dimock, Uniondale, Clifford Corners, Welsh Settlement, one lecture at each place; week before last two evenings in Presbyterian church at Gibson; and last week, Monday and Tuesday evenings at Brooklyn, the first evening in the lecture-room of the M. E. church and the second evening at Odd-fellows Hall. I could fill a column in regard to these meetings. In all but two of these places the cause was presented for the first time, and a number found in each approving of our efforts against secret orders. This sympathy will be further developed and enlightened and I hope organized for effective work. The secret power grows in communities where nothing is done to stay lodge influences, but where the people are posted in these matters there is a decline of the dark orders. They shrink from light and with the presentation of their false principles. They lose their supremacy, and the people are kept from their slavish, ruinous snares.

At Brooklyn lodge influences (Masonry, Odd-fellowship and the grange) are strong, and the ministers of the place entered into the contest in favor of their idols. I hope, however, that the public mind was aroused to thought, inquiry and investigation that will lead to right Christian action as the final result. Through the kindness of brother Joseph Powers I have lectures appointed for each week-day night of next week. W. Raynor.

Correspondence.

Outsiders Free to Question the Lodge.

Crystal Lake, Ill.

Dear Cynosure:—A few of us are still alive and awake on the subject of secretism. Our county anti-secret convention came off on the 14th of October, and nominated candidates for county Treasurer, George W. Garrison; for Surveyor, John Brink.

I am aware that a man will meet opposition in all forms if he assails this "Image of the Beast" called Freemasonry. I have seen the inside workings of the institution, and I know its soul-damning influences. If a man means to be honest, what help will he derive from Masonry? I answer from experience. None whatever. Then will our young men not take warning of those who have had experience in the order? I think they are very self-conceited or very willing to become the dupes of the most abominable institution for dishonesty that the world ever knew. Wherever I go in the neighborhood where Mr. Ronayne's exposition took place, I hear the boys saluting me, and also the adherents of Masonry, with, "How are you Jubelum? How is Mah-hah-bone to day? and how are you Hiram Abiff?" So you see the rising generation are not asleep. I think the expositions were a good thing for this country, and the source of a great deal of inquiry, so that men begin to try to inform themselves. Several have asked me if the knocking down process was the way all lodges had in the third degree, and I invariably tell them the truth; it is. Several have said to me, "Then I don't want any Masonry in mine." I generally give the workings of the lodge as nearly correct as I can remember and all the paraphenalia of the third degree with its obligations which generally brings forth the remark, "I'd never stand that." But little they know what they would stand if the cable-tow was once around their neck Young men, especially young Masons, is it not sublime to have the halter round your neck like a balky mule? and a hood-wink over your eyes, and then go seeking light—yes, divine light from a whole lodge full of infidels, and maybe drunkards, and bad men of all grades; those who would ruin you to advance a bad cause, to keep you away from your family and those who would see you happy, and whose advice would be by all means, obey God, to do which is unmasonic. GEO. L. PEELER.

—A friend in Wisconsin sends his contribution to help the National Association secure the Carpenter building. Has not the Lord other sums in other hands that he would be pleased to have invested in like manner?

DEAR SIR;—You will find enclosed a P. O. order for seven dollars of the Lord's money in my hands for the Carpenter Donation, and may the Lord bless the labors of the Association.

Yours truly,

O. C. BLANCHARD.

The Grange Exposition Endorsed.

BUCYRUS, Ohio.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I saw a notice in your paper asking such of your readers as know the exposition of the grange to be correct to be so kind as to write out their endorsement for publication. I never belonged to the grange, but think I have good grounds for saying that the Exposition of the grange is correct, having opposed them for some time. While in the West I talked with the grangers and I had a grange expose with me. I let an officer in the grange have it to read (door-keeper). He had it two days, and said to me, "Your book is correct word for word," adding that the higher officers made the members believe that part of the ceremony was unwritten. "But," said he, "the expose has it written as it is given for unwritten work. He further said that he would not have anything more to do with the grange. I talked with an uncle of mine in Cass county, Mo., who said the blindfold, steps, ditch, plowed ground—all had a meaning.

I have in my possession a grange manual. It is such a good book I carry it with me all the time, and when I talk with the grangers and they say that I do not know anything about the grange and the expose is false, then I get out my little "good" book. Oh how they look! This week I was talking with a granger, also an Odd-fellow. He said the books that Caldwell had were all false. I told him I guessed not. "The grange," he said, "we could not know unless we joined." I told him I knew more about the grange than he did. He said I did not. I told him I did. He said there was no use in talking so foolishly. I asked him if he had a manual. He said he had. I wanted him to let me have it; but no, he would not let me see it. I then got the grange manual out of my pocket and showed it to him. He said I must have stolen it. I told him I got it lawfully. Then he said if any one had given me the book they were traitors. I read him the oath, asked him if it was correct. He said yes, of course, because I had the book. There are none that deny the manual. . . .

G. W. PARK.

[The letter compares the Exposition with the manual and proves the two alike and the former correct.—ED.]

OUR MAIL.

Wm. R. Bundy, Brunersberg, O., writes:

"I cannot well do without the paper and yet money is scarce. I have just moved into a newplace and will try and get some more new subscribers."

Sam'l H. Skinner, Avalon, Mo., writes:

"We have a man in our town formerly of Galesburg, Ill., who says President Blanchard's opposition to the lodge is on account of his being black balled when making application for membership. I suppose he was posted up lately."

This is an old story with any foundation.

L. Perry, Elgin, Ill., writes:

"I send my subscription and have tried to induce others to take the paper but have not got a name. There are many opposed to secret societies, but the current is so strong they dare not identify themselves with the cause for fear their business will suffer thereby."

Geo. Leaming, Stockwell, Ind., writes:

"I do not wish by any means to do without so valuable a paper containing principles that must ever live while man retains his reason, though so many apparently good ministers of the Gospel oppose. I have been trying to get some subscribers for the Cynosure, but have failed, not to convince, but they are afraid of offending some friend or minister. I am three score and ten years old and have never attached myself to any church or order and do not expect to while the ministry remain as at present. My family are all members of the U. B. church but one, and he is a Methodist, and all are opposed to secret societies."

Philip Kribs, Lamartine, Pa., writes: "I live in a neighborhood where the secret society question is not much agitated, although many are opposed to secret societies, but no workers but myself, and where there are many of these orders I find more enemies than friends. If I have the right kind of books I think I can do something on the anti side. I have circulated about 600 of your tracts in the last twelve months."

John Finney, Mansfield, O., writes: "God is with us; let us work and pray for all the reforms that your excellent paper works for, but especially the overthrow of all oathbound societies, that exclude Jesus Christ from their prayers; removing the corner-stone, a building must soon fall. May God increase the number of workers and readers in our reform, for have we not the cream and salt of this great nation with us?"

C. P. Miller, Crystal Lake, Ill., writes: "I have done what I could for you. Hope you will succeed in the right."

Austin Birchard, Fayettville, writes: "Enclosed please find $2.25 for which you will send the Cynosure to my grandson, who is about 19 years old. He has three young brothers, and I want these boys to have the reading of your papers that they may be instructed on the evils of Masonry and other secret societies in their younger days,"

Wm. B. Walthall, Quakerhill, Ind., writes:

"I love the cause the Cynosure advocates, and much desire its success. I take pleasure in introducing it among my friends and neighbors. I hope that the light that is emanating from your office may increase in brightness and spread through the land."

A. W. Dunbar, Elkhart, Ind. sends six subscribers, and writes:

"Myself and Mr. John Guipe, have worked as hard as we could conveniently and not neglect our business, and I have the partial promise of two more names soon, and will try to get more if possible. We think we can't get along without the paper, and we hope the three months men will all continue. In the meantime we will be on the watch for more subscribers."

Dr. McLaren of Geneva, N. Y., sends a Rochester Democrat and Chronicle containing a long statement of the second jury held over Morgan's body which unanimously agreed in the verdict that the body was Morgan's. The article includes part of the report of the Anti-masonic committee of which Thurlow Weed was a member. Dr. McLaren says further: "It is my purpose to be one in the meeting at Rochester next month if the Lord permit. I was not able to attend last year. I am as well now as before my illness last year."

With its December number The National Sunday School Teacher closes its first decade. Those who have been familiar with it and with the Sunday-school cause during that time know that it has had, as its Prospectus says, ten years of leadership and of success. Its course has been one of progress from the beginning, and this number seems to have reached the climax of excellence. The first three articles, "Doubting Thomas," by Rev. Lyman Abbott; "Simon the Rock," by Rev. J. C. Taylor, and "The Church of the Holy Sepulcher," by Prof. E. C. Mitchell, are in the line of the lessons for the month. "The Training of Young Disciples," by Rev. Lyman Whiting, D. D., is an admirable contribution upon a subject that needs much discussion. The lesson expositions put such a wealth of rich material into the possession of the teacher that it is impossible for him to exhaust his store in dealing it out again to his class. Obtain a specimen number of Adams, Blackmer & Lyon Pub. Co., Chicago, publishers.

THE NATIONAL PROTESTANT.—This attractive and interesting Anti-Roman Catholic monthly was suspended soon after its introduction to the public last summer, but has been re-established upon a sound financial basis that guarantees its permanency and successful career. The editorial management of the paper will be in the hands of D. M Gazzay, Esq, for twenty-one years connected with the press of the country. Of long practical experience as a writer and publisher, he will bring to his assistance the most able and popular theological and literary talent available in this country and Europe. The original plan of a monthly publication of the paper will be maintained for the present, but the publishers hope during the coming year to make it a regular weekly newspaper. The subscription price is but one dollar per annum. Specimen copies will be sent to any address upon the receipt of ten cents cents by the publishers, Messrs. Vogel & Co., 67 Liberty Street, New York.

Lesson for Dec. 12, 1875—Jesus and Thomas.

SCRIPTURE.—John 20: 24-31. Commit 24-29: Primary Verse, 29.

24 But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst and said, Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing.

29 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed.

30 And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.

b. As to all: John iii. 18, 36; Mark xvi. 16; John viii. 24; Rev. xxi. viii.

FAITH.

1.—What is it: Heb. xi. 1; 1 Pet. i. 8; Heb. xi. 27; Gal. ii. 20; Rom. xi. 20; 1 John v. 5.
3.—Its gifts: Rom. v. 2; 1 Pet. ii. 6, 7.
4.—Its source: Eph. ii. 9: Phil. i. 29; Heb. xii. 2; 1 Cor. xii. 9; 2 Tim. iii. 15.
5.—Aids to: John xx. 31; 1 John v. 13; Luke xvii. 5.

—It is not a good thing to miss even one meeting of the disciples. The evening that you stay away from prayer-meeting may be one when Christ is most specially manifest. There is a blessing promised when two or three are met together. Ps. 145: 18; Matt. 18. 19 20; Acts 2: 46; 4: 24–32; 12: 5, 12; Heb. 3: 12, 13; 10: 24, 25; Jas. 5: 14, 16.

—How presumptuous it is for any one to say that God, who has an infinite number of ways to manifest himself, can do so, satisfactorily to himself, only in one way. What rules shall we prescribe for the Almighty, and what measures have we with which we can measure him! Job. 11: 7–10; Ps. 77: 19; 139: 6–8; Is. 55: 9; Jer. 23: 23, 24; Rom. 11: 33.

—It was enough to secure again the presence of Christ that there was one of his disciples who did not believe in his resurrection. It was the "one" for whom he was always seeking. He came not for many, but for one—each one. Ps. 119: 176; Matt. 18: 14; Luke 15: 7, 10, 32.

—The cry of Thomas: "My Lord and my God!" was a cry of joy. Believing brings peace. Rom. 5: 1–5; 12: 12; 15: 13; 14: 17; 1 Thess. 2: 16; 1 Pet. 1: 8.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

—The blackboard may be used profitably in Sabbath-school instruction, but it is not surprising to learn that many superintendents are discontinuing it. At first it was employed to make impressive upon the memory some precious text of Scripture, or some motto, but of late the sanctified puzzles and rebusses devised for this purpose display more ingenuity than taste, and are more curious than instructive. Taking up, at random, a lesson-paper, we find the sublime prayer of Jesus done up in acrostics. This specimen of art has the words "Jesus prayed," at its heading, and then follows, among similar performances, this:

Sanctify	True and Faithful Heavenly Minded Earnest Workers Mindful of ME.

Thro' thy Truth

That looks very much like trifling with the most solemn words ever spoken in human language. Certainly to mar the sublime majesty of that prayer with such goodishness as the phrase "earnest workers" has become, has a tendency to arouse indignation. It is a mistake to suppose that ingenious logograms help the memory. They perplex it, rather; and lead the mind from attention to the truth to the curious form in which it is presented. We cannot improve on the simplicity of the Scripture.—Interior.

EDUCATIONAL.

—Both Harvard and Williams now require sophomores to sign pledges that they will obey the laws of the college and refrain from "hazing." The ability to execute the laws against this misdemeanor is surely equal to the task of exterminating the secret fraternities, the hatching places for college "scrapes."

—A meeting was held at New Concord, Ohio recently, for the purpose of raising an endowment fund for the support of Muskingum College. The United Presbyterian Synod of Ohio proposed to donate $20,000 in aid of the college, provided the citizens contribute $10,000. Three thousand dollars of that amount was subscribed. Mr. Alexander Speer headed the subscription with $1,000.

—A Swedish Lutheran college has been opened at Rock Island, Ill., by the Augustana Lutheran Synod. It has accommodations for 100 students. Over 90 students have entered since the opening, Sept. 23. Instruction is to be given both in the English and Scandinavian languages.

—The Christian Expositor, Council Bluffs, Iowa, says that Western College in that State is in a prosperous condition this year. Two lectures against Freemasonry have been delivered during the fall. The students under Pres. Kephart are not likely to be uninformed of this great evil.

—The National University of Copenhagen by special act of the Danish Government, with all its lectures, examinations, degrees and diplomas is declared open to the women upon the same conditions as to men.

—A Presbyterian University for the North-west is projected. Its location will be Lake Forest, near Chicago. Rev. R. W. Patterson is spoken of for president.

—Indian Territory has a school fund of about one million dollars. Higher salaries are paid teachers in the Territory than any where else in the country.

Home and Health Hints.

Read This.

If two persons are to occupy a bedroom during the night, let them step upon weighing scales as they retire, and then again in the morning, and they will find their actual weight is at least a pound less in the morning. Frequently the loss will be more, and the average loss throughout the year will be all of that. That is, during the night there is a loss of a pound of matter, which has gone off from their bodies, partly from their lungs and partly through the pores of the skin. The escaped material is carbonic acid and refuse animal matter, or poisonous exhalation. This is diffused through the air in part, and in part absorbed by the bedclothes. If a single ounce of wood or cotton be burned in a room it will so completely saturate the air with smoke that one can hardly breathe, though there can only be one ounce of foreign matter in the air. If an ounce of cotton be burned every half hour during the night the air will be kept continually saturated with smoke, unless there be an open door or window for its escape. Now the sixteen ounces of smoke thus formed is far less poisonous than the sixteen ounces of exhalations from the lungs of two persons who have lost a pound in weight in eight hours of sleeping; for while the dry smoke is mainly taken into the lungs, the damp odors from the body are absorbed, both into the lungs and into the pores of the whole body. Need more be said to show the importance of having bed-rooms well ventilated and of thoroughly airing the sheets, blanket, coverlids and mattresses in the morning before packing them up in the form of a neatly-made bed?

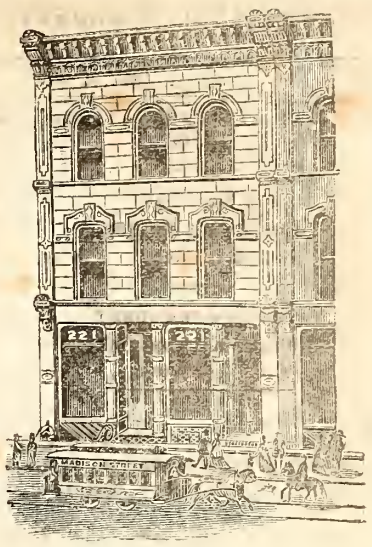
TROCHES.—Every one can make his own troches, by following this recipe, given in the Household:—One ounce pulverized cubebs, one ounce pulverized licorice, one ounce pulverized gum arabic, one-half pound pulverized sugar, just water enough to moisten, warm slightly, stirring constantly, roll thin, and cut out with thimble, and dry.

To make a shoe-bag: Take a strip of cloth a yard and a half long and about eight inches wide, sew a row of pockets on it the whole length; I make them about square. Tack the strip up in some out-of-the-way place, say inside of a closet door. Put in plenty of tacks. Then have the upper pocket for your dainty slippers, the next for your sandals, and so on, always keeping each pair in its own pocket. By this means you can get any pair you want in the dark. If you never established the plan in your household of "a place for everything and everything in its place," turn over a new leaf and do so immediately.

Never put a particle of soap about your silver if you wish it to retain its original lustre. When it wants polish take a piece of soft leather and whiting and rub hard. The proprietor of one of the oldest silver establishments in the city of Philadelphia says that "housekeepers ruin their silver by washing it in soapsuds, as it makes it look like pewter.

Farm and Garden.

Shall Barns be Tight-Boarded?



Many years ago we modestly opposed the notion that barn-boarding must be put on so that the air could circulate freely through and through. Also that the practice of keeping the barn doors open day and night while hauling in hay and grain was right and philosophical. The free circulation of air, it was then shown, tended to produce fermentation or slow combustion; and that grass, if cut in the stage when it contained the largest percentage of sugar, was extremely liable to fermentation when exposed to the air in the mow. This fact is proven by every farmer's experience, which tells him that hay in the stack must be riper and dryer to keep well than hay which goes into mow. Most of our fathers are now being convinced that tight barns keep hay, grain, and everything else better than open barns, and hence we frequently see them covered with boards planed, battened, and painted. It is the free circulation of air through the hay that causes fermentation and mouldiness. And because the air finds its way readily among the coarse stalks of clover, which, when green, contain much saccharine matter, it is next to impossible to prevent fermentation. If clover could be pressed down to a solid mass in the mow and the air excluded, there would no heating or mouldness occur and the hay would be bright and sweet. The truth here indicated is made plain where a mow has been half filled with wheat, which acted as a great weight in a press and excluded the air.

Plaster and Ashes.

Once while riding in the cars we noticed an either side of the track for some distance a tract of almost barren sand, the only vegetation seen being now and then a sickly white birch and a little sorry looking sorrel. Two gentlemen, evidently farmers, were talking of manure, when one said: "Do you know what would clothe those lands with a good crop of clover?" The other gentleman looked incredulous, and shook his head; "Well," continued his interrogator, "plaster and ashes will do it, for I have tried it on just such land, and at the end of the third year there was a heavy sward on it."

We did not forget the conversation, but went home and sowed a barren knoll over with plaster and ashes, and to our astonishment a good crop of clover came in, though we did not put on a grain of seed. We then tried the experiment on our pasture lands, with marked success, so much so that we recommended it to our neighbors whose pastures were thin, and in three years the pasture land in that section would feed nearly double the stock that fed on them before.

Ashes in the neighboring village rose in price, and the farmers to-day buy all they can get at 60 and 75 cents per barrel, and find it pays well at that. We believe there is much land in Minnesota now almost worthless that will one day be made valuable by the use of plaster and ashes.—The Farmer's Union.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to Treasurer of the N. C. A.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. K. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

COR. SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard.

TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg.

GEN. AG'T & LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard.

—The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations (drafts or P.O. orders) should be sent to the Treasurer; general correspondence, etc., direct to the Corresponding Secretary. Address both at 13 Wabash Ave. Chicago

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY DEC. 2, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States

HENRY WILSON.

This great and good man is dead and the papers will now give the world his history, except what relates to the living questions of the day. In this respect they will treat him as they did Pres Finney, suppress the most important acts of his life.

In 1863, prior to our first Anti secret National Convention at Pittsburgh, I went to Washington, called Senator Wilson out of the Senate Chamber and asked him if he would address that Convention. He replied, "It will be almost impossible for me to leave here at that time; but I will come and address you or write a letter." He did write us a letter giving us his God-speed, which was read in the Convention.

He answered me impromptu without a moment's stopping to think of consequences to himself, adding: 'I am with you. Every one knows that I am opposed to secret societies" I afterwards saw him at his own house in Natick, and although he was so loaded with labor that he could not embark with us in the reform, and felt that his first duties were in the Republican party, which then was charged with the destinies of the country, he never flinched or hesitated to declare himself most explicitly against the whole system of organized secrecy. He said: "Mr. Banks and I parted on this question. And though I went into the Good Templars organization, as I have always been a decided temperance man, I had been a member but a little while, before I proposed to them to open our doors and lay aside the secret ritual."

It is a sign of the times that this great patriot is fallen, while yet we hoped he had years of labor for us left. The Republican party has not his peer remaining. "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth, for the faithful fail from among the children of men."

THE HOLINESS CONVENTION AT WHEATON, NOV. 15TH to 19TH, 1875.

Some ministers of the M. E. church, a few years since formed "The Western Methodist Episcopal Association for the Promotion of Holiness." It grew out of the special experiences of some of their number. After a little they dropped the words "Methodist Episcopal" from their title, and now several Baptists belong to them. They are not a church. There are none of them Freemasons. They do not assail the lodge. They simply preach and promote the personal sanctification or holiness of believers. A representation from this body came to Wheaton, Ill., Nov. 15th, and held three meetings a day till the 19th. The sum of their teachings is this:

That there is no partial sanctification, none but entire sanctification taught, required or promised in the Bible, and that certain conditions being complied with, "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanses us from all sin."

That the phrases, "full salvation," "entire sanctification," etc., etc., have sprung up because Bible terms of holiness have been emptied of part of their meaning by a low and corrupt age and church.

That the Bible teaches and God promises two distinct things to penitent believers, viz: forgiveness of their sins and "cleansing" themselves or making them holy persons.

That King David, Ps. 51st, prays for these two distinct things, viz: to be forgiven his murder of Uriah, "blood guiltiness," and also that God would "wash" HIM "thoroughly,"—"whiter than snow."

That the whole teaching of the Scriptures concerning holiness centers in these two points, which are separate and distinct from each other, viz., forgiveness and sanctification; both promised to faith now and here in this life, and that both are perfect and complete; that we are not promised half forgiveness or half sanctification; that the prayer for "more grace," and a "deeper work in the heart" is not strictly Scriptural.

That such prayers are in fact for the average holiness of a corrupt age and church which we observe around us, and not for Bible holiness.

That as the sinner must promise a life of obedience, while knowing in himself that he shall disobey unless God changes his heart, so the Christian must promise a life of holiness, knowing he shall sin unless Christ keeps him from sinning.

That it is absurd to require a blind sinner to believe more for conversion or regeneration than a Christian for holiness or sanctification.

That the grand reason why the professing masses are so unsanctified is ignorance and aversion to holiness.

That the swarms of fanatics and hypocrites professing and proclaiming themselves sanctified are to be expected before "holiness to the Lord" becomes universal in the church.

That if Christ cleanses a man he can keep him clean, and that both are promised; and that perpetual watchfulness should be a result of faith and not a reliance for holiness, since all human doings and willings must fail to forgive or to sanctify.

And if it is proper and not a mockery to call on sinners to come forward, submit to Christ and believe for the forgiveness of their sins, it is even more proper to to call on wailing, imperfect Christians to come forward forsake all things and believe for the perfect and complete sanctification of their souls.

Such have been the teachings (imperfectly stated) at Wheaton by the brethren named in last week's Cynosure. The convention has been an event of great importance in the town. Efforts are to be made for a similar convention on a larger scale in Chicago.

WAS LINCOLN A CHRISTIAN?

Taking up the Catholic Review we find a story of Lincoln's religious life which can only be regarded light of as a piece of mistaken extravagance or perhaps worse. A certain Mr. Martin has written the statement in a French journal, the Mond, in answer to the query "Was Lincoln a Catholic?" started by over-zealous papists. He says he was once in conversation with Lefevre, the late Romish bishop of Detroit, and says: "We came to speak of political events, and of the assassination of President Lincoln, and we were not a little surprised to hear Mgr. Lefevre say with sadness, 'Ah! poor Lincoln, if he had remembered my advice his end would not have been so deplorable; why did he not remain at home on Good Friday, and why did he not continue to say his beads?' 'His beads,' we exclaimed, 'but Lincoln was not a Catholic!' 'He was not so latterly, you say rightly; he had become an infidel. But in his youth he was baptized by a Catholic missionary of Illinois, and I myself heard his confession many times. I frequently celebrated holy mass in the house of his parents. Later in life, he aspired to honors; he married a Presbyterian and he became a member of the Masonic society. We felt it a duty to break off our relations.' We confess that we did not at all expect this revelation, the authenticity of which we guarantee upon the testimony of Mgr. Lefevre, and Americans need not have the least doubt that they have nominated a Catholic for President. But Lincoln did as many others have done, he abandoned a religion he had freely embraced upon serious examination, and, to arrive at fortune and position, he became an apostate and an infidel."

This story bears the marks of untruthfulness or lunacy. Lincoln's early home was an unlikely place for the celebration of mass; not only from its humble surroundings, but from the Christian character of his mother such a performance is incredible. Lincoln never joined the lodge. In exceeding rare instances ignorant and conscienceless Masonic orators have claimed him, but lodge journals have positively denied the statement. As for his infidelity there is proof enough to the contrary. The papers last week published the following conclusive proof on this point. In 1864, Mr. Lincoln wrote the following letter to Mrs. Gurney, widow of Joseph John Gurney, the celebrated English Quaker preacher, who had sometime before visited him. Mrs. Gurney had the letter photographed, and a copy is now in possession of the Lincoln Monument Association. The letter runs thus:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, Sept. 4th. 1864.—Eliza P. Gurney—MY ESTEEMED FRIEND: I have not forgotten—probably never shall forget—the very impressive occasion when yourself and friends visited me on a Sabbath forenoon two years ago, nor has your kind letter, written nearly a year later, ever been forgotten. In all it has been your purpose to strengthen my reliance on God. I am much indebted to the Christian people of this country for their constant prayers and consolations, and to none of them more than yourself. The purposes of the Almighty are perfect, and must prevail though we, erring mortals, may fail to accurately perceive them in advance. We hoped for a termination of this terrible war long before this, but God knows best, and has ruled otherwise. We shall yet acknowledge His wisdom and our own error therein. Meanwhile we must work earnestly in the best light He gives us, trusting that so working will conduce to the great ends He ordains. Surely He intends some great good to follow this mighty convulsion, which no mortal could make and do mortal could stay. Your people, the Friends, have had, and are having, a very great trial. On principle and faith opposed to both war and oppression by war. In this hard dilemma some have chosen one horn and some the other. For those appealing to me on conscientious grounds, I have done, and shall do, the best I could and can in my own conscience, under my oath to the law. That you believe this I doubt not, and, believing it, I shall still receive for our country and myself your earnest prayers to our Father in Heaven. Your sincere friend, A. LINCOLN.

Wanted: Friends to put the Cynosure into the hands of hundreds of men who would become workers in this reform if aroused and informed.

—On Saturday the 20th ult., the Grand Lodge of Illinois with various lodges and Knight Templar commanderies paraded the streets of Chicago and laid the corner-stone of Rush Medical College in the western part of the city. But alas, how is the fine gold of their collars and aprons become dim! As the chivalric procession passed along Lake Street across Ashland Ave., it was actually hissed by the bystanders on the corner. Let now Grand Master Lounsbury prepare something furious for his next year's report. Hawley and the Custom-House was nothing to this indignity. Another interesting fact from this same performance: the son of a gentleman editing a journal in this city, who is only indirectly interested in our reform, a lad of a dozen years, went to see this show at a corner-stone and describing the Masonic corn-wine-and-oil performance to his parents said he never saw men act so foolish in all his life. The lodge regalia was equally unsatisfactory to this true young American. Let's have a generation of such boys.

—While our opposition to the lodge of whatever name should always be earnest and fearless it should never be rash nor inconsistent with a Christian character. Father Hogan, a Catholic priest of Harrison, New Jersey, has shown both these qualifications in his attack on secret orders. Mr. O'Donnell, one of his parishoners belongs to an Irish lodge of some sort, and the priest took such means as these to reclaim him. He rebuked him publicly from the altar; he so represented his private character in conversation that Mr. O'Donnell's Irish customers left him. Instead of the salutary effect looked for, the priest will probably have to answer to a suit for defamation of character, and O'Donnell is more firmly joined than ever to his society.

—Gov. Beveridge left the good people of Illinois in some doubt lately by proclaiming a "day of thanksgiving and praise to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe." It is well known that the Governor has a very tender feeling for the lodge, and his adoption of a bold Masonic title, which the order has made familiarly applicable to Buddha, Allah, or any other false deity, shows him to be altogether too ready with Masonic nomenclature. It is but another notable instance of the hate of "the world" for its Redeemer.

—Past Master E. Romayne started for Syracuse, New York, yesterday where he will speak Friday and Saturday evenings, and then will attend the New York State meeting to be held at Rochester, Dec. 7th and 8th, and work the first and third degrees of Freemasonry. He will spend from Dec. 9th to Dec. 18th, in Western New York, speaking in Batavia, Leroy, etc., and then go to the Pennsylvania State meeting at Scranton, on the 21st, 22d, and 23d. In the early part of January he will again visit Indiana, and fill thirteen appointments for Mr. James McConnell, at Ligonier, Kendallville, etc., after which he will visit Polo, Freeport, and other towns in Illinois until Feb. 1st.

—Some friendly criticisms of Mrs. Cook's version of the difference between Protestant and Reformed Episcopalians will be reviewed next week.

—It is reported that the first Masonic lodge has been actually organized in Jerusalem. Some two years since Rob. Morris, "Blessed Charity" Cregier and a few other select Masonic spirits organized what they were pleased to call the Royal Mother Lodge of Jerusalem as a sort of compliment to the traditions of the order, but the members were neither residents of Jerusalem nor is it likely all of them were ever there. The new organization has in its membership persons from America, England, France, Germany, Turkey and Persia, religiously they are all Freemasons but members of the subordinate "sects" called Christians, Mohammedan and Jew.

—We find on examination that the letter of the late Hon. Henry Wilson to the first Pittsburgh Convention was not published with the minutes of that meeting but in a note its publication was promised in the Cynosure. An examination of the files of the paper fails to prove this promise fulfilled, and this neglect has probably lost the valuable testimony to the world, as neither the record nor correspondence of that Convention were given to the present secretaries.

THE FIRST ANNUAL MEETING of the Mt. Holyoke Alumnæ Association for Chicago and the Northwest was held at the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago Saturday, November 27th. The attendance was good and a resolution was passed, signifying the determination of the Association to raise $1,000, if possible, to supply the Seminary Cabinet with casts, or else to purchase some work of art.

The address of welcome which was given by Mrs. Dr. Jackson (one of Mark Twain's Innocents Abroad), was eloquent and beautiful. The Poem, Original Hymn, Dinner Toasts and Responses were all in good taste and of more than ordinary merit.

One sad feature of the gathering was to see pupils of Miss Mary Lyon, who confessed their great indebtedness to her, speak patronizingly of the Sunday daily papers, and vote to furnish them with a full report of their meeting. This vote was not unanimous, we are glad to say. Is it strange that the Bible is cast out of the public schools when such a leader as Mrs. Grant, of the Home for the Friendless, speaks patronizingly of the Sunday daily papers? Miss Lyon would not permit young ladies to visit their own homes on the Sabbath and discouraged them from writing letters to friends on that day. We think if her spirit was present on that occasion she must have been saddened to see her former pupils give their support to one of the greatest enemies of the Bible in our cities.

MARRIED.—At the residence of Augustus Adams, 992 Indiana Ave., Chicago, Thursday, Nov. 4th, 1875, by the Rev. W. A Lloyd of Ravenswood, Ill., Dr. L. B. Farrar of Paxton, Ill., to Miss L. E. Stearns, M. D., of Chicago, Ill. Vermont papers please copy.

Dr. Stearns occasionally contributed valuable hints to our health department and was our first "Florida Correspondent."

A gentleman writes: "The Cynosure is too cheap. I would not part with it if it was four dollars a year." An American lady in Germany who takes the paper writes telling us how much she likes it. The President of a bank in Jacksonville, Ill., expresses his great interest in it. Every day nearly we receive letters speaking of the great value of the Cynosure.

Religious Intelligence.

—The corner-stone of the monument to be erected in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, by the Presbyterians to the memory of Dr. Witherspoon a signer of the Declaration of Independence, was laid on the 16th ult. Dr. W. W. Barr, moderator of the last United Presbyterian General Assembly and editor of the Evangelical Repository, offered prayer; Dr. Musgrave, President of the Presbyterian Historical Society laid the stone with a few fitting remarks, and Dr. Wm. Adams of the Union Theological Seminary made an address on the occasion.

—At the late meeting of the American Bible Society in New York, letters were received from the Rev. Dr. Bliss, at Constantinople, mentioning that new regulations have been adopted by the Turkish Government providing for a Censorship of all publications in the Empire, and threatening serious embarrassments to the work of the Bible Society.

—Earl Shaftesbury stated at a meeting of the Scottish Bible society, last month, that full permission has been given in Russia for the circulation of the Bible throughout the empire; and that authority is also obtained to print the Bible in the Turkish language at Constantinople.

—The joint commission from the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist churches met in Pittsburgh, Oct. 22d, to devise a basis of organic union. The Methodist church is the Northern part of what was once the Methodist Protestant church. These two branches, in doctrine and polity almost identical, were separated by slavery, and now that it has been put away they are in a fair way of reunion. After a harmonious session of four days, a basis of union was agreed upon by the commissioners.

—A large secession from the Roman Catholic church is somewhat of a novelty, and therefore attracts attention. At the last meeting of the Presbytery of Pictou, in Nova Scotia, a paper was received from one-hundred and twenty-five persons, declaring that they had renounced Popery, and that they wished to be considered as adhering to the Protestant faith. They had been for some time under instruction, and seemed to understand fully the difference between the form of religion they were abandoning and the faith they were accepting, and to which they purpose hereafter to adhere.

—The two leading Baptist papers in Boston, the Era and Watchman and Reflector, have been consolidated, with Dr. Lorimer in editorial control.

—Gracious revivals are reported in the Wesleyan churches of West Bureau, Ill., under the labors of G. P. Riley; and Ripley, Ohio, where Rev. C. W. Roberts is laboring.

—A convention of citizens of Ohio, favorable to the maintainance of our Sabbath laws, to the Bible in the common schools, and to the religious amendment of the Constitution of the United States, commenced yesterday in Xenia.

—The revival meetings in Philadelphia under Mr. Moody's leadership attained the largest proportions soon after they were opened. The Thanksgiving anniversary interfered somewhat last week, but the work goes on without very marked abatement

News of the Week.

The Vice-President's Funeral.

Friday was a damp, rainy day in Washington as if nature mourned the nation's loss. The funeral ceremonies were attended by all the public officers in the city and by a crowd so vast that the corridors were almost impassible. They began with prayer by Rev. Mr. Sunderland followed by a sermon by Rev. J. E. Rankins, pastor of the Congregational church. The remains was placed on board the train in charge of the committee from Massachusetts. A vast procession of citizens and military received them in Baltimore and the body lay in state till 6 P. M., when the funeral cortege proceeded by special train to Philadelphia where Independence Hall was opened for its reception. At New York the remains were detained a few hours on Saturday and demonstrations of high honor were shown. The funeral train reached Boston on Sunday and upwards of 30,000 people paid their tribute of respect and sorrow. The body will be interred at Natick where Mr. Wilson's wife is buried.

Foreign.

The American residents and visitors in Berlin held a Thanksgiving service. The sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Thompson. At the conclusion of the religious service the congregation adopted resolutions expressing their sorrow at the death of Vice-President Wilson, and directing that a telegram of condolence be sent to America.——Another rout of the Carlist forces near Pamphelona has taken place. Don Carlos has issued a proclamation exhorting his soldiers to an energetic resistance against the fresh attack of the Northern army. The President will probably be able to announce in his annual message to Congress that Spain has consented to an abrogation of that clause of the treaty of 1795 which covers the right of search.——The British has purchased a controlling influence in the Suez Canal, paying four million pounds sterling for 177,000 shares of the stock.——The State Tribunal of Prussia has ruled that Von Arnim may be tried for treason.——The German government has vetoed the extravagant stage dress of female actresses.

General.

The jury in the case of Wirth & Kiewert, distillers, Milwaukee, have returned a verdict of not guilty as to Wirth, but as to Kiewert they could not agree and were discharged. Miller, the gauger, who was convicted several days ago, and was awaiting sentence under bail, has disappeared.——The Democratic triumph in Mississippi involves the cutting down of the State printing bill from $100,000 a year to $16,000, and it is said the Republican newspapers in the interior are very generally suspending.——William B. Astor died at the age of 84, at his residence in New York on Wednesday last. He left an estate valued all the way from 100 to 200 million dollars.——Chancellor Howard Crosley, D. D. lately preferred a charge against police officers for visiting a drinking saloon, and they were discharged from the force.——There is a great activity in the various navy yards and all the available ironclads are being prepared for active service. The European fleet has been ordered to Lisbon and one vessel has been sent to assist the republic of Liberia in its war with the natives.

My Vesper Song.

Read at the First Congregational church at a Sabbath-school concert by a member of a Bible-class in Peoria, Ill.

Filled with weariness and pain,
Scarcely strong enough to pray,
In this twilight hour I sit—
Sit and sing my doubt away.

O'er my broken purposes,
Ere the coming shadows roll,
Let me build a bridge of song;
"Jesus, lover of my soul,"

"Let me to thy bosom fly."
How the words my thoughts repeat;
To thy bosom, Lord, I come,
Though unfit to kiss thy feet.

Once I gathered sheaves for thee,
Dreaming I could hold them fast;
Now I can but idly sing:
"O! receive my soul at last."

I am weary of my fears,
Like a child when night comes on;
In the shadow, Lord I sing;
"Leave, oh! leave me not alone."

Through the tears I still must shed,
Through the evil yet to be,
Though I falter while I sing,
"Still support and comfort me."

"All my trust on thee is stayed,"
Does the rhythm of the song,
Softly falling on my heart,
Make its pulses firm and strong;

Or is this thy perfect peace
Now descending while I sing,
That my soul may sleep to-night
'"Neath the shadow of thy wing?"

"Thou of life the fountain art."
If I slumber on thy breast
If I sing myself to sleep—
Sleep and death alike are rest.

Through the shadows overpast,
Through the shadows yet to be,
Let the ladder of my song
"Rise to all eternity."

Note by note its silver bars,
May my soul in love ascend,
Till I reach the highest round
In thy kingdom without end.

Not impatiently I sing,
Though I stretch my hands and cry:
"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

How to Drive Them off.

It was a charming day in winter, just such a day as sets the blood to dancing in one's veins and tingling in one's cheeks, and makes the step buoyant and the heart light.

Charles May really enjoyed it as he plunged about through the snow, and promptly performed the duties required of him both at the store and bank. But when the day was ended, he hurried home with an eager desire for the shelter and warmth and the genial glow only to be found at one's own fireside.

The family were already seated at the tea-table, and he was glad of it, for the keen, cold air had given him an appetite. He hurried to join them, and gave them a cheerful though rather noisy greeting as he took the seat which had been reserved for him.

"Do be more quiet, Charles," said his mother, in a peevish, complaining tone. "I never did hear such a voice. It goes right through my head every time you speak. I do believe you will drive me crazy some day."

Charles felt snubbed and somewhat disheartened by this reception; but the room was bright and warm, and he was really in a good humor, so he said:

"I am sorry I annoyed you, mother. I never can seem to remember to speak low. My voice comes right out before I think."

"If your nerves trouble you as mine do me, you would not forget so often," said Mrs. May as she passed him a cup of tea.

Charles bit his lip and began to feel that his home-coming had not been so pleasant as he had hoped it would be. For a time silence reigned. Then Miss Eva May, attempting to rise from the table, found that her brother's chair had been placed upon her dress, and a deplorable rent was the consequence.

"You careless boy!" cried Eva angrily, "Just see your work! My beautiful skirt, that I have worked so hard to finish, and I have only worn it twice!" The thought was too much for her. She began to cry.

"Don't, dear!' said the penitent Charles. "It cannot be helped now. I will get you a dress with the very next money I get. You see if I don't."

"Oh, do hush," cried Eva. "You do not know what you are talking about. You could not earn enough to buy me a dress like this if you should work a month. You are the most careless, aggravating boy I ever saw. Why can you not look where you place your chair, as other people do?"

"If I am careless, then you are as cross as a bear," said Charles, growing angry in his turn. "And as to your dress, if you make it long enough to trail across the room, you must expect people to set their chairs on it, and step on it, too."

"How impertinent boys are," said Eva.

"They are better than girls, any way," retorted Charles. "All that you girls care for is your clothes."

"How you two do quarrel," said Matilda, the oldest daughter. "I should think you might at least allow us to take our meals in peace."

"Be quiet," said Mr. May, rousing himself from a fit of abstraction. "Eva, do not say another word. Charles, drink your tea, and let your sister alone."

Charles hastily seated himself again at the table. Eva ran out of the room. Matilda lingered a moment, then followed her sister. Charles tried to get back his gay, careless mood, and at length partially succeeded.

When he went to the parlor he found Matilda there, reading a new novel. His eye was at once attracted by a pile of music which lay upon the piano, and he began to examine it.

"Do let my music alone, Charlie," said Matilda. "You will soil it if you do not take care. I do hate to have my music handled."

"Well, come and play for me, then," said Charles. "I see you have that new song which I like so much."

"I cannot play now," said Matilda, "I want to read."

"Oh, but I do so love music," said Charles; "and you can read that book at any other time just as well."

"As to that, I can play to you at any other time just as well," replied Matilda.

"No, for I am at home only a few hours in the evening, and callers so often drop in. Come, play just one piece for me, please do."

"How you do tease," said Matilda. "Can you not see that I want to read in peace!"

Charles gave the matter up, sat down by the table, and took up the evening paper. He had just begun to be interested in reading it when his father came in.

"Ah, my son," he said, "I had not quite finished my paper when the tea-bell rang. May I trouble you for it now?"

Charles handed the paper to his father, and then, not well knowing what to do, seated himself at the piano and began to play softly, with one finger, a popular air. He was very fond of music, and really made out pretty well, considering that his ear was his only guide. But soon his father called out to him in some impatience, "Charles, do stop that drumming. I cannot understand a word that I read."

"Bother!" muttered Charles under his breath, as he left the piano and sauntered to the front window, where he stood looking out.

A moment later and he heard a low, peculiar whistle. At that sound his face brightened, and he went hastily out. As he opened the front door, a somewhat older youth than himself came up the steps.

"Why, Ned Willet!' he said, "when did you come to the city?"

"Yesterday," said Ned; "and I am glad to get back. Come around to my room and spend the evening. We are to have a few of the fellows in to have a game of cards, a song or two, and a good time in general."

Charles hesitated. The prospect seemed pleasant; but he knew that his parents did not quite approve of Ned. As he hesitated, Ned caught him by the arm.

"Come on," he said; "you need not try to back out, for no one else can sing such a good song as you can, and the truth is, we cannot get on without you." Charles yielded, saying, "I did not mean to go out to-night; but no one seems to care for my company at home, and I can neither move nor speak without annoying somebody."

"Oh, I know," said Ned. "That is the way I am always snubbed at home. I was really glad when I could come to the city, earn my own living, have my own rooms and do as I liked."

So Charles went out into the night, and soon found warmth, mirth, good humor, and a hearty welcome. If the boy who entertained him was not a good companion for him; if the wine flowed freely; if the talk was not that which he ought to hear, whose was the blame? He had a pleasant home, but he had been driven from it as effectually as if such had been the concerted plan of his united family. Driven out! Driven out! Driven off! Is it not too true a picture?

Father, mother, sisters, have you a careless, noisy, good-tempered, well-meaning boy among you, who loves you dearly, yet sorely tries your patience by his blunders and restless ways? If so, and if you want to drive him off, behold the way to do it.—Christian Weekly.

There is an old proverb of a rusty shield that prayed: "O sun, illuminate me," but the sun replied, "First polish yourself." The Christian who expects to be anything honorable, strong and happy must be in such a position that the influence from God can reach him.

Sight for the Blind.

A blind man once applied to an eminent oculist, to inquire concerning an operation upon his eyes. He had been blind from birth. The oculist, after a careful examination, said that if he would submit to a critical surgical operation, there was a bare possibility that for an instant he might see; it would be only for an instant—a gleam—and then all vision of power would be destroyed. He would never see again.

The blind man desired that the oculist should undertake the operation. The question now to be decided was, what objects should he place before him, so that if that thrilling moment came, he might gain his first and last view of them. He desired that the dear friends who had ministered to him, in all those years of darkness, should be seated in chairs while the oculist was engaged in the operation.

For a long time the blind man submitted, in the patience of hope. At length that moment came! It was only for a moment; but he saw his dear friends! What a look that must have been! Now their image would be indelibly impressed upon his heart, and that thrilling moment's view would be his constant solace in all his remaining life of darkness!

Look at another fact which the above illustrates. If you are still without Christ, you also are in darkness. Your soul is blind. You have never seen Christ as your Redeemer, the "chief among ten thousand and altogether lovely." He is able and willing to open the blind eyes of your soul. Yes, the Divine oculist is Himself your dearest friend, whom you have never seen. He offers to dispel your darkness and heal your blindness.—American Messenger.

Bishop Simpson Saved by Prayer.

I remember once when there was a conference at Mount Vernon, at which I was present, Bishop Janes was presiding one afternoon, and, after reading a dispatch stating that Bishop Simpson was dying in Pittsburgh, asked that the conference unite in prayer that his life might be saved. We knelt down and Mr. Taylor, the great street preacher, led in one of his beautiful prayers. After the first few sentences, in which I joined with my whole heart, my mind seemed to be at ease, and I did not pay much attention to the rest of the prayer, only to notice its beauty. When we arose from our knees I turned to a brother and said, "Bishop Simpson will not die; I feel it." I then told him how the feeling came over me, and he assured me that he had experienced the same impression. The word was passed around, and over thirty ministers who were present said they had the same feeling. I took my book and made a note of the hour and circumstances.

Several months afterward I met Bishop Simpson and asked what he did to recover his health. He did not know, but the physician had said it was a miracle. He said that one afternoon, when at the point of death, the doctor left him, saying that he should be left alone for half an hour. At the end of that time the doctor returned, and immediately noticed a great change in the patient. He was startled and asked the family what they had done for the bishop, and they replied nothing at all. That half hour I found, by making allowances for different localities, was just the time when we were praying for him at Mount Vernon. From that time on he steadily improved, and has lived to bless the church and humanity. God does answer prayer for physical good. I know he does. On the God who has so often answered my prayers I will still rely, scientific men and philosophers to the contrary, notwithstanding. —Bishop Bowman.

Home.

Is it a palace, a mansion, a couple of rooms, a hovel, a cellar, a garret, a niche in the wall, or a shifting tent? No! none nor any of these make home. It is neither marble, nor mosaics, nor pictures, nor carpets, nor wood, nor stones, nor bricks, that make home. It is not keeping out from cubes of space the wind and rain and biting cold or the fevering heat that makes home. These spaces, be they hallowed by sacred memories and never so fondly cherished, belong to the world like so much other sunshine or shadow, so much other space, and their enclosing walls are but mute creatures of the elements which gladly turn to ashes.

Solus returns after years on the sea. He enters the door of the house, there is a smell of mould, of dust, of decay, a shock of darkness and silence. A doughy touch is in the carpet, dusty webs festoon the rooms, the grates are red with rust, the doors creak on their hinges, the furniture is grim and discolored. All the dead machinery of home is here, but she is gone; it is no longer home, but the desolation of a mountain cave.

Home is life, love. Souls make home, whether in a hovel or a palace, in an Arab tent or an Indian wigwam. Where souls meet, irradiate with mutual love, there is home, peace, rest, the saving elysium of earth. It matters not in what manner of crucible or retort this divine psychic chemistry takes place, that place is home begun.

To vulgarize home into simply a place to eat, to drink, to sleep, to scheme, to dodge, to hide, to command and tyrannize, is the grossest of infidelito, the most flagrant of sacrilege. These places ore not homes, but resorts, and the foulest abortions possible to earth. Souls grow sick and hearts bitter, and the angels grow sad over such homes as these. Instead of saving they curse. In them there is no peace nor rest. Their dark shadow shuts out the battlements of heaven. Weariness and darkness, despair and cursing, brood over these dens, which almost close the heart to the highest virtue by loading every thought with misery. From these abodes heaven is too far to be reached, and even the earth itself looks hideous through the gloom. Supremely blessed are they who know not these pollutions, but who live in love's perpetual sunshine, in the light of sweet eyes overflowing with love returned, as pure as an angel's thought and as lasting as God's fiat.

As the dove returning across the watery waste, bringing the olive branch of hope and promise of green fields and an earthly future, so does that inspiration of love, which is the essence and reality of home, bring with it a holy olive branch of promise from the etherial fields of paradise, and an assurance of relationship, of communication, with the abode of the Father in the great home of the universe. Thus forever flows in this earthly home an ennobling, inspiriting, refining current of love from the abodes of the bleet, and its unseen vein forever points heavenward. Oh home! sweet home! oasis of the desert, fountain of everspringing joy even on earth, and sweeter still, the earnest of a holier home to come. —Pittsburgh Register.

Tide-Marks.

It was low tide when we went to Bristol; and the great gray rocks stood up bare and grim above the water; but high up on all their sides was a black line that seemed hardly dry, though it was high above the water.

"What makes that black mark above the rocks?" I asked my friend.

"Oh! that is the tide mark," she replied. "Every day, when the tides come in, the water rises until it reaches that line, and, in a great many years, it has worn the stone until the mark is cut into the rock."

"Oh!" thought I, "that is it, is it?" Well, I have seen a great many people that carry tide-marks on their faces. Right in front of me was a pretty little girl, with delicate features and pleasant blue eyes. But she had some queer little marks on her forehead, and I wondered how they came to be there, until presently her mother said:

"Draw down the blind, now, Carrie; the sun shines right in baby's face."

"I want to look out," said Carrie in a very peevish voice.

But her mother insisted, and Carrie drew the blind, and turned her face away from the window. Oh, dear me! what a face it was! The blue eyes were full of frowns instead of smiles; the pleasant lips were drawn up in an ugly pout, and the queer marks on her forehead had deepened into actual wrinkles.

"Poor little girl!" I thought. "How badly you will feel, when you grow up, to have your face marked all over with the tide-marks of passion! for these evil tempers leave their marks just as surely as the ocean does; and I have seen many a face stamped so deeply with self-will and covetousnsss, that it must carry the marks to the grave."

Take care, little folks, and, whenever you give way to bad temper, remember the "tide-marks."—London Christian's Friend.

—Indecision keeps the door ajar, but decision shuts and bolts it.

Neatness, Boys.

Why shouldn't boys be taught to be neat as well as girls; also to be industrious? Why should three or four masculines sit all the long winter evenings idle, while the weary wife and mother has never a leisure moment she can call her own? Mothers, if you would have your boys strong and self-reliant, and at the same time neat, careful, methodical men; and your daughters strong-nerved, healthy, self-sustaining women—train them up together. Teach the boys to be handy in the house, and let the girls lend a helping hand out-doors. Both will be the better for it. The girls should work out-doors as much as possible. As I have watched the woodman at the foot of some large tree, the thought has come to me, that here is where you get your strength and courage in mastering obstacles above yourself, and in inhaling the fresh air of heaven. If your mightiest implements were the mop and broom, and your breathing brought no purer air to the lungs than most kitchens and sleeping-rooms contain, you would be as nervous and sickly and timid as the majority of women are. In Summer, when I find myself getting nervous and fidgety, I fly to the garden and there find a sure panacea for many of the ills that poor woman is heir to. —Selected.

Discovery of a Lost Plant.—There has lately come to light a case which will rank with the most curious on record. The mines of Laurium, Greece, which were worked about 16,000 years ago, are in a great measure composed of scoria, or the refuse of ancient mines, which still yields a high percentage of silver. In clearing away a mass of this refuse, a quantity of seeds were discovered, which must have been buried for at least fifteen centuries. Restored to conditions favorable to germination, to the heat of the sun and contact of the air, the seeds gave signs of life, burst their buds, and sent down roots in the earth, and threw up stems into the light, where those last had budded and blossomed. So, a lost species of the genus glaucium (horned poppy) of the order papavereus, was revealed. Pliny and Dioscorides frequently describe the flower in their writings with great particularity, as its golden corolla is very beautiful, but it has hitherto been unknown to modern science. Now, the plant which had disappeared from the face of the globe for 1,500 years, has been restored.

A dog belonging to a gentleman who lived near Chester, was in the habit of not only going to church, but remaining quietly in the pew during service, whether the master was there or not. On Sunday the dam at the head of a lake in the neighborhood gave way, so that the whole road was inundated. The congregation, in consequence, consisted of a few who came from some cottages close by, but nobody attended from the great house. The clergyman stated that while reading the Psalms he saw his friend, the dog, come slowly up the aisle, dripping with wet, having swum to get to church. He went as usual into the pew and remained to the end of the service.

The Elephant in Central India.

In the region of Central India, which is destitute of roadways or railways, elephants are the chief reliance of the traveler, bearing him in safety over a country often impassable to any other beast of burden. Even the camel is considered less sure and trustworthy in difficult and dangerous passes. But, when pursuing a journey, the elephant is an object of great care, it being necessary to insure against his declining in strength under the fatigue of long daily marches. Several persons are required in order to attend properly upon the animal; therefore, the mahout, or driver, generally takes his wife and children along with him to assist in his especial duties. Morning and evening the animal must have a bath, and, before he sets out on his march, every part of his body where the skin is liable to crack in the hot sun—his forehead, ears, paws, etc.—must be anointed with grease. When at rest, he must be placed in the shade and relieved of his trappings. A simple cord tied around one leg and fastened to a stake, suffices to confine him, as a docile elephant never attempts to break away from restraint.

His daily rations, while on the march, consist of from 20 to 25 pounds of wheat flour, kneaded into cakes with water, and a pound of ghee, or clarified butter, and a half-pound of salt. These cakes are baked in pound loaves, and one-half is given at each of two separate meals. These rations ought not to be abated in quantity; hence it is important that the traveler should look to the matter himself, as the mahout does not scruple to rob the elephant by way of providing for his own family. But the regular meals of bread do not by any means furnish sufficient sustenance for the huge beast. He must be regularly taken to the jungle, where he selects and breaks off for himself branches of particular trees, —species of the fig are his especial favorites,—and, loading them on his back, returns to camp. He there strips off the leaves which he rejects, and, by a single dexterous stroke with the delicate finger terminating his trunk, removes the bark from each twig, however slight, and then, discarding the wood as he before has done the leaves, regales himself upon the bark alone.

A species of grass (Typha elephanta), with leaves growing to the size of a saber-blade, abounds in the pools of Central India after the month of April, and is preferred by the elephant to fig-boughs. He is also very fond of the sugar-cane, but this is too heating a food. The animal often makes up balls of earth, generally of red loam, and swallows them. This bolus acts as a violent cathartic, and is instinctively employed by the sagacious brute as a remedy for intestinal worms, with which he is very much troubled.

The animal soon becomes attached to the traveler who rides him, greeting his approach with a friendly cry, obeying his lightest direction, and carefully breaking the branches bending over the path, that might strike him in passing.—Tribune.

FELLOW CRAFT DEGREE Concluded.

Q. What was then asked of you?

A. If this was of my own free-will and accord: if I was worthy and well qualified, duly and truly prepared, and had made suitable proficiency in the preceding degrees; all of which being answered in the affirmative I was then asked by what further right and benefit I expected to gain admission?

Q. Your answer?

A. By the benefit of a pass.

Q. Had you the pass?

A. I had it not but my conductor had it for me?

Q. What followed?

A. I was desired to wait with patience until the Worshipful Master could be informed of my request and his answer returned.

Q. What answer did he return?

A. Let him enter this lodge in the name of the Lord and be received in due form.

Q. How were you received?

A. Upon the angle of a square applied to my naked right breast, the moral of which was to teach me that the square of virtue should be my rule and guide in all my future transactions with mankind.

Q. How were you then disposed of?

A. I was conducted twice around the lodge to the Junior Warden in the South where the same questions were asked and like answers returned as at the door.

Q How did the Junior Warden dispose of you?

A. He directed me to the Senior Warden in the West and he to the Worshipful Master in the East where the same questions were asked and like answers returned as before.

Q. How did the Worshipful Master dispose of you?

A. He ordered me to be reconducted to the Senior Warden in the West, who taught me how to approach the East by two upright regular steps, my feet forming the angle of an oblong square and my body erect facing the Worshipful Master in the East.

Q. What did the Worshipful Master then do with you?

A. He made me a Fellow Craft Mason in due form.

Q. What is that due form?

A. Kneeling on my naked right knee, my left forming a square, my right hand resting on the Holy Bible, square and compass, my left forming a right angle supported by the square in which due form I took upon myself the solemn oath and obligation of a Fellow Craft Mason. (See page 66.)

Q. What is the penalty of your obligation?

A. "Binding myself under no less a penalty than that of having my left breast torn open, my heart plucked out and given as a prey to the wild beasts of the field and fowls of the air, should I ever knowingly or willingly violate this my solemn oath and obligation as a Fellow Craft Mason: so help me God and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same."

Q. After your obligation what were you asked?

A. What I most desired.

Q. Your answer?

A. More light in Masonry.

Q. Did you receive more light in Masonry?

A. I did by order of the Worshipful Master and the assistance of the brethren.

Q. On being brought to light in Masonry for the second time what did you discover more than in the preceding degree?

A. The three great lights of Masonry as before by the aid of the three lesser, but with this difference that one point of the compass was elevated above the square which was to signify that as yet I had received light in Masonry but partially.

Q. What did you next behold?

A. The Worshipful Master approaching me from the East on the step, under the due-guard and sign of a Fellow Craft, and who in token of the continuance of his friendship and brotherly love, presented me with his right hand and with it the pass, token of a pass, grip and word of a Fellow Craft Mason, ordered me to arise and salute the Junior and Senior Wardens as such.

Q. After saluting the Wardens how were you disposed of?

A. I was ordered to be re-conducted to the Senior Warden in the West who taught me how to wear my apron as a Fellow Craft Mason and return to the East.

Q. How should Fellow Craft Masons wear their aprons?

A. With the bib turned down.

Q. What followed?

A. I was presented with the working tools of a Fellow Craft Mason and taught their uses.

Q. What are the working tools of a Fellow Craft Mason?

A. The plumb, square and level.

Q. What are their moral and Masonic uses.

A. The plumb is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to try their work; the square to square their work and the level to prove horizontals, but we as Free and Accepted Masons are taught to make use of them for more noble and glorious purposes. The plumb admonishes us to walk uprightly in our several stations before God and man, squaring our actions with the square of virtue and ever remembering that we are traveling upon the level of time to that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns.

Q. How were you then disposed of?

A. I was ordered to be re-conducted to the place from whence I came and to be there invested with what I had been divested of and informed that upon my return to the lodge it became necessary that I should make a regular advance through a porch up a flight of winding stairs, consisting of three, five and seven steps to a place representing the middle chamber of King Solomon's temple there to receive my first instructions relative to the wages and jewels of a Fellow Craft.

Q. What are the wages of a Fellow Craft?

A. Corn, wine and oil, emblematical of the corn of nourishment, the wine of refreshment and the oil of joy, denoting peace, health and plenty.

Q. What are the jewels of a Fellow Craft?

A. The attentive ear, the instructive tongue and the faithful breast.

The examining brother then stands up and examines the candidate in the step and grips as explained in pages 68,69 and which of course it is quite unnecessary to be gone through with here, after which he is requested to repair to the ante-room, there to await the action of the lodge or the will and pleasure of the Worshipful Master. It must not be forgotten that on all occasions when a brother, whether an Apprentice, a Craftsman or a Master Mason is entering or retiring from the lodge he must make the due-guard and sign of the degree on which the lodge is then open, and should he fail to do this whether through ignorance or neglect, his attention is invariably called to it either by the Master or some one of the brethren present.

As Freemasonry claims to be "a conservator as well as a depository of religion, science and art," and "includes within its circle almost every branch of polite learning," (see Past Grand Master Pierson's "Traditions of Freemasonry" page 14 and Sickels' "General Ahiman Reson" page 116) it may not be amiss to state that the second or Fellow Craft degree contains all the "science" and "art" to be found in the institution, and as the whole of the second degree is given word for word in the preceding pages the reader is respectfully referred to them for a knowledge of the "sciences" and "arts" which Freemasonry boastfully pretends to impart to its deluded votaries.

CHAPTER VII.

THIRD OR SUBLIME DEGREE OF MASTER MASON.

INITIATORY CEREMONIES.

Both points of the compass above the square.

The ground-work of the third or "sublime" degree of Master Mason is based upon the pretended assassination of one Hiram Abiff, Masonically termed "the legend of the Tyrian artist," a mechanic of considerable celebrity who resided in the ancient city of Tyre, and whom Hiram, King of Tyre, sent to King Solomon to assist in the construction of the once famous temple at Jerusalem. We are informed by what is called "Masonic tradition" that Solomon, King of Israel; Hiram, King of Tyre; and Hiram Abiff, entered into a solemn compact never to communicate the so-called Master's word until the temple was completed, and then only in the presence of the three, and that in consequence of his fidelity to his trust when attacked immediately before the completion of the temple by the three Fellow Craft ruffians, Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum, to extort from him these secrets. Hiram Abiff was slain and hence the Master's word was lost and the real secrets of Freemasonry lay buried in oblivion, and were unknown to any portion of the human family for a period of five hundred and thirty years or until the building of the second temple after the Babylonish captivity. The pretended secrets of Freemasonry, the word which was supposed to be lost, is the true name of God and hence if "Masonic tradition" is to be relied upon, neither the church of God assembled at the temple dedication, nor the high priest who ministered in the Holy of Holies, nor Elijah, nor Elisha, nor Isaiah, nor any other of God's prophets or people knew or have now any knowledge of the Almighty's real name, except those who go cable-towed and hood-winked into a Masonic lodge seeking for "further light," and which is to be imparted to them (very often by an infidel) at the rate of from fifty to one hundred dollars apiece. But this entire story of the assassination of Hiram is a falsehood, a base fabrication; and the foundation being a lie surely the superstructure cannot possibly be that upon which a Christian man can rely for salvation, or to which a Christian minister can consistently unite himself by extra-judicial oaths and sanguinary death penalties. In 1 Kings vii. 40, we read, "And Hiram made the lavers and the shovels and the basins. So Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made King Solomon for the house of the Lord." Again in 2 Chron. iv. 11, "And Hiram made the pots and the shovels and the basins. And Hiram finished the work that he was to make for King Solomon for the house of the Lord." Now if Hiram Abiff finished all the work that he was to make how is it possible that he could have been assassinated before the temple was completed?

This degree, notwithstanding its glaring inconsistencies and the almost innumerable evidences of its modern origin, is nevertheless considered as the most important as it is in reality the very summit of "Ancient Craft Masonry." It is from brethren of this degree that the rulers of the craft are selected because (according to Masonic authority) "it is only from those who are capable of giving instruction that we can reasonably expect to receive it."

There is no difference, as has been already remarked, between a lodge of Apprentices, Fellow Crafts or Master Masons, except in the manner of placing the "altar lights" or the Holy Bible, square and compass, and new members heedless of this distinction are very apt to make the due-guard and sign of a Master Mason as a salute to the Worshipful Master when entering a lodge of an inferior degree; indeed, I have often seen the Master's sign made in a lodge of Apprentices. The jewels worn by the different officers are also the same in each of the three degrees and for the information of the general reader shall be here enumerated in their order: The Worshipful Master wears a square; a Past Master wears a compass opened on a quarter circle, sun in the center; Senior Warden, a level; Junior Warden, a plumb; Treasurer, cross keys; Secretary, cross pens; Senior Deacon, square and compass, sun in the center; Junior Deacon, square and compass, quarter moon in the center; Stewards, a cornucopia; Tyler, a sword, saber shape.

In addition to the jewels worn by the Wardens there is also placed on the pedestal in front of each a small column about eighteen inches high, the Senior Warden's being marked with a level and the Junior Warden's with a plumb. When a lodge is opened in any of the degrees the Senior Warden "erects his column" or in other words places it standing on his pedestal in front of his chair, and lays it down when the lodge is closed or "called off," while the Junior Warden's column is always down except when the lodge is "called from labor to refreshment." It will be only necessary to remark further that none but Masters, Past Masters or Wardens are permitted to confer the degrees of Masonry and although a brother may have received the honorary degree of Past Master in a chapter, yet if elected as Worshipful Master of a Blue Lodge he must before installation be again invested with "the secrets of the chair." With these introductory remarks I shall now proceed to give in detail the exemplification of the work of the Master Mason's degree.

Worshipful Master:—(one rap) Brother Senior Warden, are you satisfied that all present are Master Masons?

Senior Warden:—(rising) All present are not Master Masons, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(addressing any Fellow Craft present) Those below the degree of Master Mason will please retire.

Any brother present who has attained only to the degree of Fellow Craft will now step in front of the altar, make the customary salute (the due-guard and sign of a Fellow Craft) and retire to the ante-room and as no one but Master Masons are allowed to remain in and around the lodge room during "work" on the third degree, Fellow Crafts must at this stage of the proceedings entirely leave the building. The Master's order being obeyed as above the Senior Warden says:

Senior Warden:—(still standing) All present are Master Masons, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Senior Warden, it is my order that we now dispense with labor on the second degree and resume on the third for "work"; this you will communicate to your brother Junior Warden in the South and he to the brethren present, that all having due notice thereof may govern themselves accordingly.

Senior Warden:—(one rap) Bro. Junior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that we now dispense with labor on the second degree and resume on the third for work. This you will communicate to the brethren present, etc., etc

Junior Warden:—(three raps) Brethren, it is the order of the Worshipful Master, communicated to me by way of the West, that we now dispense with labor on the second degree and resume on the third for work. Take due notice thereof and govern yourselves accordingly.

Worshipful Master:—Together, brethren.

All the members now looking to the East, in unison with the Master make the due-guard and sign of a Master Mason, see page 21.

Worshipful Master:—Accordingly I declare Keystone Lodge, No. 639, duly at labor on the third degree of Masonry. Bro. Junior Deacon, so inform the tyler. Bro. Senior Deacon arrange the altar (one rap).

The Junior Deacon informs the tyler as in the two preceding degrees, the Senior Deacon proceeds to the altar, elevates both points of the compass above the square and retires to his seat.

Junior Deacon:—(facing the East) The tyler is informed, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, you will retire and ascertain what work there is in waiting.

The Senior Deacon taking his rod proceeds to the altar, makes the due-guard and sign (see page 21) and retires to the ante-room, where he finds Bro. Septimus Jones, who has been examined in open lodge (as in page) re-enters the lodge-room, makes the usual salute and reports:

Senior Deacon:—Worshipful Master, I find in waiting Bro. Septimus Jones, a Fellow Craft of this lodge to be raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason.

Worshipful Master:—(rising to his feet) Brethren, Bro. Septimus Jones, a Fellow Craft of this lodge is in the ante-room waiting to be raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. He has been balloted for and duly elected. You have just heard his examination and if there are no objections we shall proceed to confer the degree upon him. (He pauses for a few seconds) There being none it is so ordered. (Gives one rap.)

Worshipful Master:—(continuing) Bro. Secretary, you will retire and collect the usual fee from Bro. Jones. Bro. Junior Deacon, you will take with you the stewards, retire, prepare and present brother Jones for the third degree in Masonry.

The brethren here mentioned make the usual salute, the due-guard and sign of this degree, and retire to the "preparation room."

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Senior Deacon, you will cross the hall, take charge of the door and attend to all alarms.

The Senior Deacon takes his rod and obeys this order by occupying the chair just vacated by the Junior Deacon during his temporary absence in the "preparation-room." In a little while the secretary re-enters the lodge, makes the customary salute and reports:

Secretary:—Worshipful Master, the usual fee has been collected from Bro. Jones.

The lodge may, if the Master sees fit, be "called from labor to refreshment" at this stage of the proceedings which is simply declaring a recess and is done as follows:

Worshipful Master:—(giving one rap) The lodge will be at ease until the sound of the gavel in the East.

During the short recess now allowed the members can indulge in a little chit-chat or perhaps take a smoke in the ante-room, and during this time also the lodge is entirely under the control of the Junior Warden who must stand in the South, and before whom all salutes must be made whether by a member retiring or entering. In the meantime our clerical friend and brother, the Rev. Septimus Jones, is in the hands of the Junior Deacon and stewards in the "preparation-room," who prepare him as follows to receive the full fruition of Masonic "light" in the "sublime" degree of Master Mason.

He is divested of all his clothing, his coat, vest, boots, stockings, cravat, collar and finally his pants being taken off, he is given an old (and frequently) dirty pair of drawers to put on. Both legs of the drawers are turned up above the knees, thus making his knees, legs and feet bare; both arms of his shirt are rolled up above the elbows making both arms bare; both breasts of the shirt are turned back so as to make both breasts bare (if the shirt bosom be closed in front as many are now-a-days, it must be either taken off altogether or else turned, the back to the front; in very many instances I have seen the shirt entirely off). A hood-wink is carefully fastened over the eyes, and a rope called a cable-tow is wound three times around his body; an apron is tied on with the bib turned down as a Fellow Craft (See page 71) in which condition he is duly and truly prepared to be made a Master Mason; and being thus prepared, the Junior Deacon thus leads him to the door as before, upon which he gives "three loud and distinct knocks." The Master in the meantime calls the lodge to order and the Senior Deacon rising to his feet reports:

Senior Deacon:—Worshipful Master, there is an alarm at the door of the preparation room.

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Senior Deacon, you will attend the alarm and report the cause.

The Senior Deacon taking his rod proceeds to the door of the preparation room upon which he also gives three loud and distinct knocks, opens the door and the following dialogue occurs:

Senior Deacon:—Who comes here?

Junior Deacon:—Bro. Septimus Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice, passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft, and now seeks further light in Masonry by being raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason.

Senior Deacon, (looking at candidate) :—Bro. Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Senior Deacon:—Bro. Junior Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified?

Junior Deacon:—He is.

Senior Deacon:—Is he duly and truly prepared?

Junior Deacon:—He is.

Senior Deacon:—Has he made a suitable proficiency in the preceding degrees?

Junior Deacon:—He has.

Senior Deacon:—Who vouches for this?

Junior Deacon:—A brother.

Senior Deacon:—By what further right and benefit does he expect to gain admission?

Junior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Senior Deacon:—Has he the pass?

Junior Deacon:—He has it not but I have it for him.

Senior Deacon:—Advance and communicate the pass.

The Junior Deacon approaches nearer to the door and whispers into the ear of the Senior Deacon the word Tubal-Cain (See page) and again retires to the side of candidate.

Senior Deacon:—The pass is right (turning to candidate) Bro. Jones, you will wait with patience until the Worshipful Master is informed of your request and his answer returned. The Senior Deacon closes the door and returns in front of the altar where he reports as follows:

Senior Deacon:—(making due-guard of Master Mason) Worshipful Master the alarm is caused by brother Septimus Jones who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice, passed to the degree of Fellow Craft and now seeks further light in Masonry by being raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason.

Worshipful Master:—Is this of his own free will and accord?

Senior Deacon:—It is.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master:—Is he duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master:—Has he made a suitable proficiency in the preceding degrees?

Senior Deacon:—He has.

Worshipful Master:—Who vouches for this?

Senior Deacon:—A brother.

Worshipful Master:—By what further right and benefit does he expect to gain admission?

Senior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Worshipful Master:—Has he the pass?

Senior Deacon:—He has it not, but I have it for him.

Worshipful Master:—Give me the pass.

Senior Deacon:—Tubal-Cain (aloud, and making the due-guard).

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them, by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pagenes,

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, bnt there is a great lack of fnnds to snpply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending Jnly 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent ont, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per mouth, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in thiscanse of God are poor men, who would be gladto circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y.,, and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—"The Storm Gathering;" "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."

THE ANTI-MASON'S SCRAP BOOK,
CONSISTING OF 21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

A Club of Five or Ten can be raised in nearly every town by persistent earnest effort.

Now for "a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together."

Prospect for Clubs.

James McConnell, Ligonier, Ind., sends in a club of twenty subscribers who take the paper a year and five who take it for six months. He writes:

"I have taken this list of names without spending much time. The list is composed of reliable men, all free holders. . . I have made A LIST OF TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY NAMES out of which, if spared, I propose to send you by the first of January, 1876, fifty subscribers, and in case E Ronayne gets around in time I will do a little better. I find that the month of DECEMBER WILL BE THE MONTH IN WHICH TO CANVASS FOR THE CYNOSURE"

Mr. McConnell is so successful that we think there must be merit in his way of canvassing. Will not others try it? Get a list of the members of your church and of all other reliable persons and call on them. We think you can get at least one in three of them to subscribe for the paper.

H. M. Bailey sends six subscriptions and writes: "I will try to finish the club in two or three weeks. I wish to get this through for a thanksgiving offering." Please accept many thanks for it. We received several similar offerings for which we are thankful but this is the largest.

Dear friends, remember that "DECEMBER IS THE MONTH IN WHICH TO CANVAS FOR SUBSCRIBERS." Now December is here. Will you work? The future prosperity of the paper depends perhaps more than you may think on your efforts.

Several of our readers are endeavoring to collect a club of subscribers to send in by the first of January. Are you?

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING NOV. 29, 1875, FROM W Banks, S Bennett, H M Bailey, B Barto, A K Bacon, C D Brooks, F Cooper, Cordell College, D Crawford, A W Danbar, Mrs. A C Gibbs, Rev. M G Crosvenor, J S Hickman, E L Harris, T Henderson, J Jetson, S Jenkins, P J Martin, E D J Meyers, J McConnell, H W Marsh, W Mathews, H Preston, D Pretty, T Reed, A Rice, O H P Sailiff, A Small, J Stearns, O W Sumner, S Town, D C Talbot, E Teter, Jr., W B Walthall, C Williams, D Williamson, Judge Zearing.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

C&N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA,

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

Topics of the Time.

A fortnight since there issued to the journals of the country from the office of the Christian Union a printed slip containing part of the discourse of its editor, H. W. Beecher, on a previous Sabbath, in which he referred plainly to the scandal troubles and announced a new departure, viz., that hereafter he would meet his accusers with silence and former trials would be dropped from mention; his theme being taken from the speechlessness of Christ before Pilate. But the resolution was only human. The unceremonious ejection of Mrs. Moulton and Deacon West have reacted so seriously that the latter has been re-admitted to membership, and immediately calls on the officers of the church to unite in calling a mutual council to settle the question: Is Mr. Beecher guilty of adultery and perjury. In considering the request in church meeting last week Mr. Beecher took occasion to say that Plymouth church when assaulted "would always show her fangs," and the time for silence had gone by. What weapons of spiritual war these are it is impossible to say, but Plymouth church has been fruitful in originating terms and doctrines for the latter days. It is understood that Mrs. Moulton's request for a council will be accepted if the terms can be agreed upon. The Angel of the churches cannot rest until this Brooklyn impurity is cleansed away.

The Forty-fourth Congress opened on Monday. To the mere politician the question of moment will be the behavior of the party leaders and the effect of their movements in next year's elections. The Democratic party will now have the opportunity of misusing the power gained in the State elections of a year ago, or of serving the country in fulfilling their promises; for they have the House of Representatives. The patriot will anxiously learn of any plans tending to increase the monopolies now over-riding the nation, or for dishonoring its credit by inflated currency, or for increasing its already enormous taxation. The President seems also to be uneasy and has lengthened his annual address and given it careful preparation. Inside the Democratic party the great contest has been for the speakership. Their choice would mark their line of policy. Proportioned to the interests at stake unusual effort has been used. The struggle narrowed down to Randall, of Pennsylvania, an inflationist, appropriator of the "back pay grab" of $12,000, and the candidate of Col. Scott and Jay Gould; and Kerr, of Indiana, a man of acknowledged ability and fairness, sound on questions of currency and administrative reform. On Saturday the Democratic caucus nominated the latter. If the hopes of the country are not misplaced this is surely a victory for the party as well as for good government. All sorts of subsidies and projects for special legislation, i. e., corruption, were waiting for the doors of Congress to open, expecting a favorable reception under the new party conditions. Jay Gould wants the Pacific Mail subsidy restored and the control of future investigations of that huge monopoly. Tom. Scott wants a subsidy for his Texas Pacific road of from fifty to seventy-five millions, but they are promised ill success. The country is ready for honest legislation no matter from whence; and there could not be stronger inducement or better opportunity.

Joseph Dugdale, the Friend Quaker of abolition times, and now President of the Iowa Peace Society, has furnished his local paper, the Mt. Pleasant Journal, with the following interesting facts connected with the late Peace Congress at the Hague:

"Among those who were present taking an active part were Henry Richards, M. P., of London, J. D. Miles, Sec. of the American Peace Society, of Boston; David D. Field, of New York; Wm. G. Hubbard, an eloquent minister among Friends, from Ohio, M. Fargasse, of Paris; S Simons, M. R. Piersanthoni, of Naples. The Halle Chamber of Commerce was represented by the President, John Seaton, and the Right Hon. M. Bernard. D. Dudley Field of the U. S., delivered the opening address on the "Present State of International Law." Henry Richards, M. P complimented the American people, by saying in his learned and able address, that he hoped a great triumph would arise out of this movement, which would adjudicate between the civilized nations of the earth, just as the Supreme Court of the American Federation adjudicated between the different States of the Union, as well as between the Federal and State Governments."

The Peace Society has recently met a great, almost irreparable loss in the death of its Secretary, Rev. J. D. Miles, who was present at this Congress.

Carry the War into the Courts.

AN ADDRESS BY ISAAC PRESTON, ESQ., BEFORE THE STATE CONVENTION AT PEORIA, ILL.

The organization and office work of the National Christian Association, of which this is an auxiliary, if I understand the subject, is to investigate the character and tendencies of oath-bound secret organizations and the influence, if any, they have on the general interests of community at large, and to spread out the results of such investigations before the general public, and to call public attention to it in a way that will secure a just and true verdict from the public sentiment of the country and the world. And here, sir, I will say that this subject has been investigated, and the principles and practice, the obligations imposed and penalties incurred, and all the advantages and immunities enjoyed by the members, and indeed the entire history of the Masonic fraternity having been published to the world so fully and clearly that every person who will may be thoroughly posted in regard to the character and conduct, principles and practice of the order, and notwithstanding all this it is a notorious fact to-day that a very large portion of the people, probably nine-tenths of all who are neither Masons or Anti-masons are as ignorant of the true character, principles, and acts of the lodge as a child six months old is of mathematics; and the question is why is it? The answer is plain as the alphabet. Every professional man, every business man, every mechanic and every intelligent laboring man well knows that even to be known and recognized as an enquirer into the character and acts of the lodge will be suicidal to his business of whatever class or character it may be. In fact the world knows that open opposition to Freemasonry is political death, popular death and social death, just as far as active adhering Masons can accomplish such results. Multitudes of our clergymen whose sympathies are with us, are afraid to take a real Anti-masonic paper. Our tradesmen dare not have them on their counters or about their store, and most of our young men fear the scorn of the fraternity and their friends, if found reading our papers or tracts; and there is many a man who would beard a lion in his den who can't endure a sneer. What we want and what we must do is to divise means to bring this subject before the public in a way to force it upon their consideration, and I propose to suggest one method for the consideration of this convention which I believe if understandingly adopted and persistently carried through will force it on the attention of the community, will elicit general discussion which cannot fail and to open the eyes and enlighten the mind of our people on this subject.

My suggestion is that hereafter every friend of our cause shall improve every proper opportunity that may occur to bring this subject directly before our courts in a way to force it on their consideration, Many of our friends have thought, and I have thought myself, that our legislatures should be petitioned to legalize the rejection of all Masons as jurors where a Mason is one of the parties to a suit; but I have reached the conclusion, that we now have all the right to challenge men and examine them as to their Masonic obligations to favor a party to a suit that we have on any other subject; and if a peremptory challenge is made to a Mason of respectable standing in community solely on account of his sworn connection with the lodge, it will certainly produce an effect. I think the Masonic candidate for the jury can be made to say on his oath as to his sworn obligations to assist a brother Mason. I think I should have a legal right to read the Master Mason's oath in court and require the candidate to swear that he never took that oath, or any other that is substantially equivalent to it, or reject him. I know no reason why a juror may not be as rigidly examined in relation to his Masonic obligations to favor a party to a suit in court as on any other subject. The members of the lodge have far stronger inducements to favor each other under all circumstances than natural brothers have.

In addition to the indissoluble ties of their Masonic fraternal love, they are bound by the most solemn oath, and that on penalty of death in its most appalling forms, to aid and assist a brother Mason so far as to extricate him from his difficulty if in his power, whether he be right or wrong, murder and treason excepted, and that left to his discretion. And here, sir, if I am asked how we know all this to be true, my answer is that we have just as good evidence of the truth of it (those of us who have never crossed the Atlantic Ocean) as we have that there are such places as London, Edinburgh, and Paris on the globe. We have the testimony of a thousand of the best men that can be named among the living or the dead for the last century that the Masonic revelations made by Capt. William Morgan previous to his abduction and murder in 1826 are substantially correct and multitudes who have come out and renounced Masonry within the last decade corroborate and affirm the same. Some of the most distinguished of these men are known personally to many of us here; among them Pres. Chas. G. Finney of Oberlin, who has just passed away and gone to his reward, one of the most eminent Christian men of the present century. I and my family had the favor of sitting under his ministrations in Rochester, N. Y., half a year in 1828. His testimony is before the world. Then Elder David Bernard, a standard bearer for the Baptist church for the last half century in Western New York, and for years pastor of the Baptist church in Warsaw, N. Y., the place I emigrated from to Illinois, and some years principal of Wyoming Academy, where my oldest son received his academic education. Then Samuel D. Greene of Batavia, author of the "Broken Seal," and other standard works. All of these are personally known to many of us, and known to be men of irreproachable moral and Christian character by all who know them except the members, friends, and advocates of secret oath-bound organizations. I am fully persuaded that if the rule to challenge every adhering Mason as a juror on every occasion where one of the parties to the suit is a Mason, shall from this time be adopted and persistently adhered to it will do more to excite enquiry and call public attention to this subject than any measure that has been adopted since the Anti-masonic excitement died out in the third decade of this century.

Why, sir, suppose our honored and venerable friend here, Moses Pettengill, becomes involved in an important contested lawsuit with Judge Yates, and Messrs. Samuel Tait, Lewis Kenon, and Wm. M. Dodge, all active adhering Masons are brought forward and offered as jurors and are challenged, examined and rejected solely on account of their sworn obligations to their brother Mason, the party in his suit,—I ask you if this would not create a sensation? Sir, it would be the topic of conversation at every breakfast table in the city the next morning, from your honorable Mayor down to the poorest hod carrier. Masons would be interrogated by their intimate friends as to the character of this institution which disqualifies men for acting as jurors between their fellow men. Why, sir, I would not allow a personal friend of mine, being a Mason, to go on a jury in a case of crime, my opponent being a Mason, for the very plain reason that if I am entitled to a verdict, and he gives me the verdict, he violates his Masonic oath; and if he gives his verdict against me contrary to law and evidence he is guilty of legal perjury; and if he considers his Masonic oath binding on his conscience as an oath lawfully administered, I can see no reason why the sin against his own soul is not the same in either case. Surely then I would not allow a friend of mine to be placed in so perilous a condition.

I said the challenging, examination and rejection of those three distinguished gentlemen named as jurors would create a sensation and excite inquiry. I think our women would be likely to inquire as to the character of the organization which their husbands have been so long connected with and which has monopolized their evenings, and often to the late hours of the night, for the last ten to thirty years, and what are the characteristics of a society that should disqualify their loved and honored companions from acting as arbiters between their neighbors. I think Christian men would endeavor to satisfy themselves whether "there is nothing in Freemasonry that will interfere with their politics or religion," before kneeling at the Masonic altar and swearing a life allegiance to all the behests of the fraternity without knowing a thing of what those behests may require of them. And now, friends, this is what we want. We want to get this subject before the whole people and if this can be accomplished and if knowledge on this subject can be so disseminated among the masses of the people as to break the charm that rests like a nightmare on their minds and actually deters them from even looking at it, I verily believe it would not be fifteen years before the Masonic fraternity would be as dead in this country as it was fifteen years after the murder of Morgan for revealing its secrets. Then forty thousand out of forty-five thousand Masons in the Northern States abandoned the lodge and the Grand Lodge of the Empire State was not known by the outside public to hold a session for seventeen years. Such was the influence of the Morgan revelations and of the Morgan trials fifty years ago. With those times and those events I was personally familiar and to some extent personally engaged in ferreting out the criminals and collecting testimony for their trial and conviction. Morgan was carried right past our door to the place of his execution, and I went in company with a gentleman from Ontario county on our mission from Rochester to Fort Niagara, a distance of 85 to 90 miles, to look up and subpoena witnesses for the first trials of those men; and we were perfectly amazed to find what men of previously unblemished moral and Christian character would say or do to protect that institution. In the course of our investigations we became thoroughly and unalterably convinced that the men concerned in that conspiracy did consider their Masonic obligations in their binding force to transcend all others, civil or religious, human or divine.

In my own experience as a juror I have witnessed cases where Masons have totally ignored positive and unequivocal testimony to screen a brother Mason from justice, but I will take time to report but one such case. Some dozen years ago on grand jury in this State a complaint was brought before us against an ex-sheriff of the county for official mal-practice. The ex-sheriff was a high Mason. The charges were proven by several witnesses of entire credibility beyond the shadow of a doubt. The jury consisted of sixteen men and it required twelve to find a bill and there were five Masons in the panel. The eleven voted unanimously for a bill and the five Masons against it and the bill was lost. An ex-judge of the same county, who acted as district attorney for the above named grand jury, said to one of our friends not long since that the grand hailing sign of distress had been given him from prisoners at the bar where he was sitting as judge on the bench. A few months ago I had conversation in the cars with a lawyer, a member of the Cook county bar, who is a Mason and Knight Templar. He freely admitted that lawyers and parties do avail themselves of the advantages they enjoy as members of the lodge, and fully justified himself in so doing; and spoke in derision of the opposition to Freemasonry. I told him I had seen the time when slavery was as strong and defiant as Freemasonry. His reply was that slavery was local, Masonry universal. It was established throughout Christendom and in heathen lands. And, friends, this is true. It occupies the strongholds of the earth and it is no trifling enterprise we have undertaken to enlighten our fellow-men on this subject and to reclaim them from this folly.

I have studied the character and watched the progress and the handiwork of the Masonic fraternity for the last forty-nine years and the result of my experience and observation has been to fully convince me that the system is supremely selfish, intensely despotic; a system of fraud and falsehood, and when the exigency of the case requires a system of almost unparalleled iniquity.

But, sir, here let me say I am speaking of Masonry and not of Masons. There are multitudes of Masons who would scorn to carry out the behests of the lodge, a multitude more who never frequent the lodge; but they dare not come out and expose the wrongs with which they shun complicity, and they are claimed as members and the prestige of their characters and position all go to sustain the credibility of the institution; and, sir, my mind has long since been made up that it is not the best half of the members of the Masonic fraternity that runs its lodges.

And now, friends, as I said when I began, what we need and what we must do is to get the merits of the case before the masses of the people and if you think the plan I have suggested is worth trying, try it and give it a thorough trial, and if you haven't a lawsuit of your own, go to your neighbor that has one and if his opponent is a Mason, tell him to challenge every Mason that is offered as a juror and go to court and sit down with him and help and encourage him and compel the Masonic juror to swear whether he ever took such an oath as the Entered Apprentice and Master Mason's of the first and third degrees, and then if the court refuses to allow an examination of the candidate on this subject take a change of venue and keep doing till you get the community waked up, if nothing more. Then, when the people are awake, get on your lecturer and have a meeting and distribute 150 tracts and get a couple of dozen subscribers for the Cynosure. Will my honored friend, Mr. Hinman, approve and apply this method in his State agency, and will Mr. Stoddard start the mill and drive it, in his national mission? Our newspapers and lecturers have for the last seven years been driving mainly at Freemasonry in the church and in the pulpit and its influence on the general interests of religion and morality. This is right, the church ought to be free from it and the pulpit ought not to be contaminated with it; but let one respectable business man who is a Master Mason be challenged, examined and rejected, as I think he doubtless would be, and it will create a greater sensation in the community and will excite more inquiry and discussion than the rejection of ten applicants for admission to the Christian church on account of their being Masons. Why, sir, three-fourths of the entire membership and clergy of the orthodox churches in the Northern States stood sneering and pointing the finger of scorn at the old abolitionists till they saw the infidel world wheeling into line and that they were to be left out in the cold, and then they struck their colors. And, friends, when the church and the clergy wake up to know that sworn allegiance to the Masonic fraternity disqualifies men for acting as judges, civil magistrates and jurors and also as legislators, all our church doors will be flung open to our lecturers.

Let us then take courage, renew our strength and our efforts and work on. "Trust in the Lord and keep our powder dry," and our children shall see the triumph.

National Christian Association and Political Action.

BY J. L. BARLOW.

There is resting on the minds of some of our friends, the idea that our National Christian Association is about to, or has already become, a political organization; and that our several State Associations are about to fall into line as so many political engines, seeking the overthrow of secret societies through political action alone. Nothing can be farther rom the truth; and we wish, as soon and as clearly as possible, to point out and correct the mistake, for the sake of all concerned.

We have some among us who do not act at all politically, and who could not act with us in any way if ours was to be made a political body. There are others who are not as yet prepared to connect themselves with a new party, who yet according to their light, are willing to assist in the evangelical movement; while there are many others who believe the time has come for course of action which shall eventuate in ridding our courts of justice, our legislative halls, and our National and State offices of their Masonic incumbents and putting in their places men from the people who are content to be of the people, and who, when elected shall be known as the choice of the people.

The American Party, as now inaugurated and whose platform of principles challenges the admiration of every good American citizen, is mediately, if at all, the child of the N. C. A. Those who gave it birth, were members, most of them at least, of that body, and but for them that party had never been. But, when acting in this political capacity it was not as members of the N. C. A., but as parts of a mass-meeting, called for that purpose. As members of our Christian Association are to be found many United Presbyterians. As well attempt to make the N. C. A. responsible for their acts of church discipline, as to hold the same body accountable for the political action of some of its friends.

Let it be understood then that unper no circumstances at present conceivable will the National or State Christian Associations change their nature or essence, so as to take in political action as part of their work. This none of us will consent to. Our opposition to Masonry and other secret societies, furnishes a well-defined field for Christian action, whereon all who love our common Christianity and its Author can heartily unite as against a common foe. In the National and State bodies we thus meet, and so far a good work has been done. There is much yet to be accomplished by those organizations. Let them stand and through them let us push on the peculiar work they were born to accomplish.

If our reform was simply a moral reform, moral means alone might effect it; but it is not so. Masonry is not only anti-Christian; it is anti-republican. It seeks not merely the overthrow of the church; it is equally the enemy of the State. We must not only drive it from the pulpits of the land, but also to dislodge it from the seats of power in the State and Nation. The one is a specially evangelical work; the other is political. The first I submit, we ought to do; but not to leave the other undone. With what show of consistency can we, who believe in exercising the rights, aye, the duties of citizenship, at all continue our labors to purge the pulpits from Masonic incumbents, while we still vote into places of secular power the tools of this same Christless despotism?

I appeal now to those who feel that they have rights and corresponding duties as American citizens, and will look at some of the objections urged against separate political action by some true hearted friends of our cause. Says one of these, in speaking of the work we have undertaken, it "ought therefore to be kept above the level of politics." Granted, so far as our work in the Christian Association is concerned; but if our friend, as he seems to, means more than this, I must demur. If he means by "politics" the unprincipled tactics which characterize the existing parties which now divide the nation, we agree with him that "we have no need of invoking their aid;" and further, acknowledge the usefulness of so doing. They are wholly under the control of the lodges, and and are made to do their bidding. Our reform must be carried on without their aid; and despite their most strenuous efforts to defeat us.

The friend already referred to, says: "The Great Reform was carried on by Evangelists who were taught to let Caesar attend to his own affairs. It was nearly three hundred years before the first Christian President was elected; or in other words, before a Christian became Emperor."

This, to those who do not look closely, has an air of plausibility about it, which disappears under a calm inspection. To those who deem it the duty of Christians to abstain from all acts of citizenship, it might have some force; but to those who under present relations deem it their duty to exercise the rights and perform the duties of citizenship, the above forms no shadow of analogy. The Christians of the Saviour's time and those in the time of Constantine had no voice in governmental affairs, and therefore no responsibility in the premises. Remand us to the same position and then the remark of our friend would have some force. As it is, I see none.

Again, he says: "Politics has been tried once, and it failed." Precisely what is here meant I fail to discover. Again, "No great moral reform can ever be brought about by political agencies." Perhaps not by "political agencies" alone; but certainly past experience shows that these may be powerful auxiliaries. Witness our great anti-slavery struggle.

One thing is certain; so long as we vote with the present parties, no matter what may be our evangelical action, so long will Masonry flourish. It seems to me no alternative is left us; we must either give up our rights as citizens—cease to perform our duties, going on to vote Masons into office; or start a new party, as we have done, and "vote as we pray." The political part of our work need not interfere with our evangelical work. These are to be kept separate as organizations and yet can work in harmony, or, if any wish to engage in our moral work alone, the way is open. By engaging in the plans of our Christian Association, no man is necessarily entangled with or compelled to act with us politically. Our Christian Associations are for Christians and those who favor Christianity as against the anti-Christ of the lodges. The "American Party" is for all those Christians and others who see in Masonry and its secret kin an enemy of our Republican institutions which can only be met and overthrown at the ballot box. Let us all, then, work in harmony, where we can, doing all in our power, in accordance with our individual convictions for the overthrow of our common foe.

ORANGEMEN'S OATH: The Southern Cross, a Catholic journal invites attention to the oath of the Orange society with a remark about the loyalty of the person taking it. It truly promises little in that direction, but is no worse in reality than most other secret orders or than the Catholic organization itself. The obligation reads:

I., N., do solemnly and voluntarily swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and to her lawful heirs and successors in the Sovereignty of Great Britain and Ireland, so long as she or they shall maintain the Protestant mission; that I will, to the utmost of my power, defend them against all traitorous conspiracies and attempts which I shall know to be against her or any of them; that I will steadily maintain the connections between the colonies of British America and the Mother Country, and be ever ready to resist all attempts to weaken British influence or dismember the British empire; that I will be true and faithful to every brother Orangeman in all just actions, neither wronging him nor allowing him to be wronged or injured without giving him due notice thereof and preventing it if in my power. I swear that I will ever hold sacred the name of our glorious deliverer King William, the Third, Prince of Orange, in grateful remembrance of whom I solemnly promise (if in my power) to celebrate his victory at the Boyne in Ireland, on the 12th day of July in every year. I swear that I am not, nor never will be, a Roman Catholic or Papist, nor educate my children, nor suffer them to be educated, in the Roman Catholic faith; nor am I now, or ever will be, a member of any society or body of men that are enemies of Her Majesty and our glorious Constitution.

Notices.

Wisconsin.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will be held in the Wesleyan Methodist church at Sugar Creek, Walworth Co., Wis., on Wednesday and Thursday, the 2d and 3d of Feb., 1876. Elkhorn is the nearest rail road station. Teams will be in readiness, after the arrival of trains, to carry delegates to the place of meeting. Efforts will be made to secure able speakers for the occasion.

By order of the

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Michigan Notice.

The friends who subscribed to the lecture fund at the Anti-secret Association of the State of Michigan held at Fentonville, 30th of March last, and subsequently, will please forward the same or a portion of the same to me at Howell, Mich., at once, as the lecturer is in need of the same and has an order drawn on me for some over ninety dollars and no money in the treasury to meet it. Hoping that you will remember that the laborer is worthy of his hire and respond promptly to the above, I remain yours respectfully,

J. H. WILCOX, Treas.

PAST MASTER E. RONAYNE, of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, will hold himself in readiness to lecture and publicly work the degrees of Masonry wherever his services may be needed. A fair compensation and traveling expenses is all that is required. Address him at the office of this paper.

Very Important from the General Agent.

THE MICHIGAN CAMPAIGN—A NOBLE GIFT FROM FATHER LEUTY—PUBLISHING HOUSE PROSPECTS—AT SYRACUSE—THE NEW HAMPSHIRE MEETING.

OFFICE "EARNEST CHRISTIAN,"
ROCHESTER, Nov. 20, '75.

DEAR K.—Leaving Chicago at 5 A. M., I reached Homer, Mich., at 1 P. M. on the 13th instant. Here I met that noble, indefatigable worker, Rev. H. S. Limbocker, with whom I entered upon the campaign of the week. I spoke nine times in five consecutive days, and the many earnest friends whom I met seemed greatly encouraged by the immediate results of our meetings. Bro. L. had prepared the way and whatever of good may result from this brief campaign, is chiefly attributable to his judicious, efficient, well-directed efforts. I secured for the Publishing House fund one hundred dollars, for expenses $12.00, and Bro. L. reported nine secured towards a club for the Cynosure.

From Michigan I went to Ligonier, Ind., which I reached on Thursday morning, to find the flag flying at "mast head," and although unable to call on all the friends in town, those whom I met were in good heart. I was gratified to learn that the work done by Bro. Ronayne in Noble county was already bearing fruit and that his return is greatly desired by the friends. Brother and sister Leuty gave me, as they always do a true friend of our cause, a hearty welcome. Sister L. has been afflicted of late, but by the favor of the Great Physician and under the skillful treatment of Bro. Woodruff, she is so far restored as to be able to manage her domestic affairs with great skill and economy. At eighty-two years of age she sets her house in order with her own hands and with wonderful tact, making every apartment a model of order and comfort. Bro. L., "living on borrowed time," is active as a youth and occupies his time mostly with a "picked lot" o fifty-two steers that give ample proof of his efficiency and skill in "handling bovines."

Bro. and sister L. are thoroughly enlisted in our reform and although much occupied with the cares of life, still find time to lend a helping hand. Having carefully considered the legal status of the National Christian Association, and being convinced of the necessity of the incorporation, and satisfied of both the wisdom and honesty of the measures adopted, they have conveyed by warrantee deed one hundred and eighty acres of land to your Gen'l Agent in trust for the N. C. A. reserving to themselves the use and control of said land during their lives. This land is located near the town of Ligonier, is under a high state of cultivation, and is worth from $75 to $100 per acre.

This valuable donation (worth at the lowest estimate $13,500) Bro. Leuty wishes to so arrange that it may be applied to cancel the last $10,000 of the $30,000 required to secure the Carpenter Donation, and should other friends come promptly forward with their contributions, I have no doubt that the arrangement can be easily effected. Assuming that the last $10,000 is now provided for by Bro. and sister Leuty, the case stands thus: Divide the entire sum of the proposed endowment fund of $50,000 into five equal parts of $10,000 each. Number the parts respectively, 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5. Mr. Carpenter pledges, conditioned upon the raising of the whole $50,000, to give No's. 1 and 2. Mr. Leuty takes No. 5, leaving No's. 3 and 4 to be furnished by other friends. About $6,000 of No. 3. has already been secured, leaving $4000 of No. 3 and all of No. 4, $10,000 yet to be provided for. The following simple illustration will present the case just as it now stands:

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.
	Donation of Philo Carpenter.	Subscribed by friends $6000.	To be raised.	Donation of Bro. Leuty and wife.

Just so soon as No. 3 is completed the N. C. A. obtains possession of No's. 1 and 2, and a warrantee deed on the completion of No. 4, provided it is effected before April 1st, 1878. Should the entire amount not be raised then the contributions of the several parties will revert to the original donors if such is their request, or be applied in such manner as they may severally direct. This fund is to be a permanent endowment for the work of the N. C. A., the interest of which is to be applied as provided in the constitution of the Association.

Such, in brief, is now the condition of the proposed publishing house interests of the N. C. A., and, as your fellow laborer and agent, I appeal to the numerous friends throughout the country to aid in filling up the gap and thereby securing to our needy cause this munificent donation, and thus furnish the means for the more efficient prosecution of our reform. I hope no real friend of the cause will fail to investigate this matter thoroughly, and if fully satisfied aid in completing this enterprize according to his ability.

In this city I find Bro. Post preparing for the approaching State Convention, and the friends generally anticipating Mr. Ronayne's coming with much interest. May the Lord direct and make the approaching anniversary one of great power.

NORTHWOOD, N. H., Nov. 27, 1875.

DEAR K.—From Rochester, where I was cheered by the kindness of that much abused, vilified and persecuted man, Bro. Post, and disappointed in not seeing Bro. Roberts, who was absent from the city, I passed on to Syracuse. Reaching the depot at 7 P. M., I was soon enjoying the hospitalities of Bro. Stratton, whose door turns easily upon its hinges to admit all true reforms and reformers. This man needs no word of commendation to the reading public. He has spoken to the enemy in the gates and many are the bowed heads that have been lifted up and the trembling hearts that have been made strong by his fearless words of truth. Repairing to the sanctuary on Sabbath morning I met for the first time Bro. Crooks' successor in the agency of the W. M. publishing interests. Bro. Kinney seems admirably adapted to his work and is doubtless equal to the great responsibilities of his station. Here, too, were a number of familiar faces and among them that earnest veteran defender of the faith, Bro. Barlow, whose poetry and prose are making terrible discord among the "ancient brotherhood." Bro. Foster being absent assisting in a revival meeting, I consented to occupy his pulpit and preached to a very intelligent and apparently interested audience, morning and evening. My second night in Syracuse was passed with Bro. Barlow, who accompanied me on Monday A. M. to the W. M. book rooms, where several of the more earnest of our friends assembled in counsel. Engagements in New England compelled me to hasten and I was forced to depart without calling on our standard-bearers, D. Kirkpatrick and Z. Weaver, which was to me an occasion of regret.

I took my ticket to Concord, N. H., and at 10:45 a. m. found myself seated comfortably and whirling rapidly along towards Albany, which we reached without incidents of special interest. At this point I remained until 9:55 waiting for a train to Springfield, Mass., which we reached sometime during the night and changed again for Worchester where we arrived at 5 A. M. Here occurred one of those vexatious night transfers from depot to depot in a strange city. But a little patience and a good deal of endurance brought us to the other side of this Rubicon, and soon after daylight the whistle sounded and the conductor shouted "All aboard for Nashua," and right glad was I to obey the summons. Winding among the hills and leaping over the chasms and passing through numerous manufacturing cities and villages, we found ourselves at 8:42 halted at Nashua where—"Passengers for Concord change cars." Obeying the timely notice I sought the designated train and feeling nearly exhausted resigned myself to forgetfulness from which the gentlemanly conductor aroused me with a shake, saying, "This is Concord, sir;" and informed me, on inquiry, that it would be necessary to procure my ticket at the office and take another car for Lake Village. Complying with his instruction I seated myself feeling a good degree of composure and an immense satisfaction that at last I had got upon the "home stretch." Upon this train I made the acquaintance of a clergyman who had once been connected with the lodge and who had never openly renounced it, but who had abstained from all active connection for several years, and who assured me of his sympathy with our reform and bade me a hearty "Godspeed." Our conversation gave him his first definite knowledge of our reform work.

Stepping from the car at about noon and looking over the crowd I saw the smiling face of Bro. Rathbun who was pressing his way through the throng to where I was standing. His hearty handshake and cordial welcome followed by an introduction to Rev. S. C. Kimball, gave me the assurance that I was not only in Lake Village, but among true and warm-hearted brethren. Accompanying them to the house of Dea. K. Cole, where we found good things in abundance, I learned that the opening of the convention was encouraging and that Bro. R. had already been rendering himself exceeding serviceable in the cause. Little business had been attempted during the forenoon session, but the brethren had been girding on the armor and burnishing their weapons for the spiritual encounter. The attendance from abroad was not as large as had been anticipated, but the interest was good at the beginning and steadily increased to the close. The Secretary, Bro. Kimball, will give a full report for your columns and I need not therefore speak of business, etc.; but it is due to the brethren that I should commend those by whose efforts this meeting was called for their activity, prudence, and ability in preparing for and conducting the exercises of this convention. It was exceedingly gratifying to witness the harmony prevading the entire convention among our friends, and the spirit of forbearance and love exhibited towards our opponents. Bro. Rathbun spoke with great plainness and boldness of his experience within and without the lodge, reciting facts that were terribly damaging to the fraternity, but the manner and spirit in which he spoke awakened the sympathy rather than the wrath of even his enemies, while he won his way straight to the heart of every friend who listened to his thrilling story. He will long be held in grateful remembrance by the many friends he has made for himself in N. H., and for the cause he so ably advocates. I regretted to learn of his increasing bodily infirmities, induced by the maltreatment he received from the lodge. It would seem that so useful a man could hardly be spared, and I would ask in his behalf the prayers of Christians that he may be spared and continued in this great and glorious work.

The convention showed great wisdom in the selection of their State Agent and Lecturer, by the appointment of Rev. S. C. Kimball of Center Strafford to that important position. Bro. K. is not a fanatic but an earnest, devoted, Christian worker, eminently fitted for the position. His experience as a pastor and as a teacher, together with a keen insight and ready comprehension of men and measures, joined with a vigorous constitution and a consecrated determination that cowers before no difficulty, are among the qualifications rendering this appointment eminently fitting. Friends securing services of Bro. Kimball may be assured that he will deal honorably, truthfully and faithfully with the secret lodges. This is a good beginning and already is the influence of this meeting extending to neighboring towns. I am to remain in this State until Tuesday of next week, speaking four times, and then I expect to go to Chelsea, Mass., and shall, D. V., reach Rochester, N. Y., in time for the State Convention, Dec. 7th and 8th. J. P. STODDARD.

The New Hampshire State Convention.

The New Hampshire Anti-secret Christian State Convention was held at Lake Village, Nov. 23d and 24th, and a State Association formed auxiliary to the National Association. Rev. J. F. Browne, of Bow Lake chosen President, with a Vice-President for each county; Rev S. C. Kimball, Secretary, and Kimball Cole, Esq., Treasurer. Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Chicago, was present and did good service by his wise counsel and eloquent lectures during the Convention, and afterwards at Bow Lake, Northwood, Strafford, and Gilmanton. Rev. D. P. Rathbun poured hot shot into the Masonic camp with telling effect, winning for himself a host of friends, and accomplishing much good. It is well known that the Masons nearly broke his back for exposing their ridiculous secrets, but he has more back-bone now than most men. Long may he live to teach the followers of Hiram Abiff!

The following resolutions were adopted:

MORNING STAR.

Resolved. 1st, That we honor the Morning Star for its noble record during the long conflict with the slave power, and for its steadfast advocacy of the temperan e reform.

2d. That we have rejoiced in its occasional utterances against secret societies, in accord with the emphatic and repeated declarations of the Free-will General Conference.

3d. That we would respectfully suggest that the recent rapid growth of secret societies demands from Christians a zealous opposition and an outspoken testimony against them.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

Resolved, That we recognize the Christian Cynosure as ably exposing the iniquities of secret orders, and as a valuable agency of intercommunication upon all subjects of reform; and as such we heartily commend it to the patronage of the friends of free discussion, and we will use our best endeavors to extend its circulation.

STATE LECTURER

Resolved, That the thanks of this convention are due, and are hereby tendered to Rev. S. C. Kimball for his fearless exposition of the evils of secret societies and his efficient labors in promoting the anti-secret reform work in New York, and that we respectfully request him to act as our State Lecturer and agent during the coming year.

The friends of reform look upon our Convention as a success, and trust much permanent good was done. A great work has been well begun.

S. C. KIMBALL, Sec.

Do you realize how cheap the Cynosure is! A single copy only $2.20 per year and when five persons pay for it in a club only $1.75 each. Clubs of ten sent at one time $1.50.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

After the lectures in Lynn, I was invited to preach in the Presbyterian church just over the line in the town of Hebron, Ill., and spoke to a small congregation in the same house in the evening on the religion of secret societies. In the meantime arrangements were made for work in Geneva, Wis. Walker's Hall was procured, and three lectures given, commencing on Monday. The audiences were not large, but fair. Here Masonry exhibited itself in its true colors. The first evening the lecture had continued for a time, and a terrible stench filled the Hall. Perhaps I had better give you what the Editor of the Geneva Herald says in regard to it:

"The first entertainment of the lecture was seriously demoralized by the rascally action of some rude boys. When the interest of the lecture was at its hight a terribly obnoxious odor permeated and filled the house. Ladies with their noses in their hands rushed for the doors; . . . . seat after seat was vacated and the lecturer, powerless to stem the tide, no doubt pronounced dread anathemas on the villain who invented sulphate of potash."

The above is overdrawn in several particulars; perhaps four or five ladies left, and some roughs, there more for disturbance than anything else; but there were men and women present who could not be driven away by any such device. But how did th's Christian, Masonic editor know that it was used? Masonry cannot hide its devilish doings in that way. The second evening rowdyism made some disturbance, but the third was quiet, except two Masons of the lowest strata of humanity interrupted a very little. There are a goodly number of friends in that place, and the cause is indebted to Mr. J. H. Ford, with whom I had a pleasant home while there.

Now, friends we have a notice in the Cynosure of when and where our State Convention is to be held, and there is plenty of time to give the enemy many heavy blows before that time. I have labored in the past under great disadvantages for the want of co-operation on the part of the friends of the cause. Have had to hunt them up, hunt up school boards, and church trustees, and then go to schools and private houses to give the notices; and in this way much of my time is used up in doing what others might and ought to do; and not more than half is done that might be with your help. Now let us have a lively time this winter. Where no lectures have been given, secure a place—church or school house—then write me without delay to Delavan, Wis., giving county, post-office, and whether you live in village or country, and how far from, and in what direction, so that I may find you readily, as I travel with my own conveyance. Let us get a good ready, and have a good gathering at our State meeting. We shall expect Rev. J. P. Stoddard there, and all the friends with whom I have conversed on the subject are very anxious to have Mr. Ronayne also. Will they, both of them, tell us through the paper whether they will come or not?

Another thing you should do, that is to make a little calculation to do something financially. I see by a recent statement in the Cynosure that "The receipts of the Grand Lodge of New York were over $100,000 last year." Thus the cable-towed and hood-winked dupes of the lodge are taxed, and it is ground out of them, for the purpose of destroying our government and the church of Christ; but it is doubtful whether $500 can be raised in that great State, with its thousands of friends, to help to enlighten the people on this subject. Now, friends, there are enough of you in this State to make your lecturer comfortable, financially; a thing that has never yet been done,—yes, and without sacrifice on your part. Now will you do it? Time will tell. But give me a shower of letters at once "calling me from refreshment to labor," and I will respond as speedily as possible. For the war,

P. Elzea

Marching Orders Executed.—Butler Co., Pa., Organized.

REPORT OF ONE OF THE VICE-PRESIDENTS OF THE PA. CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

A convention of the friends of anti-secretism and members met in the court-house in Butler on the 19 of October last; was organized by calling Rev. J. M. Imbrie to the chair and Mr. Hugh Braham to act as secretary.

Rev. J. H. Timmons then addressed the convention on Odd-fellowship with earnestness born of sincerity and truth, with logic unanswerable, with history and fact challenging contradiction, and with a spirit and power becoming the gracious Gospel of the blessed God, and altogether in harmony with the end proposed, namely, light and love and liberty and law and justice and equality among men, fully and universally, now and forever, and secret orders, which is only the popular and polite name for sham, deceit, danger and diabolism in church and state and family, to be banished from the earth and sent wholly and alone back to the fire-scared shelter of blackness and darkness.

Rev. Samuel Alexander then submitted a speech on "How to be an Odd-fellow without Initiation," that for boldness, depth, sweep and power on the side of right and truth was decidedly without a parallel and sui generis. He presented to the audience in general and the Odd-fellows in particular a challenge that then and there he would furnish the living man, Mr. J. D., who would converse with any honest member of the order in the mysteries of Odd-fellowship from initiation to encampment degree. They dared not accept the challenge. Mr. D. is just as good an Odd-fellow from A to Z as any of them; and for 25 cents to the Cynosure for "Odd-fellowship Illustrated," and 25 cents to a sold Odd-fellow jeweler for a pin, the so-called pin of "Fellowship, Love and Truth." Alas! in this case it was the pin of Fight, Light and Triumph against Odd-fellowship, for it has pinned the order up to the wall at Railtown where it has got so thin and dry it rattles. All the little boys there are as good Odd-fellows as any of the initiated. Many have done valiantly but Rev. Alexander showed that Mr. D. excelled all.

The convention was then adjourned till the next evening at 7 P. M., when Rev. D. Dodds was called to the chair and Rev. Timmons to act as secretary. The chair opened with a fervent appropriate prayer when the audience was treated to an address by the Rev. John Smith, M. E. minister, and a very firm, able and worthy witness for the truth opposing secret societies. The old veteran did well; some are hearty in according to him the "wearing of the laurel" as champion of the occasion; but without any "puff" or invidious distinctions all our speakers are crowned with the laurel of truth and wear it of right and with honor. Father Smith's subject was "The Evil Influence of Secret Societies in the Community." He was earnest, clear and cogent, and had very respectful attention, showing that he commanded the respect of the community he has so long served and enjoyed.

The chair next introduced Rev. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., who as a master of the situation and occasion presented the subject of Freemasonry in such a happy, spirited, logical, manly and Gospel manner as to carry conviction against it to the hearts and homes and spheres and duties and joys of all the candid and unprejudiced. Methought Masonry was in the fiery furnace; and when heated seven times hotter than usual Dr. Sloane laid it on the test anvil of judgment and with the huge tilt hammer of truth he beat the dross and deceit and mummery and mystery and grand and great grand and peculiar and worshipful (?) till it was very small indeed. Masonry has within it the elements of its own dissolution; and our speakers all and the spirit that prevailed throughout the occasion together proclaim with the sharp ken of truth and prophecy and the certain force of fact and philosophy that already the artillery of hell in this respect is being turned against itself and this form of anti-Christ now showing its hydra head is only on exhibition for a short time, for the Son of Man will soon bruise his head and secretism shall be among the base things that were. Already the hearts of the free and faithful and fervent and strong and true everywhere are alive with and uttering this sentiment:

"Sail on, O ship of Light:
Sail on, O Gospel strong in fight:
Humanity wtih all its fears;
With all its hopes of future years,
Depends entirely on thy might.
We knew what Master laid thy keel;
What workman wrought thy ribs of steel
Who made each mast and sail and rope
What anvils rung, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat,
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope;
Fear not each sudden sound or shock,
T'is of the wave and not the rock,
T'is but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale;
In spite of rock or tempest's roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on; nor fear to breast the sea
Our hearts, our hopes are all with thee.
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears
Are all with thee; are all with thee."

The convention resulted in formal and permanent organization, and future, and we trust Gospel opposition will be directed by the society known as the Butler Co. Christian Association Opposed to Secret Societies, whose officers are these: Rev. Wm. P. Braden of Coultersville, Butler Co., President; Rev. John Smith of Baldwin, Butler Co., 1st Vice-president; Rev. R. G. Furgason of Butler, Treasurer; and Mr. Wm. Stoops of Mount Chestnut, Butler Co., Secretary, to whom correspondence will be directed.

The convention adopted this preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, Secret societies in their essential nature and practice are directly opposed to the duties we owe to God's own institutions, the family, the church and the state; and

Whereas, Their rise, progress and influence are now in painful and unrighteous conflict with these divine institutions; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That it is the duty of the Christian, the patriot and the lover of home to seek their overthrow by all available Gospel means.

2. That we entreat and invite all professing Christians now entangled with secret orders to sever their connection with these deeply deceptive and dangerous associations, and hear and accept the gracious invitation "Come up higher."

3. That we beseech those now ensnared in this wily trap of Satan to love, to assert and to defend the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man in Christ; to maintain their manhood and integrity invincible, and to devoutly cherish and stoutly recommend man's inalienable rights, liberty and equality.

Now, brethren, let us remember if our resolves amount to more than children's play we must, in the right way, do the things resolved. D. Dodds.

The Good Cause Prospering in Western Missouri.

Baker, St. Clair Co., Mo., Nov. 26, 1875.

Dear Cynosure:—As protracted sickness has prevented me from devoting the time to the lecture work that I had anticipated devoting during the fall months, my report for the fall season so far will be very near a blank one, lacking only two lectures delivered in the Christian church in Warsaw, the county seat of Benton county, on the 19th and 20th inst. The friends had secured the insertion of a notice of the lectures in both the county papers, and as the subject had been considerably talked up I found upon my arrival at the church on Friday evening all things in readiness, the room lighted and warmed and the audience patiently waiting for the attack on the "Institution of ages" to begin.

My subject on the first evening was the impositions palmed off by the Masonic fraternity upon their candidates, and upon the public generally as regards their antiquity, the connection of ancient and modern great men with their institution, their boasted benevolence, etc.

Friday evening was the evening of the regular lodge meeting, they met early and adjourned for the purpose of attending the lecture and were consequently out in full force and occupied front seats. They however paid strict attention, and behaved well, and when one did happen to get so full that there was danger of the jewel being lost, he would get up and go quietly out. On Saturday evening I presented the evidence of the genuineness of the revelations of Masonry by Morgan, and others; then gave the manner of initiation of candidates in the first and third degrees, taking time to comment upon the oaths as I read them. I closed by giving the audience a short history of the "National Christian Association opposed to Secret Societies." Many of them had never heard of the existence of such an association before. The attendance both evenings good, and I have never had the pleasure of addressing better behaved audiences. A perfect stillness reigned throughout the house, except when there was some demonstration approving the sentiments of the speaker. I distributed a number of papers and tracts.

I found here, as I find almost everywhere, some Masons that are dissatisfied with the institution. On Sunday morning a Master Mason came to my room and informed me that what I read out of the paper the night before was part of the work, at least so far as I read (I was reading from Ronayne's expose in the Cynosure). He said he would never go to lodge again. He gave some very good reasons why he would not, but as he promised to write out a history of his case with the Masons for the Cynosure, I will let him speak for himself. I will close by saying that our cause is daily gaining ground in the county of Benton, Henry, and St. Clair, and that I think we will have a few scattering votes for Walker and Kirkpatrick in 1870.

Yours in the work, W. M. Love.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I herewith transmit report of our county anti-secrecy association up to date from our previous annual meeting held first day of June last. Agreeable to notice in the Cynosure, our society met in Fredonia, and held two days, 19th and 20th of October, as a semi-annual convention, and by the blessing of God it was a glorious success. Elder Barlow, State Agent, was with us and no doubt he will report the meeting also, and perhaps more at large.

One incident is worthy of note, which is not common in conventions of this kind. In one of our sessions the regular business was suspended and turned into a prayer-meeting for the conversion of one of the members of convention. This was a very interesting case indeed, as it showed plainly the high state of feeling and the readiness of God to sanction our poor efforts to advance his cause. To him be all the glory.

I will now proceed to give an account of our late campaign in Lawrence Co., Pa.

We were invited to that place to form a county society, and according to notice in Cynosure, we arrived in the town of Slippery Rock, in said county, the first day of convention, and notwithstanding the extreme bad going, we had good attendance in the evening, which was our first meeting, and at the close of our remarks, we requested those who were with us in this movement to stand on their feet, and some thirty stood up,—praise the Lord. After some very appropriate remarks by Elder J. C. Smith, the meeting was adjourned to meet in the church at Rose Point next evening, about three miles off.

Met again according to adjournment. The meeting was called to order by the President, John Love, Jr., who called on several of the members to unite in prayer to God for his blessing, after which we were introduced to the audience, and by special request gave a brief expose of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, called the blue lodge.

We were followed by Rev. J. C. Smith by a speech that few could excel, and considering it being his first attempt at a regular set speech on this reform, it was grand. The chairman made some very appropriate remarks, at the close of which a motion was made and carried that we proceed at once to form a county association to oppose secret societies. The constitution being then read, was adopted and officers chosen as follows: John Love, Jr., of New Castle, President; Rev. J. Smith of Rose Point, Recording and Corresponding Secretary; J. R. Rodgers of Slippery Rock, Treasurer. The vice-presidents, one in each town in the county, we deem it not necessary to report their names. This new-born society bids fair to be the most vigorous and effective of any, unless we except Chatauqua as county organizations.

But after all, the great need is an organization in each township, and the officers of Lawrence County Society say they are determined, as soon as possible, to have every town in the county wheeled into line of battle.

Having accomplished the object of our mission to Lawrence county, we set our face "homeward bound." Our stop in Crawford Co., and also in Erie Co., will be reserved for a future communication. J. B. Nessell.

The Dakotah U. B. Conference Misled.

Gayville, Yankton Co., Dak. Nov. 23, 1875.

Dear Cynosure:—Having some business with the office, I thought that a few lines from these ends of the earth, might prove acceptable. I have not been stationed at this point very long; but long enough, however, to learn that the devil has some of his ingenious devices established for the destruction of mankind. But, bless God! some of these works of darkness are on the wane. The church of Jesus Christ has been sadly misrepresented in these parts, some having become lovers of themselves more than lovers of God; but we are hoping and praying for better days. We desire all the readers of the Cynosure to pray for us, and that God would revive his work in Dakotah. We feel thankful that there are a few faithful ones here who are trying to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. I have not been able to do much yet for the Cynosure, but send one subscriber, who desires to take a bold stand for the right. May God bless him.

In the last Cynosure you noticed the resolutions as passed by our United Brethren Conference on the secrecy question. I wish to call your attention to one clause of that resolution, viz., that "we recommend to those who need light on the dark subject, the Religious Telescope and Lawrence Plain Thoughts on Secret Societies." The original resolution recommended the Religious Telescope and Christian Cynosure, but was lost and amended by substituting Lawrence Plain Thoughts. I will make this explanation. It was stated publicly before our conference to the detriment of the Cynosure, that you, Bro. Blanchard, had refused to make secrecy a test question in the church to which yo belong; that thus refusing to make it a question you blame us as United Brethren for retaining or receiving a member belonging to a secret order, and that we having expelled such a one, there would be nothing to prevent you from receiving him. An explanation is requested. I do hope that the subscription list of the Cynosure may increase until its name may become a household word throughout the land. Brethren, let us remain firm and steadfast, immovable, established upon that Eternal Rock Christ Jesus, and let the waves of persecution run high, Jesus has promised, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Yours in Christ,

A. W. King.

Note.—If the zealous brother who made the above statement had made an effort to know its truth before speaking he would have been saved any self-reproach in reading this note. The Senior Editor of the Cynosure is a member of the "First church of Christ" of Wheaton, an independent ecclesiastical body, whose uncompromising position against the whole lodge circle is well known in Illinois. The manual of that church has the following rule which is faithfully maintained, no member of any secret order being admitted until the same is abandoned;

"Being fully persuaded that secret oath-bound societies are in their nature at war with the Gospel of Christ; therefore, as heretofore, all Freemasons desiring to unite with this church are expected and required to abstain wholly from the practice of Freemasonry; and the principle of this testimony is to be applied to members of other similar organizations."

If the Dakotah brethren had read in the Cynosure for three or four years the position of its editor on communing with Freemasons, as seen in criticisms on the National Congregational Council, they would not have been so easily misled.

Has Mr. Ronayne Cornered the Grand Lodge of Illinois?

Yates City, Ill., Dec. 1, 1875.

Mr. Editor:—The Right Worshipful W. J. A. Delancey, Senior Grand Warden, is now here for the purpose (probably) of instructing the members of Yates City Lodge in the changes lately adopted by the Grand Lodge in the ritual. These changes which are made from time to time as the secrets of Masonry are made public and which are equivalent to the substitution of tweedledum for tweedledee are nevertheless sufficient to keep up the deception and haul in green horns at $25 each and by means of the obligations to keep the secrets of Masonry and obey the laws and edicts of the Grand Lodge; bringing them under subjection to that class of Masons who are bound by oath to extricate each other from every difficulty, right or wrong.

W. H. Robinson.

OUR MAIL.

E. D. J. Meyers, Nesquehoning, Pa., writes:

"I pray the Lord to hasten the time when the people shall be free from the lodge."

Chester Williams, Waterport, N. Y., writes:

"I have done and shall continue to do what I can for the cause by scattering all the light possible. I give away my papers after reading them, and I have sent you some subscribers in the past and shall try hard to send you more."

B. Barto, Alton, Mich., writes:

"I intend to fight the "beast" as long as life lasts or until I see the last of it."

C. D. Brooks, Dunkirk, N. Y., writes:

"Our Christian and political liberty has come near reaching the death-struggle through the encroachments ef secret combinations. But I think a better day is dawning and secretism shall not hold the power in church and state it has in these past years."

Stephen Jenkins, White Rock, Ill. writes:

"I still think I shall succeed in getting up a club. I have the promise of several. My heart is in the cause. I want Freemasonry and all kindred societies overthrown."

Wm. Banks, Phoenixville, Pa., writes:

"Business is dull here, and subscribers are hard to find."

W. C. Stevens, Footville, Wis., writes:

"Our is the first assembly district. The grangers put their candidate in the field, and we elected a strong anti-granger by a good majority. Another granger storekeeper has lost about $2,000 in Janesville and has quit the business. There is no grange store there at present."

Mary C. Mahan, Lexington, Ill., writes:

"The U. B. church in Lexington is divided on the secrecy question. Our minister when he came, professed to know nothing about Masonry. I thought he was poorly prepared to defend the Discipline of his church if he knew nothing of the opposition, and as he said he was not able to take the paper, I sent my own money for his subscription to the Cynosure. * * * I think he is a good man but weak-kneed and dare not take the paper. will send it where it will do more good."

Mrs. Mahan was an earnest worker in the anti-slavery cause, and now in her old age is still striving to aid in reform.

A. Oldfield, Bay City, Mich., writes:

"You recollect that several months ago there was an article published in the Cynosure, I think by S. D. Greene, giving all the particulars in regard to George Washington's membership with the lodge, the name of the lodge, his age, the number of degrees, and the time he continued an active member, etc. I hold that this is to a lecturer, worth committing to memory."

We are sorry to learn that both Mr Oldfield and his wife have been sick.

J. S. Rice, N. Pownal, Me., writes:

"In consequence of poor health I have not been able to do anything for your paper for some time. I shall do all I can."

We are glad to hear from this friend again, though sorry to learn of his ill-health.

Isaac Stearns, Mansfield, Mass., writes:

"X. A. Welton, an Episcopal clergyman of Bethlehem, Ct., a renouncing Mason preached a sermon from the text, "Dumb Devils." What a difference there would be in the world if every man and woman had from its earliest ages been free to tell the truth in conversation and aid in every good cause without fear, favor or dissimulation, and not been compelled to act the 'Dumb Devil.'"

John Leonard, Morristown, Ind., writes:

"I stood against the institution of slavery from my youth up, also all secret societies, although there are but very few men in this part of the country but belong to some one of them."

Z. T. Pretty, Oramel, N. Y., writes:

"The principal men here are either lodge men or controlled by lodge-power and the rest care nothing about it one way or the other. I have done all in my power to get subscribers for your paper but have failed. My faith is strong in God believing that victory will come."

Lesson for Dec. 19, 1875.—Jesus and Peter.

SCRIPTURE.—John 21:15-22. Commit 15-19; Primary Verse, 15.

15 So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord: thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my Lambs.

16 He saith unto him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord: thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things: thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee where thou wouldest not.

19 This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou me.

LESSON OUTLINE.

THE WORK OF THE DISCIPLES.

"Feed my Lambs"—"Feed my Sheep."

THE WORK.

Its demand: Matt. ix. 37; xx. 1; xxi. 28; xx. 6.

Its scope: Mark xvi. 15; Acts i. 8; Matt. xlii. 38; Rom. x. 18.

Its nature:

a. Following Christ: John xxi. 19; Eph. v. 1, 2; John xiii. 34.

b. Testify of Christ: 1 John iv. 14; Acts v. 32; 2 Tim. iv. 2.

c. Suffer for Christ: Matt. x. 38; xvi. 24; 2 Tim iv. 6; Acts xx. 24.

d. Toward sinners: Mark xvi. 15; 2 Cor. iii. 12; 2 Tim. iv. 2; 1 Thess. ii. 8.

e. Toward brethren: Rom. xv. 14; John xxi. 16, 17; Acts xx. 28; Heb. x. 24; 1 Thess. iv. 18; v. 14.

THE LABORERS.

1.—Their capabilities: Matt. xxv. 15; 1 Cor. xii. 11; Rom. xii. 6; 1 Cor. xii. 29.

2.—Their responsibilities: Luke xii. 48; 1 Pet. iv. 10; 1 Tim. vi. 17, 18; Matt. xxv. 27.

3.—Their callings: Rom. xii. 7, 8, 11; 1 Cor. xii. 28.

THE REWARD.

1.—Is sure: Prov. xi. 19; Gal. vi. 9; Mark ix. 41.

2.—Is satisfying: 2 John viii.; Matt. v. 12; Ps. xvii. 15; xxxvi. viii.

3.—What it is.

a. A place: John xiv. 2; Heb. xi. 16; 2 Cor. v. 1.

b. A feast: Matt. viii. 11; xxii. 4; Luke xiv. 15; Rev. xix. 9; Luke xxii. 30.

c. A crown: 2 Tim. iv. 8; 1 Pet. v. 4; Jas. i. 12; 1 Cor. ix. 25.

d. A scepter: 2 Tim. ii. 12; 1 Cor. vi. 2; Rev. iii. 21; John xii. 26.

—There is nothing lost, but everything gained by obeying Christ's orders. If we have toiled all night and caught nothing, his command once again to let down the net is a promise of success. "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.' Gal. 6: 9; 1 Cor. 15: 58; Heb. 10: 38; Jas. 5: 7, 8; Ps. 126: 6.

—How often is Christ near when we do not expect him, and even are not looking for him—"a very present help in time of trouble." Deut. 4: 7; Ps. 46: 1; 62: 7, 8; Eph. 2: 13.

—It takes a higher courage to suffer than to dare. It marks a truer devotion patiently and unmurmuringly to submit to afflictions than to be active in God's service. And yet we are told to rejoice in temptations, for the trying of our faith worketh patience, and patience shall make us perfect and entire, wanting nothing. Matt. 5: 11, 12; Rom. 8: 17; 2 Cor. 1: 7; 2 Tim. 2: 12; Jas. 1: 2, 12; 1 Pet. 2: 19, 20; 4: 13; 5: 10 —National S. S. Teacher.

Farm and Garden.

PROPER TIME TO MANURE TREES.—People often argue whether it is best to manure trees in the fall or in the spring, but we think that any one who tries it will find that the summer is as good a time as any. It is only a few years ago that it has been discovered that plants are like animals in this—that they, while appearing to be expending the daily nourishment on continuous growth, are really at the same time laying up food for to-morrow. Those who have examined vegetable cellular structure with a microscope, tell us that the formation is exactly like that of a honey comb, the cells lying together of a hexagonal shape, as if made by bees. But it proves that this structure is more like the illustration than those who used it suspected, in this— that is in the honey-comb, honey is stored up for use at a future time, so matter is stored up in these little plant cells for the future use of the plant. There are in almost all plants two growths during the reason. The first growth is formed almost wholly from the matter stored up in the cell of the previous year. After midsummer, especially in the apple tree, the whole of the force derived from the past year is expended, and it stores up a little for a new growth, which is soon after made. As the season progresses, the latter or secondary growth also in turn lays up some matter in its cells, for the next season, as the past season has done. Trees always like fresh food as well as animals; and thus it is with this explanation that one can readily understand how it is that a top dressing of good manure put under the trees soon after midsummer, when the second growth is about to take place, produces the marked good results we have before recorded.—Colorado Farmer

VENTILATION OF STABLES.—Air in passing through the lungs becomes charged with carbonic acid. If the animal is in the open air the carbonic acid escapes and does not injure, but if in a confined room, this acid is accumulated to such an extent as to be injurious to animals breathing the air saturated with it. It is in fact a deadly poison. Hence a proper regard to ventilation of stables and places where animals are confined is of the utmost importance and the want of it often leads to the most fatal inflammatory diseases. A man consumes about a gallon of air per minute. Boussingault says a horse throws off daily forty-five pounds of carbon contained in the process of respiration. It is evident then that air in a closely shut up stable or cow house, must soon become vitiated and utterly unfit to support life in a healthy condition. The air which animals breathe should be kept in a state of purity. The space over the heads of animals should be opened as far as possible and unobstructed by hay lofts or anything else, and ventilators should be made in the roof of all tightly built barns to allow the escape of vitiated air.

Home and Health Hints.

FIRE PROOF CLOTHING FOR WOMEN.—Ladies passing or sitting near an open fire of coal or wood; children left to their own devices before the nursery grate, and actresses swinging their trains too near the foot-lights, have all contributed their sad stories of death and disfigurement. Moved by the reiterated reports of such casualities, Queen Victoria, some years ago, requested Prof. Graham, a chemist of high standing, to institute experiments with a view to finding some method of rendering cotton fabrics fire-proof. It was admitted that while fire might be communicated to other fabrics, cotton alone flashed into flame upon the slightest provocation. The investigations of Prof. Graham, aided by two distinguished German experts, resulted in a recommendation of certain salts of ammonia as the most effective for the desired purpose, and not at all injurious to the goods. Sulphate of ammonia in solution, containing ten per cent of the salt, received pieces of finished muslin that were dried rapidly in a machine known as "hydro extractor." The fabrics thus treated proved wholly uninflammable, while their colors were undiminished, save where madder had been employed as a dye, and even that tint was only modified slightly, and rendered less gaudy by the operation. Just as women would sponge cloth before transforming into garments, let them wash new muslin in the ammonia salt referred to.

EARACHE IN CHILDREN.—When a child's ear becomes painful, as it so often does, everything should be done to soothe it, and all strong, irritating applications should be avoided. Pieces of hot onion or fig should not be put in; but warm flannels should be applied, with poppy-fomentation, if the pain does not soon subside. How much children suffer from their ears—unpitied because unknown—it would probably wring the hearts of those who love them, suddenly to discover. It is often very hard even for medical men, to ascertain that the cause of a young child's distress is seated in the ear, and frequently a sudden discharge from it, with a cessation of pain, first reveals the secret of a mysterious attack which has really been an inflammation of the drum. The watchfulness of a parent, however, would probably suffice to detect the cause of suffering, if directed to this point, as well as to others. If children cry habitually when their ears are washed, that should not be neglected; there is, most likely, some cause for pain. Many membranes are destroyed from discharges which take place during "teething." Whenever there is a discharge of matter from the ear, it would be right to pour in tepid water night and morning, and so at least to try and keep it clean.—Western Rural.

HOW TO EXTINGUISH LAMPS WITH CHIMNEYS.—A correspondent of the English Mechanic says: "Turn the flame up to full power, then blow a short puff horizontally across the top of the funnel, when the light will not only be extinguished, but there will be no after-smoke—the formerly ignited wick will be extinguished by its own carbonic acid gas. On leaving my office at night I thus turn up the flaming wick, and, with a grateful gladness that the desk labors of the day (and night) are over, give a side wave of the hat past the chimney, which draws up the flame from contact with the wick, and the light is gone, and with no after-smell. This cannot be too widely circulated, as I read in the Times the other day that a lady lost her life by blowing down the chimney, and thus causing an explosion."

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to Treasurer of the N. C. A.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. K. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

COR. SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard.

TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg.

GEN. AG'T & LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard

—The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations (drafts or P.O. orders) should be sent to the Treasurer; general correspondence, etc., direct to the Corresponding Secretary. Address both at 13 Wabash Ave. Chicago.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY DEC. 9, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

FALSE TEACHERS.

In the Bible, these are called wolves in the clothing of sheep, and their ordinary designation by the Saviour was, "hypocrites." But who are false teachers? "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?" This topic is suggested by the course of Rev. Mr. Thomas, Freemason and Episcopal Methodist, late of this city, now of Aurora, Ill., where his ministry is thronged, many Universalists, deists, and infidels taking slips in the First Methodist church there under his ministry. The Aurora Herald and Chicago Times seem to be his chief organs; and no circus or necromancer was ever more thoroughly puffed, repuffed, and puffed again.

Following is an extract from Dr. Thomas' Thanksgiving sermon, as given by his papers.

"If by taking the Bible out of the common schools it will possibly make the system stronger we might reluctantly acquiesce; but this is the last concession; before we allow the common schools to be broken up we would wade in blood. (Cheers.) Manhood, Liberty, Labor and Common Schools."

This clerical bombast, producing "cheers" from a Methodist pulpit, of course meant nothing but clap-trap. The man who will put a brand on the whole Bible by thrusting it from the schools, is not likely to wade knee deep in blood for a part of what he has already surrendered wholly to priests and Jesuits. When he gives up the Word of God from the government schools, as their standard of law and morals, will he fight for the school-shells that are left?

The admirers and clackers of this man in the Aurora Herald, inform us that the story of the fall of man and his consequent need of a Saviour are church dogmas and "husks;" that Moses found the Ark of the Covenant and the Ten Commandments "in use" among the Egyptians; and the writers impute these shallow absurdities to Dr. Thomas. The only answer to such stuff is that Christ constantly referred to and quoted from the Old Testament "Scriptures," as the word, not of man, but of God: and in his prayer for his disciples he said, "Thy word is truth;" meaning the books of the Old Testament, now in the Hebrew Bible, and handed safely down to us.

When Dr. Thomas and his infidel followers, therefore, give another and different account of the decalogue and Ark of the Covenant from what the Bible gives, they dispute point blank the saying of Christ, "Thy word is truth."

Besides, for Dr. Thomas to say that the Ten Commandments which forbid all gods but the true, were "in use" among Egyptians who had as many gods as monsters in their Nile, and cattle on its banks; and to say that Moses, who wanted to get his people out of Egypt to "serve God" according to the law, was such a fool as not to know that the Decalogue was then "in use" in Egypt, is just about as sensible as to say that the churches of San Francisco found the Sermon on the Mount "in use" among the Digger Indians of the Sierra Nevada.

"But there were false prophets among the people even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall brign in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon thomselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. These are wells without water, clouds that are carried about with the tempest, to whom the mist of darkness is reserved forever."—2 Pet. ii. chap.

If the authorities of the Methodist Episcopal church have any respect to their ordination rules and vows, they will soon take measures to relieve their churches of such empty deceivers and teachers of "false doctrines."

BISHOP MCQUADE of Rochester, N. Y., proposes to build school-houses and rent them to the Government to teach "Beecher's secular education in; provided before and after school hours his priests and religious (!) women may teach the children to practice the religious Masonic conjurings of the church of Rome; and when his 'secular' schools are thus topped and bottomed with popery, does any man who knows him suppose Mr. Beecher would interpose the least objection? Has he ever assailed the church swindles in New York?"

BEECHER ON OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In his Thanksgiving harangue he holds that our schools should be like the Irishman's newspaper, neither political nor religious, thus:

"Above all, political influences should not be suffered to occur and control the school in creating departments. If Goliath is to be slain, it is a shame to send a wet-nurse to do it. Fit things for fit functions. And to make a department to be officered by the hirelings and off-scourings of political combinations is a blasphemy against the Holy Ghost of intelligence."

Then as to religion he proceeds thus;

"They must not be called religious in the just sense of that word. After the manner and speech of men the common school must not be regarded as a religious institution. It is secular; it must be kept secular and defended against anything that will make it other than secular. Only on that ground can you have national schools. It is not just and fair that I should be taxed for the education of my boy when I cannot send him to the public school for fear his conscience will be perverted and where he will be taught the things that I abhor. It is not fair to compel the children of a Jew,—a citizen like me, a tax-payer like me, a free American citizen like me,—it is not right that he should be compelled to pay money so that his child may hear the New Testament read day by day, which he doesn't believe in. [Applause.] It is not right that our substantial Catholic fellow-citizens should be compelled to send their children to schools where the Bible is read, when they do not believe that the Protestant version is the faithful version of God's will. [Applause.] It is not right that they should read their Doual Bible in the common schools and compel us to hear them. And it is not fair play that the majority should dictate to the minority."

REMARKS.

The phrase "blasphemy of the Holy Ghost of intelligence" denies, by implication that there is any Holy Ghost, or else degrades the third person in the God-head by a dashing comparison, which is itself blasphemy. The dictum that neither politics nor religion must influence the choice of teachers, etc., etc., is the merest gas. Jews, papists, Chinamen, atheists and communists, all are to stand on a level as candidates for the guidance of our children's minds while learning to know and think. Then this "fair play" which consists in turning God out of the government, and his Word out of the schools of this nation; as though the Most High God had neither claims nor rights in the matter! Then, further, the utter absurdity of hoping that when priests have got the Bible out of the school, they will not stop till they have expelled it from the court-house and the family! Then the ignorance of the speaker, as if it was dreadful to hear the Douay or Catholic Bible read in schools, which I have for months read at my family worship. Will those of readers who awhile since objected to our treating Mr. Beecher as an apostate, read and ponder the above.

ISAAC PRESTON, ESQ., TERRIBLY INJURED.—Just as we are going to press word comes from Mrs. O. M. Daniels, Lockport, Ill., that the old veteran, whose very able address at the Peoria Convention is published in this paper, had his face terribly mutilated, Dec. 3d, by the kick of a horse. It was feared the result would prove fatal. Strong hopes are now entertained that he will recover. Pray that God may yet spare him to his family and the cause.

—Let none fail to read the letters from the General Agent. Praise God for his blessings on the cause and take courage.

—Friends of Wisconsin have a special call in the State Agent's letter. Read it, and do everything possible to carry on the work to victory. Only eight weeks to the State meeting. Be up and doing.

—Every week that passes without getting subscribers now is lost time for the paper sure, and may be for other great interests of the reform.

—What can more encourage a true Christian heart in our cause than the reports of progress coming in from every quarter. The present winter promises to be full of good news, of lodges falling and the rejoicing of souls set free from their galling yoke. A number of letters full of good news have to wait another week. Work hard and write often, friends, for the cause. It is what the lodge foes dread and all who hypocritically stand with them.

—Elder I. Jackson, formerly of Minnesota, now of Harrison, Maine, is ready to speak against the lodge at points in northern New England where his services may be desired and expenses paid.

—A friend has sent us the interesting report of the Friends yearly meeting of Iowa. This body numbers some 8800 members and is intimately connected with the Indian agencies under the present excellent system adopted by the government. The reports presented to the meeting from agents and teachers among the Osages and other tribes in Kansas and the Indian Territory show that these once savage tribes can be reclaimed and brought successfully under the influences of the Gospel.

—A correspondent of the Advent Christian Times gives the following particulars of the secret communist society of this city. Recent developments show that this organization is soon to resume its periodical attack on the trustees of the relief funds and it is said projects of burning the city have been considered in its lodge meetings:

"The Labor Union of Chicago is a secret society, with some five or six thousand members; it has its signs and pass-words, and meets every two weeks in a hall rented for the purpose. It has sent a petition to the President of the United States, asking for arms to form militia companies, to be ready in case of war. They meet several times a month for drill; many have arms which they bought with their own money. They are in close connection with the Unions of Boston, New York, St. Louis, and all the large cities, and they are to act at the same time. They do not consider themselves strong enough yet, but prefer to have about fifteen or twenty thousand men, before attempting anything."

—The Chicago Times the of 20th ult. publishes a long account of the troubles at Nauvoo, Ill., in 1844, which resulted in the ejection of the Mormons from that city, and the murder of their prophet, Joseph Smith. The account purports to be from a manuscript of Dr. B. W. Richmond in possession of his widow at McGregor, Iowa. Dr. Richmond was acquainted with Smith in New York, and Ohio, and was present an interested, but impartial spectator of the Nauvoo tragedy. In this narative occurs the following passage, for which we cannot vouch though it has a seeming probability, and in some points corrobora es other accounts:

"I noticed a lady standing at the head of Joseph Smith's body, her face covered, and her whole frame convulsed with weeping. She was the widow of William Morgan, of Masonic memory, and twenty years before had stood over the body of her husband found at the mouth of Oak Orchard Creek, on Lake Ontario. She was now the wife of a Mr. Harris, whom she married in Batavia, and who was a saint in the Mormon church and a high Mason. She is a short person with light hair and very bright blue eyes, and a pleasing countenance. I had called on her a few days previous to this occasion, and while convereing with her put my hand on a guilt-edged volume, lying on the stand. It was 'Stearns on Masonry,' and contained the likeness of William Morgan. She said she had taken it out, and thought if the mob did come and she was obliged to flee or jump into the Mississippi she would take it with her."

—The Norwich, Conn., Daily Argus announces the presence of our General Agent in New England to assist in organizing the New Hampshire State Association and probably to speak at several points in Connecticut. The same paper quotes from the Philadelphia Press the following contribution to the discussion of Washington's lodge standing:

"The influence of secret societies upon the politics of this country has in every case gone to support the judgment of President Washington, who, in notable terms warned the people against them. It is of the very essence of our public life, that to be healthy it must absolutely open the influence of discussion and competition. Good measures cannot be thrust upon the American people, much less manipulated into force by secret combinations. —Philadelphia Press.

Three Points in the Episcopal Faith.

BY MRS. E. A. COOK.

Since specifying differences between the Protestant and Reformed Episcopal churches in the Cynosure of Nov. 18th, two letters have been received at the Cynosure office. We will quote from one of them only, as the two are similar:

"Nov. 22d, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I noticed in the columns of the Christian Cynosure of Nov. 18th, an article giving a description of the churches in Peoria, and in describing the tenets of the Episcopal church, the writer made a sad mistake which I wish to correct.

1st. The Episcopal church does not believe its pastors have power to forgive sins or of delivering men over to everlasting punishment. They believe in repentance and faith, in Christ, and that it is through him we are saved.

2d. That the baptism of infants is not a saving ordinance.

3d. Nor are they believers in tran-substantiation, but look upon the bread and wine as types of the body of Christ.

I am a constant reader of the Cynosure and am much interested in the subject of Masonry."

The writer of the above doubtless knows what the majority of Episcopalians believe better than the writer of the article referred to does. The differences were told her by a pastor who had been consecrated in the regular church and left it for the Reformed; and in stating them he said that these differences are in their printed creeds. He did not say that Episcopalians generally believed them. The opposite might be inferred from the fact that many of the regular church had left it for the Reformed. "I fairly trembled," said he, "when the bishop placed his consecrating hands on me and said (in the words of the PRAYER-BOOK, "ORDAINING OF PRIESTS"), "Whose sins thou dost forgive. they are forgiven; and whose sins thou dost retain they are retained." Is not the prayer-book good authority?

On the second point we quote it. After baptizing the child and repeating part of the ceremony, the priest says: "Seeing now, dearly beloved brethren, that this child is REGENERATE, and grafted into the body of Christ's church; let us give thanks."

In regard to transubstantiation we did not intend to impute it to them; our statement was:

"The old church considers Christ actually present in the bread and wine." The prayer-book says, "To such as rightly, worthily, and with faith receive the same, the bread which we break is a partaking of the Body of Christ; and likewise the cup of blessing is a partaking of the Blood of Christ." It explains: "The body of Christ is given, taken, and eaten in the supper only after an heavenly and spiritual manner." We had no intention of misinterpreting Protestant Episcopalianism, but in writing took the prayer-book for authority; and looking at the subject from that standpoint, we think that our Episcopal friends will say that we have not misrepresented them.

There are several of our readers doing all in their power to make the Prospect for Clubs brighter each week. Are you?

Religious Intelligence.

—Dr. McLaren, the new Episcopal Bishop of Illinois, was formally installed in that office at the Episcopal cathedral in this city yesterday.

—The statement was made at the late anniversary of Mount Holyoke Seminary in Massachusetts, that 115 female missionaries have gone to foreign lands from that institution, 18 of them from the last two graduating classes. Applications are now on file at Mount Holyoke for twenty more missionaries. Cape Colony, Africa, asks for eight. Several graduates are already in that field, and have had great success in Christian work.

—The following interesting facts concerning missions in Japan have been lately published: "Mr. Taylor was recently invited to open a hospital at Bezene, a large inland city, one hundred miles west of Kobe. On visiting the place, he found that there was a Bible interest started by a Japanese student who had been converted in America, but had died shortly after his return to his native city. Several high officials were present at a Bible meeting held in the house of the vice-governor, who is himself an inquirer. Since Mr. Taylor's return to Kobe a government officer has written to him: "Give us the Gospel first and the hospital afterwards; for we cannot afford to wait for the Gospel." It is probable that the sacred city, Kioto, once the Mikado's residence and filled with temples, will be occupied by the mission during the autumn. The blind counsellor of the Kioto government, Yomamote by name, is greatly interested in the truth and especially desires that a Christian school be opened there. He has said that what the Japanese need is some power that will change the heart and reform the life, and that naught can do this but Christianity.

—More than 300 Roman Catholics, voluntary converts to Protestantism, have been confirmed in Louisiana by Bishop Wilmer of that State.

—The Southern Methodist Episcopal missionary in China reports that the mission now has six native agents and two native Bible women in its employ, and supports five churches. Four converts were baptized last quarter.

—Rev. Mr. M'All, a Congregational evangelist, is carrying on an important revival in Paris. He has established fourteen stations at which meetings are held twice a day. There have been numerous conversions, including that of a rich stock broker, who has given up his business and devoted himself to mission work.

—The Southern Methodist are carrying on an important mission work among the Mexicans on the border of Texas. One missionary and five native preachers are engaged in the enterprise. Two new missions have just been established, and the baptisms are reported to be 138, and the number of members 166.

—Bishop Whipple, who has charge of the Episcopal Diocese of Minnesota, and for many years has devoted great labor to the good of the Indians, has written a letter to President Grant, saying that notwithstanding all the clamor that has been made, the President's peace policy towards the Indians has been a success, and that thousands of them are now learning to live as civilized white men, and among them are many as true Christians as can be found among the whites.

—The revival meetings have been attended with the usual crowded audiences in Philadelphia; at one womans' meeting over 10,000 were present. In Brooklyn the revival interest is still continued with marked results in the various churches. Rev. E. P. Hammond is also carrying on a powerful work in Harrisburgh, Pa., the churches entering heartily upon it.

—At the late meeting of the American Missionary Association in Middleton, Conn., a committee consisting of Hon. E O. Tobey, President Woolsey, Dr. Hamlin, Revs. Edward Hawes and George Whipple, were appointed to memorialize our Government at Washington to express sympathy with the efforts of Ismail Pasha, the Khedive of Egypt, to abolish slavery and the slave trade throughout his dominions, and in she regions up the Nile, Nubia, Abyssinia and elsewhere.

News of the Week.

The City

The trial of fraudulent election cases began last week with the conviction of three parties and sentence of one year's imprisonment and $1,000 fine.——The police superintendent has ordered the force to arrest on sight any known thieves or gamblers.——Many Christian women of Chicago realizing the dangerous tendency of the action of the School Board in rejecting the Bible are yet laboring with great zeal in circulating petitions for the restoration of the Word of God.—Prof. Swing is getting up a new church of persons to whom his loose views are agreeable.

General.

Theo. Thomas, the celebrated musical director, has been appointed to direction of music for the Centennial. ——New York is greatly excited over the escape of Tweed, the "Boss" of the celebrated ring which was broken two or three years ago. Tweed had been removed from Blackwells Island to Ludlow St. jail, where he was waiting the answer of the courts for a reduction of his $3,000,000 bail. The application was refused. The different indictments sued him for some $6,000,000. Attended by officers he has several times visited friends outside the jail. He thus went to his residence on Saturday afternoon, and left his keepers with his son in a back parlor while he should go up stairs. Not returning, search was soon made and the officers of the city notified of his escape, but not a trace was found up to Monday morning. It is generally believed that the jail keepers were heavily bribed Gov. Tilden has notified the sheriff that he will be held strictly to answer.——The whiskey ring suits in Milwaukee resulted last week in the conviction of three parties. It is becoming evident that ex-Senator Carpenter is implicated. In St. Louis, the clerk Avery has been convicted and sentenced and an indictment was formed last Friday by the Grand Jury against Gen. Babcock, President Grant's private Secretary, for complicity in the frauds.—— Charles O'Connor, the eminent New York lawyer, is very low and cannot recover.

Foreign.

A terrible explosion took place in a colliery near Tenedgar, England, last Saturday, by which 20 miners were killed.—It is stated in Vienna that Count Andrassy proposes the formation of an internal commission to establish an understanding between the Porte and the insurgents, and superintend the administration of Herzogovina. The insurgents report a defeat of the Turks with a loss of 1000.——There is continued trouble between foreigners and Chinese mobs. American missionaries and ladies have been assailed in Nanking. An English lady has been attacked at Jaku. Telegraph-builders have been again driven from work, near Fuchas, and the Amoy officials protest their inability to control the populace. The attempt to control the Formosa aborigines now is merely nominal.

The Home Circle.

The Mercy Seat.

Dedicated to a daughter far away.

BY REV. STEPHEN WRIGHT.

Our daughter dear we think of thee
With fond delight, thy face would see;
Far, far away, we seldom meet,
Save at the blood-bought Mercy Seat.

How sweet the thought, at morn or even,
To leave the earth and meet in Heaven!
By prayer our souls may often greet
Each other at the Mercy Seat.

Then let us lay aside our fears,
And staunch the frequent flow of tears;
Since Heaven is nigh, and peace so sweet
Is found beneath the Mercy Seat.

And tho' our loved ones sleep in dust,
We hope they rest among the just;
No more to die, nor suffering meet;
But shout before the Mercy Seat.

Oh! let us then take joy or grief,
In Jesus there is sure relief;
And we at last before his feet,
Shall no more need the Mercy Seat.

And then how joyful we shall be
Amidst that holy company,
Whose home is fixed, where all who meet,
Forever dwell at Jesus' feet.

The Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

The great need of the church is the Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

On the day of Penticost, in accordance with the promise of the Father, and in answer to the prayers of the assembled church, the Spirit was poured out in rich abundance. The apostles at once began to preach repentance and the remission of sins through the blood of Jesus. The consequences were soon manifest; believers were added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women. They continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine, in breaking of bread and in prayers; they sold their possessions and goods and parted them to all men as every man had need; they did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God and having favor with all the people; and soon after we find the new made Christians going every where, preaching the word, and the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

Similar results still follow pentecostal baptisms of the Holy Ghost. Let us enjoy such times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and we too shall rejoice in the prosperity of the Lord's work. Ministers will become more faithful, more earnest, more biblical, fuller and clearer in preaching the Gospel of the grace of God. The words spoken will come to the hearts of the people in the demonstration of the Spirit and in power. Sinners will be awakened, convicted and converted, and made to rejoice in the Lord. Multitudes even of the enemies of Christ and his Gospel, atheists, infidels, secularists, and unbelievers will be gathered into the church. When the Spirit comes in power the tongue of the gainsayer is silenced, and his pen ceases to write bitter things against God and his Son. The saints of the Most High will be strengthened to stand up and speak out for the truth. They will not hesitate to tell what God has done for them, and press on others to drink of the water of the river of life. They will be diligent and earnest in observing the means of grace. They will be ready to give of their substance to promote the cause of Christ, promptly, freely, liberally. The treasuries of the church will be filled and we will cease to plead for more money. Men at variance will come to see eye to eye, and learn to work together for the common cause. A baptism of the Holy Ghost will make the wrong right and speed on the cause of Christ gloriously.

We have the promise, "Our heavenly Father will give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." Let us ask him; with our whole hearts let us plead for this crowning blessing; let us ask in faith, nothing doubting; let us ask in penitence, lamenting the sins of the past and turning from them; let us ask in earnest, feeling that we can take no denial; let us ask perseveringly, determined not to give over asking until the blessing comes. Let us ask him in our closets, in our families, in our meetings for prayer, and in the great congregation. Let us come together, and talking together of our needs and of the fullness that is in Christ, let us stir one another up to still greater earnestness and more patient waiting, and God grant that we may be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.—Pres. Wallace in the United Presbyterian.

A Noble Life.

John Coleridge Patteson, the story of whose life and work fills the two volumes just given to the American public, was born in England, the heir of a rich family, distinguished for their intellectual power, and occupying a position, the luxuries and advantages of which were such as to put every worldly temptation in the way of the boy who grew up among them. But, over against this, stood the fact that both his father and mother were true and devoted Christians, who trained their children in the faith, that to leave all and follow Christ should be no hardship, but rather a privilege and glory. The early death of Mrs. Patteson made the affection between Judge Patteson and his son unusually warm and strong, and through all their lives father and son were each other's best friend.

Coleridge graduated at Oxford, was ordained a minister of the Church of England, and soon afterward with a deep consciousness of his own weakness, but with an equally deep conviction, that his call was from God, asked leave of his father to go out to New Zealand as missionary to the heathen cannibals of the Melanesian Archipelago. The father bade the son God-speed, and they parted, knowing that in this world they should see each other no more, for the young man held back nothing; he gave himself, his fortune, all that the world offered him of comfort and affection and power, asking only that he might be permitted to spend all in the service of an ignorant and dying race.

For four years he worked under the Bishop of New Zealand, and at the end of that time was himself appointed Bishop of Melanesia, and it is of his labors in that position that we desire to give our readers a practical understanding, for the principles upon which he worked are well worth close attention although in the brief space of a single article it is not possible to give any just idea of the intelligence and energy which he showed in his arrangement and carrying out of the numberless details of missionary work among utterly uncivilized people.

About one half of each year he spent on board his little schooner, the Southern Cross, running in and out among the islands, effecting landings whenever possible, and beginning his acquaintance with the people by trading with them, exchanging iron tools, beads, fish-hooks, etc., for fruits and vegetables. At the second or third visit (sometimes at the first) he would succeed in inducing several of the most promising young men to return with him, and in this way, usually collected on each voyage some forty or fifty savage lads. These he took back with him to the Central School, first at Aeechland and later at Norfolk Island, where they were taught something, at least, of Christian civilization.

They worked upon the farm, in the printing-office, as carpenters, etc., and whenever they showed themselves sufficiently advanced, were trained as teachers, and finally ordained as clergymen; going back in these two capacities to the islands from whence they had been taken, there to devote themselves to the enlightenment of their own people. The great difficulty in the way was, of course, that the few individual Christians were so isolated from support that it was difficult for them to make any headway, or indeed for them not to yield to the dangers and temptations of the heathenism which surrounded them. As a safeguard and assistance against this, Bishop Patteson soon began to educate native girls in the schools, who became the wives of the young men and going back with their husbands founded Christian homes and taught much by the manner of their lives, gradually attracting to themselves the nucleus of a Christian community.

The work has been and still is, most successful, and Bishop Patteson established within his own field, at least, three great truths in regard to mission work—1st, that teachers of the same race as the pupils are the best, when it is possible to obtain them; 2d, that these teachers must be trained to teach all sorts of manual labor, all branches, so to speak, of civilized life as well as ordinary school work, and that in order to do this they themselves must be trained by devoted and intelligent Christian men and women; 3d, that it is by no means necessary and generally is great folly to thrust Anglo-Saxon civilization upon tropical barbarians. They are of a totally distinct race, living in a different climate, subjected to different temptations, and civilization must to a great extent be adapted to them, not they to civilization.

Bishop Patteson's life is an example of what intelligence, common sense, and energy can do when they are consecrated to God's work; his death shows us how a man who for years had held no work too humble for his hands, who had cast in his lot with the lowliest and most debased of earth's children, may die as a martyr and a saint; pure, fearless and triumphant.

During the last few years of his life, an active trade in slaves sprang up between the islands and Queensland, and the traders did not hesitate kidnap the natives by scores, often depopulating whole islands. The grief and anxiety which this caused Bishop Patteson may be imagined, especially as in many instances his name was used to decoy the unsuspecting natives on board the trading vessels, but not for a moment did he relax his work though he knew his danger to be constant.

On the morning of September 20th, the Southern Cross neared the Island of Nukapu, and one of the Bishop's native scholars wrote afterward this brief description of that last morning: "And as we were going to that island where he died, but were still in the open sea, he schooled us continually upon Luke ii., iii., up to vi., but he left off with us with his death. And he preached continually, at prayers in the morning every day, and every evening on the Acts of the Apostles, and he spoke as far as to the seventh chapter, and then we reached that island. And he had spoken admirably and very strangely indeed to us about the death of Stephen, and then he went up ashore on that island Nukapu."

The boat was lowered, and the Bishop, with a young English clergyman and three natives entering it, rowed toward the coral reef which encircled the island. They were met by several canoes, into one of which, manned by two of the island chiefs, the Bishop got, knowing that of old this had been one of the safest ways to conciliate the natives. They rowed at once to the beach, the rest of the party remaining in their own boat and quickly losing sight of the Bishop among the dusky crowd upon the shore.

Suddenly a shower of arrows was discharged from the canoes surrounding the boat, and of the four men in it, three were wounded, but still were able to pull back to the schooner, where they took in three more men and returned to the reef to wait for the Bishop. For some hours they waited, but at last saw two canoes putting out from shore, one of which, apparently unmanned, was permitted to drift toward them, and as it neared them the freight which it bore was seen to be the Bishop, wrapped in matting, with a palm leaf on his breast, and five wounds upon his body.

The next day they buried him in the ocean on which he had sailed so long, and a few days after, his English chaplain and one of the natives who had been wounded, died also, bearing witness in their death to the power of the noble life which had been their human example.—Selected.

A Wonderful Artesian Well.

BY MRS. E. A. COOK.

A stream of water four inches in diameter coming out of the earth, a part of it a distance of eight hundred and sixty-five feet, clear and sparkling, rushing up ceaslessly day and night. with a force sufficient to carry it from fifty to one hundred feet above the bluff whence it issues, or to run a flouring mill with more than six rounds of stone, with a sulphurous taste and smell, curing salt rheum, rheumatism, dyspepsia, and acting as a tonic upon almost any person who drinks it, is indeed wonderful. Such a wonder is the artesian well at Central Park, in Peoria. The cost of boring it was $2,700. The contractors say it is the largest well of the kind that they know of in the United States; and their knowledge of artesian wells is extensive. It will be utilized for the benefit of pleasure and health seekers. Fountains, swimming ponds, and a skating rink are already in process of construction, and they are beginning to talk of building a hotel for invalids near the well. Its waters are a mixture of one salt and three sulphur springs. The probability of sulphur springs in the bluff was first suggested by a scientific gentleman from St Louis. The well is arranged so as to throw one hundred and fifty jets of water which fall into its basin. It is beautiful as well as wonderful.

Influence of Books.

On one occasion James the First, of England, made a visit to Oxford, and was publicly received in the Bodleian Library. He said, "If I were not a king, I would choose to be a university man. If it ever should be my lot to be a prisoner, I could wish nothing better than to be imprisoned in this room, with all these books around about me for my friends, my counsellors, my comforters and my advisers. Books are among the best friends that it is possible for any man to have. They will be silent when he does not wish to converse; they will speak to him when he desires to be spoken to; they will take no offense at his comments. They include the most illustrious of the living, and the most illustrious of the dead. Having books, a man can number among his friends those who have distinguished themselves in civil life and in military life; he can have friends from the state; he can have friends from the church. He can entertain them all his life at the least possible expense, because they ask no more at the hands than the slenderest accommodations and the quietest place in his dwelling."

Something like that was said regarding books many centuries ago. It has been said again and again by multitudes on platforms and in print; but it has not always been assigned to its cultivated and talented author, many of whose other works are now practically forgotten. Books in many respects are like men—men so great that they can make their voices heard through the coming generations.

Said Fenelon, "If all the crowns of Europe were placed at my disposal on condition that I should abandon my books and my studies, I should spurn the crowns away and stand by the books." Such utterances as these would have been impossible if there had not been an immense attractiveness about books.

The Lord enjoined that the Hebrew king when he came to wield his scepter should, with his own hand, write out a book and keep it by him, that it might instruct him in his royal duties and guard and warn him against the temptations of his station. God himself made communications to man, and it pleased him at length to put them in the form of a book. When Jesus was here on the earth he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, as his custom was, and the book was offered him and he read, and he was pleased to speak out of the book. Infinite wisdom! Incarnate love! The Son of God himself condescending to speak to men from the wisdom of a book!

When he left the world he made provision for another book, and he is continuing to teach men. By the book he will continue to teach, we believe, until the trump of the archangel shall sound and the Son of God shall come again in his glory.

"Forever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven," and forever that Word is settled to be the instructor and the guide of men on earth. If men will not hear Moses and the prophets, if men will not believe the testimony to the spiritual and eternal world that is borne in the book, neither will they be persuaded, all that spiritualism says to the contrary notwithstanding, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.—Rev. John Hall.

Children's Corner.

The Little Boy who Dared.

"Ho! you don't dare to cross the river on that broken plank," said one boy to another as they stood on the shore.

"Yes, I do," foolishly answered the other boy; "I dare do anything." So he ran on board, and was but just rescued from drowning.

Hearing this story of reckless courage reminded me of a boy whose daring was heroic.

A woman, bent and worn, with pale sunken cheeks, and weary, faded eyes, is sitting in an attic room of a tenement house in one of our large manufacturing towns. Her work was dropped a moment in her lap, and her hands are clasped tightly together. She is looking out from her narrow window on some children coming from school; and she has not noticed that her own boy has entered the room, so busy is she in thinking and trying in vain to solve that unanswered question of nothing producing something.

"I cannot have a warm shawl. Charlie must have a decent jacket to wear to school. He says all the boys call him 'Patchwork.' It is hard. No; I will give up going to the mission church, and will stay in the house. Never mind; Charlie must have his jacket. Poor boy! Who could have thought I could ever come to this?" And, overburdened with care, she hid her face in her hands, and wept; and the unfinished work drifted slowly to the floor.

A rough sleeve, a gentle hand on her shoulder and a boy's trembling voice, "Mother, dear, please don't! I don't need the jacket, really,"

The woman started in surprise. "Why, Charlie boy! I didn't hear you come in."

"No, mother, I know you didn't; but I am glad I now know that my new jacket was to be instead of a shawl for you. I don't mind their calling me 'Patchwork' now, mother; I've got used to it. And you must buy your shawl this afternoon."

Ah, poor sad-faced woman! there is a little sunlight in the dark world for you. The Lord has given you a boy in whom you may well rejoice. And, through the boy's pleadings, the shawl was bought.—Well Spring.

Something about Greek Letters.

A great many boys and girls who never studied Greek are familiar with the forms and names of the Greek letters. They are used in astronomy to designate separate stars of large constellations, and in trigonometry they are used as English letters are in algebra. Some of their names have become English words, and two of them are so used in the New Testament. Four times in the book of Revelation our Saviour declares himself to be the "Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." Alpha is the first and Omega the last of the Greek letters, and so they represent or symbolize our Lord's existence from the beginning, when he created all things, to the eternal future when he shall have completed all things. And you always see them in a monogram, or else very near each other, because the Saviour joined them together and neither of them expresses the complete meaning without the other.

The "I H C" or "I H S" (for C was an old form of the Greek S) is a very common emblem, and has been explained in several different ways. I believe they are the first three letters of the Greek word for Jesus, but some people think the letters are Latin, standing for three different words, which mean "Jesus Savior of Men."

You have often read in your geographies about the "Delta" of the Nile. This great river spreads out into several different streams near its mouth, making a sort of triangle, which was just the shape of the Greek letter Delta. Then again, you may have heard how very careful Christian scholars have always been to see that not even "one Iota" of the Bible should be changed. Iota is the smallest letter in the Greek alphabet, and there is a curious story about how it made all the difference once between the true and false doctrine of the church. In the year 325 a great Council of Bishops was called to condemn Arius, a Presbyter who denied that Jesus Christ was really God. He was willing to confess that Jesus was "of like substance with the Father," but not that he was of one substance with the Father, and the only difference between the two Greek words which mean "of like substance" and "of one or the same substance," was a single little Iota, like our small letter "i" without the dot.

I have only one more letter to tell you about just now, that is "Beta." It is the second letter, like our B, and when a little Greek boy wanted to say that he knew his "A, B, C," he said he knew his "Alpha, Beta," that is his alphabet. So you see how many Greek letters we use almost every day, Alpha, Beta, Delta, Iota, Rho, Tau, Chi, Omega, and those three which make up the I H S, Iota, Eta and Sigma. And if you want to see what they all look like in print, ask your big brother or your sister to show them to you in a Greek Grammar.—Churchman.

A Lie Sticks.

A little newsboy, to sell his papers, told a lie. The matter came up in Sabbath-school:

"Would you tell a lie for three cents?" asked a teacher of one of her boys.

"No, ma'am," answered Dick very decidedly.

"For ten cents?"

"No, ma'am."

"For a dollar?"

"No, ma'am."

"For a thousand dollars?"

Dick was staggered. A thousand dollars looked big. Oh, would it not buy lots of things? While he thought another boy behind him cried out;

"No, ma'am."

"Why not?" asked the teacher.

"Because, when the thousand dollars are gone, and the things you've got with them are gone, too, the lie is there just the same," answered Dick.

Ah, yes! That is so. A lie sticks. Everything else may go, but that will stay, and you will have to carry it round with you, whether you will or not, a hard and heavy load.—Post.

Yankee Notions.

The first tin peddler started on his travels in Massachusetts in 1740. The first Franklin stove was put up in 1755. In 1760 shirt collars came into use, and the one-horse chaise was introduced. In 1770 wooden clocks began to tick. 1780 saw the first umbrella. In 1806 Philadelphia attempted to burn hard coal and failed. In 1807 the first steamboat went up the Hudson. In 1817 stoves were had in meeting houses. In 1822 Boston was lighted with gas, and steel pens were invented. In 1826 India rubber shoes were for sale. In 1832 railroads were built. In 1833 "Loco Foco" matches were had, and the Democratic party was called by that name. In 1838, envelopes for letters. In 1840, sun pictures taken and burning fluid used. In 1844 the telegraph. In 1847, the sewing machine, which has in so great a measure lightened the labor of sewing women. In 1850 Hoosac Tunnel was commenced; and in 1858 the Atlantic telegraph was laid.—Ex.

FELLOW CRAFT DEGREE Concluded.

Worshipful Master:—The pass is right, and brother Senior Deacon, since the candidate comes endowed with all these necessary qualifications, it is my order that he enter this lodge in the name of the Lord and be received in due and ancient form.

The Senior Deacon being provided with a pair of compasses, returns to the door which he opens without ceremony, and exclaims:

Senior Deacon—: (to candidate) Bro. Jones, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you enter this lodge in the name of the Lord, and be received in due and ancient form.

The Junior Deacon takes the candidate by the arm and leads him into the lodge-room, halting him about six or eight feet inside the door, and the Senior Deacon standing immediately in front of him says:

Senior Deacon:—Bro. Jones, on your first admission to a lodge of Masons, you were received upon the point of a sharp instrument pressing your naked left breast. Upon your first admission to a lodge of Fellow Crafts you were received upon the angle of the square applied to your naked right breast, the moral of which was at both those times explained to you. Upon your first admission into a lodge of Master Masons, it becomes my duty to receive you upon both points of the compass extending from your naked left to right breast, the moral of which is to teach you that as the most vital parts of man are contained within the breasts, so are the most excellent tenets of our institution contained within both points of the compass which are friendship, morality, and brotherly love.

He then hands the compass to the Junior Deacon, and taking the candidate by the left arm, conducts him three times around the lodge-room, always traveling with the course of the sun, that is from the West or Senior Warden's station by way of the North towards the East, and thence around by way of the South and so on to the West again. While the candidate is thus being led around, on passing the three principal stations for the first time—that is South, West, and East—the Junior Warden gives one loud rap, the Senior Warden one, and the Master one. On his second trip around, the Junior Warden gives two raps in quick succession, the Senior Warden two, and the Master two, and on being led around for the third time, each of these officers gives three loud and distinct raps. It is important to observe that the Junior Warden in the South always leads off in giving the raps in all the degrees, followed by the Senior Warden in the West, and then by the Worshipful Master in the East.

As the candidate is being thus conducted around the lodge-room the Master in most instances reads the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes from the first to the seventh verse inclusive, as follows: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them. While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain; in the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened, and the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall be brought low; also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way, and the almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets: or ever the silver-cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." And the reading is so timed that the last words are pronounced just as the candidate is halted in front of the Junior Warden's station. In some aristocratic lodges in cities and large towns where they can afford the luxury of an organ, solemn music is substituted for the reading. In some lodges also and especially in small country towns both the reading and music are dispensed with. After the candidate is thus conducted three times around the lodge-room he is halted in front of the Junior Warden's station in the South, and the Senior Deacon giving three raps on the floor with the end of his rod, that officer rises to his feet and enquires:

Junior Warden:—Who comes here? (not, Bro. Senior Deacon, who comes here?)

Senior Deacon:—Bro. Septimus Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice, passed to the degree of Fellow Craft and now seeks further light in Masonry by being raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason.

Junior Warden:—(to candidate) Bro. Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Junior Warden:—Bro. Senior Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Junior Warden:—Is he duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Junior Warden:—Has he made a suitable proficiency in the preceding degrees?

Senior Deacon:—He has.

Junior Warden:—Who vouches for this?

Senior Deacon:—A brother.

Junior Warden:—By what further right and benefit does he expect to obtain this favor?

Senior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Junior Warden:—Has he the pass?

Senior Deacon:—He has it not but I have it for him.

Junior Warden:—Advance and communicate the pass.

The Senior Deacon approaches a few paces nearer to the Junior Warden and whispers into his ear the word, Tubal-Cain.

Junior Warden:—The pass is right. You will conduct the candidate to the Senior Warden in the West for his examination.

The candidate is now conducted towards the West and being halted in front of the Senior Warden's station the Senior Deacon gives three distinct raps as before with the end of his rod calling that officer to his feet, and precisely the same questions are asked and the same answers returned as at the Junior Warden's station, at the end of which the Senior Warden says:

Senior Warden:—The pass is right. You will conduct the candidate to the Worshipful Master in the East for his examination.

He is then led towards the East and again halted in front of the Worshipful Master's chair where, as before, the Senior Deacon gives three distinct raps. The Master keeping his seat and in a very sedate, stern voice demands:

Worshipful Master:—Who comes here?

Senior Deacon:—Bro. Septimus Jones, who has been regularly initiated as an Entered Apprentice, passed to the degree of Fellow Craft and now seeks further light in Masonry by being raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason.

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Jones, is this of your own free-will and accord?

Candidate:—It is.

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Senior. Deacon, is the candidate worthy and well qualified, duly and truly prepared?

Senior Deacon:—He is.

Worshipful Master:—Has he made a suitable proficiency in the preceding degrees?

Senior Deacon:—He has.

Worshipful Master:—Who vouches for this?

Senior Deacon:—A brother.

Worshipful Master:—By what further right and benefit does he expect to obtain this favor?

Senior Deacon:—By the benefit of a pass.

Worshipful Master:—Has he the pass?

Senior Deacon:—He has it not but I have it for him.

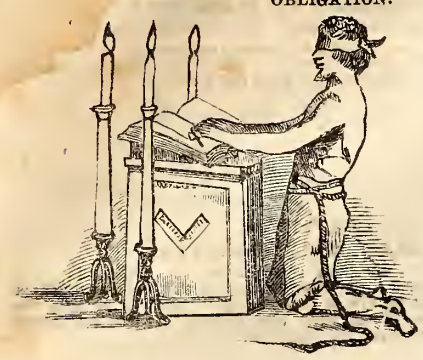
Worshipful Master:—Give me the pass.

The Senior Deacon as in the two previous cases whispers into his ear the word "Tubal-Cain."

Worshipful Master:—The pass is right, and brother Senior Deacon, since the candidate comes endowed with all these necessary qualifications it is my order that you re-conduct him to the Senior Warden in the West who will teach him how to approach the East by three upright, regular steps, his feet forming the angle of a square, his body erect, facing the Worshipful Master in the East.

The Senior Deacon now leads the candidate back by way of the South to the Senior Warden's station before whom he is again halted and the Deacon giving one rap addresses him as follows:

Senior Deacon:—Bro. Senior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you teach this candidate how to approach the East by three upright, regular steps, his feet forming the angle of a square, his body erect, facing the Worshipful Master in the East.



Senior Warden:—(standing up) Bro. Jones, you will now take the Entered Apprentice step—step off one step with your left foot bringing the heel of the right to the hollow of the left. (The candidate is instructed how to perform this exceedingly scientific feat.) You will now take the Fellow Craft step—step off one step with your right foot, bringing the heel of your left to the hollow of the right. (He is again instructed in the noble science of stepping off.) You will now take one advance step with your left foot and bring the heel of your right foot to the heel of the left, your feet forming the angle of a square. Stand erect. In order, Worshipful. (Makes the due-guard and resumes his seat.)

Worshipful Master:—(rising and addressing candidate) Bro. Jones, you are now standing before the altar of Freemasonry for the third time but before proceeding any further in these solemn ceremonies it becomes my duty as Worshipful Master of this lodge to inform you that it will be necessary for you to take upon yourself a solemn oath or obligation appertaining to this degree. It is one similar in its requirements to that which you have taken in the preceding degrees but I assure you upon the honor of a man and a Mason that in this obligation there is nothing which can conflict with any of those exalted duties you may owe to God, your country, your neighbor, your family or yourself. In your advancement thus far you have repeatedly assured us it was of your own free-will and accord: if you are still of the same mind and satisfied with the assurance I have given you, you will advance to the altar. (The Senior Deacon leads the candidate towards the altar) Kneel upon both your naked knees, both hands resting upon the Holy Bible, square and compass. (The Senior Deacon places the candidate as directed and stands at his left side.)

The Master now gives three raps calling up the entire lodge. They all then approach the altar, and arrange themselves in two rows one on either side of the altar and kneeling candidate, the ranks extending from West to East. The Master also approaches the altar and standing in front of the candidate remove his hat and says:

Worshipful Master:—(continuing) In which due form you will say "I" with your name in full and repeat after me:

OBLIGATION.

I, Septimus Jones, of my own free-will and accord, in the presence of Almighty God and this Worshipful lodge, erected to him and dedicated to the holy Saints John, do hereby and hereon (the Master at these words places his right hand upon those of the candidate) most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear:

That I will always hail, ever conceal and never reveal any of the secret arts, parts or points of the Master Mason's degree to any person or persons whomsoever except it be to a true and lawful brother Master Mason or within a regularly constituted lodge of Master Masons, and neither unto him nor them until by strict trial, due examination or legal information, I shall have found him or them as lawfully entitled to the same as I am myself.

I furthermore promise and swear that I will conform to and abide by all the laws, rules and regulations of the Master Mason's degree, and of the lodge of which I shall hereafter become a member and that I will ever maintain and support the constitution, laws and edicts of the Grand Lodge under which the same shall be holden so far as the same shall come to my knowledge.

Furthermore that I will answer and obey all due signs and summons sent to me from a lodge of Master Masons or given to me by a brother of this degree, if within the length of my cable-tow.

Furthermore that I will keep the secrets of a worthy brother Master Mason as inviolable as my own when communicated to and received by me as such, murder and treason excepted and them only at my own option.

Furthermore that I will aid and assist all worthy distressed brother Master Masons, their widows and orphans, they applying to me as such, so far as their necessities may require and my ability permit without material injury to myself or family.

Furthermore that I will not sit in a lodge of clandestine Freemasons nor converse upon the secrets of Freemasonry with a clandestine-made Mason nor with one who is under the sentence of suspension or expulsion to my knowledge while under such sentence.

Furthermore that I will not assist in or be present at the initiating, passing or raising of a woman, an old man in dotage, a young man under age, an atheist, a madman or a fool, I knowing them to be such.

Furthermore that I will not cheat, wrong or defraud a lodge of Master Masons nor a brother of this degree knowingly nor supplant him in any of his laudable undertakings but will give him due and timely notice that he may ward off approaching danger, if in my power.

Furthermore that I will not knowingly strike a brother Master Mason nor otherwise do him personal violence in anger except it be in the necessary defense of my person, family or property.

Furthermore that I will not have illicit carnal intercourse with a Master Mason's, wife, mother, sister, or daughter, I knowing them to be such, nor suffer it to be done by others if in my power to prevent it.

Furthermore that I will not give the Grand Hailing sign or sign of distress of a Master Mason except in real distress, in case of the most imminent danger, within a regularly constituted lodge of Master Masons, or in some secure place for Masonic instruction: and should I see the sign given or hear the words accompanying it, I will immediately repair to the relief of the person so giving it, should there be a greater probability of saving his life than of losing my own.

Furthermore that I will not give the Grand Masonic word in any other manner or form than that in which I shall hereafter receive it and then only in low breath.

To all of this I most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear with a firm and steadfast resolution to keep and perform the same without any equivocation mental reservation or secret evasion of mind whatever, binding myself under no less a penalty than that of having my body severed in twain, my bowels taken from thence and burned to ashes and the ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven so that no more trace or remembrance may be had of so vile and perjured a wretch as I, should I ever knowingly or willingly violate this my solemn obligation as a Master Mason. So help me God and keep me steadfast in the due performance of the same.

Worshipful Master:—(to candidate) Bro. Jones, in token of your sincerity and to make this obligation more binding you will detach your hands and kiss the Holy Bible which now lies open before you.

The candidate's hands are removed by the Senior Deacon and he stoops down and kisses the book.

Worshipful Master:—(to Senior Deacon) Bro. Senior Deacon, you will now release the brother from the cable-tow as he is bound to us by an obligation, a tie stronger than human hands can impose.

The Deacon removes the cable-tow from around the candidate's body and throws it aside. The Worshipful Master now resumes his hat and steps back a few paces, always facing the candidate, the stewards or Deacons cross their rods over the Master's head and in this position he continues:

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Jones, in your present condition what do you most desire?

Candidate:—(prompted by Senior Deacon) Further light in Masonry.

Worshipful Master:—Brother Senior Deacon and brethren stretch forth your hands and assist me in bringing this brother from darkness to further light in Masonry. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light, and there was light." And now in humble commemoration of which ancient event, I Masonically say, Let there be light.

Here the Senior Deacon swiftly removes the hoodwink from the candidate's eyes, the Worshipful Master and brethren standing on either side make the due-guard of a Mason as on page 21, and retaining their hands in this position for a few seconds, the Master remarks:

Worshipful Master:—And there is light.

Worshipful Master:—(approaching the candidate) Bro. Jones, on being brought to light in Masonry for the third time you behold before you as before the three great lights in Masonry by the aid of the three lesser lights, but with this difference, that now both points of the compass are elevated above the square, which is to signify that you are never to lose sight of the moral and Masonic application of that highly useful and valuable instrument which teaches friendship, morality and brotherly love.

The Worshipful Master then steps back eight or ten paces and Senior Deacon addressing the candidate, says:

Senior Deacon:—Bro. Jones, you now behold the Worshipful Master approaching you from the East on the step (Master steps off one step with his left foot bringing the heel of the right to the heel of the left) under the due-guard (Master makes the due-guard of a Master Mason as on page 21) and sign of a Master Mason (Worshipful Master makes the penal sign, see figure, page 21.

Worshipful Master:—(to candidate) Bro. Jones, an Entered Apprentice steps off one step with the left foot, bringing the heel of the right to the hollow of the left and is called the first step in Freemasonry (he makes this step). A Fellow Craft steps off one step with the right foot bringing the heel of the left to the hollow of the right, (Master also makes this step) and is called the second step in Freemasonry. This was given you as the due-guard and this the sign of an Entered Apprentice. (Master makes the due-guard and sign of the first degree, see fig. page 14.) This was given you as the due-guard and this the sign of a Fellow Craft (he now makes the due-guard and sign of the second degree, see fig. page 19.) A Master Mason steps off one step with the left foot bringing the heel of the right to the heel of the left (makes this step) and is called the third step in Freemasonry. This is the due-guard (making the due-guard of a Master Mason as on page 21) and alludes to the position in which your hands were placed while taking your obligation. This is the sign (makes the penal sign of a Master Mason as on page 21) and alludes to the penalty of your obligation wherein you have sworn that sooner than violate any portion thereof you would suffer "Your body to be severed in twain, your bowels taken from thence," etc. These signs are given together and are used as a salute to the Worshipful Master upon entering or retiring from a lodge of Master Masons. Stepping to the altar where you now kneel you make the step, due-guard, and sign in this manner, (Master makes the step and signs quickly) after which you will be permitted to retire or take your seat as the case may be.

Worshipful Master:—(approaching candidate) And now in token of the continuance of friendship and brotherly love, I have again the pleasure of presenting you with my right hand, (takes the candidate by the right hand) and with it the pass and token of a pass of a Master Mason, but as you are yet uninstructed, brother Senior Deacon will answer for you. You take me as I take you (pressing his thumb hard on the second knuckle of the candidate's right hand, the candidate does the same.) This you will remember, is the real grip of a Fellow Craft. See fig. page 70) We get from this by saying:

Worshipful Master:—(to Senior Deacon) Will you be off or from?

Senior Deacon:—(standing at left side of candidate) From.

Worshipful Master:—From what and to what?

Senior Deacon:—From the real grip of a Fellow Craft to the pass-grip of a Master Mason.

Worshipful Master:—Pass.

The Senior Deacon now removes the candidate's thumb to the space between the second and third knuckles of the Master's right hand, while the Master moves his thumb to the corresponding space on the candidate's hand. See fig. 154.

Worshipful Master:—What is this? (pressing hard with his thumb.)

Senior Deacon:—The pass grip of a Master Mason.

Worshipful Master:—Has it a name?

Senior Deacon:—It has.

Worshipful Master:—Will you give it to me?

Seinor Deacon:—I did not so receive it neither will I so impart it.

Worshipful Master:—How will you dispose of it?

Senior Deacon:—I will letter or syllable it.

Worshipful Master:—Syllable it and begin.

Senior Deacon:—Begin you.

Worshipful Master:—Nay, you must begin.

Senior Deacon:—Bal.

Worshipful Master:—Tu.

Senior Deacon:—Cain.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pagenes,

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tract

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out. mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month. but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

That Seven Hundred.

Seven hundred subscriptions to the Cynosure expire during the present month. Shall we receive seven hundred renewals? The Cynosure needs every subscriber it has and five thousand more. Our cause, opposing the secret lodge needs ten or fifteen thousand new subscriptions and every renewal it can get. And we believe that our readers will say there are a hundred thousand families in the United States and Great Britain to whom the Christian Cynosure would be a blessing.

But we will not talk at random. Is your time out this month? If so, please renew promptly. Please send one or two new subscriptions if you cannot send five or ten. But if you can send five or ten, please do. Will you? If you are too infirm or too old or too busy to look up subscribers then send your renewal all by itself and it will find a warm greeting.

Prospect for Clubs.

A club has come at last from Pennsylvania which instead of containing ten names had fourteen. It was sent from Waverly by S. A. Reynolds. Rev. J. T. Kiggins sends in a club of eleven and Rev. Philo Elzea a club of ten. Rev. H. H. Hinman sends in a few almost every week. We receive news of other clubs forming and hope they will come thicker and faster. An experienced canvasser writes that DECEMBER IS THE MONTH for obtaining subscriptions. Press the canvass in fair weather or foul, co'd weather or warm, so that our quarterly report for October, November and December which will be published in the Cynosure of January sixth may be the best report ever published.

The next National Convention will be held in Chicago next June. If every intelligent, reading man and woman within a radius of three hundred miles could read the Cynosure for the next six months what a powerful convention would meet in this city?

C & N-W. LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

The Cynosure at

1.50½ A YEAR IN CLUBS OF TEN.

REMEMBER the offer expires January 1st. Two weeks more to work. Workers are gathering the harvest from New England to California. May Heaven bless them for their good work! Never has the list grown faster. Let the good work go on throngh the winter.

Topics of the Time.

Months, ago when it was proposed to send the heir of the English throne to visit the Indian dependencies, the estimated expense of the trip seemed greater than any probable benefit; but this objection at length vanished and parliament voted millions for the outfit and journey; prayers were offered in the churches throughout all the kingdom for the expedition; and from every point the political, social and religious interests of the most wealthy and popnlous of the foreign provinces seemed likely to be benefited by this visit of the prospective sovereign. A war steamer was fitted out with every convenience, and all preparation was made for so important a journey. The Prince has now been several weeks in India, but the burden of the dispatches tells only of feasts and balls in the more Anglicized provinces, elephant hunting in Ceylon, game shooting somewhere else, and the last telegrams announce great preparations for a "pig-sticking" in another district. Now if Wales was not Grand Master of English Masons we should say that this was not a fair retnrn the deliberations of parliament and the anxiety of the good people of Britain generally. Being such, however, some may think him above criticism. But to the people of India, who have some interest in the future management of their affairs by a distant ruler, this disregard of the great duties of his position will assnre them that, if he is not a perfect prince, he is at least a Perfect and Snblime Prince Freemason, who has learned to preside in a lodge and run down wild hogs.

The executive committee of the Centennial Exhibition have selected W. M. Everts as the orator, H. W. Longfellow as the poet, and a grandson of Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, as the reader of the American Declaration of Independence, at the opening ceremonies. It is hardly questionable whether, under the circumstances, these appointments will be acceptable to the majority of the American people. William Cullen Bryant is spoken of as a citizen whose age and worth demand a place on the programme; and the claim of Hon. Charles Francis Adams is certainly no less. It is positively stated that this gentleman would probably have been elected orator but for the insane opposition of Dr. Geo. B. Loring, a recent candidate for nomination to the Governorship of Massachusetts with Mr. Adams and a high Mason. The Loring-Masonic faction failing to secure their end, voted in a body against Mr. Adams to the general regret of the best advisers of the Republican party. Loring conld not sufficiently vent his Masonic spleen nntil he had defeated the appointment of the son of John Quincy Adams, and an American representative of the highest type and purest eloquence, to the honor of our centennial oration.

The Cynosure must depend not on the enemies or those who are indifferent to this reform, but on its active, intelligent friends, for support. Do they for once realize the situation?

Mr. Henry W. Dennis, Secretary of Monrovia, has written to the American Colonization Society some account of the troubles now existing between the little African repnblic and its native enemies. On the 10th of Oct. the Liberians suffered a severe defeat in an attack on a large native village; and their condition is rendered critical by an extensive arising of the surrounding tribes. The case is more disheartening from the fact as stated that English influence has been active in instigating the natives of Cape Palmas against the Liberians, and the arrival of every English steamer from down the coast brings to the enemy quantities of ammunition and guns, and as a general thing the officers and crew of these steamers openly express their sympathy with the natives. Mr. Dennis says: "We are too few in numbers, too far apart in communities, and too poor in means to hold our position on this coast unless aided by some foreign power. It is not impossible that after all the expenditures, sacrifices of life and toil in fonnding Liberia, it will be blotted out." The Liberian republic has always been looked upon as claiming some degree of protection from our Government and the anchoring of a United States war vessel off Monrovia will be able no doubt to change the disastrous cnrrent of events.

While these discouragements are met on the West coast, the interior of Africa is opening to evangelization before the steps of the explorer, Stanley, the follower of the devoted Livingstone. Skirting along the southern coast of the vast lake, the Victoria Nyanza, harassed by savage tribes and suffering terribly from lack of supplies, the expedition reached a district hitherto unexplored by white man and inhabited by a nation living in a state of comparative civilization and peace. Of the religion of this wonderful people and their king, Stanley writes thus to the New York Herald:—"Until I arrived at Mtesa's Court the King delighted in the idea that he was a follower of Islam; but by one conversation I flatter myself that I have tnmbled the newly-raised religious fabric to the ground, and, if it were only followed by the arrival of a Christian mission here, the conversion of Mtesa and his court to Christianity would be complete. I have undermined Islamism so much here that Mtesa has determined henceforth, until he is better informed, to observe the Christian Sabbath as well as the Moslem Sabbath, and the great captains have unanimously consented to it. He has caused the ten commandments of Moses to be written on a board for his daily perusal, as Mtesa can read Arabic, as well as the Lord's Prayer and the golden commandment of our Saviour, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' This is great progress for the few days that I have remained with him, and, though I am no missioonary, I shall begin to think that I shall become one if such success is so feasible." The letter continues with great enthusiasm, urging Christian laborers to enter at once on this most promising field, where a population of some two million is waiting for the Gospel. Thus Livingstone's years of dangerous exploration are beginning to bear their fruit.

By taking the Cynosure you may save a son, a brother, or some friend from the soul-slavery of the lodge, or some one already in its snare, to escape.

Secret Societies in Colleges.

[From the N. Y. Daily Witness, Dec. 6.]

Secret societies are wheels within wheels or governments within governments, and consequently, if influential at all, a doubtful and, it may be, dangerous element in the community. In despotic countries there may be no means of organizing a revolntion except in and through secret societies; but in a free conntry where every person can proclaim his views from the housetops, or still more publicly throngh the press, and where people may combine as much as they choose openly, there can be no need of secrecy except to accomplish purposes that will not bear the light. Society is honey-combed and worm-holed in the South by the Ku-Klnx Klans, White Leagues, Knights of Golden Circle, and many other secret bands, or as Sheridan called them, banditti, which was merely substituting the Italian for the English word.

Nor are we sure that things are much better in the North.

Everywhere you meet with men who owe allegiance to some other society than the three which God has ordained, namely, the family, the church, and the state; and in not a few cases the obligations to that other society are the most regarded.

To associate together for laudable purposes, such as banking or railroad business, or the promotion of art or science, is not only lawful, but in many cases necessary; but in these cases there need be no oaths of secrecy, no signs, pass-words, grips or mystery of any kind.

In the case of ordinary secret societies, however, men violate no express pledge or voluntary engagement by joining them, but it is different with secret societies in colleges, where they are against the rules, and where students, on entering, pledge their word of honor to join no secret society whilst they continue connected with the college. To break this express pledge secretly is a treacherons piece of deception, which brands those who are guilty of it as unreliable, if not dangerous characters. They conld have declined to make the engagement and remained out of college, if they preferred the secret society; or they might leave college in order to join it; but to give a solemn and explicit pledge and break it, concealing their crime, and continuing their contraband connection with the college, is conduct so monstrous that we cannot believe any Christian, or any honorable gentleman, however young, weak, or easily led astray, wonld be guilty of it. Certainly, if such an one has been inveigled into a breach of faith which his conscience must condemn, he will take the first opportunity to confess, apologize, and reform.

The parents, also, of all such delinquents, will study the very best interest of their sons, as well as of the college, and of society, by requiring prompt and hearty confession of their fault and full purpose of obedience to the college authorities in future.

Princeton College, which has been in many respects a city set on a hill to the colleges of America, has now providentially been put in the most conspicuous position of the contest between college authorities and disobedient students, and we trust its light will shine forth on this question.

The case of the secret societies in Princeton is a peculiarly aggravated one on account of the peculiar solemnity and fullness of the pledge against joining such societies given by every student on entering it, and to give in to those who have violated that pledge would be the annihilation of good government in that college, and a most dangerous and discouraging example for all the colleges of the land. It is, therefore, with great pain that we see symptoms of lack of backbone on this question on the part of some journals high standing as mentors and moralists, but we greatly mistake the character of President McCosh if any of these things shall move him from the right path. His motto will no doubt be, "Do justice though the heavens fall," and justice alike to the college, to the students, to their families and to the public requires him to make no concession whatever to a lax morality in this matter.

Suggestions from the Michigan Convention.

West Unity, Nov. 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Having read in your paper the reports of the President and Secretary of the Michigan meeting held at Ypsilanti, we thought that possibly some of your readers might feel interest enough in the meeting to read a third report of how it looked, and the impressions made on the mind of one outside of the State organization.

In the first place, of Past Master Ronayne's opening the lodge we thought if we were to practice such nonsense, such lying, yes, such downright blasphemy, we should want it in an upper room, the higher the better. the curtains all drawn, the blinds all closed, the doors all tyled, the tyler, in addition to his drawn sword, to be armed with a double-barreled shot-gun loaded to the muzzle, and every member sworn "ever to conceal and never to reveal," and the penalty for revealing to have the throat cut and the tongue torn out. And then to think of a minister of the Gospel invoking God's blessing on such performances! And then meeting a poor, blind candidate, he demands of him the Master's word and threatens to take his life if he don't give it; at the same time he claims to know what the word is, and probably the blind candidate has forgot or never knew it. Well, they hit him with a paper club,—that is, the Rev. Mr. Jubelum does—and he has been caught in a blanket and buried in a grave due East and West, and we have forgotten how many feet perpendicular; and then our Rev. friend says we have killed our Grand Master Hiram Abiff. All a lie, of course; but then God's blessing has been invoked, and how far that will go towards atoning for falsehood and pretended murder, and the wish "O that my body had been severed," etc., we leave for our Rev. friend to settle with his conscience. And such a would-be murderer preach God's holy Word to me? Not much. And such an institution claiming to be moral; yes, claiming to be religious; claiming to fit us for that spiritual building; claiming that all that the soul requires can be found in the first three degrees! To express our opinion of it as a religious institution, we will borrow a few lines from Tom Moore:

"If I'm presumptuous be my sin forgiven
While here I swear by my soul's hope of rest,
I'd rather have been born ere man was blest
With the pure dawn o. revelation's light,
Nay, rather plunge me back in pagan night
To take my chance with Socrates for bliss,
Than be the Christian of a faith like this.
Corrupts both church and state, and makes an oath
The knave and atheists passport into both."

But to the meeting. In the midst of the confusion King Solomon comes up and demands the cause of the uproar and wonders at Hiram's absence; at the same time had laid an embargo on all the shipping to prevent the escape of the murderers and threatens to kill twelve innocent men if the guilty ones are not found. This was very unwise in the King, to say the least of it. Rev. Harris Barham, author of the Ingoldsby Legends, always made his heroes talk sense if they didn't tell the truth. For instance, at the murder of St. Gengulphus, the Prince Bishop was very anxious to bring the perpetrators of the foul deed to justice and so he had the following notice published:

"This is to give notice—Whoever shall seize
And such person or persons to justice surrender,
Shall receive such rewards as his highness shall please
On conviction of him—the aforesaid offender.
And in order the matter more easily to trace
To the bottom, his Highness the Prince Bishop further,
Of his clemency, offers free pardon and grace,
To all such as have not been concerned in the murther."

Now there was good sound sense in that, if it wasn't true. And as the poor blind candidate was being led about we wondered if he did not think with Burns:

"O wad some pow'r the giftie gie us
To see oursels as ithers see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us
And foolish notion."

But, says one, how do you know that the cremonies he went through are the ceremonies of the lodge? Well, one proof is that when he was training his awkward squad (and they were very awkward) if they made mistakes (and they made a great many), the fraternity were first to laugh; while Mr. Ronayne was teaching them, no odds how much the rest of the audience seemed to enjoy it, they could see nothing to laugh at. Thus when the man who acted as Worshipful Master held up the wrong hand; nothing very funny about that, and yet our cable-towed friends were very merry over it. At another time as the poor, blind candidate was being led around, one of the officers gave three raps instead of two, which the fraternity enjoyed hugely. These, with scores of other incidents, proved to us that they were familiar with all the ceremonies, for if they were not how could they detect blunders quicker than the uninitiated; and if they were so familiar with the ceremonies as their actions proved them to be, where did they learn it unless in the lodge? If the ceremonies, as given by Mr. Ronayne, were not the ceremonies of the lodge, lodge-men would know no more about them than others; but they did, and we would ask again, Gentlemen, where did you learn it?

We are taught in the "mysteries of Masonry" that to teach the truth and inculcate the precepts of charity, for the sake of a Divine life, are the sole ends and objects of Masonry; but let Ronayne attempt to teach the truth in reference to the lodge, and then you may see the rarest specimens of Masonic charity. In fact nearly all our lecturers have wonderful stories to tell of Masonic charity. Take for instance their treatment of D. P. Rathbun. Surely no one can fail to see the Masonic charity in his case, but the Divine life don't appear quite so plain.

We will conclude by saying that if any of the friends of our cause wish to learn the things that are done by the Masons in secret they should send for Mr. Ronayne. J. G. Mattoon.

Forney on Public Schools.

Col. Forney writes as follows on the public school question to his paper, the Philadelphia Press:

London, Oct. 5.—By this mail I send you a number of extracts from late English papers, commenting upon President Grant's speech at Des Moines, Ia., on the religious question. You will perceive that all parties unite in regarding the demonstration of the President as of grave importance. Indeed, there can be no doubt of a very solid union among the Protestant sects on both continents against the recent assumptions of the Roman Catholic prelates. Men who have regarded other issues with undisturbed equanimity seem to have taken fire at the attempt to overthrow the system of popular education in America. Dogmas like Papal Infallibility and the Immaculate Conception, belonging, as they do, entirely to the church itself, produces little comparative effect upon outside observers, but, now that the education of the people has become a sort of watch-word among the masses of Europe, and is being everywhere accepted, no matter how reluctantly, by rulers and leaders, an attack upon the common-school system of the United States, which all sides here acknowledge to be the model upon which they propose to form their new institutions, causes a quick and angry resistance. I have too much confidence in the wisdom and in the sagacity of the Roman Catholic churches of America to suppose that they will persevere in what must swell a resistless uprising against them. The history of popular education in Pennsylvania alone, not to speak of the grandeur and more perfect system of New England, should be a sufficient warning to all those who indulge the hope that it can be broken down. It is just forty years since the great Democratic Governor, George Wolf, and the great Whig leader, Thaddeus Stevens, joined hands in carrying through the original appropriation upon which has been erected the present superior organization. Those of us who recall the foundation of the high school of Philadelphia, whose graduates are scattered all over the Union, many of them now in the highest walks of life and foremost in the learned professions, and a large number of them leading Catholics, the later and equally prosperous Girl's High-School, not to speak of the academies and colleges which have blossomed and ripened from these examples in every county of the State, nor yet of the wonderful primary organizations in our thousands of school districts, will antagonize with more than ordinary spirit the attempt, come from what quarter it may, to dislocate this great establishment and its co-ordinate branches.

The movement to divide the revenues so that one special religion may have an opportunity to educate its people in a particular way comes at a most inopportune period, now that the necessity of the education of the whole people of Great Britain is regarded as one that cannot be avoided. But if there is any one thing to be deplored in America, it is such a contest as President Grant foreshadows. I recollect distinctly the two eras in our history, both of them almost originating in Pennsylvania,—the Native American riots of 1844–'45, and the Know-Nothing excitement of 1854, and both of which I resolutely opposed. Hostility to a religious belief, or to any portion of our people born in another country, is abhorrent to every true American citizen, and I should dread another division of parties on those questions. But it is a very different thing when any organization, religious or otherwise, takes up arms against popular education in the United States, and if the contest assumes this distinctive feature alone, there will be I predict, a united and irresistible movement in support of the ideas enunciated by Gen. Grant. I pray that the day is far distant when such a conflict may be precipitated, and it is to be hoped that the hundreds and thousands of Roman Catholics in America, who have enjoyed the blessings of our free education, who have sent their children to our common schools, who have, in fact, been liberalized by our institutions, will themselves present a breakwater against what may otherwise become a serious calamity.

Resolution which springs from Christian principle, and is fortified by it, is fearless as well as unremitting. It is conclusive of good purposes and the pledge of their being executed effectively in noble sentiments and worthy deeds. The soul of the resolute is no less calm than firm.

Our Foreign Letter.—Germany and Holland.

The interest with which I scanned the first features of Germany which I saw, may be likened to the eagerness with which a son would study the face of a parent oft mentioned in his presence but never before seen. The mode of travel, the costumes and habits of the people and the physical features of the country were all interesting. Permit me in an informal way to give a record of our journey beginning with Rotterdam, in Holland, from which the reader may form some idea of these countries. We landed in Rotterdam on the 25th of September, and had to wait several hours for the "trein"—long enough to see the statue of Erasmus, overlooking the market women selling fruit; the house in which he lived with a foot-high statue in the wall; the crooked streets, tall, narrow houses, numerous canals, and some nicer houses with looking glasses outside the windows to reflect the sights of the streets into the parlors. From Rotterdam to Utrecht, the country is "flatness flattened." Ditches full of water answer for fences around little pastures with sleek cattle feeding in them. Countless windmills pump the water from the ditches (to keep them from overflowing) into the sea. Here as in Germany the railroads are carefully guarded. Watchmen salute passing trains at short intervals (a mile or less) and every crossing has gates that are let down when a train passes, to keep off the teams. Contrary to the custom here, we concluded to rest on the Sabbath day at Utrecht. We attended "Jan's Kerk" and were very much interested in what we saw and heard except the sermon, which we did not fully understand. A man with his wife (and the rest of the family I believe) seated the audience. The gentlemen were taken to pews along the sides and behind the pulpit, where they stood or sat with their hats off or on, just as they liked; the ladies were expected to sit in the body of the church on feather cushions, in horrible straight-backed chairs. During the sermon two collections were taken in little black bags at the end of ten foot rods, which were waved over the heads and before the faces of the audience. The aisles had been filled so that one row of worshipers had to get up and hand their stools to their neighbors to make a way for the publicans. At the close the ushers collected their fees, occasionally pulling at the coat or dress of some absent-minded or absent-pursed body that tried to walk by without paying. In the afternoon large crowds walked along one of the sluggish canals. In the evening young men (most of them in soldiers' uniform) and ladies (?) crowded into bar-rooms, the interior of one of which was visible from our room in the hotel. They drank and sang till ten or eleven o'clock, and went home in pairs, making "night hideous" with their screams intended for singing. It was in very sad contrast with Sabbath scenes in Scotland and in some places in America. We never before felt ao strongly the value of our Puritan Sabbath and the dangers which threaten it. On Monday morning we climbed the cathedral tower, which stands alone a short distance from the "dom kerk." From the top we looked on Dutch landscapes stretched out for miles in every direction, until we were satisfied. The Prussian custom house officers on the frontier discharge a disagreeable duty very politely. They, as well as the railroad employees have a much more military bearing than in Holland. There is a marked change in the scenery as well. Forests are seen and the rivers wind in many a curve, while numerous villages dot the green landscape with their red tiled roofs, and mountains rise in the distance. Frequently the forests are of tall, straight-trunked pines planted in rows, which look strange enough to one accustomed to the wild woods of America. Our first stopping place was Wunstorf near Hanover. In answer to the door bell, mine host appeared with a light, and led us to rooms where we slept quite comfortably under piles of feathers. Next morning we breakfasted in a room with the "sanded" floor, and proceeded on our journey with the best wishes of our host. People are very fond of wishing each other a good bye, pleasant sleep and safe journey. Strangers may meet in a coupe, and ride together for an hour, without saying a word but when one gets out he is sure to say "adieu" to the rest. At Nieuburg, we were pleasantly entertained waiting for a carriage which stood across the street opposite our window. First the barn-door opened and the "kutschen" (driver) brought out the tongue and put it in place; after a long wait he came again and brought a whip and rug;—another pause during which the man's wife and children came out to examine the conveyance, finally the man came once more leading one horse, his wife followed with another, and the whole family proceeded to hitch them them to the carriage. The driver then mounted his seat, cracked his whip, and we were soon inside driving over the paved street towards Estorf. This is a pleasant, old fashioned "dorf," one of the many thousands that are scattered over Germany, in place of detached farm buildings. To get an idea of rural life here, the dorf should be carefully studied, but my space reminds me that I must close this letter in medias res.

The Ambition of Rome.

The Roman Catholic church, as a whole, is a dead weight on the wheels of civilization. It punishes inquiry as a sin. It trains its pupils in the bigotry of by-gone years. It is the deadly enemy of free speech, free press, free thought. It teaches that the citizen's first duty is to a foreign potentate. It is the chief stumbling-block in the path of progress. All this is true, despite the many noble men and women who have devoted their lives to the service of the Mother church. That church retains, in the nineteenth century, the habits and modes of thought of the sixteenth. Suppose this great organization should become the dominant power in Prussia, in Spain, in France, in England, and in America. In every case the State would become a mere adjunct to the church. This is the theory of Romanism. In Prussia, the liberal laws of the last thirty years would be repealed, and Protestant worship would be put under heavy restrictions. Catholicism would be taught in all the schools, taxes for the support of the church would be levied on all the people. In Spain, Don Carlos would become king and despot. The country would relapse into the barbarism that has been creeping over it ever since Catholicism finally triumphed over the Moors. In France, Henry V. would fling the white flag of the Bourbons from the palace-towers of Paris and Versailles. In England, the domains that Henry VIII. tore from the church's grasp would be seized again. In this country, our public-school system, the corner-stone of our prosperity, would be instantly destroyed. In each country the church would suppress, to the uttermost extent of her power, the teaching of any creed except its own, the giving of any instruction unflavored with Romanism, independent scientific research, free thought, and free speech.

In 1077, Henry IV. of Germany stood for three days by the castle of Canossa, barefooted and clad in haircloth, praying the proud Pontiff who had excommunicated him and so driven him from his throne to pardon his sins. Now William I. of Germany has virtually driven Gregory VII.'s successor from his temporal throne, and perhaps can, if he chooses to do so, name the successor to Pius IX. The tables are turned with a vengeance.—Tribune.

Christian Love Applied.

If you are a Mason are you truly saved? Have you not a secret dislike to those humble followers of Jesus who conscientiously denounce Masonry? Have you the same dislike to those brethren in the lodge, who are opposed to true heartfelt piety; or do you not cordially accept their fellowship? You shun one and seek the other. With this feeling, how can you be in a state of salvation? Read this: "Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother." Which brother? Masonic or Christian? To whom was the apostle writing? To the lodge? Can you claim to love those whom you dislike? "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." Yet you say you love God. "If a man say, I love God, and he hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother (whether that brother denounce secrecy or not,) whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen." Jesus says, "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." Did Jesus dislike any of his disciples; even Peter who denied him? "But you have no right to judge a man." Here is the test: "By this shall all men know (not judge) that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another."

Friend, do you know that a true Christian must love even his enemies? If, then you consider those who denounce Masonry your enemies, do they not demand your love? Is that feeling of dislike the spring of true charity? Are your motives pure for being connected with a secret society? "Of course, first, it makes me more charitable. I am bound to relieve my needy brethren. (In the lodge of course.) Secondly, I can get along in the world much better. I am more successful. I have more friends." From your latter motives I see your are not yet "dead to the world, and alive unto God." Remember, "The friendship of the world is enmity with God." To accept your former motives, is to deny the efficacy of the religion of the Bible to make "the man of God perfect and thoroughly furnished unto every good work; and if secrecy be a means of grace, when was it introduced as such; and by whom? Did Christ? Did the apostles? We are commanded to be diligent in the use of every other means of grace; why is this excluded if it be such?

Friend, we generally stand up most for what we love most. Which do you stand up for the most, salvation or secrecy? light or darkness? the church or the lodge? Which has the most of your time, money and influence? To which place do you most delight to go? Is not secrecy the idol of your heart? "Be not deceived . . . . no idolator shall inherit the kingdom of God."—Ex.

Opinions on War.

Ward, the missionary, says, "Either our religion is a fable, or there are unanswerable arguments against war and the profession of arms."

Dr. Payson says: "War is surrounded by a deceitful luster: but let the monster's hideous form be exposed in its true colors, and it will be an honor to Christianity, a powerful argument in her favor, to be known as his most decided and successful foe."

Sir William Napier recognized the necessity of flogging in war, because WAR AFTER ALL IS A MOMENT WHEN MEN ARE DEVILS LET LOOSE.

Ralph Waldo Emerson says: "War is on its last legs, and a universal peace is as sure as the prevalence of civilization over barbarism, of liberal government over feudal forms. The question for us is only how soon?"

Charles Sumner, in his address before the American Peace Society says: "Peace is the grand Christian Charity—the fountain and parent of all other charities. Let Peace be removed and all other charities sicken and die. Where Peace is not, Christianity cannot be."

Sydney Smith says: "The greatest curse that can be entailed on mankind is a state of war. All the attrocious crimes committed in years of peace, all that is spent in peace by the secret corruptions, or by the thoughtless extravagance of nations, are mere trifles compared with the gigantic evils which stalk over this world in a state of war: God is forgotten in war; every principle of Christianity is trampled upon."

MR. E. RONAYNE, Past Master of Keystone lodge, 639, Chicago, Illinois delivered two lectures in the City Hall in Syracuse, on Friday and Saturday evenings of last week, against the principles and practices of Freemasonry. The first evening he initiated a candidate into the Entered Apprentice degree. For this purpose he had a regular constituted lodge, with aprons, gavels and staff, altar, Bible, and square, compasses, and the "three lesser lights of Masonry." He also had an anteroom for preparation, and a candidate in it. This candidate 'duly and truly prepared," at length was led into the lodge, and in due time was "brought to light." The second night he represented the Master's lodge, and a candidate "brought to light" in it. The killing of Hiram Abiff, his burial, the execution of the murderers as a Masonic duty, and the raising of Hiram from the dead, or in Masonic langnage, "from a dead level to a living perpendicular on the five points of fellowship, with the strong grip of the lion's paw" were represented. During these evenings there was probably not one person present but felt that Mr. Ronayne was thoroughly acquainted with Freemasonry, and had, as represented, taken many candidates into the lodge. The speaker moralized also with telling effect upon the character of the institution. The crowded auditory was wrapped as in a spell, while they saw the institution of secretism swept like a mountaineer's hut before an avalanche, or as a thistle-down borne on a billow of air.—*Am. THE HEALTH REFORMER is a family journal on health topics that well deserves mention. Although in some points it may seem to advocate extreme views, yet it is full of useful information on this important branch of home economy, and is well worth reading in every family. One dollar a year; address, Health Reformer, Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SANITARIAN is a health journal of the first class, treating of disease and its causes in the most philosophical way. The December number has articles on Relations of Sex to Health and Longevity, Infant Diet, Relations of Inebriety to Public Health, Preventable Sickness, and School-room Stunting. McDivitt, Campbell & Co., publishers, New York.

THE GALAXY has articles of interest in biographical sketches of Walter Savage Landor and Balzac, the French author; Through Utah is continued and the Marriage Question is discussed in its economic and physiological features. Sheldon & Co., New York.

Wisconsin.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will be held in the Wesleyan Methodist church at Sugar Creek, Walworth Co., Wis., on Wednesday and Thursday, the 2d and 3d of Feb., 1876. Elkhorn is the nearest rail road station. Teams will be in readiness, after the arrival of trains, to carry delegates to the place of meeting. Efforts will be made to secure able speakers for the occasion.

By order of the

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Freemen of Pennsylvania, Attention!

After much perplexing correspondence and toil on our part we have at last come to the following conclusion on the subject of our State Convention: To hold it at SCRANTON, on TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, THE 21ST, AND 22ND, of DEC. present; and have engaged Edmond Ronayne to assist us in said meeting in his accustomed way. We also expect the General Agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, and many other able men of our own State to be with us, while we earnestly invite all friends of our cause in other States to co-operate and work with us. Anti-secret men of Pennsylvania, North, South, East and West are urgently invited to work with us in this conflict with the foes of our Republican institutions, and of real Christianity. Never have the "elect of God" been called to confront a more ingenious and imposing type of demonism than this Masonic anti-Christ; while its "seed is as the sand of the sea for multitude." The design of the enemy is to mould every man, woman and child into some one of the forms of lodgeism, embraced in that diabolically grand "man of sin and mystery of iniquity," who exalteth and "opposeth himself to all that is called God." Justice has indeed fallen in our streets and judgment fled from our tribunals. Many of them condemn the innocent and justify and even flatter the guilty.

In view of such cases multiplied a hundred fold in our country, shall we not awake to our danger? To remain inactive while this foe eats out the vitals of our political and religious life is criminal madness, bordering on treason to our country and to our God. Have the masses of our people gone into judicial blindness, a sure prelude to our national doom? Once more we call on the anti-secret men of the Keystone State to rally to the annual meeting at Scranton, Pa., on the 21st and 22nd of this month, at 1 o'clock P. M., at Panooka Hall.

When we organized at Wilkesbarre, one esteemed and aged brother, John Jones, of Phoenixville, was with us with countenance all aglow with Heaven's light. It was inspiring to all present to see the almost celestial beam on his furrowed face. Alive in every needed reform of his time, he has departed to be with Christ "who is our life," that when he shall appear he may also appear with him in glory. Well, may we repeat a sentiment uttered in his obituary: "Who is there to take his place?"

Rally from the "City of Brotherly Love;"
Rally from hillside valley and grove;
Rally from the "City of Smoke;"
Rally thy soul, the Spirit invoke;
Rally ye churches, "set on an hill;"
Rally ye heralds of God's revealed will;
Rally men of the press, your duty fulfill;
Rally in God's strength, go up and prevail.

Reform News.

First News from the Rochester Convention.

[From a private business letter of Mr. Ronayne to the publishers we are permitted to take the following. Expect letters of unusual interest from Elder Barlow next week.—ED.]

ROCHESTER, Dec 9, 1875.

MY DEAR FRIEND COOK: The New York State Convention is over, and I will say positively that the present generation will pass away before the meetings here shall be forgotten.

On Tuesday evening Corinthian Hall was full, every seat being occupied, containing about 1200 to 1500 persons; but last night every part of the hall was literally packed and from 500 to 800 persons had to go away, not being able to gain admission. Bro. Barlow will write up these meetings and I presume the meetings at Syracuse. I must come back here again in February and work the degrees in the greater part of this region. God is working wonderfully.

After my terrible task last night and night before last, I feel wearied and nervous this morning. I feel that I am here in the midst of secret oath-bound ruffians, who would take my life at the first chance. I go from here to Batavia, from there on Monday to Geneva, from Geneva to Spencer, thence to Scranton. May the Almighty God accompany me and be a guide and protector both on my right hand and on my left. If he don't save me from all my enemies, both spiritual and physical, then I am lost indeed, and may He protect my family while I am away, and guide them to do right. Hoping all your family are well, especially the little one who was sick, and that the good Lord will direct and bless and keep us all in safety till our work is done, I am very respectfully,

E. RONAYNE.

Intelligent, united, earnest action in this reform has always proved successful, but such action is utterly impossible without the means of communication and intelligence afforded by the Cynosure. In no other way can such a vast amount of information be secured for the same outlay as by the circulation of the Cynosure.

Incidents by the Way from the Indiana Agent.

Taking my leave of brother Huston and family I arrived at a brick schoolhouse six miles north of Lafayette, on Monday evening, Nov. 15th, where our good young friend Steinspring had made an appointment for me to speak. The audience was large and attentive, and I hope good seed was sown to fructify in the future. On Tuesday morning I drove through Lafayette, on through New Romney and Crawfordsville, and just at dark drew up in front of the residence of Rev. George Surface, of the U. B. church; I had now driven forty miles through the coldest day of the season; was thoroughly chilled, and so the people six miles west where an appointment had been made, were disappointed. I met Rev. Thomas Hamilton, a Presiding Elder of the Upper Wabash Conference, here. He seems to be opposed to Masonry. Bro. Surface is an old pioneer of his church, and true to her principles. He has read the Cynosure and worked for it for a long time.

After a pleasant rest and visit, and arranging work for the future, I started for Hillsboro, where I spoke in the school-house to a good audience, on Wednesday evening, the 17th. The trustees of the M. E. church had given their consent to the use of their church, but Masons swore that if they allowed it to be used they would never pay any more, and so they turned short about, and soon a singing-school was arranged to keep the young people away. Here I met friends in Rev. Rynearson, Carder, David on, Beaver, and many others. A strong current is in motion against the lodge in Hillsboro, and is met as usual by attempts to intimidate, which are not successful here.

On Thursday I came over to Veedersburg. Here brother Wm. Hoobler had arranged for the use of the large hall and posted the hand-bills, and good audiences were expected. Thinking I would come by rail, brother Hoobler had made arrangements with Rev. Dice, a U. B. minister, to meet me at the depot and take me to his house. But he did not once put in his appearance, and the U. B. pastor, Mr. Watson, had entered into a protracted "union" meeting with a Masonic Methodist preacher, with a full knowledge of the lectures. The audience was slim, and so in justice to the friends and myself only two meetings were held. I trust however, that some of the good seed fell upon good ground. I spent Sabbath in the country near brother Hoobler's, where I preached twice to good congregations in a school-house, I took dinner with the father of Hon. Dan Voorhes, who is a member of the U. B. church.

I stayed over night with brother Miller, a good German brother living near brother H.'s and in the morning started for Bloomingdale, where I arrived toward evening, and put up with Rev. A. D. Tomlinson, of the Friend's Society. In the evening I spoke to a very interesting audience in the Friend's church. A large number of the students in attendance at the Academy of which Prof. Barnabas C. Hobbs has for many years been principal, were in the audience. After the lecture, Bro. Hobbs made some well-timed remarks on the ensnaring nature of the "mysteries" which seem to find a fruitful soil in the "carnal mind." He alluded with much force to the bad influence of college secret societies, and declared we must join in the work of putting these orders down. Bro. Hobbs is a dignified, scholarly man, speaks in an easy graceful manner, always saying just enough to express exactly what he means. The National Association could do nothing that would add more to its influence than to secure the presence of, and an address from Prof. Hobbs, formerly Superintendent of Public Instruction for Indiana, and one of the trustees of the State Normal School at this time. I am glad to be able to report that the Friends as a body in Indiana are moving toward active work against the lodge Dagon. I feel more and more in love with them as a people. God bless and prosper them.

At Coloma, six miles from Bloomingdale, I spoke in the Friend's church on the following evening to a large congregation, who listened attentively, while for an hour and a half I showed the conflict between the fundamental principles of the orders, and those of our free, civil and religious institutions. After meeting I sold some books, got five new subscribers to the Cynosure, and was urged to "come back again." I really begin to think I am improving as a lecturer. Why? Because I used to be unable to please the Quaker Anti-masons. They would shake their heads and say: "Thee is right, friend Kiggins, and I like thy lectures very well, but I think thee should be a little milder." Brother Mattoon once said, "Brother K——, give them hard arguments in soft words." I've been trying to profit by these kind hints. I will next give you an account of my work at Terre Haute, and in the south part of the State. JOHN T. KIGGINS.

Notes from the Illinois Agent.

PRAIRIE CITY, McDonough Co., Nov. 30, 1875.

DEAR BRO. K.—The village of Roseville, on the R. R. I. & St. L. R. R., is a place of growing importance with a population in and surrounding it of more than average intelligence and moral culture. It has four churches, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist Episcopal and Christian. I became acquainted with three of the pastors, two of whom, Rev. J. D. Wyckoff of the Cong'l and Rev. J. W. Coe of the M. E. church are, besides being men of ability, much beloved of their people and known friends of our reform. The pastor of the Baptist church, Elder Kent, informed me that he had been a Mason for years and was a lecturer on Masonry. He told me that it was not true that the name of Christ was excluded from the ritual of the lodge. He said that he had a copy of Webb's Monitor, published in 1792, in which the name of Christ occurred in the ritual of each of the first three degrees. I asked him to let me see it, as I was anxious to know the truth about this matter; but he would not. He said there was nothing secret in it, but I had made statements in my lecture that hurt his feelings and he was unwilling to oblige me. I disclaimed all intention of hurting his feelings as I knew nothing of him, or that he was present; and I told him that I was now more than ever convinced that Masonry destroyed a man's candor and Christian simplicity. I would like to know of any reader of the Cynosure if the old editions of Webb do mention the name of Christ in the ritual of the Blue Lodge?

I lectured twice in the Congregational church and though the nights were very dark, there was a good audience the first evening, and on the second the house was full below and in the gallery. Some of the Masonic brethren were greatly excited, and interrupted me repeatedly. It seemed very strange and wicked to them that anybody should assail their institution or presume to talk of its secrets. This was the first time it had been done in that place, though four lectures had been given in defense of Masonry, two by a Cong'l minister and two by Mrs. DeGeer. Anti-masons did not interrupt them and supposed they had the same right to a hearing.

Among the testimonies which I was able to give to the people of the correctness of our representations of Masonry was that of Mr. Elijah Bushnell, well known in that community as an intelligent and truthful man, who gave me his certificate that when he was a young man he watched through a hole in the wall the proceedings of a Masonic lodge until he learned their oaths and ceremonies and was able to repeat them, and that they were correctly given by Morgan and others. Seven new names were here obtained for the Cynosure, and the way has been opened for a revival of pure and undefiled religion. I preached on Sabbath evening in the Cong'l church, and came here yesterday and spoke to a small audience in the Cong'l church. The night was co'd, but I was cheered with the presence and sympathy of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Worrell, and also of the Baptist minister. I expect to lecture again this evening at this place and to spend the week in this vicinity.

Yours for the Lord,
H. H. HINMAN.

Friends Woodring and Smith at Horton, Bremer Co., Iowa.

On the 2d of October, Mr. Peter Woodring from Waverly (of this county), lectured in the F. W. B. church in this place to a large and respectable audience; Subject, Freemasonry, its character and Tendency. Mr. Woodring, though only a beginner in public speaking, did justice both to himself and audience; what he said was to the point and well proved. On Sabbath evening a large audience convened to hear from Mr. Woodriug on the subject, Freemasonry and Religion, which was ably discussed and well received, and without a doubt convinced many of the truth that Freemasonry is anti-Christ. Several Masons were in attendance at these lectures, and one would judge from their conversation and the uneasiness they manifested during the exercises, that the audience were learning more Masonry than they themselves knew. After the lecture, Mr. Woodring requested of the audience whether, in his next meeting with them he should lecture or go through an initiatory ceremony? His request was answered in favor of the latter, and accordingly on the 16th of October a large and expectant audience were congregated to witness the initiation of a candidate into the first degree of Masonry. Mr. Woodring was aided in this by Mr. Adam Smith from Waverly, a very strong Anti-mason, who has also delivered several lectures throughout the county. The exercises were highly interesting to the people; first, because they were well conducted; and second because they were witnessing what was worthy to be witnessed only by "free and accepted Masons." After the initiatory exercises, Mr. Smith spoke a short time, giving in a very clear and interesting manner, a short account of the political and religious condition of his native country (Germany), comparing Jesuitism, as it is there, to what Freemasonry may become here. Many other interesting and important things were said. It would be impossible in a short letter, to do justice to the interesting exercises. A good work has been done, and people have been brought to think deeply upon the subject, and we trust for the better. JEREMIAH GEORGE.

DUNCAN, Ill., Nov. 25th, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As your readers have not heard from this part of the State for some length of time, I will give a brief account of the work here. Bro. Hinman, our State Agent, was with us four or five days last week. Coming here fresh from the Peoria meeting, he was all alive with zeal for the reform work. As no arrangements were made for lecturing, he and the writer went to the village of Duncan, secured a suitable building, announced he lecture for the same evening, and the following one. But as the weather was somewhat unfavorable, and having been announced but a short time, the attendance was small. However, the next evening there were a few more present. But I find the lecture has caused some stir in the town.

The next two evenings were at the U. B. church three miles west of Duncan, where Bro. Hinman lectured to a very good audience both evenings; there being some of the craft there each time, but no disturbance. Bro. Norman, the present pastor of that place, is in full sympathy with the cause, and was well pleased with the lectures.

The day following Bro. Hinman went to Princeville, a railroad town some eight miles from the church. Although there are a few Anti-masons in that place, the trustees and directors closed their doors against the light. One Methodist member told Bro. Hinman that he had better be at home, or at better business, that he was causing discord, and family troubles, etc. When will the day come when professors of one holy religion will be free and unspotted from the world!

From here he went to Wyoming; but as he bade me farewell for the time being, I do not know the result there. From thence he goes to Warren Co., where we will hear from him by and by. May the good Lord go with him.

H. C. STOUGHTON.

The Cynosure not only contains overwhelmingly conclusive arguments against secretism, but gives a faithful report of the efforts being made in all parts of our nation for the overthrow of secret societies and the success attending such labors, as well as the best means to be used in prosecuting this work, as suggested by the combined experience of these laborers.

Correspondence.

How Anti-lodge Churches are Formed.

EAGLE HARBOR, N. Y., Nov. 30, '75.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am an old, crippled man, living on borrowed time; for the last eighteen months have been confined to my bed most of the time.

I gave my heart to God when a child and in striving to carry out his precepts I came in contact with the Morgan tragedy. On examination we found our offices of trust were filled with Masons. We at our next election turned out all, even down to the path-master. We on our next examination found about the same state of things in the church, which was the Methodist Episcopal, large and flourishing. Some of us felt unwilling to sit under a Masonic teacher, and sent a remonstrance against such a man being sent us from our annual conference. Notwithstanding our wishes a Mason was sent us. The next year one of our most influential and wealthy members, Bro. Parsons, refused to support a Mason, consequently he was taken up and tried by the preacher in charge and two secret society members. The only charges ever brought against him was refusing to support the Masonic minister. He was subsequently turned out of the church. Poor Bro. Parsons, an old man, died without the pale of the visible church.

Another case. On the appointment at Eagle Harbor, of which I was then a member, J. R. Spoor, a licensed preacher and poor mechanic, held a series of meetings some six weeks and had over one hundred conversions, some sixty of whom united with the M. E. society. There was talk of his being ordained, but he stated that no slave-holding or secret society bishop would ever lay his hand on his head; consequently at our next quarterly conference his license to preach was withheld.

From these circumstances a small faction of us withdrew and formed ourselves into the Wesleyan Methodist church. We then built us a church at this place and one four miles from here. The Lord has been with us and added to our numbers such as we trust will be saved. Not so with the flourishing M. E. society. They are now reduced in numbers almost to a corporal's guard; unable scarcely to support a minister without calling in the aid of Masons. The present incumbent of the pulpit is an ex-Wesleyan minister, who left the Wesleyans to join the Masons.

I prize the Cynosure highly and shall send the renewal for my paper and as many more as I can, by the first of Jan. If you think it advisable, I will give in my next a sketch of the pretended benevolence of Freemasonry that has come under my observation in past years. Yours truly,

AARON PHIPPS.

[Send on all such experiences, brother.—ED.]

A Masonic "Light" begins to Speak Truly.

MASON CITY, Iowa, Nov. 23, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Masonry is compelled to come down in her pretensions to antiquity. At their great powwow lately held at Keokuk, Iowa, when the benevolence of their great hearts compelled them to spend $3,000 in show and parade in one night, and where their piety compelled them to spend a whole night in carousal and dancing, Prof. Parvin of Iowa City, who assisted when I was made a Royal Arch Mason, and who, I believe, is one of the pillars of the church in that city, in an address was more severe in his criticisms of those who claim Masonic antiquity than any "anti" lecturer I ever read of. He does not hesitate to call them liars; tells them that sensible people are being disgusted with such stuff, and advises the truth to be told in the future by all their orators; admits that the ancient worthies, that Masons have boasted of so much in order to give their system character, knew nothing of Masonry; admits that its history cannot be traced back two centuries and the oldest Masonic work was published less than one hundred years ago. He says that Solomon with all his wisdom knew no more of Masonry than the Queen who made him a visit, and that the St Johns were equally ignorant upon this subject. He admits that it had its origin in Europe (but says nothing about the grog shop as being the place); takes the position that the higher orders of the institution are all surplus stuff gotten up by men who had more ambition than honesty, and are purely American, are not universal and cannot be.

This is the testimony of one high in these orders, but who is driven (if not willingly) to publicly expose (or acknowledge) the falsehood of all their claims of antiquity, thereby admitting one of two things, viz.: that these Masonic teachers (so-called), with the great Rob. Morris at their head, are, and have been lying, or were so ignorant that they did not know better. In either case Masonry must feel humiliated; and I for one would conclude it all a humbug, now, if I had not sense enough to see it before. Where the doctors so disagree, who is to decide. Let there be more light.

Washington's Farewell Advice.

MORRISON, Ill., Nov. 27, 1875.

Lately there is much said about Washington's farewell address. I have a little book called the Scholar's Manual, containing the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, and Washington's Farewell Address; printed in 1837, in N. Y. I will give you his language as recorded on page 57, Sec. 17, given under the head of "Irregular Opposition to Authorities:"

"All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character with the real design to divert, control, counteract or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force, to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation, the will of a party, often a small, but artful and enterprising minority of the community; and according to the alternate triumphs of different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill-concerted and incongruous projects of faction, rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans digested by common councils, and modified by mutual interest.

SEC. 18. However combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be able to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government; destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion."

I have never seen this in the Cynosure, and if you think its insertion will further the cause of truth, you may dispose of it as you like. If Washington did not mean Masonry and secretism I don't understand the force of language. Yours for truth, O. S.

Other Convention Echoes.

We experienced a ripple of the sluggish waters by the flight through this place of Pres. Blanchard of Wheaton College. He seemed like a live coal, all aglow, as if just from the altar. To us it seemed like an angel visit which had soon departed. But short as it was it did more in the way of moving the placid waters than half a dozen like Mr. Holcomb and myself in a week. Still we shall never be able to get the ice broken so the waters can flow freely until we are able to get some lectures.

I received the last number [of the Cynosure], and was glad to find an article from Mrs. E. A. Cook. Should judge from its tone that she was at the Convention, and from her description of the churches and things at Peoria, I was much interested and instructed, especially in the points of diffsrence between the regular Episcopal church and the Reformed church given in detail, concerning which I was in the dark. I always feel that I have made an important discovery when I have learned the true condition and standing of a church with whom I have not been familiar, from a reliable source. I know then about where to place them in the scale of orthodoxy when compared with the true standard, the Word of God, and do them no injustice by mistake.

Now as the case appears to me, the watchword from every pulpit in the land and every press that lays any claim to religion or morality should be, Reform, Reform, until the sound thereof like the great trumpet that waxed louder and stronger shall be heard through all the earth, and the great walls of anti-Christ in every form shall come tumbling down as of old, and the saints and people of the Most High, under the leadership of the great Captain of their salvation, Jesus Christ, who is King of kings and Lord of lords, shall arise to possess the kingdom. Very truly,

H. M. BAILEY.

Responsibility of Religious Teachers.

CHICAGO, Nov., 23, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

With much interest I have read the columns of your excellent paper, the principles of which must and will triumph.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again,
The eternal years of God are hers:
But error, wound, writhes in pain,
And dies amid her worshipers."

A better name for your paper could not have been chosen; which is a center of attraction, or a standard for the people. Around this standard, as a nation, we must rally or the blood of our fathers who fought for liberty was shed in vain. Our government is in the hands of men who chose darkness rather than light, which proves our deeds to be evil. And the fact that a large number of our ministry have joined hands with the Dragon proves precisely what has been so often proved, that they are false teachers, blind leaders of the blind, of whom Christ said they should both fall into the ditch. In the dark ages there might have been an apology for such a course, but not in this day with the light of the Gospel, and the testimony of its author, who said, "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue and in the temple whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing." As in other days, the mouths of such men are filled with a lying spirit, being clad with scarlet and fine linen and faring sumptuously, and while feasting upon the widow's tear and the orpan's cry, they say, Peace, peace, when there is no peace to the wicked, saith my God. By them, this falsehood has been long and repeatedly uttered. For more than two hundred years they told us that slavery was a divine institution, and sanctioned by the golden rule. Many years His voice was heard saying, Let my people go, but like the proud king, they said, "Who is the Lord that I should obey his voice to let Israel go, I know not the Lord, neither will I let Israel go." It is no less true that the responsibility of the attempt to cross the Red Sea rests upon the head of the blind and ignorant king, than that for the crime of slavery with all its fearful results, the ministry of the nation is greatly responsible. "Woe be unto the pastors that scatter and destroy the sheep of my pasture, saith the Lord."

Modern Masonry with all its hellish designs and craftiness is most clearly demonstrated by St. John in the image of the beast which had the wound by a sword and did live, claiming the worship of all nations, and causing all, "both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads; and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name."—Rev. xiii. 16, 17.

OUR MAIL.

E. Osborn, Decatur, Ill., writes:

"I feel like clinging still closer to our cause."

Justus Miller, Pikeville, Ind., writes:

"I have never belonged to a secret organization and have always fought them, but the Cynosure enables me to fight with success. Please don't let me miss a copy, for these initiations are doing the work that we need here."

Winfield Hines, Amo, Ind., writes:

"The enemies of the cause have things almost their own way here now."

W. N. Hartupee, Crown Point, Ind., writes:

"The old "handmaid of the church" (?) has her annual ball at this place next Friday evening. This will be a scene of which Masonic church members ought to be ashamed."

Silvester Coon, Hampton, Iowa, writes:

"Masons are flourishing. Their opposers are roused to action."

D. W. Cunningham, Solomon Rapids, Kan., writes:

"Crops are exceedingly good this year."

C. Hepler, Mendon, Pa., writes:

"I love the Cynosure for two reasons, first, because I believe it is a means in the hands of God in spreading the truth as taught in the word of God; and secondly, because I believe it is one of the best means of defence of the principles of our church (U. B. in Christ) on the secrecy question."

Susannah G. Reed, North Hannibal, N. Y., writes:

"As I am past seventy-one years I cannot expect to aid much longer, but our blessed Saviour Jesus Christ, I trust, will stand at the helm until all his enemies are put under his feet."

J. J. Fait, Canton, Ohio, writes:

"I hope to see the day when there will be an active anti-secret association in this county of which I can be a member."

P. B. Williams, Pleasant Plain, Ohio, writes:

"I give my papers to others to read. I think I have about converted one Mason."

A friend writes:

"I have made out to trade a Cynosure for potatoes. A neighbor takes the paper and I take the potatoes, as I could not get the money."

We hope others will follow his example when similarly situated.

Mrs. M. H. Truesdale, Trempeleau, Wis. writes:

"My mother takes your paper. She is strongly opposed to Masonry, having lived in the time of the Morgan abduction and with my father, George Huli, was the means of the secession of at least two acting Masons, one a minister of the Gospel. They were in the thickest of the fight. Father died at the age of ninety years. Mother has just passed her ninety-third birthday, in good health, and still bearing fruit."

Geo. W. Champ, Marion, Ind., writes:

"We want C. A. Blanchard here at Fairmount, and New Castle, Henry Co., Ind., as soon as we can make proper arrangements."

Wm. Slosson, Chenango Bridge, N. Y., writes:

"I am trying to do what I can to get the paper into the hands of as many families as possible for a short time, hoping and knowing that when once taken they will not readily discontinue it. The paper rings out no uncertain notes against one of the greatest evils we have in our country, Masonry. Go on with your good work and you cannot fail to convince thinking persons of the justness of your position."

N. S. Reigel, Auburn, Ill., writes:

"I will try and get some subscribers for the Cynosure."

We hope you will succeed. The State meeting will be held at your place next September, and by that time we trust there will be many readers of the Cynosure in your vicinity who will take a great interest in our convention.

Geo. Avery, Galesburg, Ill., writes:

"Robert Hall is a graduate of Knox College. His father and family were from North Carolina. They came to Plymouth with their slaves and bought land when it was new and cheap to settle their slaves on and give them their freedom. He was so persecuted that he could not do so and had to go to some Eastern State with his family and slaves and leave his land in Plymouth. He was gone 16 or 18 years and settled his colored people and then returned with his family to Plymouth, occupied and improved his land and died there. Mr. Hall is the youngest of the family and is now living and teaching and preaching to the colored people in the same town or county that his father and mother and older brothers and sisters moved from. So we see that God will accomplish his doings if his children are true and faithful, though men and devils rage. He told me that many of the black people were joining the Masons and wished some of the Anti-masons would send him some books on Masonry as they have nothing in the library on the subject. I stated the circumstances to some of our friends and have got $8.50 to send to you for that purpose."

The topic for the day covering all the lessons for the quarter, it will be noticed, is: "Twelve reasons for our faith." The first division is called "Four Fruit Reasons," and the aptness of the title is reflected in the Scripture quotation, "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit." The first of these reasons for our faith is that that has taken place which, in speaking of himself as a corn of wheat, he said would come to pass: "If it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." It has brought forth much fruit and so that is one good "fruit-reason" for our faith. The next is that the religion he taught and the example he gave make us bear the fruit of humility. And nothing else does or will. Hence that is another good "fruit-reason." Another good reason is that when we believe in God and in Christ our hearts are no longer "troubled." In his house are many mansions where sorrow does not come. Joy is a good fruit. And the lesson of the Vine and the Branches teaches us that we can have no fruit unless we abide in him. "Who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" And that is one of the best of fruit-reasons for believing in him.

The four heart-reasons are: 1st.—Joy in the heart (15: 11); 2d.—The Spirit's presence in the heart (16: 7); 3d.—That we are kept, sanctified, and made one of heart with the brethren, by the Father (17: 12-21); 4.—His kingdom within us—we "hear" his voice. The last four are called "miracle-reasons" because the last three are miraculous appearances, well attested, and the first more miraculous than either of them, both in his behavior on the cross and the signs and wonders that took place at his death. The speakers who take up these three divisions should aim especially to show how each one sets forth and proves the divinity of Christ.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

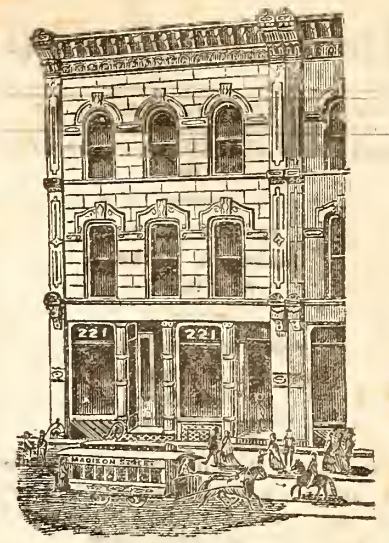
Week of Prayer.

The Evangelical Alliance suggests the following topics for meditation and prayer on the successive days of the Week of Prayer, 1876: Sunday, Jan. 2.—Sermon:—The love of God perfected in him "who keepeth his word." Monday, Jan. 3d.—Thanksgiving and Confession:—A retrospect of the past year. Tuesday, Jan. 4th.—Prayer for the Church of Christ:—For the members recently added to the church; for the union of true believers in fraternal fellowship and active co-operation; for the removal of error, the increase of godliness, and a clearer testimony among believers to the doctrines and power of the Gospel of the grace of God. Wednesday, Jan. 5th.—Prayer for Families:—For godless parents; for prodigal sons; for children at school; for those entering upon professional and commercial life; for widows and orphans; for sons and daughters in foreign lands; and for all who are mentally or otherwise afflicted. Thursday, Jan. 6.h.—Prayer for Rulers, Magistrates, and Statesmen —For soldiers and sailors; for national institutions; for philanthropic and charitable societies; for prisoners and captives; and for the prosecuted and oppressed. Friday, Jan. 7th.—Prayer for Christian Missions:—And for the conversion of the world to Christ. Saturday, Jan. 8th.—Prayer for all Nations:—For the maintenance of peace; for the cessation of tumults, wars and civil strife; and for the removal of intemperance, immorality, and infidelity from the land. Sunday, Jan. 9th.—Sermons:—The ultimate Triumph. Ps. lxxvii. 17.

Home and Health Hints.

CATCHING COLD.—At a time of the year when sudden changes of temperature are frequent, Professor Rosenthal's researches on the effects of such changes cannot fail to be useful and interesting to our readers. An account of his investigations was originally published in the Detroit Review of Medicine, and a synopsis of his results has been published in the Popular Science Monthly.

It has long been known that colds are produced by sudden changes from a higher to a lower temperature and not by lowness of temperature. Cooling the surface of a healthy animal causes the cutaneous vessels to contract and the blood is then prevented from circulating in the skin, and confined to the interior of the body, where it does not readily lose its heat, but serves to supply warmth to the vital organs. If the animal be exposed to heat, the cutaneous vessels become dilated and remain so after exposure to cold. The blood is thus largely exposed over a wide surface, and becomes rapidly cooled, even though the temperature of the surrounding medium is not very low. A sudden passing from a heated room into the cold outer air rapidly cools the blood below the normal degree. On its return to the internal organs they are cooled much more quickly than they would have been were not the vessels dilated by previous warmth. Thus the sudden cooling of the blood produces an irritating effect, or induces inflammation in a way that a gradual alteration would not do.



According to these investigations of Professor Rosenthal, it appears that to produce the evil results the change must be from above to below the normal temperature. This is contrary to what we suppose to be the generally received opinion, that a sudden change of temperature from lower to higher, as well as from higher to lower, may produce these effects. It has been advanced by many that colds are contracted quite as often in passing from the cool outer air into a warm room as in any other way. In other words, that "we catch heat" quite as frequently as we 'catch cold." Professor Rosenthal's researches seem effectually to have disposed of this idea.

The effect of a chill in causing inflammation may be due partly to the effect of cold on the tissues themselves, and partly to the congestion (hyperœmia) which will occur in some parts when the fluid is driven out of others by the contraction of others. The first of these effects is, according to Professor Rosenthal, of most importance. From these considerations it is easy to understand why it is that frequent bathing or sponging with cold water enables one to bear sudden changes of weather with impunity. The tone of the vessels is improved by these cold applications, and therefore, when exposed to heat, they are not so relaxed that they cannot sufficiently contract when necessary.—Chris. Union.

RECEIPT FOR PRESERVING MEAT.—There is no good reason why farmers and their families should eat so much salt pork, leaving all the fresh meat to the inhabitants of cities and villages, when the following method will keep meat fresh for weeks even in the warmest weather. I have tried it for several years. As soon as the animal heat is out of the meat, slice it up ready for cooking. Prepare a large jar by scalding it well with hot salt and water. Mix salt and pulverized saltpeter. Cover the bottom of the jar with a sprinkle of salt and pepper. Put down a layer of meat, sprinkle with salt and pepper the same as if it was just going to the table, and continue in this manner until the jar is full. Fold a cloth or towel and wet it in strong salt and water in which a little of the saltpeter is dissolved. Press the cloth closely over the meat and set it in a cool place. Be sure and press the cloth in tightly as each layer is removed, and your meat will keep for months. It is a good plan to let the meat remain over night, after it is sliced, before packing. Then drain off all the blood that oozes from it. It will be necessary to change the cloth occasionally, or take it off and wash it first in cold water, then scald in salt water as at first. In this way farmers can have fresh meat all the year round. I have kept beef that was killed the 12th of February till the 21st of June. Then I packed a large jar of veal in the same way during the dog days, and kept it six weeks. This receipt alone is worth the price of any newspaper in the land. —Ex.

EXTRACT OF LEMON.—Best alcohol one pint; oil of lemon one oz.; peel of two lemons. Break the peels and put in with the others for a few days; then remove them. It costs but a trifle compared with that which is kept for sale at the stores.

IOWA GINGER SNAPS.—Take a coffee cup, put in three tablespoonsful of boiling water, one teaspoonful of ginger, half a teaspoonful of soda, three tablespoonsful of butter or lard, and fill the cup with molasses. Mix up and roll out thin.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. The terms of the donation are that $30,000 shall be raised by Apr. 1, 1878, to carry on the work of the Association. Send contributions to Treasurer of the N. C. A.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—Philo Carpenter.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. H. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, O. F. Lumry, C. A. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, I. R. B. Arnold, E. S. Cook.

COR. SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard.

TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg

GEN. AG'T & LECTURER—J. P. Stoddard

—The object of this Association as expressed in its constitution is:—"To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform to aid the Association in either of these ways: (1) to establish a Publishing House and Head-quarters in Chicago; (2) to carry on the general work; (3) to maintain the State agents. All donations (drafts or P.O. orders) should be sent to the Treasurer; general correspondence, etc., direct to the Corresponding Secretary. Address both at 13 Wabash Ave. Chicago.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of——dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be a sufficient discharge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY DEC. 16, 1875.

PLATFORM AND NOMINATIONS FOR 1876.

FOR PRESIDENT
James B. Walker,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
Donald Kirkpatrick,
of New York.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and heir oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by article 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced.

9. That the Government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

$1.50 A YEAR IN CLUBS OF 10

Our special offer of the Cynosure to Clubs of 10 or more (old or new) at $1.50 expires January 1st, 1876.
Have you sent in a Club yet?—You have only a few days to work in, but now is the time to work

MOODY AND MASONRY.

At our last interview I urged on Mr. Moody that his labors would be evanescent and superficial, unless he distinctly and openly assailed the oaths, blasphemies and idolatries of the lodges. That if it was his duty to call whiskey, "that infernal stuff," his gospel must be set against the more "infernal stuff" of the organized deism and devil-worship of the lodges that cover and curse not only this country, but the globe. Paul assailed just such "infernal stuff" at Mar's Hill and at Ephesus, Acts xix. 19; and Christ everywhere, as when he condemned the Samaritan "stuff" on the well at Sychar, and when he assailed "traditions" and "commandments of men" which were the exact transcripts, and spiritual identities of modern lodge-worship. Mr. Moody listened thoughtfully and replied, "Well, if it is my duty the Master will show it to me." He, however, goes on the ground of the Western Holiness Association, hoping to kill off the lodge-worships by what Chalmers called, "The expulsive power of religious affections." He and they will find themselves mistaken; and that Christ and his apostles, guided by the Holy Ghost, were better Christian philosophers than they.

They said, "Let us convert the slave-holders and slavery will cease." They filled the churches with slave-holders, but slavery did not cease, but, as Albert Barnes showed, grew greener under God's altars. So will Freemasonry be strengthened by the Moody and Sankey revivals and the ground must all be fought over. Still their's is but the advance-wave of the coming deluge of light, and love, and holiness, which is to wash out the foul false-worships which are the last "strongholds" of Satan which will yield. God grant the spurious worships may yield to truth and save us from another national baptism of blood such as wiped out slavery.

SANCTIFICATION:—FAILURES.

Rev. Mr. Brooks, in the recent holiness Convention at Wheaton, said there were two sources or causes of the odium which Rev. L. B. Kent had stated, in the popular mind, attached to the idea and very term, sanctification or holiness. The causes of this Mr. Brooks explained, are two, viz., false sanctificationists, and heart-aversion to holiness in partially sanctified Christians.

There are two kinds of "righteousness," distinct and separate, spoken of in the Bible, viz., righteousness by law and by faith. Thus Paul, Phil. iii. 9, "Not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is of God by faith." There are many, said Mr. Brooks, who turn the grace of God into licentiousness; who, professedly, and to human appearance, really receive Christ by faith as made of God their sanctification; but who, through ignorance, that a man is not really sanctified by faith any farther than "the righteousness of the law is fulfilled in them" by his walking after the Spirit, they fall into sin, and real sanctification has to bear the loathing and disgust which such people excite in all persons of sound mind.

Then, as long as the Christian is "sanctified in part," the part remaining unsanctified—the remainders of corruption and the natural man in him, move him to shrink from holiness as from fire; for it is the product of the baptism of "the Holy Ghost and of fire," which John promised that Christ would impart. Thus these two, loathing of sanctified hypocrisy and scoundrelism, and shrinking from real holiness, make the way of real holiness to be "everywhere spoken against."

But no violence of interpretation can blink or explain away the fact that God promises two things: to forgive the sin and cleanse the sinner; not half forgive and half cleanse, but "forgive," and "cleanse." "Lord increase our faith."

ONE HUNDRED NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE CYNOSURE! What a fine CENTENNIAL OFFERING to the anti-secret reform that would be! "WHERE IS THAT OTHER ONE-HUNDRED MAN?"

EDMOND RONAYNE.—A friend becomes nervous over our notice of Mr. Ronayne, and also over the remarks of Dr. Marsh on the same topic. And, indeed, it might be in better taste to make suggestions intended for Mr. Ronayne's personal benefit to the gentleman himself. Mr. Ronayne's work, fulfilling the words of Christ, that "there is nothing covered which shall not be known and come abroad," needs no advertising or commendation from us. His honest, fearless, and accurate turning the Masonic lodges inside out to the gaze of the multitude, draws, and will draw crowds wherever he goes; and the importance of his mission to the country and the cause can scarcely be over-estimated.

Our only anxiety is that he and ourselves keep constantly before our mind that Jesus Christ, and he only, is Master of the foul spirits who inhabit the lodges, and that we can, literally, do nothing without him. The lodge will follow him, as it does, with all its Satanic malignity and vengeance, and without more than ordinary grace, Mr. Ronayne will be in danger of letting his meetings and exhibitions wear the appearance of squabbles between himself and the lodges; and nothing could be more fatal than this. We must "fight the battle of the Lord," not our own, as Abigail advised David; and that keen soldier, statesman and Christian, struck with the penetration and force of her ideas, exclaimed, "Blessed be thy advice." Meantime there must be constant prayer to God, day and night, or Satan will get advantage of us and our speakers. How many Romish priests have come out and exposed and assailed the secret abominations of the Jesuits to little purpose!

Reading a single number of the Cynosure has saved a young man from the lodge.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE has been given to the country through the secular press and seems to meet a favorable response from those who are not known among their neighbors as politicians. It is a more lengthy document than he he has heretofore presented to Congress, and manfully faces some of the great dangers that threaten the Republic, to-wit, the pervertion of the ballot by ignorant, misled voters, the encroachments of the papal church, the legalized immorality in Utah, and the temptations to national dishonesty through an indefinite increase of paper money. He sums up the questions of greatest moment at the close of the message thus:

"As this will be the last annual message which I shall have the honor of transmitting to Congress before my successor is chosen, I will repeat or recapitulate the questions which I deemed of vital importance which are to be legislated upon and settled at this session:

1. That the States shall be required to afford the opportunity of a good common school education to every child within their limits.

2. No tenets shall ever be taught in any school supported in whole or in part by the State, nation, or by the proceeds of any tax levied upon any community; make education compulsory, so far as to deprive all persons who cannot read and write from becoming voters after the year 1890, disfranchising none, however, on the ground of illiteracy who may be voters at the time this amendment takes effect.

3. Declare the church and the state forever separate and distinct, but each free within its proper sphere, and that all church property shall bear its own proportion of taxation.

4. Drive out licensed immorality, such as polygamy and the importation of women for illegitimate purposes. To recur again to the centennial year, it would seem as though now, as we are about to begin the second century of our national existence, would be a most fitting time for these reforms.

5. Enact such laws as will insure a speedy return to a sound currency, such as will command the respect of the world.

What more cheering to every true friend of the cause than the rally of hundreds of our readers for the Cynosure list. A fortnight only is left for the great club rates.

—Nothing new has been received from Father Preston, and it is hoped that his injuries have not been so severe as at first feared.

—The news from the far East is full of encouragement. Bro. Stoddard found at first every avenue but one closed in Boston and vicinity, that was the home of the veteran Greene. A day or two spent in making the acquaintance of pastors and others proved the case different however, and after speaking to a good audience in Chelsea, on the invitation of the Congregational pastor and others, he came westward to Rochester leaving an earnest sympathy for ihe reform in many hearts. A letter from him next week.

—Our New York brethren seem to have met one of the greatest successes of the year. Bro. Post has written but too late for this number. Pennsylvania friends have their turn next week. Read Bro. Callender's trumpet blast, and ready every man appear.

—As will be seen by Mr. Ronayne's letter on the fourth page he expected show up Freemasonry in Capt. William Morgan's old home, Batavia, N. Y., the 9th or 10th of this month. A correspondent recently wrote that they hoped to get one hundred subscribers for the Cynosure in Batavia and vicinity. Surely there ought to be a multitude of the old neighbors of Wm. Morgan, who will hail Mr. Ronayne's coming with delight and be glad to aid the Anti-masonic cause by taking the Cynosure.

—The evening of Wednesday, Dec 8th, was an occasion of unusual interest at the house of Pres. Blanchard in Wheaton, from the marriage of a daughter, Carrie S., to Mr. Thomas E. Kennedy of San Jose, Cal. A large gathering of friends gave an enthusiastic and happy expression of their good wishes to the fortunate pair and followed them with blessings on their immediate departure for California. Mrs.

K, was a member of the last graduating class at Wheaton College, and was a valuable assistant on the Cynosure in its earlier history. Mr. Kennedy's father has resided in California for many years and is one of the earliest and truest friends of the reform in that State.

—The Times of Pittsfield, New Hampshire, of the 2nd, scoffs at the effort against the lodge in that region, and remarks of the late State organization, "The crop of fools is small this year, but to make up for lack of numbers they were exceedingly foolish." The time has gone by for calling names, as earnest friends of New Hampshire will soon prove to these lodge croakers. They may be called "fools" for Christ's sake but the certain issue of their righteous cause will prove them endowed with a more than earthly power and wisdom.

—Such words of hearty approbation of their course as we reprint from the New York Witness must surely cheer on those college faculties who are seeking truly the highest good of their students by abolishing the secret societies among them. The Christian Instructor says of these pests:

"With increasing earnestness many have for years felt that secret fraternities or societies are a momentous evil in collegiate institutions. Almost invariably they are found to divert the minds of young men from their studies and proper work, to accustom them to secret, and often unscrupulous intriguing and plotting, to have them form intimacies with improper companions, and acquire habits that cannot but be injurious in their effects and tendencies for the after life. In many instances these societies have unquestionably tended to ensnare and injure, if not to be the direct means of disaster and ruin. . . . What parent with a son in College, would not breathe freer and feel that his son was safer if every secret society there was abolished?"

The Late Mrs. J. B. Walker.

On Lord's day, August 29th last, the wife of Hon. J. B. Walker died at her home in Wheaton, after suffering more or less for years from the effects of a paralytic stroke. She was buried in Mansfield, Ohio, and our readers were promised a sketch of her interesting and useful life at the proper time. Before removal to Illinois Mrs. Walker had a stroke of paralysis which permanently and seriously affected both mind and body, nearly destroying the action of the former, and changing greatly her outward appearance. To the many friends of the family in Wheaton and other parts of this State she was hardly known, and to but few was her eminently active and useful Christian life of former years known at all. It was due therefore to her memory that a narrative of her active years should be publicly given. This sad but holy duty was performed by Dr. Walker on Sabbath, November 29. He spoke from the fitting text, Mark xiv. 8: "She hath done what she could." Of this discourse the following is an abstract:

Mrs. Walker was converted in Vermont. After a long season of conviction and much earnest prayer she passed into a state of obedience and love that was joyful and refreshing. She was left an orphan at an early age, and for the most part sustained herself, and, with some little assistance from friends obtained an education. She came West and taught school up to her marriage with Dr. Walker. This period of her life began in the trying times of the anti-slavery and temperance reforms. In these she was very active. While living in Hudson, Ohio, she sent out circulars and organized a County Female Anti-slavery society, and also a temperance society of like character. Mr. Walker was at this time beginning the publication of his first paper, the first religious journal in northern Ohio. Mrs. Walker heartily seconded his efforts and their all was embarked in the enterprise, which proved useful and to a considerable degree successful. Displeased at its firm and plain position on the slavery question an effort was made to remove Dr. Walker from the paper by persecution, but it proved a failure.

After removal to Cincinnati she ably seconded her husband's labors while rewriting and preparing for publication his wonderful book "The Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation." By teaching she assisted materially in sustaining the family while the income from mental labors was small. In the publication of the Watchman of the Valley, begun here by Dr. Walker, she also heartily entered, and was permitted to know that the united effort and sacrifice had been successful. When the paper had been brought to a paying basis it was placed in other hands. Afterward at Mansfield, Ohio, in an anti-slavery church these self-denying labors were continued, and again in the young city of Chicago where probably many of the older residents can yet testify to her zealous labors for the poor, and for reforms. Dr. Walker kept in connection with his publication office, where another paper, the Herald of the Prairies was begun, a tract and book store. He also preached to the Presbyterian church on the West side, which afterwards divided and became the First Congregational and Third Presbyterian churches, now ministered to respectively by Drs. E. P. Goodwin and A. E. Kittredge. Of his deacons two are yet living, Philo Carpenter and Nathaniel Norton, who are widely known in these two denominations for their labors and gifts for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom.

Mrs. Walker was here a member of a working tract society and one of its visitors. This organization visited all the families in the city regularly leaving a supply of religious reading and ministering to physical necessities as occasion might demand. There are yet in existence copies of petitions to the city council from Mrs. Walker recommending aid to destitute families. There was then no Home of the Friendless and the want of this noble charity was supplied by private Christian homes. On their return to Mansfield four orphan children were with them as members of the family. This number was increased until some twelve orphans or fatherless children shared at different times the tender care of this noble woman. On leaving Chicago, Mrs. Trask, niece of Tuthill King, Esq., addressed an affectionate and beautiful farewell poem to Mr. and Mrs. Walker, of which the following is part:

Ye have been much to me! Life hath been made
Brighter and holier for your presence here.—
The friendship too upon my soul ye've laid,
Hath charmed my mind to some calm, holier sphere;
Spirits hereafter, in the world of bliss,
Commune with those whose life with theirs could blend,
And so I'll live that when I pass from this,
Mine shall be circled where your spirits bend.

Farewell!—Yet ere I go, O, lay your hands
Upon my head in blessings, and I'll bow
My soul for the high gift,—and when I stand
With life's dark shadows twined aronnd my brow,
Memories of this shall chase them all away,
And life grow brighter for the parting day.

Years of earnest labor were spent in Mansfield and Sandusky, Ohio, and in Benzonia, Mich., where Mrs. Walker's long and self-sacrificing activities were cut off by a paralytic stroke, when she was 61 years of age; seven years were yet added to her life, most of which were spent in Wheaton in the midst of sympathizing friends. A sincere and humble piety was united in her with superior mental vigor and a strong will moderated by great conscientiousness. Through the many changes of life she passed with unmurmuring endurance, and it is her husband's testimony, "I never heard her complain." After death the outward effect of her disease passed away and she appeared in her coffin as she used to in middle life. She was buried in Mansfield, Ohio, by the side of her mother and Rhoda, one of the best loved of the orphans to whom she had been a mother.

News of the Week.

The City.

Hon. J. D. Ward, U. S. district attorney, having resigned at request of President Grant Mark Bangs of Lacon has been appointed instead. Ward was too friendly with the indicted distilleries.——The military court, consisting of Gens. Sheridan, Hancock and Terry to examine into the connection of Gen. Babcock with the St. Louis whiskey ring, met last week, but as Babcock has been indicted and will have jury trial in St. Louis, nothing will be done here at present.——The council have at last discharged their architect and employed Egan who is already engaged by the county to construct the new court-house and city hall.——The election of a successor to Judge McAllister in the State Supreme Court takes place this week. The corrupt politicians now in power here are trying to get in a man after their sort. There will be stubborn opposition.

Washington.

It is understood that Pres. Grant will send another message on the Cuban question as soon as correspondence now going on with Spain shall have developed the case more clearly. The President is understood not to desire either the annexation or independence of Cuba, but a representative provincial position, like Canada to England.——The adjournment of Congress for the holidays takes place on the 22d or 23d, and will extend to the 4th of January.

The Country.

Three workmen were killed by a fall at the Centennial buildings last week. The whole number thus killed there is now ten.——Again the "Molly Maguires" have begun to perpetrate fiendish outrages in the coal regions. Three brutal murders were committed by a masked band last week. They entered a house occupied by Charles O'Donnell, and after binding him they carried him out to the rear of the house and shon him. A man named McAllister wasl similarly murdered, and the gang, tot content with this act, kiled McAllister's sister.

Foreign.

A foreign steamer, the Deutschland, struck off the English coast last week and about fifty of her passengers and crew were drowned and the vessel was lost.——That part of the President's message on the Cuban question was telegraphed to Madrid where it caused the greatest excitement, although giving no very definite advice to Congress. —A dispatch from London says that on the whole the President's message has been well received, and especially that portion of it which treats of the finances of the Government and the possibility that at a not distant day the currency of the country will be reduced to a basis that will correspond with that of specie-paying communities.

Religious Intelligence.

—A remarkable revival is reported in Rushville, Ill. Some four weeks since a company of thirteen persons, all members of the "Holiness Association," came to the village unasked and unannounced. By previous agreement, after stepping off the platform at the station, they divided into companies of twos and threes and started out through the village conversing with every person, old and young, they met in the streets on the subject of their personal salvation, and where a willingness was shown, knelt down and prayed with them. They also visited the dwellings and business places of every inhabitant of the place, talked, sang, and prayed with them, and invited them to attend a meeting to be held at night in the school-house near by. Such earnestness arrested general attention, and a few came to the first meeting. The second day witnessed a repetition of the labors of the first, and on the second night the school-house was crowded. A religious awe seemed suddenly to take possession of the hearts of the people, and from that time to the present meetings have been held day and night with increasing interest. Over one hundred conversions are reported. —Advance.

—Rev. Dr. Talmage preached at the Brooklyn Tabernacle on a recent Sabbath against the expulsion of the Bible from the public schools, to an audience of more than 5,000.

—Rev. Charles Morton, of the Plymouth Bethel, Brooklyn, has a Bible-class of 180 men, with an average attendance of 100.

—The Reformed Episcopal church now numbers fifty-two congregations, with as many clergymen. A proposition is afoot for a new paper to be published in this city called the Appeal. Bishop Cheney and Rev. Dr. Fallows are to be the editors. The first number will appear in January, and it is to be a monthly for some time.

—A very important change was recently made by the Warren Avenue Baptist church, in Boston, of which the Rev. G. F. Pentecost is pastor, in its "Declaration of Faith and Practice." A clause declaring immersion to be "by Scripture example a prerequisite to communion at the Lord's table" was stricken out by a unanimous vote. This church is second in point of age to any in Boston having been founded in 1743.

—Rev. J. P. Sankey, of the United Presbyterian congregation at Rochester, N. Y., had for his theme on Thanksgiving Day a statement and defence of the law for capital punishment. His sermon was very favorably noticed by the press.

—A series of union meetings has closed at Peace, Kansas, which twenty-seven persons were converted, and believers greatly blessed and strengthened. J. B. Schlicter and H. T. Besse are pastors of the Cong. and Wesleyan churches in the place.

—J. D. Potter, the well-known New England evangelist, whose labors in various States have been peculiarly blessed in past years lately closed one of his four-days meetings at Elkhart, Ind. He has also held similar meetings at Angola, Ontario, and Orland, Ind., and Buchanan, Mich. This week he is at Michigan City. At Elkhart, there were some fifty conversions and many still inquiring. Dr. J. E. Roy of Chicago is assisting in the meetings which are continued.

The Home Circle.

We can Make Home Happy.

Though we may not change the cottage
For a mansion tall and grand,
Or exchange the little grass plat
For a boundless stretch of land—
Yet there's something brighter, dearer
Than the wealth we'd thus command.

Though we have no means to purchase
Costly pictures rich and rare—
Though we have no silken hangings
For the walls so cold and bare—
We can hang them o'er with garlands,
For flowers bloom everywhere.

We can always make home cheerful
If the right course we begin;
We can make its inmates happy
And their truest blessings win;
It will make the small room brighter,
It will let the sunshine in.

We can gather round the fireside
When the evening hours are long;
We can blend our hearts and voices
In a happy social song;
We can guide some erring brother,
Lead him from the path of wrong.

We can fill our homes with music,
And with sunshine brimming o'er,
If against the dark intruders
We will firmly close the door—
Yet, should evil shadows enter,
We must love each other more.

There are treasures for the lowly
Which the grandest fail to find;
There is a chain of sweet affection
Binding friends of kindred mind—
We may reap the choicest blessings
From the poorest lot assigned.

Selected.

First Lesson in the Old School.

It is sixty-six years ago, but the scene comes up in all its freshness—the young class just standing upon the threshold of that mysterious art, that first introduction to words seen as well as heard—to words as objective things, bringing with them something of a higher spirit, or as representative of the universal intelligence. I see them again, those slender forms—their voices are in mine ears—the child's slow monotone, as he points his finger along the line, pronouncing each monosyllable with equal emphasis, and now and then looking up to the grave face bending over him, and so solemnly intent upon the momentous work in which he is engaged,

No man may put off the law of God.

That was the first line I ever read, and the second was like unto it:

My joy is in His law all the day.
I may not go in the way of ill men.
He who came to save us will wash us from all sin.
I will be glad in his name.

It was the dawning of immortal truth. How much of precious meaning in these few words! How sublime they are!—how self-revealing! We did understand it. Men who caricature and talk about parrot-lessons, and words without ideas, may declaim as they will. We did understand it. The terms revealed themselves to us without the sham of object lessons, or any puerile illustrations. That word law; it is probable that it had never before fallen upon my ears. I may, perhaps, have heard men talk of "going to law," but it carried no intelligence. Surely, I had never before read it in a book or looked it up in a dictionary. But as then used in that living connection, I did understand it. It fell upon the mind with light and power. No clearer idea of it have I since received. God I had heard of; the great name was uttered in the recital of the oral infant catechism; it was connected with that mysterious question: Who made you? But this was a new revelation of Him. In the accompanying monosyllables, clearer than in many a sermon, revealed themselves the ideas of power, omnipotence, obligation, necessity: "No man may put it off." So that the words that followed: "My joy is in His law all the day." There was a light, a light rational in them, as well as a joy. We truly yielded the approbation indicated. We "rejoiced in the law after the inward man." We "consented to the law that it was good," as human nature is compelled to do ever after it feels the awakened "law of sin and death warring and ruling in its members." "Oh, let me not go in the way of ill men." This third line brought up the idea—the embryo idea it may be—of the great divergency—the two roads then beginning to part, but with their ends so immeasurably distinct; the "way of virtue," and the "way of vice," the "upward toiling and the smooth downward path," to use the language of Hesion's old picture, made so many centuries ago, or Solomon's way of life, and way of death, or the still more vivid representation of our Saviour—the broad and narrow way—the way of righteousness and "the way of ill men," from which we were thus early taught to pray for deliverance, as the way of danger, or the one in which our feet might so easily incline to run. "He who came to save us." It was not a mere sound. We did attach a precious meaning to that name, and along with it came the closely suggestive ideas of salvation, of cleansing, purity, deliverance from sin, As I have said, it may have been in their embryo state, but they were all there present to the soul in some spiritual form, and with some degree of spiritual power, when he said, "I will be glad in His name;" feeble and faint, indeed, but more precious, even in their dawning, than all the practical instruction of our latter utilarian school-books, with all their boasted freedom from dogma, and all their contempt for mere rote instruction. —Prof. Taylor Lewis.

Deserted on the Hills.

As I was traveling over the mountains of Cumberland some years ago, I heard a lamb bleating. I listened, detained, as I am sure, by a loving Providence. It was a pitiful cry. It seemed to say, "Help me, pity me, save me!"

I started in the direction whence it came. The little thing saw me, and came running to meet me. "Help me, pity me, save me!" It was half starved. I took it up in my arms. I think I talked to it. I saw an old sheep near by, and carried it to her. She would not notice it, and as I walked away, the little creature came tottering after me, —"Help me, pity me, save me!"

I thought, "I cannot leave ye, little one, to perish. I wouldn't mind carrying ye in my arms seven miles; but if I should meet the shepherd, what would he think of me? would he believe me?"

Just then I saw the tall form of a man rising above the top of one of the hills. It was my friend Richardson, the shepherd with whom I passed the night before. I had left some papers at his house, and he had hurried to bring them to me.

I told him about the lamb. "Yes," he said, "sheep will abandon them sometimes at this season of the year, when feed is so scarce. I will take it."

He took the lamb in his arms and held it against his bosom; and as I saw him going away over the hills, I could but think of the great Shepherd, who carries "the lambs in his bosom." And I thought if I, a sinful man, so pity a little creature God has made, with how much greater tenderness will he pity us, who is the Father of us all. Do you think that when the weakest of you cry to Jesus, "Help me, pity me, save me!" he will refuse to listen? Never.

Two years afterward, I visited friend Richardson, the shepherd, and asked him what became of the little lamb.

"Why," said he, "it is now the finest of the flock."

So may the feeblest soul that cries to heaven for help be strengthened by grace, and become the noblest and most useful in the flock of God.—Newman Hall.

Enemies.

A woman of rank in England has been, since the early years of Queen Victoria's reign, her sworn enemy. Not long ago she died, and she bore down to her grave the same undying hate. The frosts of age had not cooled it and she determined that her malice should follow the good queen even beyond the grave. She directed that her right hand should be cut off and buried at a spot where it could ever point towards a favorite royal residence, and this inscription to be placed above it—"I bide my time."

What a spirit in which to enter eternity. How could the poor soul venture to appear in the presence of Him who has said to the unforgiving, "Neither will your Heavenly Father forgive you."

It is not safe to admit this spirit of hatred even for a moment. It grows with what it feeds on until it becomes the overmastering passion of the soul.

Even the presence of death cannot vanquish it.

A noble general was riding over a conquered battle field, and observed a dying soldier. His uniform showed he was a foe, but he gave the order promptly to have a glass of wine put to his lips. The soldier raised himself on his elbow to take the cup, and saw in his benefactor the leader of the opposing forces. With a look of deadly hate he flashed his pistol in his face, but the general fortunately escaped the shot. The moment of surprise over, the general with true forgiveness said, "Give it to him all the same."

It is the Christian religion alone that can give us such teachings as these, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he smite you on the right cheek turn to him the other also."

A gold refiner says that the figure "So shalt thou heap coals of fire on his head," is borrowed from his business. It is not enough to put coals below the crucible they must also be heaped upon the top of it or the gold will not be melted. So our enemies, by our persistent kindness, may be effectually melted, and turned to friends.

Many a Christian has had reasons to thank God for his enemies. They give him a clearer insight into his faults, and enable him to cultivate many sweet graces that otherwise would have had no chance to grow. God sends us just the discipline we need at just the time we need it. It is our wisdom to improve by the lessons he would teach us, otherwise they will surely be repeated.—Presbyterian Weekly.

American Holidays.

There is a vague idea that Americans are too sedate, that they have not sufficient relaxation, that they ought to appoint more holidays. But what does the idea spring from? Amusement is for health, happiness, effectiveness. Do not the Americans live as long as other people? Are they not the happiest people in the world? Are they really less effective than any other? What do we want of holidays? Probably we have come nearer than any other nation to equalizing work. A greater proportion of persons are actively engaged in business; a smaller proportion are suffering from intense and prolonged overwork. And just in the ratio of the equalization diminishes our need of holidays. The American workman is not a child with a set task, nor a slave with an oppressive burden, but a free, intelligent, self-respecting, and self guiding man. He lays out his own life. He reaps the reward of his labors. His work does not mean simply bread-and-butter, and a dance under the May-pole, but solid beef and pudding, a deaconship in the church, two weeks' summer board in the country, a piano for his daughter, and high-school, and perhaps college, for his son. Set him running a sack-race, indeed! He literally is the populace, at least of New England. The quiet country village, with its one meeting-house and four school-houses, may have a few exceptional tatterdamalions, recognized and tolerated, living from hand to mouth—a little Bohemian, half butt, half burden. But the mass of the people are such as the deacon aforesaid. They do not thank you for holidays. What they want more than the State prescribes they can take for themselves without prescriptions. Whatever amendment is made for our relief from work must be made in accordance with our constitution, national and social. Americans must go forward, and not backward. They can never be children again. They are not to be raised by greased poles. They are to find entertainment in society, not in sports. Relaxation is to work itself more and more thoroughly and beneficently into every day, not consecrate itself into senseless revels on set days. With increase of wisdom, occupation will more nicely adjust itself to capacity and taste, so that a man's business will be fruitful of pleasure. Every day will settle its own bills, and leave no overplus of weariness to be offset by to-morrow's enforced rest or prescribed merry-making. Our holidays will then be still more than they now are—days of great memories and suggestions, of family re-union, of national congratulation, of profound and manly thanksgiving.—Gail Hamilton in Harper's Bazaar.

Is Wine a Blessing?

I wish to say that the clergymen of the church of England are positively doing more for the temperance movement than Dissenters; and the same is true of their wives. I was invited to church, with a clergyman who is now Bishop of Carlisle, and we had a discussion for about two hours. A titled lady was present and she helped him. I was alone and had to bear the whole brunt of the battle in the scriptural argument.

"The Bible permits the use of wine," said he.

"Very well," said I, "suppose it does."

"The Bible sanctions the use of wine."

"Very well, suppose it does."

"Our Saviour made wine."

"I know he did."

"Why, we thought you were prepared to deny this."

"I do not deny it. I can read."

"Wine is spoken of in the Bible as a blessing."

I replied, "There are two kinds of wine spoken of in the Bible."

"Prove it."

"I do not know that I can, but I will tell you what it is, the w-i-n-e that is spoken of as a 'blessing,' is not the same w-i-n-e that is a 'mocker,' and the w-i-n-e that is to be drunk in the kingdom of heaven, cannot be the w-i-n-e of the wrath of God. So that, although I cannot prove it learnedly, I know it is so."

Now, there are others who go further than I can go, but you will please let me go just as I can understand it, and if I cannot go any further don't find fault with me. I hold that the Bible permits total abstinence; and I would rather search the Bible for permission to give up a lawful gratification for the sake of my weak-headed brother, who stumbles over my example into sin, than to see how far I can follow my own propensities without committing sin, and bringing condemnation upon any one's soul.

Another gentleman, who came to me for a long talk, said, "I have a conscientious objection to teetotalism, and it is this: our Saviour made wine at the marriage of Cana in Galilee."

"I know he did."

"He made it because they wanted it."

"So the Bible tells us."

"He made it of water."

"Yes."

"Well, he performed a miracle to make that wine."

"Yes."

"Then he honored and sanctified wine by performing a miracle to make it. Therefore," said he, "I feel that if I should give up the use of wine, I should be guilty of ingratitude, and should be reproaching my Master."

"Sir," said I, "I can understand how you should feel so; but is there nothing else that you put by, which our Saviour has honored?"

"No, I don't know that there is."

"Do you eat barley bread?"

"No," and then began to laugh.

"And why?"

"Because I don't like it."

"Very well, sir," said I, "our Saviour sanctified barley bread just as much as he ever did wine. He fed five thousand people on barley loaves manufactured by a miracle. You put away barley bread from the low motive of not liking it. I ask you to put away wine from the higher motive of bearing the infirmity of your weaker brother, and so fulfilling the law of Christ." I wish to say that that man signed a pledge three days afterward.—John B. Gough.

Mispronunciation.

It is possible that some one who reads the title of this article may find himself guilty of failing to pronounce ci like sh in shun. I find that my lady friend, who is very precise in her language, will persist in accenting etiquette on the first, instead of the last syllable. My good minister, who has the greatest aversion to anything wrong, was greatly surprised when I mildly suggested to him that aspirant should be accented on the penult, while my musical niece mortified me the other evening by pronouncing finale in two syllables. I heard my geological friend the other day explaining the subsidences of the earth's crust, but he should have accented the second instead of the first syllable. The same mistake happened the other day to my friend, President of the Reform Society, who spoke of the vagaries of certain people, by accenting the first instead of the second syllable. He also announced that I would deliver an address that evening, but I knew it was not polite to tell him to accent the last syllable. My boy says he left school at recess, accenting the first syllable, and he was loth to believe that, whatever the meaning of the word, it should be accented on the final syllable. Then my friend, the President of the Debating Club, who is a great student of Cushing's Manual, tells us that a motion to adjourn takes the precedence by accenting the first, instead of the second syllable. My other lady friend says that she lives in a house having a cupelow. She should consult the dictionary for that word. But I will close by remarking that my legal friend who is very scholarly, always accents coadjutor on the second, instead of the third, where the accent rightfully belongs.—New England Journal of Education.

Children's Corner.

Raking Leaves.

One Friday morning at breakfast time Bennie Dayton's father said to him:

"My son, if you choose to spend a part of your time to day in raking up the leaves in front of the yard, I will give you fifty cents for your trouble. I do not require it of you because Patrick Dungan would be glad of the job, but you can earn the money if it pleases you."

Now Bennie was always fond of an honest penny, how much more of a half dollar. So he answered quickly, "I'll do it, father, and thank you, too."

"Thoroughly, if at all, remember, Bennie," said Mr. Dayton, as he put on his hat to go to the depot, on his way to business in the city.

"Yes, father," answered the boy, and he started for the yard to get a rake, broom and a large feed-sack to hold the leaves; the job was to be done in the best manner.

Two sacks full of dead leaves were gathered and carried away, and then a lad came along, whistling.

"Halloa, Ben, what are you about?"

"Raking up these leaves, don't you see?"

"I see. A paid job?"

"Yes, sir."

"How much?"

"Don't bother now—too busy to talk."

"Ben?"

"H'm."

"Say, come down into the back lot a moment: the fellows want you."

"Don't think I can," Bennie said, rather hesitatingly; he was almost persuaded.

"Come on, just for five minutes," urged the boy.

Ah! Temptation entertained, boys, is victory won—remember that.

Down went the rake, and away went Ben, thinking there was time enough by and by. And an hour or so after, his mother, coming home from up in the village, saw a heap of leaves, the empty sack, and the rake, just near the gate, where any thieving urchin could lay hands upon them.

"George, where is your brother gone?" she asked the younger boy.

"Down in the back lot, playing ball with a crowd of boys."

"Go and tell him that I want him at once."

Bennie returned and finished the work, at any rate, to his satisfaction. Next morning his father left the fifty cents with his wife to be given to Bennie, if she thought he had earned it. The truth was, she did not have a very high opinion of the money being earned; but New Year's was drawing near and she knew the boy wanted to save and earn all the money possible, so she gave the money to him, saying:

"Bennie, father left this money for you. I do not really call the work well done, and if I were you I would rake it up a little more so that he can notice how clean you have left it."

"I'll bet I won't," said crusty Ben.

"If you please, I would like to know to whom you are talking, my son."

"Well, I raked the leaves clean; George can prove it; and I don't mean to do it any more. If you don't want me to have the money, I don't care."

"You will leave the room instantly. I shall speak to you no more until you remember the respect you owe to your mother."

"I'll come back—" commenced Ben.

But he did not finish, for his mother said "Go," and he dared not linger. He went out to play; but the mother sat there in her low chair, rocking baby Robbie to sleep, not singing to him, for her eyes were so full of tears that her voice was choked with them. Was it not hard to devote her whole life to her children, and get so poor a return as this?

Bennie was uncomfortable, too, and could not play, but stole quietly in and raked up all the leaves both front and back of the house, fixing it all in prime order.

That night Bennie received no good-night kiss, and after getting into bed cried long and hard. And when he could stand it no longer, he went down stairs to his mother, and, kneeling beside her, begged most earnestly for her forgiveness.

She quieted him first; then she had a good honest talk with him. She told him that, at the very best, a mother's life is a hard one; a life full of anxieties and cares. But children could make it so much harder that it would become unbearable; whereas they might help her over the rough spots, and make her path easy.

Above all, she explained to him that God was grieved when we sinned, and that if we asked strength of him more sincerely, we would fall before temptation less.

Bennie was sincere in his sorrow, for he has tried very hard since that Saturday to be a good boy, and his mother is proud of his efforts to do right.

None of us like the moral of a story to be set up before us; but if we look for one in this little sketch it will not be hard to find, and here it is:

"Honor thy father and thy mother, that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth."—Selected.

Don't, Girls.

Don't think yards and yards of ribbon, ruffles and lace, will add one particle to your real value. Don't make a walking milliner's shop, or jeweler's store of yourselves, covering all that is of true merit within you with that which will attract only the shallow-brained. Don't think sensible people are to be deceived with vain show; they look for beauty of heart and mind. Don't flatter yourselves it is smart to affect ignorance of manual labor, or to be ignorant of it. Don't give the subject of matrimony a thought while in your teens, except to qualify yourself for the responsible position it places you in; you need all that time of your lives to fit yourselves for it. You need to study books, the laws of life and health, to be well experienced in the culinary arts, as perhaps the happiness and health of hundreds are depending on your knowledge of this. Don't give your time and talents to the world, or to seeking the things of time and sense that perish with their using. God has created you for a nobler purpose and made you accountable for what he has given you. Don't sell your birthright for a mess of pottage.

FELLOW CRAFT DEGREE Concluded.

Worshipful Master:—Tubal.

Senior Deacon:—Tubal-Cain.

Worshipful Master:—(looking at candidate) The name of this grip my brother is Tubal-Cain. Tubal-Cain was the eight man from Adam and the first known inventor of curious smith-work and of metallic operations by fire. You will now arise and salute the Junior and Senior Wardens as a Master Mason.

The Master then steps to the East, resumes his gavel, gives ne rap and the lodge is seated. In some lodges the Senior Warden stands in the West during the entire ceremony from the time the candidate kneels, and when the Master has concluded his remarks about Tubal-Cain he gives the rap which seats the lodge.

The Senior Deacon now conducts the candidate by way of the East to the Junior Warden in the South and that officer rising to his feet, both he and the Senior Deacon and candidate make the step, due-guard and sign of a Master Mason. He is then led to the Senior Warden and that officer also rising, the step, due-guard and sign are again made by all three. The candidate is then re-conducted slowly towards the East and as he arrives on a line with the altar the Worshipful Master gives one rap, halting both the Deacon and candidate, and enquires:

Worshipful Master:—How do you find it in the South, Bro. Junior Warden?

Junior Warden:—(rising and making due-guard) All right in the South, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—How in the West, Bro. Senior Warden?

Senior Warden:—(rising and making due-guard) All right in the West, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master:—(to Senior Deacon) Bro. Senior Deacon, you will re-conduct the candidate to the Senior Warden in the West who will teach him how to wear his apron as a Master Mason, and return to the East.

The candidate should now be led directly back to the Senior Warden's station without passing around the altar; but some Deacons not being well posted lead him around by way of the South and standing in front of the Senior Warden the Deacon gives one rap on the floor with the end of his rod and says:

Senior Deacon: Bro. Senior Warden it is the order of the Worshipful Master that you teach this brother how to wear his apron as a Master Mason.

Senior Warden:—(standing up and approaching candidate) Bro. Jones, Entered Apprentices wear their aprons with the bib turned up (he turns up the bib). Fellow Crafts with the bib turned down (he now turns it down). Master Masens with the bib turned down and the left hand corner turned up (he tucks the left hand corner under the string). You will therefore be permitted to wear yours in this manner whilst working with us on this degree.

The Senior Warden takes his seat; the Senior Deacon re conducts the candidate to the East and leaves him standing in front of the Master's chair, while he himself retires to his usual place. The Worshipful Master rising to his feet takes a small trowel and looking at candidate says:

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Jones, being clothed as a Master Mason you are now entitled to your working tools. The working tools of a Master Mason are all the implements of Masonry indiscriminately, but more especially the trowel. The trowel is an instrument made use of by operative Masons to spread the cement which unites the building into one common mass: but but we as Free and Accepted Masons are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of spreading the cement of brotherly love and affection; that cement which unites us into one common band or society of friends and brothers, among whom no contention should ever exist, but that noble contention, or rather emulation, of who best can work and best agree.

You will now be re-conducted to the place from whence you came and be there invested with what you had been divested, and (looking at his watch) if you are expeditious you may be in time to see the lodge closed.

This latter clause, or words of similar import, are put in by the Worshipful Master to deceive the candidate and to throw him off his guard by conveying the impression that the entire ceremonies of the degree are now over, and that nothing more remains to be done except to put on his clothes and go home.

The Senior Deacon conducts the candidate to the altar where he makes the usual salute, the due-guard and sign, and is taken in charge by the Junior Deacon or stewards who lead him back to the "preparation-room" and assist him to dress.

And thus the first section or Initiatory Ceremonies of this sublime degree are concluded.

SECOND SECTION.

When the candidate in the company with the Junior Deacon and stewards retire into ante-room, the lodge is usually called from "labor to refreshment," and while it is thus "called off," active preparations are being made for working the second section or dramatic portion of this degree. The Senior Deacon procures a strong canvass, kept in every lodge for the purpose, about eight feet long and five feet wide, ordinarily furnished with three loops on both sides by which it can be firmly held, also a large, round substance made of india-rubber with a short wooden handle, and called by Masons a "setting maul"; he then brings to view a small wooden box about eighteen inches long, eight inches wide and twelve inches high, containing a gong in the inside of it and which is operated by a spring on the top. The setting maul and canvass on such occasions are usually placed under or near the Treasurer's desk, but so hidden that the candidate cannot see them on re-entering the lodge, and the small wooden box (Masonically termed a low twelve bell) is placed near the Master's chair. The three ruffians are also appointed at this stage of the proceedings, as are also the Fellow Crafts who are to do most of what is termed the floor work, and all other necessary preparations are made to correctly represent the murder of "our Grand Master Hiram Abiff." When the candidate is dressed the Junior Deacon suspends from his neck a small plumb attached to a blue ribbon and which is known as the Junior Warden's jewel; he also ties on an apron worn in the usual manner with the bib and corner turned down, and being thus clothed he is conducted into the lodge-room where he is warmly congratulated by the Worshipful Master, Wardens and brethren, and various other little demonstrations exhibited to to make it apparent to the candidate that the degree is finished and that he has passed through the trying ordeal with more than ordinary courage and firmness. A few moments being thus spent in what may be termed as harmless deception the candidate is placed sitting in the Junior Warden's chair and the Master taking his seat and giving one rap "calls on" the lodge and all is ready for proceeding with the really interesting part of the "sublime" degree of Master Mason.

All being on the tip-toe of expectation the Worshipful Master addressing candidate, says:

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Jones, you will please approach the East.

The candidate approaches the East and stands in front of the Master's chair.

Worshipful Master:—Bro. Jones, you now no doubt consider yourself a Master Mason, and as such entitled to all the rights and privileges of a Master Mason, do you not?

The candidate either nods his head in affirmation, or else says, "I do."

Worshipful Master:—I presumed you did from the jewel you wear, it being the jewel of one of the principal officers of this lodge (alluding to the small plumb hanging from his neck). But my brother, it becomes my duty to inform you that you are not yet a Master Mason, neither do I know that you ever shall be. You have yet a rough and rugged road to travel, beset with ruffians and it may be with murderers, and should you lose your life in the conflict yours will not be the first. But remember in whom you placed your trust and "he that endureth unto the end the same shall be saved." On a former occasion you had some one to pray for you, but now you have none; you must pray for yourself. You will therefore suffer yourself to be again hood winked, kneel where you now stand, and pray, either mentally or orally as you see fit, but when done signify the same by saying "Amen," aloud.

The Senior Deacon now steps forward and again places a hoodwink securely over the candidate's eyes and causes him to kneel on both knees as it were to pray, but in the whole course of my Masonic experience I never knew one to pray at this stage of the proceedings. The Worshipful Master stands up, removes his hat and gives three raps calling all the brethren to their feet and thus standing they await for some minutes till the candidate says, "Amen" aloud. Should he from any cause delay too long in doing so the Master or Deacon gives him a gentle hint to that effect and he complying with that request by saying Amen, the Master proceeds:

Worshipful Master:—You will now arise and make your progress.

The candidate, representing Hiram Abiff, is now assisted to his feet by the Senior Deacon who conducts him in the usual manner once around the lodge-room and as he approaches the South or Junior Warden's station he is rudely accosted by one of the brethren previously appointed to represent Jubela, who catches him by both collars of the coat and vest, shakes him roughly and says:

Jubela:—Grand Master Hiram, I am glad to meet you thus alone: this is an opportunity I have long sought. You know you promised us when the temple was completed that we should receive the secrets of a Master Mason, or Mason's word, whereby we might travel in foreign countries, work and receive Master's wages: behold the temple is well-nigh completed and we have not yet received that for which we have so long served. I therefore demand of you the secrets of a Master Mason.

Senior Deacon:—(for candidate) My brother, this is an unusual way of asking for the secrets of a Master Mason, neither is it the time or place, but keep your promise and I will keep mine. Wait until the temple is completed when if found worthy doubtless you will receive them, otherwise you cannot.

Jubela:—(shaking candidate rather roughly) Talk not to me of time or place; at first I did not doubt your veracity but now I do. Give me the secrets of a Master Mason or Master's word, or I'll take your life.

Senior Deacon:—I shall not, neither can they be given until the temple is completed and then only in the presence of three; Solomon, king of Israel, Hiram, king of Tyre, and myself.

Jubela:—(shaking and pushing candidate about still more violently) Graud Master Hiram, I'll have no more of your parley; give me the secrets of a Master Mason or the Master's word, or I'll take your life in an instant.

Senior Deacon:—I will not.

Jubela:—(to candidate) Then die. (He draws the twenty-four inch guage swiftly across his throat.)

The candidate is now hurried by the Senior Deacon towards the West or Senior Warden's station where he is met by the second ruffian, Jubelo, who takes hold of him in a still rougher manner than the preceding one and says:

Jubelo:—(shaking candidate with some violence) Grand Master Hiram, give me the secrets of a Master Mason.

Senior Deacon:—(for candidate) I can not.

Jubelo:—(still more angrily) Give me the secrets of a Master Mason or Master's word, or I'll take your life.

Senior Deacon:—I shall not.

Jubelo:—(shaking candidate with greater violence) Grand Master Hiram, give me the secrets of a Master Mason or the Master's word or I'll take your life, in an instant.

Senior Deacon:—I will not.

Jubelo:—(to candidate) Then die. (He strikes him a slight blow with the square across the left breast.)

Six brethren are now beckoned forward to the northeast corner of the lodge close to the Treasurer's desk where they procure the canvass before mentioned, open it out, taking hold of it by the loops and the candidate being very swiftly hurried towards the East he is met by the third ruffian, Jubelum, who catches him by both collars as before and wheels him around so as to bring his heels to the edge of the canvass held by the brethren, when he says:

Jubelum:—(shaking candidate with more violence than did any of the others) Grand Master Hiram, give me the secrets of a Master Mason.

Senior Deacon:—(for candidate) I cannot.

Jubelum:—Jubela and Jubelo you have evaded, but me you cannot escape. My name is Jubelum. What I purpose that I perform. Give me the secrets of a Master Mason or the Master's word, or I'll take your life.

Senior Deacon:—I shall not.

Jubelum:—(taking setting maul and touching candidate's head with the short wooden handle) I hold in my hand an instrument of death with which, if you do not give me the secrets of a Master Mason or Master's word, I'll take your life in an instant.

Senior Deacon:—I will not.

Jubelum:—(to candidate) Then die. (At the same time he strikes him a smart blow with the pretended "setting maul" on the forehead and gives him a strong push which causes him to fall backward into the canvass as seen in the fig.)

The candidate is then laid on his back on the floor, covered up with the canvass and all the brethren retire to their seats, except the three supposed ruffians.

Jubela:—(in astonishment) What horrid deed is this we have done?

Jubelo:—We have slain our Grand Master, Hiram Abiff, and have not obtained that for which we have so long served.

Jubelum:—(in greater astonishment) Is he dead?

Jubela:—He is indeed, (putting his hand on candidate's forehead) his skull is broken.

Jubelo;—Well, this is no time for reflection; what shall we do with the body?

Jubelum:—(in terror) Let us bury it in the rubbish of the temple until low twelve (twelve at night] when we three will meet again and give it a more decent burial.

Ruffians:—[together] Agreed.

The canvass containing the candidate is then lifted up by six of the brethren and carried across the room to the southeast corner near the Secretary's desk where he is again laid down and frequently covered up with chairs, pieces of wood, etc., to represent the rubbish of the temple, and all again retire to their seats except the three ruffians. Jubelum now seating himself near the candidate, says to his two companions:

Jubelum:—Now I shall stay here and watch while you two go and dig a grave after which we shall meet and bury it.

The other two ruffians, Jubela and Jubelo, move off towards the Senior Warden's station where they pretend to be digging a grave, the lights are all turned down to represent night, that is provided gas is used in the lodge-room, and the Master sitting in the East commences to strike very slowly and at equal intervals twelve strokes on the "low tweive bell," representing midnight. As the hours of ten and eleven are being struck the ruffians Jubela and Jubelo approach the supposed dead body when the watching expectant Jubelum rises up and says:

Jubelum:—Is that you, Jubela?

Jubela:—Yes.

Jubelum:—Is that you, Jubelo?

Jubelo:—Yes.

Both together:—Is that you, Jubelum?

Jubelum:—Yes, low twelve and not yet discovered, now what shall we do with the body?

Jubela:—Let us convey it a westerly course from the temple to the brow of a hill west of Mount Moriah where we have been and dug a grave due East and West, six feet perpendicular, and there bury it.

Altogether:—Agreed.

The canvass and body are again lifted up and borne on the shoulders of the brethren towards the West where it is deposited in front of the Senior Warden's station having the head towards the West and the feet towards the East and all but the three ruffians take their seats as before. Jubelum taking the Senior Warden's column, says:

Jubelum:—Let us plant this acacia at the head of the grave [he places the little column standing at candidate's head] to conceal it and that the place may be known should occasion hereafter ever require it. Now let us make our escape.

They then pass out by way of the "preparation-room" door and after a few minutes' delay re-enter the lodge by the door of the ante-room, inside of which they find the Junior Deacon carelessly lounging and who represents a sea captain at the port of Joppa where the fugitive ruffians are now supposed to be.

Jubela:—[to Junior Deacon] Halloo! are you a sea captain?

Junior Deacon:—[as sea captain] I am.

Jubela:—Are you going to put to sea soon?

Junior Deacon;—Yes, to-morrow.

Jubela:—Whither are you bound?

Junior Deacon:—To Ethiopia.

Jubela:—[addressing his companions] Why, that is the very place to which we want to go. (turning to Juuior Deacon) See, here are three of us, can we obtain a passage with you?

Junior Deacon:—Yes. I should be pleased with your compat ny. I presume you have got King Solomon's pass?

Jubela:—[in derisive astonishment] King Solomon's pass! Why, we came away in haste and on urgent business and must go. We did not deem a pass was necessary. We have got plenty of money [putting his hand in his vest pocket] and will pay you any price you ask.

Junior Deacon:—There is an embargo laid upon all the shipping and unless you have got King Solomon's pass you cannot obtain a passage with me neither can you from this port.

Jubela:—(to his companions) Well, in that case we had better go back and get a pass.

They now move off and approaching the spot where the body is lying the following colloquy take place:

Jubela:—(to his two companions) Well, we cannot obtain a passage from this port; now what shall we do?

Jubelo:—Let us steal a boat and put to sea.

Jubelum:—Ho! that will never do. This is a rocky and iron-bound coast and we should be driven upon the rocks and dashed to pieces.

Jubela:—Well, what shall we do?

Jubelo:—Let us flee to some other port.

Jubelum:—Ho! that will never do; before we could reach another port the whole coast would be lined with our pursuers and we should be taken and executed.

Jubelo:—(in despair) Well, what shall we do?

Jubelum:—[pausing a few seconds] Let us flee into the mountains and conceal ourselves as well as we can and preserve our lives as long as we can.

Altogether:—Agreed.

They then pass rapidly from the lodge into the preparation-room where they seat themselves to await future developements. The Master now slips out quietly into the ante-room and all the members commence to talk loud, sing, whistle, walk about, etc., creating a general confusion in the midst of which the Worshipful Master re-enters the lodge representing King Solomon, and in many so-called aristocratic lodges in large cities clothed in a scarlet robe trimmed with white fur and wearing a head-dress resembling a crown. On entering the lodge he struts forward aping the manners of a king and giving one heavy blow with his gavel, he exclaims:

Worshipful Master:—(as King Solomon) Bro. Grand Senior Warden, what is the cause of this confusion, why are not the craft pursuing their labors?

Senior Warden:—[rising and making due-guard of Fellow Craft*] Most Excellent King Solomon, there are no designs upon the trestle board.

Worshipful Master:—[in astonishment] No designs upon the trestle board! Where is our Grand Master Hiram Abiff?

Senior Warden:—[making due-guard] Most Excellent King Solomon, he has not been seen since high twelve yesterday.

Worshipful Master:—[in greater astonishment] Not been seen since high twelve yesterday! Then I fear he is indisposed. Let strict search and due inquiry be made in and about the several apartments of the temple and see if he cannot be found.

Senior Warden:—[making due-guard] Most Excellent King Solomon, strict search and due inquiry have already been made and our Grand Master Hiram Abiff can nowhere be found.

Worshipful Master:—[sorrowfully] Then I fear some fatal accident has befallen him. [turning to secretary] Bro. Grand Secretary, you will cause the several rolls of the workmen to be called to see if any are missing and let returns be made as speedily as possible.

The secretary procures a long strip of paper upon which he has written some Scriptural names and proceeding towards the ante-room he calls out "Craftsmen assemble—assemble for roll call." Some of the brethren, twelve if possible, now retire into the ante-room and the secretary proceeds in a loud voice to call the roll as follows:

Secretary:—[calling roll] Adam, [some brother responds] Here. Aaron—here; Nimrod—here; Jubela—no response; Jubela, Jubela. Moses—here; Ezekiel—here; Amram—here; Jubelo—no response; Jubelo, Jubelo. Daniel—here; Noah—here; Japheth—here; Jubelum—no reply; Jubelum, Jubelum. Levi—here; Isaac—here; Jacob—here.

Having thus called the roll he re-enters the lodge-room, leaving the door partly open, approaches the altar and making the due-guard of a Fellow Craft, reports:

Secretary—Most Excellent King Solomon, the several rolls of the workmen have been called as ordered, and three Fellow Crafts are found to be missing, namely: Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum, who from the similarity of their names are supposed to

*The reader will observe that in working this second section of the Master's degree all present except the Worshipful Master and Senior Warden are supposed to be Fellow Crafts and hence the due-guard of a Fellow Craft is always made in addressing the chair. (See fig. page 19.)

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLÆ, Pastor, German M.E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

FREE TRACTS.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tract

HAS BEEN SECURED AND SHOULD NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE, and thus $10.00 pays for 20,000 pages of tracts.

The distribution of these tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the lodge, but there is a great lack of funds to supply the constantly increasing demand for Free Tracts.

During the year ending July 1st, 1875 a little less than 150.000 pages of Cynosure Tracts were gratuitously sent out, mostly in very small lots. The present demand is fully 100.000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of our most earnest workers in thiscause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLETRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains 24 Cynosure Tracts, bound together and is just the thing to select from. Price 20cents. See advertisement page 15.

Enoch Honeywell Esq., pays for an unlimitednumber of his tract addressed "TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA." Benj. Ulsh sends enough subscriptions to finish his club of ten and writes: "I will try and IF POSSIBLE (if possible, means something when Mr. Ulsh says it), "will get another club of ten as a New Year's present for you."

W. Sperry, Waupun, Wis., sends a club of ten and writes: "In a former letter I informed you that I was trying to make out a club of five and I thought I should be doing quite well, if successful; but by persistent effort and hard work I have succeeded in getting up a club of ten." Persistent effort and hard work, with God's blessing are the right kind of material to use in canvassing for the Cynosure.

Bennet Chalfant, Mt. Vernon, Iowa, sends in a club of eleven.

If some of our readers who are not working for new subscriptions, knew how much good it would do us and them and the cause to send in a club of ten they would use "persistent effort and hard work" to obtain one. A club of ten secured, agents generally feel like getting more. Rev. J. T. Kiggins writes that he hopes to send another club of ten about the 20th or 25th. Messrs. Sperry, Ulsh, and almost all who send in ten talk about getting more. A. Needels, Sparta, O., sends a club of seven and hopes to make it ten.

The clubs do not come thick enough. We ought to report at least six a week at this season of the year. You may be too old to get subscribers, or too sick, or too busy; if so, we do not mean to ask you to canvass for the paper. But we wish we could know that every able-bodied person who ought to be working for subscriptions, is. Many thanks to those who have done their share of this work.

WHERE IS THAT OTHER ONE HUNDRED MAN? "Where is that other one hundred man you spoke of in the Cynosure some time ago?" asks Benjamin Ulah, who has just sent in his one hundred and first subscription. He has a right to ask, and so we answer: Up in Minnesota; but we fear the grasshoppers and Masons have hindered him for he gets along slowly. Still we remember about the race of the "Hare and the Tortoise," and hope on. But there is another one hundred man who has sent in twenty-five names this month; Jas. McConnell of Ligonier, Indiana. We expect to hear of him often until the number is full.

C&N-W LINES

This great corporation now owns and operates over two thousand miles of road. With one branch it reaches Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, and the country north thereof; with another line it pushes through Janesville, Watertown, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Green Bay, Escanaba, to Negaunee and Marquette; with another line it passes through Madison, Elroy, and for St. Paul and Minneapolis; branching westward from Elroy, it runs to and through Winona, Owatonna, St. Peter, Mankato, New Ulm, and stops not until Lake Kampeska, Dakota, is reached; another line starts from Chicago, and runs through Elgin and Rockford, to Freeport, and, via the Illinois Central, reaches Warren, Galena and Dubuque, and the country beyond. Still another line runs almost due westward from Chicago, and passes through Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Iowa), Cedar Rapids, Marshaltown, Grand Junction, Missouri Valley Junction, to Council Bluffs and Omaha. This last-named is the "GREAT TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE," and the pioneer overland line for NEBRASKA, COLORADO, UTAH, IDAHO, MONTANA, NEVADA.

CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC COAST.

It runs through the Garden of Illinois and Iowa, and is the best, safest, shortest and quickest route for OMAHA, LINCOLN, and other points in NEBRASKA; and for CHEYENNE, DENVER, SALT LAKE CITY, VIRGINIA CITY, CARSON, SACRAMENTO, SAN FRANCISCO, and all other points west of the Missouri River.

If you want to go to Milwaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, De Pere, Ripon, Baraboo, Eau Claire, Hudson, Stillwater, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Breckenridge, Morehead, Fort Garry, Winona, Plattville, Dubuque, Waterloo, Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Yankton, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, or a hundred other northren, north-western or western points, this line is the one you should take. The track is of the best steel rail, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains are made up of elegant new Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Coaches, luxurious Day Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking-cars. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platform, and patent Buffers and Couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph. In a word, this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor in the country. It is eminently the favorite route with Chicagoans traveling west, north, or northwest, and is acknowledged by the traveling public to be the popular line for all points in Northren Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Dakota, Western Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, California and the Pacific Slope.

On the arrival of the trains from the East or South, the trains of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway leave Chicago as follows:

For Council Bluffs, Omaha and California, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Drawing Room and Sleeping Cars through to Council Bluffs.

For St. Paul and Minneapolis, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached on both trains.

For Green Bay and Lake Superior, Two trains daily, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, and running through to Marquette.

For Milwaukee, Four through trains daily, Pullman cars on night trains.

For Winona and points in Minnesota, One through train daily.

For Dubuque, via Freeport, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Dubuque and La Crosse, via Clinton, Two through trains daily, with Pullman Cars on night train.

For Sioux City and Yankton, Two trains daily. Pullman Cars to Missouri Valley Junction.

For Lake Geneva, Four trains daily.

For Rockford, Sterling, Kenosha, Janesville, and other points, you can have from two to ten trains daily.

Topics of the Time.

Pres. Grant has again exercised the power of removal in a way which will commend itself to all lovers of American principles. Chief Justice Dunne of Arizona is more a papist than a citizen of this country and has been most active in urging the passage of a law giving the greater part of the school fund of the territory into the control of the priests. One of his speeches aimed at the destruction of the school system has been widely circulated through the territory. In view of his activity in this way interfering with his judicial duties and more because his views proved his unfitness to sit as an expounder of law, his removal has been wisely made.

The first amendment to our federal Constitution was an article forbidding Congress to interfere in matters of religion, the last one proposed, which probably will be adopted, is presented by ex Speaker Blaine, to extend this limitation to the States. His proposition is this:

"No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and no money raised by taxation in any State for the support of public schools, or derived from any public fund therefor, shall ever be under the control of any religious sect, nor shall any money so raised ever be divided between religious sects or denominations."

Under the 10th amendment each State was left free to form an established church for itself or appropriate public money for sectarian purposes. This has been done by various States, notably in New York, but the time seems now come that the limitation should extend over the country, and though the more bigoted Catholics will fight, the more liberal of them will doubtless favor it. The time to guard against a threatening evil is when all will unite to prevent it. This proposition will not interfere with any school system any State may choose to adopt, while it cuts away the root of sectarian appropriations.

The Catholic Archbishop Spaulding in his jubilee pastoral describes in a lively style the celebration of the jubilee year at Rome as it might have appeared to participants centuries ago, and contrasts the present state of the fallen Babylon in doleful strain: "The sovereign pontiff, bowed down with years and sorrows is praying solitarily for the church, in the midst of wolves who are ravening in the fold. As Israel fell into the hands of her enemies, into the power of the Midianites, the Ammonites and the Philistines, so seems it almost to be with the Holy City." "The Holy City at this very hour, instead of being the resort of devout pilgrims, is the center of European revolution, the home of doctrinaries, communists, of bandits, sectaries and assassins. Shop windows are poisoned with indecent prints and skits on holy things." The prelate should bear in mind that the trials of ancient Israel with the heathen nations round about were brought about by the idolatry and sin of the Hebrews themselves, who preferred following their own inventions and worshipping the work of their own hands to the counsel and and adoration of the only true God. In much the same case is the papal church. It finds those before whom its rites and deceptions have been longest displayed are first to take up the infidel jeer against its pretenses of Christianity.

In contrast with this complaint is the bold language of the Catholic Review in a "Thanksgiving" editorial, which is worth the attention of all who devoutly pray for the final and complete overthrow of man-conceived religious forms and the denomination of false priests. It says;

"But a day or two ago some blatant Know Nothing reminded us that some injustice to Catholics would not be righted 'while as much of Plymouth Rock remained as would make a gun-flint.' As things are going we do not fear that the day is distant when we shall carve Plymouth Rock into our arms—the rosary beads of the Catholics of New England, or rather shall we call it as it promises to become with a bette rclaim, New Ireland."

Great National Questions.

THANKSGIVING SERMON PREACHED BY REV. D. D. HILL, IN GALENA STREET M. E. CHURCH, AURORA, NOV. 25, 1875.

Dent. vi: 6-9.—"And these words which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way and when thou liest down and when thou risest up, and thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes, and thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house and on thy gates."

The Bible wide-open everywhere. If ever a people had cause for gratitude to God surely we are that people. The past year has been crowned with his goodness. We have enjoyed exemption from epidemics. It has been a year of general health. The commerce of the world has been undisturbed. The crops have been exceptionally abundant. We have enjoyed the blessings of peace. In seven hundred years of Rome's history, the temple of Janus was closed only three times. Now there is peace throughout the world except a little skirmishing in Spain, Turkey and Turkestan.

Our educational institutions have been greatly prospered. Especial progress has been made in the higher education of women. Old institutions are opened to them and new institutions, like Wellesley and Smith, have been founded.

The past has been a year of religious prosperity and there is a general expectation among Christians that the present will be a "Year of the right hand of the Most High." One hundred years ago our fathers planted the tree of liberty and we sit under its shadow with great delight and its fruit is sweet to our taste. In a few days, the centennial year of American Independence will be ushered in. President Grant says: "The centennial year of the nation is a good time to begin the work of strengthening the foundations of the structure commenced by our patriotic forefathers one hundred years ago at Lexington."

For the last ten or twelve years wherever opportunity has offered, an effort has been made to undermine the foundations of the government by destroying the common school system. This movement is lead by Roman Catholic priests, aided by Jews, atheists, infidels and political demagogues. The exclusion of the Bible and all religious teaching from the schools is only an incident in the main issue. The end of the movement is the utter destruction of our whole common school system. The war begun upon that system in New York. It was carried on in Ohio. In New Jersey at the last election the priests gave notice that certain amendments to the Constitution must not pass, In Connecticut this is one fo the questions of the hour. In every considerable city in the Union the effort is made where there is any possibility of success. In Milwaukee the Superintendent of Schools was for years, and I believe still is a Catholic.

And now in Chicago, failing to secure the expulsion of Mr. Pickard from the Superintendency because he is too good a man to be made the tool of the ring, the Board proceed to exclude the Bible and all religious instruction from all of the schools.

The manner in which it was done is noticeable. There was no petition. No one asked them to do it. There was no discussion of the question. It was treated like any matter of no importance.

The Chicago Board of Education is composed of fifteen members, only three of whom are Catholics. This sudden movement is part of a political manoeuvre by miserable demagogues to gain and consolidate the foreign vote.

Just as the Tammany Ring gave $600,000 from the public school fund of New York to the support of sectarian Catholic schools, thus securing the solid Catholic vote. I respect an honest Catholic, but these demagogues are almost beneath the contempt of mankind. However, the Catholics are the ostensible head of this movement. What do they demand? Rev. Thos. Preston, one of the most courteous Catholic priests in New York, says: "We demand that we shall receive our proportion, in regard to the number of children instructed, of the school fund raised."

Mr. T. C. O'Brien writes to the New York Tribune: "We don't want to mix up with Protestants and Jews and infidels in school matters, because we want our children to grow up in the holy Roman faith like their fathers, and not imbibe the loose irreligious independence of the age." Another paper says: "The denominational system is the only sound one." "The injustice of Protestantism is singularly exemplified by permitting the Catholics to pay for two systems as they are compelled to do under the present order of things. They are taxed for the common schools which they cannot use, and they have to support in addition their own educational establishments."

If a man will not walk in the highway, but must have a road through his fields by the side of the highway for the exclusive use of himself and his friends, should he be excused from paying road tax?

The Freeman's Journal, (Catholic, Dec. 11th, 1869,) says: "Let the public school system go where it came from—the devil," and this is the animus of the whole movement. Why? They fear too much light. Our magnificent system of common schools is one great bulwark against the ignorance and superstition which are necessary to make this a Catholic country, and they are determined to break down the system. They know as well as we the liberalizing, elevating, enlightening influence which proceed from the common school. That the mingling of the children of all persuasions in one family under one course of instruction is adverse to popery. Foreigners remain Catholics for a generation or two, but they soon learn to think for themselves, and cannot be kept Catholics. The motto of the priests is, "Ignorance is the mother of devotion." They know as well as we that the period of Rome's greatest glory was the midnight of the world's history.

The whole case then is something like this: The Catholics demand that the public school money be divided, and a portion given to them according to the number of children. They urge as reasons for this demand two objections to the present school system.

1. The Bible is read and more or less religious instruction is given by the teachers.

2. The public schools are godless and produce bad men.

Or, 1st, the schools are too religious; and, 2d, they are not religious enough.

This reminds one of the Hibernian who was asked if he would have more dinner and replied, "No! unless it is better." When asked if it was not good, said, "It is good enough if there was only enough of it."

However, let us examine these objections to the public schools.

It is objected that they are godless and produce bad men.

The Western Catholic, (Chicago, July 6th, 1875,) says: "One of the most striking signs of the infidelity of the age in which we live is the ignoring by the government of religion in education."

And now that the Bible has been removed from the Chicago schools, the same paper says: "We venture to assert that our common schools are nothing but the nurseries and hot-beds of infidelity, moreover they turn out bad citizens."

After his wishes are gratified he is not as well pleased as he was before. We admit that the schools do turn out some bad citizens as all churches do some bad saints. But as an answer to the sweeping allegation made, the following are some of the results of our public schools in the last ninety years, 50,000 graduates of American colleges; 12,000 ministers; 200 college presidents; 600 professors in colleges and seminaries; 1,000 representatives in Congress; 200 Senators; 300 Governors and Lieutenant-Governors; nearly 500 Judges of the Supreme Courts. Nine-tenths of them all came from the common schools and they are among the most illustrious and influential names in American history.

The other objection is that the Bible is read and religious instruction is given.

It is said we have no union of church and state; our government has nothing to do with the propagation of religion. All religions stand on an equality before the law.

I reply. All men are equal before the law, because our law is a Christian law, but all religions are not equal before the laws of the United States

Blackstone says, "Christianity is a part of the common law of England." Our jurieprudence is derived directly from the English. A long succession of decisions in most of the Supreme Courts of the States assert that Christianity is the common law of the land.

We are not a pagan or Mohammedan, but a Christian nation. There is no union of church and state, and I hope never will be. But you must cut the very heart out of American history before you can claim that this is not a Protestant Christian nation.

The most plausible argument is that of conscientious objections to the Bible. But the Bible is not a sectarian or ecclesiastical book. It belongs to no church in particular. Protestants, Romanists and Jews all claim to draw their principles from it, especially the Old Testament. It is absurd then for either to ask that it be degraded from the very place where it is especially needed. Five-sixths of the people have conscientious scruples against a conspicuous slight being put upon the Bible, and having it singled out for especial degradation. Ought not the conscientious scruples of five-sixths to weigh something against the scruples of the one-sixth?

Roman Catholic objectors do not care whether the Bible is voted in or out, if they can gain their object, which Archbishop Purcell himself declares to be the disruption of the present school system and the distribution of the public funds for the support of strictly sectarian and ecclesiastical schools. A Catholic writer says: "The books used in these schools revile the religion I profess, as a besotted superstition. The very text books of history and geography are made to protest against it, in which my children hear pries's spoken of without reverence; Protestant nations lauded as the only free and enlightened nations of the earth; Catholic nations sneered at as ignorant and enslaved, and the church denounced as a spiritual despotism, full of craft and crusted all over with corruption of faith and morals."

Aha! the text books must be put out then, as well as the Bible.

I suppose a committee of Catholic priests must be appointed to expurgate all that is offensive to their delicate consciences, from our school books and school literature. A modest demand, truly!

The next will be for the abolition of all our Sabbath laws, for the secularization of marriage. It will be considered an impertinence for the civil law to ask how many wives a man has, for the Sabbath and monogamic marriage are institutions of the Bible. They make the Sabbath a gala day, now. They break up our Sabbaths with their carousals and noise. Last Sabbath a Catholic procession, more than a mile long, marched through the streets of Chicago, with eighteen martial bands The procession started at a quarter past ten. What a quiet, peaceful Sabbath the Protestant churches must have had along the line of march of that procession!

They tell us we must not have chaplains in the army and navy. We must not open our Legislatures and the National Congress with prayer. Presidents and Governors must not appoint days of Thanksgiving. In short, we must not do anything that indicates that we are a Christian nation.

[Concluded next week.]

Impudence.

NEW YORK, Dec 6.—Miss Catherine E. Beecher has published another letter on the Brooklyn scandal, in which she says there is a sure and immediate remedy for the scandal, which has alike disgraced Brooklyn, some of the Congregational papers, and not less our country and humanity. This remedy is the application of certain principles of common sense in all business affairs.

1. The first and chief is that in practical questions, that which has the balance of the evidence is to be assumed as the truth.

2. Established moral character is the highest kind of evidence, and the circulation of accusations contrary to it is slander, unless proved by the balance of the evidence.

3. Contradictory assertions by an accuser nullify his testimony.

4. Writings equally capable of two meanings are to be interpreted so as to be consistent with the character of the writer and his own declarations.

5. Self-accusations of crimes contrary to an established character, that involve evil and no good, are proof of a temporary insanity or monomania.

The above article we cut from one of our daily papers. This excellent old lady made an attempt once before to meddle with the Beecher scandal. Her charges against Mr. Bowen in that case were met in such form that it seems surprising that she should venture to say another word in regard to the matter. Mrs. Stowe's onslaught upon Lord Byron, and the revelation of Mrs. Hooker's moral eccentricities have made them wiser women; but the elder sister has not learned by experience. She says there are certain principles of common sense which regulate common business affairs which she sets forth as determining the innocence of her brother. They are as follows:

1. The first and chief is, that in practical questions, that which has the balance of the evidence is to be assumed as the truth.

If this statement be true then her brother should be a convicted felon, for a very large balance of the evidence was against him. His own evidence was in his own behalf, and his oath a direct contradiction of Tilton. When these two are balanced against each other, then the entire preponderance of the remaining evidence is against Beecher. The evidence of Mr. Moulton, and especially Mrs. Moulton, is direct and unimpeached. The evidence of Mrs. Tilton's brother in what he was permitted to say is directly against Beecher; and in what he was not permitted to say, his testimony is decisive of adultery. Then there were the witnesses that were prevented from testifying all they knew, as Bowen, Mrs. Bradshaw and others. Against all these the defendant testified for himself, and testified with knowledge of a brother's statement that perjury in certain cases was deemed no crime. If a man had written what Miss Beecher has written, it would be considered a very impudent and very flagitious statement.

2. Established moral character is the highest kind of evidence, and the circulation of accusations contrary to it is slander, unless proved by the balance of the evidence.

There is no better evidence of moral character as a clergyman in behalf of Beecher than there there was in behalf of Tweed as a civilian before his trial and conviction. If kissing his parishoners; and writing confidential letters to a best friend, who told him he did not believe his Gospel; if professing great love for Storrs openly, while secretly writing about him with bitter malignity; if preaching a doctrine that suited whatever audience was before him; if fastening and acting lies with Moulton,—if such things constitute a good moral character, Mr. Beecher ought to have the benefit of it.

4. Writings equally capable of two meanings are to be interpreted so as to be consistent with the character of the writer and his own declarations.

Mr. Beecher's writings are often no doubt, susceptable of two meanings. In one set he is going immediately to heaven with his dear infidel friend, whom he claims as his only friend on earth; but who rejects his Saviour, and lives accordingly. In the other he is going to heaven with Christians. In what set of his writings is there the most apparent sincerity?

5. Self-accusations of crimes contrary to an established character, that involve evil and no good, are proof of a temporary insanity or monomania.

Mr. Beecher has not thus far accused himself of any crime. Does this mean that if he should hereafter confess his guilt, the family will proclaim him insane?

The writer thinks these principles should be applied by clergymen, as she endeavors to do in behalf of the accused. This, through the Beecher influence, has been attempted in some quarters, but the common sense of the world is too strong to tolerate much cunning of that sort.

Perhaps the following scrap from the Chicago Legal Adviser, will aid Miss Catharine to a better estimate of the evidence in the case:

"If the whole conduct of Mr. Beecher does not point conclusively to his guilt, then all the rules governing such cases as laid down in the books of evidence are a deception and a sham. Certainly no person on trial for an offence ever brought himself more completely within the rules pointing to his guilt than has the great Brooklyn preacher. Whatever subterfuges may be resorted to by his adherents to break the force which his conduct and confession must have upon the public mind, there is one thing that Mr. Beecher cannot escape the consequences of, in the estimation of all decent people, and that is, his cowardly attempt to fasten the guilt of his improprieties, whatever the extent thereof might have been, upon an inoffensive, helpless woman, whose good name had before that been above suspicion. For this dastardly conduct alone, he deserved a verdict of guilty." INDEX.

Whoever well considers the state of the world and human experience cannot but conclude that God is more concerned to make man holy than happy; for many are able to rest in their sorrows, for the sake of their use and end, but no one finds rest in unholy delights. In sinful pleasures God follows man with a scourge; in sorrow with balm.

The Civil Oath a Nullity.

BY D. B. TURNEY.

Freemasonry is fraught with evil. Its ceremonies and mummeries are degrading in tendency and vitiating to social principle. Its oaths are immoral and in hostility to every upward movement of the immortal powers. Yet, there is a fascination about this order—an enchantment in its gaudy rites and claims of superior benevolence, beguiling many good and worthy men into its service.

The Thugs of India are a band of oath-leagued murderers. Yet among these bloody marauders may be found some of the otherwise kindest and best men of that benighted land. United in an oath-bound bond of brotherhood, grounded upon the intensity of their devotion to Kali, their secrecy for generations eluded the efforts of successive governments to detect and punish them; and under the special auspices of this hiddenness of iniquity, their sanguinary depredations were devised and carried into execution. In their sense of the term, these Thugs were of all men the most devoutly religious in the performances of divine worship. Before committing their murders and robberies, they betake themselves to the temples of their goddess Kali, presenting prayers, supplications and offerings to secure her approval to their awful work of imbuing their hands in the blood of others, vowing to consecrate to her service a large proportion of the booty obtained from their slain victims.

The Freemasons of our civilized country will cordially unite with us in denouncing the order of Thugs as the most awful and murderous band ti on earth. Yet, it is doubtful if the oaths of the Thugs are more corrupt and blasphemous than those of the order of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons—doubtful, I say, if the Thuggery of India has a more pernicious system of secrecy and oath-taking than has the Freemasonry of these United States of America.

No wonder the chief corner-stone of ordinary morality is crumbling away. It is boasted that the Masonic order is on the increase, and that nearly all our great politicians, talented ministers and shrewd lawyers belong. Well, what is the result? Just this: The civil oaths of our land have lost all sanctity, and oath-taking has become a mere sham. If it ever had any meaning, it has none now. The affiant is required to poke his right hand up into the air and repeat a form of words to which he does not perhaps attach the first shadow of importance, shifting whatever responsibility there may be in the case to the shoulders of the officiating administrator. This is technically called "taking an oath." It is said to be done "solemnly" and "in the presence of God." Wicked men can take the oath. Of course they can. They regard it as a perfectly harmless and unmeaning formula—the very words of which have sunk into indifference and contempt, owing to the superior sanctity of the oaths taken in the various secret orders of the day.

The civil oaths wherever and whenever they come in competition with the extra-judicial oaths are violated with impunity. They degenerate into a mere device to restrain the innocent and truthful and to give force to the guilty and untruthful. This, under the existing state of affairs, is their exact influence. The good man, who has not had the schooling of secret clanhood, hesitates under the sense of responsibility imposed by his civil oath; but the very same oath gives a fictitious and undeserved value to the words of the perjured liar. The Freemason who, for the good of his boasted order, will knowingly tell a falsehood, is quite as ready to secure a greater credence for his lie, by the ceremony of taking the civil oath, in the maintenance of an order which is pretended to be more ancient and sacred than any government now on earth.

These extra-judicial oaths have so degraded the whole moral tone of society that there seems to be no likelihood of a conviction for perjury in the case of a Freemason. Protected by their august order, they can swear to whatever lies will best suit their own purposes, with the assurance that the craft will hail them to safety by concealing them from personal danger.

The Church and Temperance.

SYNOPSIS OF WILLIAM BAXTER'S SPEECH ON TEMPERANCE AT INDIANA YEARLY MEETING, TENTH MO. 1, 1875.

Believing that the use of intoxicating liquors is the greatest stumbling block to the spread of Christianity, it seems to me highly important that every branch of the Christian church should make it a prominent and permanent part of its mission to remove this terrible evil from its borders.

I know of no branch of the church which ought to give the cause of temperance its sympathy and active cooperation more readily than that to which we belong. God made this church a powerful instrument in his hands for breaking the bonds of the enslaved negro. The conscientious and persistent protest of Friends against that great enormity, backed by a discipline forbidding its members to hold or traffic in slaves, aroused public attention so thoroughly that the conviction ultimately permeated the whole body politic, and resulted in the destruction of that great abomination.

We have to-day among us a greater slavery than that of the negro. That only enslaved the body—this enslaves both body and soul, with a far more terrible and relentless power than did the lash and chain of the slave-driver.

The removal of this fearful temporal and spiritual bondage should be the great work of the church—without its utter extinction the church of Christ never can be triumphant on earth. The one is diametrically opposed to the other. One tends to darkness and evil, the other to light and virtue. As there was an irrepressible conflict between slavery and a free government, so is there an irrepressible conflict between Christianity and the drink traffic. Hence the success of one must be the destruction of the other.

To accomplish the destruction of the drink traffic, the church must be consistent with itself. It must not only cry aloud and spare not from the pulpit, but its individual members must be consistent with its protest. Each member of the church must be willing to offer his individual sacrifice upon the altar, by renouncing the use of all that can intoxicate, and becoming a living example against the use of alcoholic drinks. The church must first be pure individually, before its collective purity can permeate and leaven society. So long as its members in any way sanction the use of intoxicants, so long will the protest of the church be shorn of its full power and influence against the drink traffic.

When the church becomes as earnest, consistent, and steadfast in its zeal socially, politically and religiously, against the use and traffic in alcoholics as it was against negro slavery, and when the discipline of the church shall become as thorough and uncompromising in reference to the use of intoxicants as it became touching the holding or trading in slaves, as I believe it will some day become, then will the influence of this society be felt more than it has heretofore been felt, in the removal of this greatest of all curses and sins. And why, I ask, should not the church make the disuse of intoxicants a necessary condition of membership?

Sir Henry Thompson, one of the most eminent physicians in Europe, but declared the most advanced revelations of science and experience, when he said: "I have long had the conviction that there is no greater cause of evil, moral and physical, than the use of alcoholic beverages. It injures the body and diminishes the mental power to an extent which few people are aware of. Such is the result of observation during more than twenty years of professional life devoted to hospital practice and to private practice in every rank above it. I have no hesitation in attributing a very large proportion of some of the most painful and dangerous maladies which come under my notice, to the ordinary and daily use of fermented drinks, taken in the quantity which is conventionally deemed moderate."

This being the case, does it not become a sin in the sight of God when Christian professors, with this knowledge before them, countenance by their use of intoxicants a traffic which not only mars the physical and mental laws of his highest created intelligence, but which also destroys millions of bushels annually of his golden grain—grain which is essential to the support of his creature man, and for want of which thousands are to-day suffering?

Not only this, but the facts of history incontestably prove that the traffic in drink is the greatest source of vice and crime, and forms also the most formidable impediment to the spread of the Gospel. All our missionaries, both home and foreign, confirm this.

A late writer in a religious magazine declares that the use of alcoholic drinks causes as many declensions from the church as all the ministers of the Gospel are instrumental in bringing to it.

Archdeacon Jeffreys, who for more than thirty years was a missionary in India, has stated that "for one really converted Christian as the fruit of missionary labor—for one person born again of the Holy Spirit and made a new creature in Christ Jesus—the drinking practices of the English have made one thousand drunkards."

With these sad facts before us, should it not become obligatory upon the conscience of every follower of the self-denying Jesus, who earnestly desires the extension of his kingdom among men, to give his individual example against the use of intoxicating liquors, remembering, too, the declarations of the Apostle Paul: "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth," and "all they that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak."

Now, if abstinence from intoxicants is a Christian duty; if it is in accord with life and health, and also with the great law of self-denial inculcated by the Apostle Paul, while if, on the other hand, the use of alcoholics forms the greatest obstacle to the progress of the church; if all this be so, and no one who has closely studied the subject can for a moment doubt it, then it seems to me, as a logical sequence, that the church should make this question a test of membership, because every member who countenances, by his own act the use of alcoholic drinks, is virtually raising a banner against the establishment of the Kingdom of Christ among men.

Hence, therefore, the church, to be consistent with itself, should make the disuse of intoxicants a test of membership. If the church preaches temperance, and at the same time allows its members to use the accursed cup, it is warring against itself, it is destroying its own influence and vitality, it becomes utterly powerless for proselyting the world unto itself. For the action and example of its individual members will always have more influence with the world than the precepts and principles it inculcates. Nothing has fostered infidelity half so much as the inconsistent and unfaithful conduct of church members. Nothing so much accelerates the power and spread of the church as the consistent Christian lives of the fathers of the church which established its glorious principles amid the storms and contentions of its persecutors.

Even so of the church and temperance. If the church ever expects to remove its greatest obstacle, the drink traffic, and become triumphant on earth, it must see to it that all its individual members renounce their allegiance to King Alcohol—the greatest of all the ambassadors of Satan. Nothing short of this will give us the victory. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

—General Sheridan holds that the Indian reservation should be made smaller and cut up into tracts for families, and that the Indians should then be compelled to work and send the children to school.

Notice.—Elder Barlow.

It may be of interest to our Anti-masonic friends to know that the undersigned has resigned his position as State Lecturer, etc., in New York, and has accepted the office of State Lecturer in Michigan, and has already entered upon his work. Friends who may wish to address him can do so at FENTONVILLE, Genesee Co., Mich., care of C. B. Remington. Michigan Anti-masons will also note the fact that C. B. Remington has entered upon the work of Financial Agent of the Michigan State Christian Association opposed to Secret Societies and receive him as such.

Notice for California.

Mr. John Black of Upper Lake, appointed chairman by the committee of organization for this State, will call a meeting of said committee and of the friends of the cause in general in California next spring; due notice of said meeting, time and place will be given in the Cynosure at the proper time. Friends of the cause, and especially those who circulated subscriptions, are kindly requested to collect funds and send them to the treasurer appointed by the committee. It is the intent now to have a lecturer on hand by, and if possible before that time, if arrangements can possibly be made. The motto is, "A long pull, a strong pull and a pull altogether."

New York State Convention.

ROCHESTER AROUSED.—CORINTHIAN HALL FILLED TO ITS UTMOST CAPACITY.—THE MASONS ENRAGED.—ANTI-MASONS ENCOURAGED AND MULTIPLYING.

The New York State Christian Association opposed to secret societies held its fifth annual meeting in Corinthian Hall, in Rochester, on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 7th and 8th of the present month. A preliminary meeting was held in the Free Methodist church on Monday evening, addressed by the State lecturer; theme, "Masonry a Despotism."

On Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, our work opened with a half hour prayer-meeting in which the Divine aid and blessing was implored upon all the work before us. After this D. Kirkpatrick, Esq., took the chair; committees were appointed, and reports were listened to from various parts of the field, showing that in some directions such progress was making as indicated a growing sentiment in our favor; and that the need of a thorough and general organization was being felt. Much anxiety, but no discouragement was manifested among the friends of our cause. The care and labor of working up the meeting had mainly fallen upon Bro. Woodruff Post, aided by Bro. Roberts and Sellew, and it seemed to have been well done. Rochester was awakened, and the people were watching developments. Especially were the craft open-eyed and attentive. During the day meetings our Convention work went on harmoniously and rapidly. On the entrance of Mr. Ronayne he was introduced by the writer to the Convention, which received him with applause. During the afternoon session the Agent and Lecturer made his report, and resigned his position as a laborer in the New York field. The committee on permanent organization, also reported in part for the coming year, retiring Mr. Kirkpatrick, much against their will, but at his own request, and bringing to the chair Rev. L. N. Stratton of Syracuse.

Tuesday evening Corinthian Hall had its seating capacity well tested, and more than a thousand people, among whom were many Masons, met in clandestine lodge, to witness and assist Mr. Ronayne in initiating a candidate into the first degree in Masonry. But how shall I describe this? I would that some painter or photographer could have been there to transfer the scene to canvass or to paper! It was easy to pick out the Masons by the rage depicted on their features, as they saw their lodge-play exposed to the public, by one whose workmanship showed him to bo a skilled artist in real Masonic labor, as well as by that dry, rasping horse laugh, which once heard is not soon forgotten—a laugh into which a Mason attempts to throw for effect, his utmost of incredulity, contempt, scorn, rage, murderous malice, and affected indifference, well seasoned with genuine surprise, sham, and fear! All this makes a notable cachinnation, wonderfully suggestive to say the least of it. At a certain stage of the proceedings an attempt was made to stampede the audience, which failed ignominiously. A large number of persons seated in the back part of the hall started simultaneously for the doors. Finding they had but a small number following they halted in the aisles, and stayed till the meeting closed.

The "Old Handmaid" received a staggering blow, from the effects of which she will never wholly recover. Masons were shamed and cowed, Anti-masons were strengthened, while the hitherto ignorant and indifferent were disgusted with the profane ceremonies, and many were heard to say, "I will never pay another dollar to a Masonic minister!" "I will never hear a Mason preach again!" etc. To which I heartily respond, Masonically, "So mote it be!"

Mr. Ronayne is a prodigy and our God has raised him up at this juncture to give a new impetus to our rapidly growing work. No unprejudiced mind can see and hear him go through an initiation without being convinced that he is what he claims to be, and it is worth going a long way to see his power over the madness of the lodge, when it for a moment becomes unbearable, as he leaves his work, advances to the front of the stage and throws at his enemies a few stinging sentences which quiets them as a pack of yelping curs are lashed into silence by their master; from which he returns to his work as though nothing had interrupted him. Several times during the evening this was done, giving an admirable display of the highest type of moral courage, as well as the power of right over error and wrong.

The second day of the meeting dawned upon us, with falling snow in the air, and slush and mud under foot, the very elements seeming to sympathize with the gloomy-hearted and discomfitted brethren of the craft. The Democrat and Chronicle, so far as I know the only paper noticing us, having a dozen lines or so about our meating thus far, speaking of the exposures the previous evening, and with what was intended as a sneer intimating that everybody in Rochester was now a Mason. Alas poor Yorick! After "Hiram" was slain, on Wednesday night, the Rochester press was silent as the grave. No allusion whatever to our meeting, or to our further preaence in that city.

During the day the usual routine business was attended to with spirit and zeal. In place of myself four unpaid lecturers were appointed:—Rev's. W. Post, D. P. Rathbun, L. N. Stratton, and Dr. Curry, to operate in different parts of the State. May God give the plan success.

In the evening Bro. Stoddard suddenly appeared upon the scene, and was gladly welcomed. Long before the hall doors were opened, the crowd began to gather, filling all the outside spaces clear down into the street; and still the numbers came quickly filling the hall, permanent seats, stools, and standing room until it would hold no more, when the doors were shut enclosing 1700 people, and turning away more than 500 anxious to enter. In this large audience were many Masons, a large number of whom took their seats in the back part of the hall, doubtless for a purpose.

Now commenced the work of the evening. Ronayne was in his element and opened up to us the lodge as working in the "Sublime and Ancient degree!" As he progressed the craft grew restive as their heathen mysteries began to grow upon the audience. When they became too obstreperous Ronayne would stop and administer one of his peculiar sedatives and then resume work. At length, coming to that part of the Master's oath where the candidate is made to swear he will not sit in a clandestine lodge, &c., he stopped and said to the assembled craft—calling their attention to that part of the oath—"You are now in a clandestine lodge, where a man is being made a Mason in a clandestine manner, and that too in violation of your oath, and you are all 'perjured villains' as much as I am." This shot went home with terrific effect. The Masonic rage came up to white heat, and the very atmosphere flashed with the spirit of murder. Another attempt was made to run off the audience, which failed as before. The noise became ceasless until the tall form of the sheriff was seen moving about in the crowd, when silence was obtained, so that the work went on until "Hiram" was slain, buried, found, raised on the five points of fellowship, and the Masonic name of God or its substitute given to him, viz., "Mah-ha-bone;" and thus Masonry was exposed in Rochester as never before; and hundreds went away to despise an institution they had hitherto supposed to be a good one "because there are so many ministers in it," satisfied that neither ministers nor salt-petre can save it when it shall become known in all its naked hideousness.

Thus ended one of the most successful meetings held in the Empire State, leaving our friends greatly encouraged Ronayne was to speak in Batavia, the old home of Morgan, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and then in Seneca Co., on his way to Pennsylvania the week following. In February, God willing, he will return to New York and visit Lockport, Rochester, Syracuse and other places. May God preserve him from the hate of his enemies.

J. L. BARLOW.

The General Agent on the New York Work and Carpenter Fund.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Dec. 11.

DEAR K.:—Of the Rochester convention others will write you. At both Rochester and Syracuse the "beast" has received a wound from which it will not soon recover. I left Bro. Ronayne at Rochester on the evening of the 9th, sharpening his lance for a hand-to-hand contest in Batavia. Bro. R. has his own way of doing things as well as of "putting things," and whether or not it is exactly judicious to enter a controversy thus among strangers he is perhaps the best judge; but it awakens deep solicitude on the part of his friends lest he should receive attentions more serious than beneficial from those whose displeasure he incurs by his searching disclosures.

New York has lost an able worker and fearless champion of reform in the person of Bro. Barlow, who left his home in Syracuse for Michigan with the benedictions and blessings of his many friends in this State. Should the contemplated arrangement for Michigan be completed, I expect to see her stepping to the front and her older sisters in this reform will do well to "look to their laurels." I hope our Michigan brethren will exercise their accustomed generosity and allow their lecturers to make an occasicnal visit to some of the counties "over the line" and that northern Ohio and Indiana will occasionally secure the services o this man of strength, who is your "next-door neighbor."

Bro. Remington is a new man on the roll, but he enters the field with the credit of having originated a plan for finance which in the estimation of men who have been successful in their own affairs gives greater promise than any hitherto tried. With the experience, ability and determination of Bro. Remington to pioneer and Bro. Barlow to follow with his thorough discussions and organizing ability, victory seems measurably sure.

But this is incidental. I took my pen while sitting in the depot, To say that New York has not "fallen from grace," nor does she purpose even to "back-slide." Orthodox on the doctrine of the duty of "saints' perseverance," the uncompromising are pressing on toward the realization of that good old "doctrine of perfection." Instead of one lecturer they have appointed four, either of whom is a host in himself with God and the truth to back him. I approve the plan to district the State making each man responsible for his territory, and when the way is thus prepared secure the services of Bro. Ronayne for the more central and larger cities. I hope these brethren will not consider their appointment merely "honorary," but honorable in proportion to their efficiency in defeating the infidel designs of the lodge and bringing souls to Christ. Bros. Post and Stratton assure me of their readiness to give every consistent aid, and I am now on my way to meet Bro. Rathbun who is always ready when the Lord calls to live or die for the truth. The other appointee's name has escaped me at this time, and although I have never met him I have no doubt of his fitness, and hope soon to have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance. I expect to spend four or five days with Bro. R. and then start for Scranton, Pa., via. Cazenovia, stopping at Blodgett's Mills whence comes the "Macedonian cry."

Before closing this hasty line I want to call the especial attention of those brethren to whom I wrote from Boston in reference to our Publishing House interests. This is a matter that demands the especial attention of every friend who wishes the success of the reform, and calls for prompt action. Certainly if two brethren give three-fifths of the whole amount they may reasonably expect others to complete the remaining two-fifths. The cause needs the building, and the city and whole country need a daily prayer-meeting in which the lodge may be mentioned among other devices of the devil without interruptions or calls to order. Beloved in Christ, I beseech you in the name of the Master, don't delay unnecessarily, or hesitate unreasonably. My time is, and will be so occupied with State conventions, and in the larger cities now in the good Providence of God opening to our reform, that I shall be unable to meet you personally as I should very much like to do. Send to Bro. Kellogg a report of your decision, or for any information you desire. Fraternally yours,

J. P. STODDARD.

The Massachusetts Meetings.

FROM THE VETERAN GREENE.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—As we have yet no real organization in Massachusetts against secret societies, and no one more interested than myself in the good work of reform organized through the power and spirit of God in moving a portion of his beloved church against the great evil of the day, though as upon the slavery question, so now again after nearly fifty years a part of his church is moving against the powers of darkness, it devolves upon me to give some account of the visit of the Rev. J. P. Stoddard, the Lecturer and General Agent of the National Christian Association, to Chelsea, Mass.

On the twenty-ninth day of November I received a postal card saying, "I will be in your vicinity Tuesday of next week," and at the appointed time I had the pleasure of taking by the hand and receiving a hearty greeting of a beloved brother and the right man in the right place. His prudent and wise method of mingling with and introducing the subject of his mission to those of his chosen profession, has left a favorable impression and a God-speed for his future success. On Monday evening, the 6th, I introduced him to an audience in Granite Hall, and he spoke one hour and a half to a crowded house and all standing places filled, without the least disturbance and only now and then a cheer at the rounded periods and clear presentation of the truth. Although I sat nigh I could not distinctly hear every word being somewhat deaf; but he introduced the subject in the following manner:

1st. He spoke of Masonry, not of Masons; declaring himself as no Mason, having never entered the lodge.

2d. Masonry, he said, was either good or bad, right or wrong, and as it was publicly exposed we could judge of it as of other things which are plain and clearly before the public.

3d. If right, we ought to sustain it. He then went on to say what Masons claimed for their institution. It was charitable and religious, especially in the death and resurrection of Grand-Master Hiram Abiff, which shows their belief in the death and resurrection of Christ.

4th. If Masonry is wrong it ought to be exposed and abandoned. He then pointed out its errors. It was a system of darkness opposing directly the words and truths of the Bible, and its wicked and profane obligations were in opposition to the doctrine of Christ and therefore no Christian or Christian minister would understandingly sustain it and be a true follower of Christ.

5th. He then showed the diversity of opinion concerning it, the promises required before initiation and the oaths and penalties and also the application of the oath to destroy the business and character of any one leaving the lodge, consequently Masons that hate it remain in it and do not renounce until a clear way is opened.

He proposed to settle the question by testimony, and he went on to show proofs of its exposition and the knowledge of the individuals who had been inside the lodge.

7th. Then he declared the institution of Masonry to be wrong according to their own testimony inside and outside of the lodge. It separates husband and wife and violates the covenant obligations of marriage and thereby violates the express word of God that "they twain shall be one flesh, and what therefore God hath joined together let no man put asunder;" and he handled the subject in so clear and truthful a manner that the ladies approved its truth both by looks and applause.

8th. It enslaves men, shuts their mouths to a bosom companion, and in in very many ways compels them absolutely to lie or avoid the truth so as to bridle their conscience and destroy their peace.

9th. It rejects Christ in all their books and prayers and quotations of Scripture and proposes to save men otherwise than through Jesus Christ.

He then presented the paper and publications of the National Christian Association. His speech was wholly extemporaneous, drawing his inspiration from the truthfulness of his subject and the favorable and clear impress on his audience. He has left leaven in Chelsea that has begun already to work. An agent has come forward and begun selling books and distributing tracts. The ladies came to me to procure the Cynosure and tracts, and are in hopes of securing a club of ten at least. And when the programme promised for next January of a series of exhibitions performed by Past Master Ronayne is carried out, it is hoped Massachusetts will not be lagging in a reform so valuable to the church of Christ and the nation, in which she has heretofore done so much to enlighten the public on the same subject.

SAMUEL D. GREENE.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

AUBURN DEPOT, N. Y., Dec. 8.

DEAR K.—One hour here and then I am off for Rochester. The back-look to Boston and its environments recalls many and very agreeable incidents during my stay of a week in that justly famed city. I was too busy with our reform interests to spend even an hour in "sight seeing;" but a man must be stupid indeed not to find much worthy of note, even incidentally, in this cradle of religious and civil liberty.

My purpose on arrival was to make only a brief stop, a kind of pastoral call on our honored friend, S. D. Greene; but when once on the ground resistance to importunities was next to impossible, so I began a survey of the situation. The keen-scented birds of prey, looking down from their rookeries upon the city, rejoiced to see many of its citizens paying tribute to fill their coffers and reverently or tamely bowing to their behests. Or, occasionally sallying forth in gaudy attire, they were luring their choice young men by their "much fair speech," and Delilah-like, weaving their locks into the artful web of secrecy; and but few dared, or did publicly and directly utter a word in protest. I found also those professing friendship were exceedingly reticent, and while they treated me courteously, showed a reserve betokening a want of confidence, or fear of exposure or something of the kind, which was very disheartening. I saw that the first obstacle to successful effort in Boston lay in a want of sympathy and understanding among real friends, who, although sincere, were nevertheless not perfect in wisdom. To attempt a public meeting without much preliminary labor would be hazardous, if not positively injurious to our cause. I began the work of visiting, calling upon such as I could reach, and writing to over thirty others, and on leaving was much gratified with the evidence that the effort was measurably successful. If I mistake not, the way is now fairly opened for any prudent, judicious lecturer to enter into the heart of Boston through it suburban cities.

There has been but little demonstrative opposition to the lodge of late in Boston, but its goings forth have been marked, and some of its deeds have been written by other than the pen of an angel. May God speed the day of righteous retribution when these lodges shall meet their record and answer for their conduct! Of our old friend Samuel D. Greene, at whose house I remained receiving every possible attention and kindness, it would be useless for me to speak. I have only to endorse all the good things that have been written by him and about him. I will simply add, that there are some men who "die hard" even under lodge prescription, and he is one of them. It is not usual to find a man 88 years of age, whose "eye is not dim" and who can walk for miles with little apparent weariness; but such is the man, notified years ago by the "benevolent fraternity" that his "wife should be a widow and his children fatherless." It may be said with truth that his companion is equally deserving of honorable mention. These quiet, unobtrusive, but indefatigable mothers in Israel, are too often overlooked, and their influence underestimated.

J. P. STODDARD.

Letter from Bro. Post.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 10.

DEAR K.—Our Rochester convention was a marvelous one. We did not want for excellent homes for the many delegates and ministers and most of the merely visitors in attendance. The doors of Methodist Episcopals, Congregationalists, Free Methodists, United Presbyterians, Episcopalians and others were freely open to us. Those who could not entertain generously paid for boarders. Just here let me mention the courteousness of the proprietors of Centennial House, Messrs. Myles and Fordyse, whose house is a house of prayer, who gave their guests "perfect satisfaction" and whose generosity was not confined to a reasonable charge alone.
